Mental Health

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of mental health care provision in Hertfordshire; and if she will make a statement. [48350]

Ms Rosie Winterton: An annual assessment if undertaken by mental health strategies on behalf of the Department. The latest published report is autumn 2005, "Assessment of Mental Health 2005" which is available on the Department's website at:

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether she intends to bring forward the Mental Health Bill in this session of Parliament. [47841]

Ms Rosie Winterton: We intend to bring forward a Mental Health Bill into Parliament when the legislative timetable permits.

MRSA

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many MRSA infections were recorded in NHS hospitals for (a) 2003, (b) 2004 and (c) 2005 and which of these (i) were in and (ii) were related to renal units by disease area. [45588]

Jane Kennedy: National surveillance covers methicillin resistant Staphylococcus "auerus" (MRSA) blood stream infections (bacteraemias), not all MRSA infections. National data is shown in the table and data for individual trusts is available on the Departments website at: www.dh.gov.uk/assetRoot/04/11/40/15/04114015.pdf.

	Number of MRSA bacteraemias
April 2002-March 2003	7,373
April 2003-March 2004	7,684
April 2004-March 2005	7,212

Source:
Health Protection Agency

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many MRSA cases have occurred in (a) Uxbridge constituency and (b) each London borough in each year since 1997. [48516]

Jane Kennedy: The Department does not hold the information in the format requested.

However, a table showing the number of reported methicillin resistant Staphylococcus aureus (MRSA) cases by national health service trusts for the years 2001 to 2005 is available on the Department's website at: www.dh.gov.uk/assetRoot/04/11/40/15/04114015.pdf.

Tackling MRSA and other healthcare associated infections remains a priority for Government and the NHS. Staff across the NHS are working hard to reduce infections, though not all can be avoided. Considerable good work is under way in pursuit of our key target to reduce by half the annual bacteraemia cases by April 2008.

Multiple Sclerosis Centres

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what representations she has received on the impact of inspection fees on the viability of multiple sclerosis treatment centres run on a charity basis; [48263]

(2) what assessment she has made of the merits of waiving inspection fees for multiple sclerosis centres. [49204]

Jane Kennedy: Revised regulatory fees payable to the Healthcare Commission by private and voluntary health care providers in 2005-06 were announced in February 2005. Since then I have received representations from more than 30 hon. and right hon. Members about the fees payable by multiple sclerosis therapy centres. I have also received several representations from members of the public and therapy centre staff. I met therapy centre representatives in July. I have concluded that these centres should continue to be subject to regulation by the Healthcare Commission.

The Healthcare Commission is currently consulting on the regulatory fee structure for 2006-07; the consultation document seeks views on whether establishments that are substantially reliant on voluntary donations for their income should be subject to a subsidised fee and, if so, the size of that subsidy and how it might be funded. The consultation period ends on 24 February.

National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many meetings Ministers in her Department have had with the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence in the last 12 months; and what the reasons for the meetings were in each case. [45365]

Jane Kennedy: In the past 12 months there have been five meetings between departmental Ministers and the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE). Those meeting and their purposes are as follows:

Meeting between the chair and chief executive of NICE with myself and the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Health, my hon. Friend the Member for Don Valley (Caroline Flint) on 9 June 2005 as an introduction to NICE'S work;

Annual accountability review of NICE attended by myself, the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Health, my hon. Friend the Member for Don Valley (Caroline Flint) and Brian Gibbons AM, the Welsh Assembly Government Minister for Health and Social Services, on 13 October 2005;

Meeting between Professor Sir Michael Rawlins and Lord Warner on 9 January 2006 to discuss the potential contribution of NICE to the quality and outcomes framework;

Meeting between Professor Sir Michael Rawlins and the Secretary of State on 12 January 2006 to discuss NICE'S citizens council, and Meeting between the chair and chief executive of NICE and myself on 30 January 2006 to have an informal general discussion on issues concerning NICE.

NHS Cancer Plan

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to review the NHS Cancer Plan. [43527]

Ms Rosie Winterton: We are constantly reviewing how best to take account of changes in the national health service and developments in cancer. The NHS Cancer Plan is a 10-year strategy to improve cancer services in England and raise the level of our cancer services to the best in Europe. We are now five years into the NHS Cancer Plan and are focused on delivering its commitments. Once these have been delivered we will give further consideration to whether an updated cancer plan is needed.

NHS Database

Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what funding her Department will make available to general practitioners for entry of patients' records onto the central NHS database by 2010; and what contingency plans she will put in place for errors in code conversions from general practitioners' records to the database. [44109]

Mr. Byrne: Under the terms of their contract, contractors receive a global sum which is a contribution towards the contractor's costs in delivering essential and additional services, including maintaining adequate patient records. In addition, contractors can obtain points within the quality and outcomes framework on a number of areas relating to the maintenance of patient records. The relevant indicators are outlined in annex D of the statement of financial entitlements, which is available in the Library. There are no current plans to provide additional financial support to general practitioners specifically for entry of patients' records on the national health service care records service (NHS CRS).

The transfer of local records to the NHS CRS requires compliance with NHS Connecting for Health's stringent data migration quality standards. However, good practice guidelines for general practice electronic patient records developed by the General Practitioners Committee and the Royal College of General Practitioners, and issued by the Department, make it clear that responsibility for the quality of the necessary transfer processes, and for ensuring information is accurate and up-to-date, lies with the individual practice. This includes the putting in place of procedures to identify and resolve where an error occurs in code conversion. That could be as simple as reviewing and verifying the relevant record with the patient at the next consultation.

NHS Sites (Crimes)

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many crimes have been committed at (a) NHS hospitals and (b) other NHS sites in each year since 1997, broken down by type of crime. [48837]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information is not available in the format requested.

Obesity

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the obesity levels were for (a) children and (b) adults in (i) each health authority area and (ii) each local authority area for the past 30 years in descending order according to the most recent figures. [45565]

Caroline Flint: The data are not available in the format requested. The main source of data on the prevalence of obesity is the Health Survey for England (HSE).

Data on obesity prevalence in children are available at a national level from the Health Survey for England 2002. This survey is available on the Department's website at: www.archive2.official-documents.co.uk/document/deps/doh/survey02/hse02.htm. The children's sample size of the HSE does not allow figures to be produced at the level of strategic health authority (SHA) or local authority area.

Data on obesity in adults are shown in table 1. The table provides the proportion of adults, aged 16 and over, who are obese (mean body mass index (BMI) over 30) for each SHA between 1994 and 2002. Data for earlier years are not available. The results from the table are taken from the Health Survey for England: Health and lifestyles indicators for Strategic Health Authorities 1994–2002 report. The data shows BMI as a three-year moving average, with the latest data available in this format being 2000–2002. The sample size of the HSE does not allow figures to be produced at the level of local health authority areas.

Health Survey for England 2003—Risk factors for cardiovascular disease

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many primary school pupils in (a) England, (b) London, (c) London borough of Hillingdon and (d) Uxbridge constituency are identified as (i) overweight and (ii) obese. [46592]

Caroline Flint: The data are not available in the format requested. The main source of data on the prevalence of obesity is the health survey for England (HSE). The sample size of the health survey does not allow figures to be produced at the level of London boroughs or parliamentary constituencies. For children, aged two to 10 years, national and Government office region (GOR) figures are presented using the national BMI percentile classification.

The available information is presented in the two following tables, using the estimated obesity and/or overweight prevalence results of the HSE for 2001, 2002 and 2003. The national level data presented are the most recent available, and shows overweight and obesity prevalence among children. Data at GOR level is only available for obesity prevalence. GOR data provided are the most recent available and use combined information from the 2001 and 2002 surveys.

Patient Deaths

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS patient deaths there were in each of the last three years (a) during operations and (b) post-operatively. [47833]

Jane Kennedy: The specific information as requested is not collected centrally.

Physiotherapy Services

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what the waiting time for emergency physiotherapy in the (a) Brighton and (b) Adur, Arun and Worthing Primary Care Trust area was in the latest period for which figures are available; [48261]

(2) what the waiting time for non-urgent physiotherapy in the (a) Brighton and (b) Adur, Arun and Worthing Primary Care Trust area was in the latest period for which figures are available. [48262]

Caroline Flint: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Recombinant Factor VIII

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for what period of time her Department plans to fund recombinant Factor VIII for use by haemophiliacs in the UK. [49699]

Caroline Flint [holding answer 7 February 2006]: Department officials have been closely monitoring the implementation of the recombinant roll-out programme over the past two years. The Government remains committed to this programme and we are currently considering options for future funding of this important treatment.

Sexual Health

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much the Government have allocated for its publicity campaign on sexually transmitted diseases; and when it will begin. [49798]

Caroline Flint: Our current plans are to aim to launch the new sexual health campaign later in 2006. The campaign will be funded from the additional monies announced for sexual health over three years as a result of the Choosing Health White Paper to modernise and transform sexual health in England.

Turnaround Teams

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, what funding she allocated to the external commercial turnaround expertise sent to the Kennett and North Wiltshire Primary Care Trust; and from what budget this funding will be drawn; what the remit is and by what criteria she will judge its success. [46892]

Jane Kennedy [holding answer 31 January 2006]: The turnaround teams were announced in a ministerial statement on 1 December 2005, Official Report, column 37WS. The teams will comprise of experts with a mix of commercial and national health service turnaround skills.

The first stage of this is a baseline assessment, the aim of which is to ensure there is an agreed understanding of the local financial problem and that actions are in hand to address this.

The contract for the baseline assessment was awarded to consultants KPMG. Kennett and North Wiltshire Primary Care Trust's (PCT) assessment was included in this assessment. The value of this contract is commercial in confidence.

Following the baseline assessment a tailored package of turnaround support will be agreed by the local NHS. The first three months of a turnaround director at the PCT will be funded by the Department. The remit is to support the local management enable the PCT to deliver its statutory duties, including financial balance, and key national targets.

I envisage that the turnaround teams will be needed to the end of 2006-07, when I expect the NHS to have returned to financial balance.

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many financial directors have been removed from (a) NHS trusts and (b) strategic health authorities as a direct result of findings following visits from turnaround teams in the past two years and how many in each case have been removed to date in 2005-06. [47392]

Jane Kennedy: The information requested is not held centrally.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the total cost is of the turnaround work in the NHS in (a) England, (b) York and (c) North Yorkshire. [46885]

Jane Kennedy: The turnaround teams were announced in a ministerial statement on 1 December 2005, Official Report, column 37WS. The teams will comprise of experts with a mix of commercial and national health service turnaround skills.

The first stage of this is a baseline assessment, the aim of which is to ensure there is an agreed understanding of the local financial problem and that actions are in hand to address this.

Selby and York primary care trust (PCT), Yorkshire Wolds and Coast PCT and Scarborough, Whitby and Ryedale PCT are included in this assessment. The value of the contract to run the baseline assessment exercise is commercial in confidence.

A national programme office, to coordinate the turnaround programme, has been established; its value is also commercial in confidence.

Following the baseline assessment a tailored package of turnaround support will be agreed with each organisation. The costs will depend on the packages of support agreed.

Vulnerable Adults

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many checks against the protection of vulnerable adults list were made in the last year for which figures are available; and what the average time taken to respond to each check was in the last period for which figures are available. [44899]

Mr. Byrne: The Criminal Records Bureau's (CRB) standard and enhanced disclosures will include a check against the protection of vulnerable adults (POVA) list where this is requested on the application form. The total number of disclosures issued in 2005 containing a check against the POVA list was 1,366,698. The CRB service standards are to process 93 per cent. of standard disclosure applications within two weeks and 90 per cent. of enhanced disclosure applications within four weeks.

I understand from the CRB, that there are no figures available to determine the average time taken to process a POVA check because the check forms part of the overall internal CRB disclosure process and figures are not collated centrally.

PRIME MINISTER

Butler Inquiry

Adam Price: To ask the Prime Minister whether the Government provided information to the Butler inquiry team relating to his meeting with President Bush and his advisers held at the White House on 31 January 2003. [51515]

The Prime Minister: The Government co-operated fully with the Butler review.

Buses

Mr. Leech: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many new bus services have commenced running in the North Western Traffic Area in each financial year since 1997. [50356]

Ms Buck: The following table shows the number of new bus services registered in the North Western Traffic Area in each financial year since 1 April 1998. The number of services registered before this date cannot be recovered without disproportionate cost.

Financial year	New bus services registered
1999–2000	1,077
2000–01	1,147
2002–03	926
2003–04	772
2004–05	842

Commission for Integrated Transport

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of whether there is a potential conflict of interest between the chairmanship of his Commission for Integrated Transport and the role of Transport for London Commissioner. [50817]

Ms Buck: The role of the Commission for Integrated Transport (CfIT) is focussed on future strategic issues and best practice at a national level, so I am satisfied that there is no general conflict of interest. I believe CfIT benefits from the added value of such a senior figure as Chair. However, in the event that CfIT's work was to impinge on TfL's responsibilities the Chair has made it clear that he would declare an interest and if necessary excuse himself from that work. There are many other commissioners and a Vice Chair of CfIT who in that case would have no conflict.

Ferries (Fire Safety)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the recommended method is of extinguishing fires on board roll-on roll-off ferries; and if he will make a statement. [50143]

Dr. Ladyman: The Safety of Life at Sea Convention (SOLAS 1974) requires passenger roll-on roll-off ferries to be fitted with a type-approved, fixed pressure water spraying system to extinguish fires on the vehicle decks.

The convention also requires drainage or pumping arrangements sufficient to ensure that the water from the spraying system will be discharged rapidly from the ship, to avoid the serious loss of stability that could arise due to water accumulating on the vehicle decks.

Structural fire protection and fire suppression systems are also required throughout the accommodation and machinery spaces.

Heathrow Airport

Mr. Marshall-Andrews: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many and what proportion of night flights into Heathrow operated on (a) a westerly and (b) an easterly flight path (i) in 2004 and (ii) in 2005. [48014]

Ms Buck: The Department does not hold detailed information on this, which is an operational matter for National Air Traffic Services Ltd. (NATS). I understand that they are willing to assist in collating this information and suggest my hon. and learned Friend directs his inquiries to the chief executive of NATS.

Hydrogen Powered Fuel Cell Buses

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how much the trial of hydrogen powered fuel cell buses in London cost; and how much of this amount was met by (a) his Department, (b) the European Union, (c) the Energy Saving Trust and (d) other sources; [48264]

(2) whether he has received a report on the conclusions drawn from the trial of hydrogen powered fuel cell buses in London; and when he next expects to receive such a report; [48265]

(3) how many hydrogen powered fuel cell buses have been in operation in each year since 2004. [48267]

Ms Buck: Three hydrogen-powered buses have been in operation in London since January 2004 as part of a European demonstration programme supported by this Department and a number of other stakeholders. No other hydrogen-powered buses have been in operation in the UK during the years in question.

The trial was due to finish in December 2005, but London and a number of other European cities taking part in similar trials are currently in discussions with the European Commission about extending the project for a further year. A report summarising the lessons learned from the trials across Europe is due to be published shortly.

We estimate that the total costs of the London trial have amounted to over £3 million. Costs have been shared among a number of partners. The European Commission provided just over £1 million of support, and the UK Government provided just under £500,000 through the Department for Transport's New Vehicle Technology Fund programme, administered by the Energy Savings Trust. The trial was overseen by Transport for London and a number of other project partners provided financial and other support. These included London Bus Services Ltd., FirstGroup, Daimler-Chrysler, Ballard, and BP.

Limousines (Licensing)

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether the Department plans to establish a working party involving interested parties to examine the regulations surrounding the licensing of limousines and stretch limousines. [48950]

Ms Buck [holding answer 6 February 2006]: We are satisfied that current legislation adequately caters for the licensing of limousines. We are aware of the concerns over stretch limousines and will update our advice to the industry in the near future. We have no plans to set up a working party.

Maritime and Coastguard Agency

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many inspectors have been employed by the Maritime and Coastguard Agency in each year since 2000; and how many inspections were carried out by the agency in each year since 2000, broken down by flag. [48826]

Dr. Ladyman: The number of inspectors (surveying staff carrying out Port State Control duties) employed by the Maritime and Coastguard Agency (MCA) for 2004 was 105. The MCA do not have any staff who work exclusively on Port State Control, but the effort in this activity is about 18 full-time equivalents.

102 inspectors were employed in 2003. Figures for previous years are unavailable.

The number of inspections carried out per year is as follows:

	UK ships	Foreign ships	Total
2000	622	1,806	2,428
2001	683	1,811	2,494
2002	845	1,769	2,614
2004	984	1,768	2,752

The breakdown by flag is available within the MCA's Annual Plan and Accounts, copies of which are available in the Libraries of the House.

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what funds were allocated for external radio surveys of merchant ships on behalf of the Maritime and Coastguard Agency in 2005–06; how much of this fund remains to be spent; and if he will make a statement. [48828]

Dr. Ladyman: No funds were allocated for external radio surveys of merchant ships on behalf of the Maritime and Coastguard Agency in 2005–06. Vessel owners/operators are responsible for the payment of survey charges.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the retirement age is for employees of the Maritime and Coastguard Agency. [51498]

Dr. Ladyman: Employees of the Coastguard may retire at the age of 60 although they have the right to choose to continue in service up to the age of 65.

Merchant Navy (Competency Certificates)

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many holders of certificates of equivalent competency are serving on merchant vessels which joined the UK shipping register since 2000. [48827]

Dr. Ladyman: There are currently 8,957 valid holders of Certificates of Equivalent Competency (CECs) in circulation, these having been issued within the last five years. Records of where the holders are currently serving are not kept.

Ministerial Cars

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will ensure that all ministerial cars are converted to run on an 85 per cent. biofuel blend as soon as is practically possible. [49589]

Ms Buck: The responsibility for the provision of ministerial cars and drivers has been delegated under the terms of the framework document to the Government Car Despatch Agency. I have asked its Chief Executive Mr. Roy Burke to write to my hon. Friend. Copies of his letter will be placed in the Library.

Letter from Roy Burke, dated 13 February 2006:

You recently tabled a Parliamentary Question about the fuel used by the Government car fleet. The Parliamentary Under Secretary of State has asked me to write in my capacity as the Chief Executive responsible for the Government Car and Despatch Agency (GCDA).

GCDA is committed to ensuring that all its vehicles are as environmentally friendly as they can be while meeting the needs of Government. All new vehicles purchased by the Agency will be environmentally friendly. They are either a vehicle with a diesel engine capable of running on bio diesel or a hybrid vehicle.

Currently there are few vehicles that can be run on bioethanol and conversion at this point in time would be likely to invalidate the manufacturer's warranty. Further, there are very few places in the UK where bioethanol can be purchased. We will continue to monitor the situation and when the technologies of vehicle and fuel are more widely available we will use the most environmentally friendly option available.

A copy of this letter has been placed in the Libraries of the House for information.

Parliamentary Questions

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what guidance his Department follows on answering parliamentary questions. [48248]

Ms Buck: The Department follows the "Ministerial Code", the "Civil Service Code" and "Guidance to Officials on Drafting Responses to Parliamentary Questions" when answering parliamentary questions. Copies of these documents are available in the Library.

Rail Safety (Hampshire)

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which train level crossings in Hampshire (a) are unmanned, (b) have half barriers and (c) have full barriers; which (i) have and (ii) do not have CCTV; and what steps will be taken to upgrade unmanned or those with half barriers in (A) 2005–06 and (B) 2006–07. [47252]

Derek Twigg: The information is not held centrally in the form requested.

Rail Services

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will reverse the decision of the Office of Rail Regulation to reject GNER's plans for further half hourly services between London and Leeds including stops at Peterborough. [50342]

Derek Twigg: The decision is one for the independent Office of Rail Regulation (ORR).

Rail Strikes

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with Virgin Cross Country regarding the use of untrained staff on strike days in the current dispute with the Rail, Maritime and Transport Union. [49763]

Derek Twigg: Pay and conditions are matters for negotiation between staff and employers. Her Majesty's Rail Inspectorate have been consulted on the arrangements of trained staff to provide cover as guards/train managers on strike days. The company are satisfied that their safety case has not been compromised.

Road Pricing Schemes

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether his Department has published guidelines on whether (a) local and (b) national road pricing schemes should be revenue neutral; and if he will make a statement. [48250]

Dr. Ladyman: The Department has not published guidance on whether local and national road pricing schemes should be revenue neutral.

Road Signs

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what his policy is on conversion of British road signs to metric. [50305]

Ms Buck: The Government have no such proposals. UK legislation requires that imperial units be used for indicating speeds and distances on traffic signs. EC legislation on units of measurement (council directive 80/181/EEC, as amended by directive 89/617/EEC) allows the continuing use of miles and yards on UK road signs.

Roadworks (Speed Restrictions)

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many speed restrictions have been imposed as a result of roadworks in each of the last five years; and how many have continued to operate when work on the road is not happening. [48255]

Dr. Ladyman: Traffic authorities are responsible for setting local speed limits, including temporary restrictions at roadworks. These records are retained by individual traffic authorities but there are no central figures indicating how many speed restrictions have been imposed as a result of roadworks in the last five years.

Temporary speed restrictions are for the benefit of both road workers and road users, and are considered when a temporary hazard exists such as restricted visibility, narrow lanes, loss of vehicle restraint barrier, or other construction hazard. While it may not always be obvious to passing motorists that such a hazard exists, it is important that any imposed speed restrictions should remain as long as the hazard remains, even when no work is physically taking place.

Traffic Management Act

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what penalties have been issued by each local authority for disruption caused by roadworks under the Traffic Management Act 2004; and what the cash value of these penalties is. [48227]

Ms Buck: The regulations enabling penalties have not yet been made. Consequently penalty notices cannot yet be issued under the Traffic Management Act 2004.

Tyne and Wear (Financial Bids)

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, what payments have been made to Newcastle City Council and its partners for the Quayside Transit System, broken down by year. [34378]

Ms Buck [pursuant to the reply, 8 December 2005, Official Report, c. 1465W]: The Department has paid Newcastle city council a total of £4.711 million for the Quayside Public Transport Scheme.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Afghanistan

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps his Department is taking to achieve a sustained and significant reduction in the production and trafficking of narcotics in the Afghan province of Helmand; and if he will make a statement. [49316]

Mr. Straw: The southern province of Helmand is one of Afghanistan's most significant poppy growing provinces. As my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence announced on 26 January, UK troops will be deployed to Helmand in support of a UN authorised, NATO-led mission, the International Security Assistance Force (ISAF), and as part of the international coalition. They will work to counter insurgency and help the appropriate authorities build security and Government institutions to continue the progress of recent years. Above all, their presence will help the Afghans create the environment in which economic development and institutional reform—both essential to the elimination of the opium industry—can take place. ISAF forces will help with the provision of training to Afghan counter-narcotics forces and will when necessary provide support to their operations. They will help the Afghan Government explain their policies to the people.

The UK's aim is to make drug production a high risk/low benefit endeavour by developing a stronger and more effective provincial government, strengthening the Governor and his office, building greater local drugs law enforcement capacity (strengthening the Counter Narcotics Police) and developing criminal justice systems to deliver sustained progress against the drugs trade. We will work with the Government of Afghanistan to increase access to legal rural livelihoods and to increase the perception of risk associated with poppy cultivation to encourage farmers and traffickers to make a sustained move away from cultivation of opium poppy.

Our counter narcotics objectives for Helmand are consistent with the Afghan National Drug Control Strategy, which the Afghan Government recently reviewed and updated with the support of the UK as partner nation for counter narcotics. The strategy was launched at the London Conference on 31 January & 1 February. It sets out four key priorities, which we believe will help make a greater impact on the trade and sustain the reduction in cultivation we have seen in 2005. These are: targeting traffickers; strengthening and diversifying legal rural livelihoods; building institutions; and demand reduction.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what contribution other countries are making to the British led anti-opium initiative in Afghanistan. [49445]

Dr. Howells: The Government of Afghanistan is responsible for leading the counter narcotics effort in Afghanistan. As key partner nation for counter narcotics, the UK is committed to helping Afghanistan deliver its National Drug Control Strategy and to coordinating international assistance in support of the strategy.

It is not possible to quantify, numerically, the total level of counter narcotics assistance provided by the international community as much of it takes the form of capacity building, including the secondment of mentors and trainers to the counter narcotics police of Afghanistan and the counter narcotics criminal justice task force. Equally there is no clear dividing line between broader reconstruction and counter narcotics specific assistance.

However, the US is the biggest contributor to the Government of Afghanistan's counter narcotics campaign—spending US$787.9 million in 2005. Other key players include EU member states and the Commission (spending €150 million from 2005, excluding UK spending), Norway, Canada and Afghanistan's regional partners.

Australia, New Zealand, the European Commission, Estonia, Sweden, the US, Korea and the UK have also contributed to the Counter Narcotics Trust Fund (CNTF), launched by the Government of Afghanistan in October 2005. To date, total commitments to the CNTF stand at US$77.5 million.

Mr. Swayne: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what payments he has authorised to Afghan poppy farmers; and if he will make a statement. [50946]

Dr. Howells: In 2002, the Afghan Transitional Authority considered it appropriate to offer a one-off programme of compensation payments to opium poppy farmers on the basis that the poppy crop had been planted during the Taliban regime, before the current regime came to power. The UK provided financial assistance worth £21.25 million in order to support the new regime's commitment to tackle drugs production, but it was the responsibility of the Afghan authorities to administer the system of payments. The UK has not authorised any further payments.

Mr. Gray: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the death of Mr. Steve MacQueen in Afghanistan; and what stage British investigations of his death have reached. [51158]

Dr. Howells: Steven MacQueen, a British national working for the World Bank as an adviser to the Government of Afghanistan's Ministry of Rural Rehabilitation and Development, was shot and killed by unknown attackers in a main street in Kabul on 7 March 2005.

The Government of Afghanistan asked the UK to assist with their investigation into Mr. MacQueen's murder. Officers of the Metropolitan police service visited Kabul in March, May, July and November 2005 to assist the Government of Afghanistan with their on-going investigations. To date, no-one has been charged.

Belarus

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps his Department is taking to encourage the development of civil society in Belarus. [49607]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) provides support for non-governmental organisations and help to civil society in Belarus under the Global Opportunities Fund and other FCO budgets. Since 2002, we have provided over £1,500,000 for this purpose. The Government also provide funding through the EU. During the UK's presidency, the EU agreed steps to increase contact with the Belarusian people and to strengthen support for civil society, including through technical assistance and by opening an EU office in Minsk. To this end the EU has transferred €2 million to the European Initiative for Democracy and Human Rights programme, which is better suited to providing support for civil society.

Democratic Republic of the Congo

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether (a) at and (b) at General Affairs Council meetings since the meeting of the General Affairs Council of the EU on 21 and 22 November 2005 he (i) proposed a commitment of and (ii) was asked to contribute (A) arms and (B) material to the EU mission in Congo. [48774]

Ian Pearson: The UN Under-Secretary-General for Peacekeeping Operations, Jean-Marie Guehenno, wrote to my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary in his capacity as President of the General Affairs Council on 28 December 2005. He asked if the EU could consider making available a deterrent force which could be deployed, if necessary, to the Democratic Republic of Congo during the forthcoming election period. The EU is working with the UN on clarifying its requirements. An EU fact finding mission visited Kinshasa and New York last week.

The UK believes that the EU should consider the UN request favourably. But the UK's ability to contribute to any EU mission will be constrained by its heavy operational commitments elsewhere.

Departmental Catering Budget

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much and what proportion of his Department's catering budget was spent on fairtrade produce in the last period for which figures are available. [49913]

Mr. Straw: During the 2004–05 financial year, £256,419 was spent on fairtrade products with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office's catering contractor, in the UK. This represents 19 per cent. of the overall spend with the contractor during that period.

Details for the overseas estate can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Details for Government hospitality are not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what his Department's policy is on the procurement of fairtrade produce for consumption on its premises. [49924]

Mr. Straw: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office's (FCO) policy on the procurement of fairtrade produce is to ensure that fairtrade produce is available to purchase and the FCO will explore options to expand the variety of fairtrade options offered for sale, within the boundaries of good procurement practice including value for money. Tea and coffee provided for official functions are fairtrade.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the expenditure on (a) buildings and (b) insurance of buildings and staff was of (i) his Department and (ii) each (A) non-departmental public body, (B) executive agency and (C) other public body for which his Department is responsible in each English region in each of the last three financial years; and what the planned expenditure is for 2005–06 in each case. [40085]

Mr. Straw: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) maintains buildings in London and at Hanslope Park in Buckinghamshire. It is responsible for one executive agency, the Wilton Park Conference Centre, which maintains buildings in Sussex. The expenditure for each of these areas for the years requested is shown in the following table.

	2002-03	2003-04	2004-05	2005-06[1]
Buildings
London	3,185,126.11	4,002,514.96	4,213,034.85	2,928,312.00
Hanslope Park	956,842.67	589,299.48	1,169,837.24	1,239,319.00
Wilton Park	158,620.00	170,552.00	184,120.00	151,880.00
Insurance

[1] Estimated

The estimated figure for London buildings is lower than previous years as an additional £921,560 for the maintenance of the fabric of the buildings has been allocated in the mid-year review, but has not yet been allocated to individual buildings. This brings the total estimated spend to slightly below last year's actual spend.

London and Hanslope Park buildings are not insured—the office acts as it's own insurer. The Wilton Park buildings are insured under the current lease agreement.

The FCO also has responsibility for a number of non-departmental public bodies which have recorded expenditure on buildings and insurance in these financial years. The following expenditure was made in London.

	2002-03	2003-04	2004-05	2005-06[1]
Buildings
British Council[2]	5,600,000	5,600,000	4,800,000	5,700,000

BBC World Service[2]	300,000	300,000	300,000	300,000
Great Britain-China Centre	977	1,031	815	818

[1] Estimated
[2] The BBC World Service and British Council figures are approximate

The British Council also maintains buildings in Manchester, which incurred the following expenditure.

	Buildings
2003-04	2,700,000
2004-05	2,500,000
2005-06[2]	2,800,000

[1] Estimated
[2] The BBC World Service and British Council figures are approximate

No expenditure on buildings and insurance was recorded during this period for any other non-departmental public body for which the FCO has responsibility.

Departmental Functions

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many staff are associated with the delivery of the (a) policy and service delivery function and (b) corporate function of his Department; and what the total salary costs were for each function in the last year for which figures are available. [48895]

Mr. Straw: Staff numbers and costs are not collected in a way that would give the above information. Our Activity Based Management (ABM) system gives an allocation of cost and staff numbers to business objectives but these are not the same as policy, service delivery and corporate services.

Departmental Information

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much was spent on his Department's public relations and information services in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [48959]

Mr. Straw: We do not maintain this information centrally and in order to provide it each overseas post would need to identify each relevant accounts transaction for the past five years. The information requested could therefore be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Detention Centres (US Flights)

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 20 December 2005, Official Report, column 2843W, on detention centres (US flights), what assessment he has made of differences between the UK Government's working definition of torture and that of the US Administration. [49247]

Dr. Howells: In the UK, torture is defined in section 134 of the Criminal Justice Act 1988. The Government do not have any other "working definition" of torture. Any "working definition" used by the US Government would be a matter of US law and practice. As a State Party to the UN Convention Against Torture, the US Government, like the UK Government, is obliged to prevent and to criminalise torture as defined in Article 1 of that Convention.

Family Member Permits

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which 10 of his Department's overseas diplomatic posts issued the greatest number of European economic area family member permits in 2004–05; and what checks were made on the eligibility of family members before they were issued. [50709]

Dr. Howells: The following 10 overseas diplomatic posts issued the greatest number of European Economic Area (EEA) family permits in the financial year 2004–05:

EEA family permits issued

Diplomatic post	Number of permits
Dusseldorf	6,661
Paris	2,279
Mumbai	1,752
Amsterdam	1,505
Brussels	915
Madrid	903
Oslo	891
Geneva	836
Stockholm	792
Copenhagen	777

Further entry clearance statistics in addition to those provided can be found on the UK visas website at: www.ukvisas.gov.uk-'Entry Clearance: Facts and Figures'.

Applicants for EEA family permits must show that they meet the requirements of the Immigration (European Economic Area) (Amendment) Regulations 2003 in order to be granted entry clearance on that basis. An entry clearance officer (ECO) assessing an EEA family permit application must be satisfied in particular that the applicant is related as claimed to the EEA principal (the person in regards to whom the applicant is making their application) or the EEA principal's spouse. If the ECO has doubts about an application, he/she is entitled to interview the applicant and conduct further investigations until satisfied.

In addition, the ECO will need to see evidence that the EEA principal is in or intends to travel to the UK, has an EEA passport and evidence of the EEA principal's employment in the UK or that they can be supported for the whole period of their stay.

Human Rights

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what his Department's most recent assessment is of the human rights situation in (a) Libya, (b) Eritrea, (c) Vietnam, (d) Turkmenistan and (e) Belarus; and if he will make a statement. [49491]

Dr. Howells: The Government remain concerned about the human rights situation in Libya, Eritrea, Vietnam, Turkmenistan and Belarus.

Libya

The Government welcome the opening of a dialogue between the Libyan authorities and groups like Amnesty International and Human Rights Watch. We also welcome progress made in the joint programme on prison management between the Libyan Secretariat of Justice and the International Centre for Prison Studies, which was financed by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office's Global Opportunities Fund. We also welcome the abolition of the Revolutionary Courts, the recent debate in the Basic People's Congresses on the possible abolition or further restriction of the death penalty, and the release of 14 political prisoners in January 2006.

Eritrea

We monitor the human rights situation in Eritrea closely. The continuing detention of members of minority religious groups and the arrest and detention without charge of journalists and prominent members of the People's Front for Democracy and Justice since 18 September 2001 are of grave concern to us and the international community. We regularly raise these concerns with the Eritrean Government.

Vietnam

Vietnam has made substantial progress in terms of economic and social rights over recent decades. However, it has, despite some recent progress, a poor record with regard to civil and political rights.

The UK, with our EU partners, is pursuing an increasingly open dialogue with the Vietnamese Government on human rights, particularly at the twice-yearly meetings of the EU-Vietnam Human Rights Dialogue. The EU has concerns with regard to the right to a fair trial, freedom of the press, of expression, of information, of assembly, of association, and of religion, the death penalty, and the treatment of ethnic minorities. The EU also maintains a list of prisoners/detainees of concern in Vietnam, whose cases are brought up regularly with the Vietnamese authorities.

Turkmenistan

The Turkmen Government have made some progress in addressing human rights issues but, as noted in the UN Secretary-General's report on human rights in Turkmenistan of September 2005, there is still a lack of overall improvement in addressing serious human rights violations.

On the positive side, Turkmenistan has acceded to three further UN protocols and conventions, including those on the Rights of the Child, more minority religious groups have been allowed to worship for the first time, and exit visas as a requirement for leaving the country have been abolished.

However, a number of areas of concern remain. The Government of Turkmenistan continue to restrict freedom of thought, conscience, expression, movement, religion or belief. Conditions in Turkmen prisons remain poor and credible reports of mistreatment of detainees persist.

In November 2005, together with our EU partners, we supported a Resolution on Turkmenistan in the UN's Third Committee. This Resolution comprehensively covered the points of progress and of continuing concern and encouraged the Government of Turkmenistan to ensure full respect for all human rights and fundamental freedoms.

Belarus

We are deeply concerned at the poor human rights situation in Belarus and continue to raise these concerns with the Belarusian authorities both bilaterally and together with EU partners. We regret in particular the continued harassment of non-governmental organisations, including legal action against the Belarus-Helsinki Committee, and amendments to the civil and penal codes that can be used to stifle further free speech ahead of the 19 March presidential elections. EU Foreign Ministers discussed Belarus again at the General Affairs and External Relations Council on 30 January 2006. Conclusions were issued which reiterated the EU's deep concern at the deteriorating situation in respect of democracy, human rights and political freedoms in Belarus and called on the Belarusian authorities to ensure that the Presidential elections on 19 March are conducted in a free and fair manner. We will continue to press the Belarus authorities on these matters.

The Government, with the international community and other stake holders, will continue to work with the Libyan, Eritrean, Vietnamese, Turkmen and Belarus authorities to encourage them to move towards internationally accepted standards on human rights and the rule of law.

India

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what timescale he expects for admitting India as a permanent member of the UN Security Council. [50710]

Dr. Howells: It is not possible to give a timescale on when India will be admitted as a permanent member of the UN Security Council.

Iraq

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the UK Government and its allies in Iraq have opened (a) direct and (b) indirect channels of dialogue with representatives of armed groups commonly referred to as the Iraqi insurgency. [51513]

Dr. Howells: Our policy remains, as my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister stated in June 2005, to bring as many people into the democratic process as possible. Iraq and its allies, including the UK, believe that an inclusive political process is critical for Iraq's future stability. To this end we maintain dialogue with all those who subscribe to this aim. There are elements of Iraqi society who appear to be irreconcilably opposed to the political process and determined to pursue their aims solely through violent means. We can have no dialogue with them.

Israel

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 20 December 2005, Official Report, column 2852W, on Israel, if he will make it Government policy not to apologise in any case where someone from another country is arrested or threatened with arrest as a result of a warrant issued by a UK court following private prosecution under international law. [49681]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary apologised as a matter of courtesy to Israeli Foreign Minister Shalom.

There are no plans to formulate a policy regarding when apologies are appropriate.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what visits Ministers from his Department have made to UK Overseas Territories in the last five years, broken down by (a) date, (b) country and (c) Minister. [49113]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: Details of official visits by Foreign and Commonwealth Office Ministers to each of the Overseas Territories in the last five years are as follows:

Anguilla

There is no record of any recent visits to Anguilla.

Ascension Island

November 2003: Bill Rammell, the then Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, stopped briefly at Ascension Island on his way to the Falkland Islands.

Bermuda

18–20 July 2002: Baroness Amos, the then Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State.

British Antarctic Territory

24–28 January 2001: Baroness Scotland of Asthal, the then Parliamentary Under-secretary of State.

British Indian Ocean Territory

There is no record of any recent visits to the British Indian Ocean Territory.

British Virgin Islands

2–4 September 2004: Bill Rammell, the then Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State.

Cayman Islands

16–17 February 2003: Baroness Amos, the then Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State.

Falkland Islands

26–29 November 2003: Bill Rammell, the then Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State.

Gibraltar

3–4 July 2003: Dennis MacShane, the then Minister for Europe.

3 May 2002: Jack Straw, Foreign Secretary.

6 September 2001: Peter Hain, the then Minister for Europe.

Montserrat

21 December 2001: Baroness Amos, the then Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State.

Pitcairn Islands

There is no record of any recent visits to the Pitcairn Islands.

St. Helena

There is no record of any recent visits to St. Helena.

Tristan da Cunha

There is no record of any recent visits to Tristan da Cunha.

South Georgia and South Sandwich Islands

There is no record of any recent visits to South Georgia and the South Sandwich Islands.

The Sovereign Base Areas on Cyprus (Akrotiri and Dhekelia)

There is no record of any recent visits to the Sovereign Base Areas.

Turks and Caicos Islands

18–19 December 2001: Baroness Amos, the then Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State.

Non-proliferation (G8 Action Plan)

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made in meeting the commitments to fund and expand the Global Partnership Against Weapons and Materials of Mass Destruction contained in the G8 Action Plan on Non-proliferation of 10 June 2004; and if he will make a statement. [51317]

Dr. Howells: As a result of the June 2004 Action Plan, a further US$14 million has been pledged to the Global Partnership from seven new donor countries. Progress has also been made in expanding the recipient base of the Global Partnership:

During the UK G8 Presidency, discussions were held with nine countries of the former Soviet Union to discuss possible entry to the Global Partnership and to gather detailed information on potential projects;

The US and UK have made progress in developing project proposals for the redirection of scientists in Iraq and Libya;

A number of donors have also been in discussion with Ukraine concerning potential new projects.

Furthermore, during the UK G8 Presidency in 2005 substantial progress was made on a number of key areas of Global Partnership implementation. Particular areas of success under UK-managed programmes include the establishment of a new nuclear security programme, securing additional international pledges of £210 million to the Chernobyl Shelter Fund, significant progress on decontamination at Andreyeva Bay in NW Russia, one of the largest depositories of spent nuclear fuel in the world, and implementation of a further £4 million portfolio of projects to provide sustainable, non-weapons employment for former nuclear scientists and technicians.

Full details of the UK programmes under the Global Partnership can be found in the 2005 Annual Report available at http://www.dti.gov.uk/energy/nuclear/fsu/index.shtml.

Palestine

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the Palestinian Authority's security services since the Palestinian elections; and if he will make a statement. [50500]

Dr. Howells: The Palestinian Authority's security services have been undertaking their normal duties. It is important that the Palestinian security forces maintain law and order. Their ability, capacity, and will to do so remains in question. Wide-ranging security sector reform was vital before the elections and, it remains vital now.

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Palestinian Authorities on the disarming of members of Hamas; and if he will make a statement. [50501]

Dr. Howells: As my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary told the House on 7 February 2006, Official Report, column 735,

'we have been equally clear that those who take part in the democratic process have a responsibility to reject violence. The result therefore presents Hamas with a very clear choice. Last Monday, 30 January, the Quartet agreed that all members of a future Palestinian Government must be committed to non-violence, to a recognition of Israel and to an acceptance of previous agreements, including the road map. We, along with our EU partners, will continue to work with the Palestinians, the Israelis and the international community to make progress on the road map, to which both the Palestinian President Mahmoud Abbas and the Israeli Government remain committed.'

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the likelihood of Hamas militants being incorporated into the Palestinian Authority's security services; and if he will make a statement. [50502]

Dr. Howells: We have no indications at present of whether Hamas militants will be incorporated into the security services. We continue to monitor the situation closely with international partners.

As my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary told the House on 7 February 2006, Official Report, column 735;

'we have been equally clear that those who take part in the democratic process have a responsibility to reject violence. The result therefore presents Hamas with a very clear choice. Last Monday, 30 January, the Quartet agreed that all members of a future Palestinian Government must be committed to non-violence, to a recognition of Israel and to an acceptance of previous agreements, including the road map. We, along with our EU partners, will continue to work with the Palestinians, the Israelis and the international community to make progress on the road map, to which both the Palestinian President Mahmoud Abbas and the Israeli Government remain committed.'

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what estimate he has made of the number of Hamas militants in the Palestinian territories; and if he will make a statement. [50503]

Dr. Howells: We have not made a formal estimate of the number of Hamas militants in the Occupied Territories. The nature of the organisation, the problem of defining 'militants' and the fact that we have no contact with Hamas makes an estimate difficult.

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received on whether a cooperation agreement has been signed between the Palestinian Authority and the Iranian Government; and if he will make a statement. [50504]

Dr. Howells: We are not aware of any cooperation agreements having being signed between the Palestinian Authority and Iran.

Parliamentary Questions

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many parliamentary questions tabled in the last 12 months for answer by him on a named day (a) were transferred and (b) received a substantive answer (i) on the day named and (ii) after the day named. [49873]

Mr. Straw: The figure for named day parliamentary questions formally transferred into the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) from 1 February to 16 May 2005 cannot be produced using our current parliamentary questions management system. From 17 May 2005 to 31 January 2006, 20 named day questions were transferred out of the FCO for answer.

From 1 February 2005 to 31 January 2006, 389 named day questions received a substantive answer on the day named and 181 received a substantive answer after the day named.

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many ordinary written parliamentary questions tabled for answer by him in the last 12 months have been answered (a) within 14 days, (b) between 14 and 28 days, (c) between 28 days and two months and (d) in excess of two months after the date of tabling; and if he will make a statement. [49902]

Mr. Straw: In the period 1 February 2005 to 31 January 2006, 2,373 ordinary written parliamentary questions (95 per cent.) were answered within 14 days and 107 in excess of 14 days. Our current parliamentary questions management system does not hold information that would allow us to break the latter figure down further.

Pensions Contributions

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the cost was of pension contributions incurred by (a) his Department and (b) each (i) non-departmental public body, (ii) executive agency and (iii) other public body for which he is responsible in (A) Scotland, (B) Wales, (C) each of the English regions and (D) Northern Ireland in each of the last three financial years; and what the planned expenditure is for 2005–06. [39981]

Mr. Straw: The Foreign and Commonwealth (FCO) paid the following amounts in Accruing Superannuation Liability Charges (ASLC) in the years in question:

	Amount (£)
2002–03	24,301,473
2003–04	26,253,831
2004–05	27,034,675

We estimate that our ASLC payment for 2005–06 will be about £37.5 million.

Payments made by the non departmental public bodies for which the FCO is responsible were as follows:

	The British Council	Westminster Foundation for Democracy	Great Britain-China Centre	British Association for Central and Eastern Europe	BBC World Service
2002–03	5,351,489	59,523	13,026	15,699	1,700,000
2003–04	5,726,288	73,227	23,681	16,532	2,100,000
2004–05	6,193,803	67,598	20,989	17,580	2,600,000
2005–06	[1]8,363,803	[1]99,876	[1]29,394	[1]18,500	[1]3,100,000

[1] Estimated cost.

Diplomatic Service Appeals Board

Holders of these positions receive a daily fee. No deduction is made for pension purposes and no pension contribution costs have therefore been incurred.

Marshall Aid Commemoration Commission, Government Hospitality Advisory Committee for the Purchase of Wine and Wilton Park Academic Council

Holders of these positions are unpaid, and no pension contribution costs have therefore been incurred.

Foreign Compensation Committee

No expenditure has been incurred in each of the last financial three years and none is planned for 2005–06.

Costs for the FCO's Executive Agency, Wilton Park, are included within the overall figures for the FCO.

The FCO does not identify its administrative costs by area.

South Georgia Council

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) when the South Georgia Council last met; and who attended; [49115]

(2) who sits on the South Georgia Council; how often it meets; and where it holds its meetings. [49116]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: South Georgia has no permanent population and therefore no Council. The Territory is governed by the Government of South Georgia and the South Sandwich Islands, as established under the South Georgia and South Sandwich Islands Order 1985. The head of Government is a Commissioner based in Stanley, Falkland Islands. The Governor of the Falkland Islands is the current Commissioner.

Sudan

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent assessment he has made of the security situation in Sudan's Darfur region; and if he will make a statement. [49668]

Ian Pearson: We remain very concerned about the security situation in Darfur. In his latest report the UN Secretary-General notes that December saw a continuation at very high levels of violence and banditry, with both the Government of Sudan and the Sudan Liberation Movement/Army (SLM/A) flouting the ceasefire declarations they have signed. Reports indicate that in January high levels of violence continued, but that the SLM/A have been responsible for initiating a greater number of ceasefire violations.

My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary and my noble Friend, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office Minister for Africa, Lord Triesman of Tottenham, met the Sudanese Foreign Minister, Dr. Lam Akol, on 3 February where they made clear that this situation is entirely unacceptable and that urgent steps must be taken to improve security. They underlined that the Government expect full compliance by the Government of Sudan and all allied forces with provisions of the N'djamena ceasefire agreement, the Abuja Security and Humanitarian protocols and the UN Security Council Resolutions on Sudan. They also stressed that we expect the Government of Sudan to co-operate actively with the African Union Mission in Sudan (AMIS). During the meeting, Dr. Akol agreed that the Government of Sudan would exempt AMIS from the night-time curfew in Darfur. We are also making clear that all other armed movements in Darfur, particularly the SLM/A and the Justice and Equality Movement must adhere to these conditions.

Zimbabwe

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what (a) bilateral and (b) multilateral preparations the Government have made to provide assistance to Zimbabwean refugees should they enter Zimbabwe's neighbouring countries in large numbers. [49309]

Ian Pearson: We are deeply concerned about the humanitarian impact of the deteriorating political, economic and social conditions in Zimbabwe. We make repeated representations to the states in the region about the actual and potential impact of the ongoing crisis.

We continue to support the work of the United Nations High Commission for Refugees and other international organisations and non-governmental organisations (NGOs) in providing adequate assistance to Zimbabwean refugees wherever they may be. The UK's Permanent Representative to the United Nations, Sir Emyr Jones Parry, has raised our concern about the Zimbabwe crisis at the UN Security Council and made clear the responsibility of governments to provide the World Food Programme, and all humanitarian agencies and NGOs, with full co-operation and access to those in need.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Consultants

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much was spent on external consultants and advisers by her Department in 2004–05, excluding its non-departmental public bodies and Executive agencies; and if she will make a statement. [51206]

Mr. Lammy: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Hemel Hempstead (Mike Penning) on 6 December 2005, Official Report, columns 1094–1096W.

Departmental Catering Budget

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much and what proportion of her Department's catering budget was spent on fair trade produce in the last period for which figures are available. [49918]

Mr. Lammy: The Department does not collect and record data on Fair Trade produce.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what her Department's policy is on the procurement of fairtrade produce for consumption on its premises. [49920]

Mr. Lammy: There are no Government wide approach to the procurement of fairtrade products. Each Government Department are responsible for making its own decisions on such products, against the background of the Government's value for money policy, the EC procurement rules and the Department's objectives. We have encouraged our catering contractors to use fairtrade products wherever possible.

Departmental Entertainment

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much was spent on entertainment by her Department in 2004–05, broken down by (a) food, (b) alcohol, (c) staff and (d) accommodation. [50890]

Mr. Lammy: Departmental expenditure, including associated staff costs, on entertainment, including working breakfasts or lunches, refreshment at meetings and official entertainment during 2004–05 was £97,803.39.

The Department's accounting system does not record information by the categories requested and it can be obtained only as disproportional cost.

All expenditure on official entertainment is made in accordance with published departmental guidance on financial procedures and propriety, based on principles set out in Government Accounting.

Departmental Works of Art

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport whether works of art other than those stolen in August 2001 from the temporary residence of the ambassador in Buenos Aires have been stolen from departmental buildings since 1997. [50567]

Mr. Lammy: The Government Art Collection has not found or been advised of any theft of its works of art from 1997 to 2006 other than the loss from Buenos Aires in 2001.

The Government Art Collection makes regular physical and postal inventory checks of its works of art on loan to several hundred major Government buildings in the UK and around the world, in order to ensure that the works are accounted for and that any incidents resulting in loss or damage are reported. This necessarily relies upon the advice of the members of staff in these buildings.

Digital Broadcasting

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport whether it is her Department's policy to provide for the reception of a digital signal via a second set where an individual qualifies for Government support in the process of digital switchover. [50536]

James Purnell: Assistance will be available to households where someone is aged 75 or over and to households with people with severe disabilities. This will consist of providing the necessary equipment to convert one TV set and the relevant support to install and use such equipment. More details will be announced later.

Film Production

Michael Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) when she will announce the co-production guidelines for UK-qualifying films; [48498]

(2) whether the new co-production guidelines for UK-qualifying films will supersede existing bilateral national treaties; and if she will make a statement. [48505]

James Purnell: Following a comprehensive review of the UK's film co-production treaties my Department, with the UK Film Council, is in the process of renegotiating its co-production treaties with Australia, New Zealand, Canada and France and establishing new co-production treaties with South Africa, India, China, Jamaica and Morocco.

Each treaty will need to be negotiated, agreed, signed and ratified by both governments before it can enter into force. Guidelines will be produced in time for a new treaty coming into force.

It is envisaged that each of the treaties we have with our existing bi-lateral partners will continue in force until it is replaced with a renegotiated treaty.

Negotiations are progressing well with all our partners, we have signed the main body of the Indian co-production treaty and are now working on the Annex to the agreement and Statements of Intent to progress our new treaties have been signed with South Africa, China, India and Morocco.

Gymnasiums (Disabled Access)

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will commission research on funding by local authorities to provide disabled user access to council-run gymnasia. [50828]

Mr. Caborn: DCMS will not be commissioning research but local authorities have contributed funding to the Inclusive Fitness Initiative (IFI), which has also benefited from significant lottery funding. The IFI aims to improve opportunities for disabled people to access fitness gyms and 180 public sector, not-for-profit sites will be operational by spring 2006. In addition to this, the culture block of the Comprehensive Performance Assessment should challenge local authorities to provide decent sport and leisure facilities for all their residents, disabled and non-disabled alike.

Leisure Centres

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment her Department has made of the implications for capital investment in community sports facilities of the transfer of ownership of leisure centres from local authorities to newly-formed charitable trusts. [50120]

Mr. Caborn: Specific information on the transfer of ownership of leisure centres from local authorities to newly-formed charitable trusts is not centrally collated. However, information from the Leisure Database Company suggests that approximately one-fifth of public leisure facilities in England are provided through trusts.

My Department recognise the importance of this issue in ensuring the continued sustainability of publicly provided sports facilities. The Audit Commission is currently undertaking a study into the different types of management arrangements available to local authorities for running these services and how they approach the task of choosing the option best suited to local needs. This is expected to include a consideration of the potential implications of each of these options, including for charitable trusts.

I will ensure a copy of the study is placed in the House Libraries once it is published.

Licensing

Mr. Moss: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport when she expects to publish her review of the guidance on the Licensing Act 2003 which was given to local authorities and the police. [50472]

James Purnell: Our review of the guidance issued under section 182 of the Licensing Act 2003 commenced on 1 December 2005 and will be in two stages. An initial review focussing on issues where there is a high degree of consensus among stakeholders will be completed and supplementary guidance laid before Parliament in early spring 2006.

A comprehensive formal review of the guidance including a full public consultation will be completed by summer 2006 and a revised version will be laid before Parliament by the end of 2006. This comprehensive review will include consideration of matters that cannot be easily resolved during the initial review.

Edward Miliband: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many applications have been granted for 24-hour sale of alcohol licences in (a) South Yorkshire and (b) Doncaster North constituency. [50595]

James Purnell: This information is not held centrally, but should be available from local licensing authorities.

The Department has collected survey material concerning 24-hour licences in England and Wales generally, but does not hold specific information about the majority of licensing authorities.

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will list the organisations that responded to the Gambling Commission consultation paper Statement of Principles on Licensing and Regulation. [50922]

Mr. Caborn: The Gambling Commission received 69 responses from organisations to its Statement of Principles on Licensing and Regulation consultation document as listed. There were a further eight responses from individuals. The Commission are planning to publish a revised Statement of Principles in April 2006 and to publish a summary of responses received in due course.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what guidance she has issued on whether businesses which are in the vicinity of a licensed premises may be classed as interested parties and object to a licensing application. [51101]

James Purnell: Under paragraph 5.32 of the guidance issued under Section 182 of the Licensing Act 2003, a person involved in a business in the vicinity of the premises in question, or a body representing persons involved in such businesses, is entitled to make representations to licensing authorities as an 'interested party'. It is for a licensing authority to determine whether or not a representation has been made by an 'interested party'. We are considering as part of our review of the guidance whether we can improve the guidance in this area.

Mr. Moss: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport whether she has received (a) complaints and (b) representations from (i) local authorities and (ii) sports and leisure bodies about the level of licence fees under the Licensing Act 2003. [49374]

James Purnell: We have received differing views from local authorities and sports and leisure bodies about the level of licensing fees under the Licensing Act 2003.

In order to consider these and other representations, I have put in place an Independent Licensing Fees Review Panel whose remit is to assess how well the existing arrangements are working. Sir Les Elton chairs the Panel, which includes representatives from local government. The Panel's interim findings were published on 5 December. Among other matters, the Panel found that there was insufficient information available to conclude whether or not fees had been set at the right level.

The Panel's final report will be delivered in the autumn, although Sir Les has been asked to focus as a priority on local authority licensing fee income and costs, and if possible report back earlier. I have given an undertaking that the fees regime will meet the full costs of local authorities in carrying out their legitimate responsibilities efficiently under the 2003 Licensing Act, within a national system.

Online Gambling

Mr. Moss: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what regulation is applicable to companies who are registered abroad, pay no tax in the UK, but advertise their online gambling and betting services in this country. [50740]

Mr. Caborn: Gambling companies that are based abroad but advertise on-line gambling in the UK are regulated by Section 42 of the Gaming Act 1968, which restricts the content of advertising relating to gaming, and by section 9 of the Betting and Gaming Duties Act 1981 which prohibits, with some exceptions, advertising by off-shore betting operators.

Playing Fields

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many playing fields are listed on the Sport England Domesday Book of Sports Facilities, Active Places; and how many of the sports grounds are owned by (a) the Ministry of Defence, (b) health authorities and (c) universities and colleges of higher education. [50924]

Mr. Caborn: Sport England advise that there are approximately 50,000 grass pitches on the Active Places database, of which (a) 252 (across 97 sites) are owned by the Ministry of Defence, (b) 31 (across 20 sites) belong to health authorities and (c) 1,182 (across 166 sites) are owned by higher education institutions. The majority of sites on the database are owned by educational establishments and local authorities. The number of grass pitches listed will increase as more information is added to the database.

Press Coverage

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport on how many occasions since 1 April 2003 she has complained to the Press Complaints Commission about the coverage in the press of (a) Ministers or officials and (b) her Department; and how many of these complaints were upheld. [47077]

James Purnell: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has not made any complaints to the PCC. It is for individuals to decide whether they wish to make a complaint. She is not, generally, in a position to determine whether an article about others has breached the editors' Code of Practice; the PCC exists to make that determination. Moreover, she would not presume to make a complaint on behalf of anyone else, particularly as everyone has equal access to the PCC.

Shipwrecks

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what estimate her Department has made of the value of artefacts on shipwrecks around the coast of the British Isles. [50976]

Mr. Lammy: The concept of value is difficult to define when applied to cultural property. Intrinsic value is only one factor alongside aesthetic, community, evidential and historical values.

58 historic wrecks have been designated in the UK under the Protection of Wrecks Act 1973. These and their artefacts are considered to be of historical, archaeological, or artistic importance, and therefore worthy of protection.

The total number of wrecks around the coast of the British Isles, and therefore the number and value of artefacts, is not known.

English Heritage is currently developing a framework to assess heritage value as part of the stage one consultation on their Conservation Principles, which began on 9 February 2006. English Heritage has also supported the On the Importance of Shipwrecks research project under the Aggregates Levy Fund. The aim of the project is to develop a framework and methodology to assess the 'importance' of physical remains of wrecks on the seabed.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps her Department has taken to protect valuable artefacts and items of historical value on shipwrecks around the British Isles from theft. [50977]

Mr. Lammy: The Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport has power under the Protection of Wrecks Act 1973 to designate wreck sites which she is satisfied ought to be protected from unauthorised interference on account of their archaeological, historical or artistic importance. Once a site is designated, it is a criminal offence for a person to interfere with the site except under the authority of a licence. In addition any artefacts recovered from wrecks of over 50 years of age in UK territorial waters require an export licence if they were to leave the UK.

Allegations of illegally excavated material are investigated in conjunction with the Receiver of Wreck, police and heritage agencies. Enforcement action is then taken in accordance with the severity of the offence.

Sport Participation

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment she has made of the effect on participation levels in sport of the staging of major sporting events in the UK; and if she will make a statement. [50923]

Mr. Caborn: We believe that staging major sporting events in the UK has the potential to drive up participation levels in sport.

Research for UK Sport found that 7 per cent. of the adult UK population believed that the Manchester Commonwealth Games in 2002 had resulted in a positive impact on their participation in sport. Among children, the reported effect was greater. Household surveys conducted in Greater Manchester, Liverpool, Blackburn and Congleton in summer 2003 found that in each area, at least 19 per cent. of children aged 6 to 15 said that the Games had had a positive effect on the amount of sport they were playing.

Sports Grounds

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport for what period of time sports grounds must remain unused before she can dispose of them without permission. [50925]

Mr. Caborn: I have no statutory role in the disposal of sports grounds. Sport England is a statutory consultee on all planning applications affecting playing fields, land used as playing fields, or land allocated for use as playing fields in a current development plan. This includes being consulted on applications affecting any land that has been used as a playing field in the last five years and any replacement of a grass pitch with a synthetic surface.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has published planning guidance for open space, sport and recreation (PPG 17), which requires local planning authorities to protect all open space which communities need. In preparing their plans and policies, authorities should undertake assessments of need for open space and recreation in their areas. In advance of an assessment of need, local authorities should give very careful consideration to any planning applications involving development on playing fields.

Youth Hostels Association

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what grants have been given by (a) her Department and (b) lottery distributors to the Youth Hostels Association since 1997. [50147]

Mr. Caborn: The Youth Hostels Association has received no funding from the Department but has been awarded £5,263,378 by the lottery distributors.

This information is derived from the Department's lottery awards database, searchable at www.lottery.culture.gov.uk, which uses information supplied by the lottery distributors.

NORTHERN IRELAND

24/27 Framework

Sammy Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimate he has made of the cost to each education board area of implementing the 24/27 entitlement framework. [49622]

Angela E. Smith: The arrangements necessary to ensure that all pupils have access to the range of academic and vocational courses under the new curricular entitlement framework will be developed locally by schools and colleges working together, taking account of local needs and circumstances.

Schools have been encouraged to carry out an audit of their existing provision against the requirements of the entitlement framework and to consider future provision in the context of what is available within the local area. Until proposals are developed, it is not possible to determine what changes will be involved in a locality or any associated costs.

£24.7 million has been allocated for the implementation of the new arrangements across Northern Ireland over the period 2005-06 to 2007-08, including work on piloting arrangements for cooperation and collaboration among schools and between schools and the further education sector.

The pilots and any early proposals emerging will assist the Department of Education to estimate the future costs beyond March 2008 and will be the subject of further consideration during the next spending review.

Academic Selection

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what analysis the Department for Education Northern Ireland has made since 2000 of alternative models to the 11-plus test of post-primary academic selection; and if he will make a statement. [50715]

Angela E. Smith: No such analysis has been undertaken by the Department of Education. The Post-Primary Review Body, established by the Department in 2000 to consider future arrangements for post-primary education in Northern Ireland, recommended that academic selection should end (Burns Report). The Post-Primary Review Working Group (Costello) established by the Department in 2003 was required to take account of the consultation on the Burns recommendations and to provide advice on options for new arrangements for post-primary education. It advised that no form of academic selection would remove the high-stakes, high-stress element and that academic selection at age 11 is itself educationally unsound, as this age is too young to commit pupils to particular pathways. Accepting the Costello Report's recommendations, the Government announced in January 2004 that academic selection would end and that the last Transfer Tests will take place in 2008.

Future transfer arrangements will be on the basis of informed parental choice. Parents will have a broader assessment of their child's needs using the Pupil Profile and advice from schools. The new arrangements are about parents choosing schools not schools choosing pupils. They will give parents the right and responsibility to choose the school most appropriate to their child's needs.

Bottled Water

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much his Department has spent on bottled water in each of the last five years. [48722]

Mr. Woodward: The following figures represent the total cost of the provision of bottled water for the Northern Ireland Office, excluding its Agencies and NDPBs. The total cost includes water and the provision and maintenance of water coolers.

The figures are as follows:

2000-01	19,150
2001-02	22,754
2002-03	19,071
2003-04	25,761
2004-05	29,939

Cattle (Pre-movement Testing)

Mr. Drew: To ask the Sec y of State for Northern Ireland with whom consult were carried out prior to the decision to introdu -movement testing of cattle; how results are being monitored; by whom; and what research is planned to assess the impact of the change. [50700]

Angela E. Smith: The Department of Agriculture and Rural Development (DARD) consulted between July and October 2002 with a wide range of stakeholders about the proposal for brucellosis pre-movement testing, as part of its consultation about the 2002 Brucellosis Policy Review recommendations. The list of consultees who were specifically asked for views has been placed in the Library of the House. The decision to introduce compulsory pre-movement testing for brucellosis in Northern Ireland was announced on 16 June 2003.

During 2004, DARD consulted widely again about the draft legislation needed to introduce the requirement to test. Compulsory pre-movement testing was introduced in Northern Ireland on 1 December 2004.

The purpose of the measure is to assist in the detection of brucellosis and to help prevent disease spread by reducing the number of infected animals moving between farms. The measure also ensures compliance with the relevant EU legislation. Under Council Directive 64/432/EEC, pre or post-movement testing is required in a member state (or region thereof) where the percentage of bovines infected with brucellosis exceeds 0.2 per cent. during a two-year period.

DARD monitors the results of pre-movement testing, using the information held on its Animal and Public Health Information System (APHIS), as part of its overall management of the brucellosis control programme. The effectiveness of pre-movement testing as a disease control measure is assessed on an on-going basis as part of this monitoring activity. DARD plans to review the impact of the existing control measures on the incidence of brucellosis as part of its next formal review of brucellosis control policy.

No decision has been made in Northern Ireland to introduce compulsory pre-movement testing for bovine TB.

Child Safety

Dr. McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps the Government are taking to improve child safety on streets in Northern Ireland. [48286]

Angela E. Smith: Child safety is a priority for Government and is at the core of a number of key strategies across Departments and agencies. The 10-year strategy for Children and Young People will provide an overarching framework within which we will deliver on a number of outcomes for children and young people, including child safety. The strategy will be delivered through a programme of strategic actions, which will include: a road safety strategy aimed at reducing fatal and serious casualties among children; education and training in schools; safety promotion and awareness campaigns targeted at children; implementation of traffic calming measures; programmes to address antisocial behaviour, vandalism and crime related measures; and multi-agency arrangements to assess and manage the risks posed by sex offenders living in the community. Finally, safeguarding children is a subject that is actively being considered by the Ministerial Sub-Committee on Children and Young People.

Costello Report

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many responses to the Government's public consultation on the Costello report proposals indicated opposition to the decision to prohibit academic selection. [50705]

Angela E. Smith: The remit of the Post-Primary Review Working Group required it to take account of the responses to the multi-stranded consultation on the Burns recommendations, including the diversity of views on academic selection. The advice from the group (the Costello report) was not published for consultation and responses were not therefore sought on its content.

Defibrillators

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many defibrillators there are in public places in each district council area in the Province. [49317]

Mr. Woodward: Information on the number of defibrillators in public places is not available as there is no central control of their purchase and distribution. Only a proportion of those currently provided in public places are funded by government agencies.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Francois: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much has been spent in each year since 1997 by his Department on salaries paid to civil servants. [41580]

Mr. Woodward: Gross salary figures for the years in question are as follows:

	Gross salary costs (£)	Total departmental budget (percentage)
1997-98	14,570,692	1.5
1998-99	14,578,075	1.5
1999-2000	14,535,166	1.4
2000-01	14,983,634	1.3
2001-02	16,629,446	1.4
2002-03	18,750,356	1.4
2003-04	20,826,798	1.8
2004-05	22,507,780	1.8

Departmental Staff

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans his Department has to change the London allowance of its staff; and if he will make a statement. [50001]

Mr. Woodward: The Northern Ireland Office has a pay scale which is applied equally to staff working in Belfast and London.

Separately, a London allowance is paid to London based staff to aid recruitment and retention and to reflect the higher cost of living. There are no plans to change the London allowance.

A London allowance is paid to staff in the senior civil service at Payband 1 and it remained at £3,500 in 2005. Staff in Paybands 2 and 3 are not eligible for payment of the London allowance.

The London allowance for staff below the senior civil service was increased from £3,875 to £4,000 as part of the 2005 pay settlement. This met the PCS claim for the London allowance.

Early Retirement

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many departmental employees have taken early retirement due to ill-health in each of the past five years for which figures are available. [46777]

Mr. Woodward: The number of Northern Ireland Office staff who retired due to ill health in each of the past five years is as follows:

	Number
2000-01	5
2001-02	5
2002-03	6
2004-05	9

Hospital Waiting Times

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the average waiting time in accident and emergency has been at (a) Antrim area hospital and (b) Whiteabbey area hospital in each month since March 2005. [51051]

Mr. Woodward: The information is as follows.

(a) The average waiting times from patient arrival in the accident and emergency department in Antrim area hospital to examination by a clinician from April 2005 to January 2006 are presented in the following table:

Antrim area hospital

	Average waiting time in A & E from arrival to examination
April 2005	1 hour
May 2005	1 hour 9 minutes
June 2005	1 hour 6 minutes

Jewish Festivals

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what his Department did to (a) celebrate Hanukkah and (b) mark Yom Kippur in 2005. [46762]

Mr. Hain: The Northern Ireland Office is committed to promoting a culture in which difference is appreciated, valued and respected and individuals are given the space to celebrate their own identity, including their religious identity, while respecting the views of others.

An event to celebrate a range of significant religious and cultural days, including Hanukkah, was held in 2005 and the Department aims to facilitate staff who wish to celebrate such events. The Department also promotes an awareness of different religious identities through its sponsorship of a multi-faith calendar. The theme of the 2006 calendar is the practice of prayer and it highlights the significant religious days of each of the major religious traditions.

Laurelhill Community College

Sammy Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the cost of the (a) case and (b) compensation paid was in the recent Laurelhill Community College dispute in Lisburn, County Antrim. [49861]

Angela E. Smith: The information requested is as follows.

(a) The Chief Executive of the South Eastern Education and Library Board has informed me that she is not in a position at this stage to respond to the question of the cost of recent defamation proceedings taken by the teacher involved against the Chairman of the Board of Governors at Laurelhill Community College. The Board has not yet received bills of costs from the plaintiff's solicitor nor has it received fee notes from its own Counsel.

(b) The teacher involved was awarded compensation of £7,500 following the recent joint consultation which took place at the High Court.

NHS Staff

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the cost to health and social services boards of implementing UK-wide changes in NHS staff pay and conditions in 2005-06; and what the expected cost is for 2006-07. [50716]

Mr. Woodward: In the current year 2005-06 the Department of Health Social Services and Public Safety (DHSSPS) has allocated to each health and social services board the following amounts in implementing the Agenda for Change Agreement for staff in the health and personal social services in Northern Ireland.

Board	Amount allocated (£)
Eastern	30,645,592
Northern	10,078,041
Southern	9,134,583
Western	7,889,835
Total	57,748,051

The DHSSPS has secured funding of £70 million to meet the anticipated cost for 2006-07.

The DHSSPS has also allocated the following amounts to health and social services boards to meet the salary commitments arising from the new consultant contract.

Board	Amount allocated (£)
Eastern	13,930,496
Northern	3,371,550
Southern	2,971,944
Western	3,512,651
Total	23,786,641

The DHSSPS has secured funding of around £27.3 million to meet the anticipated costs for 2006-07.

Planning Service

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the budget was for the Northern Ireland Planning Service in each year since 2000; and what funding has been allocated for each of the next five years. [51044]

Angela E. Smith: The budget for the Northern Ireland Planning Service in each year since 2000 is set out in Table A as follows.

Table A: Budget allocation between 2000-01 and 2005-06

£ million

Financial year	Current expenditure	Capital investment
2000-01	7.1	0.6
2002-03	10.1	0.8
2003-04	14.3	1.0
2005-06	14.5	4.3

The funding allocated to Planning Service for the next two years is set out in Table B as follows. Information is not yet available on funding to be allocated from 2008-09 onwards.

Table B: Budget allocation for 2006-07 and 2007-08

£ million

Financial year	Current expenditure	Capital investment
2007-08	10.9	0.6

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what consultation is undertaken by the Northern Ireland Planning Service with the Department for Regional Development's (a) Water and (b) Road Service in considering submissions for new residential developments. [51046]

Angela E. Smith: In determining any planning application for residential development the Planning Service consults with the Department of Regional Development's Water Service and Roads Service. The purpose of the consultation is to seek advice on issues relevant to the determination of planning applications such as the provision of drinking water supply, waste water disposal, safe access and the proper layout and adoption of public roads.

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people have been employed by the Northern Ireland Planning Service in each year since 2000, broken down by grade; and if he will make a statement on the future staff recruitment needs of the Service. [51069]

Angela E. Smith: Details of the staffing breakdown for the Planning Service in each year since 2000 are as follows.

The Planning Service has just completed a major recruitment exercise and will keep the need for additional staff resources under continual review.

Post-primary Education

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what estimate he has made of the effect on public expenditure of the proposals for post-primary education in the Draft Education (Northern Ireland) Order; what estimate he has made of the period of time it would take to realise the estimated charges of those savings; and if he will make a statement; [50717]

(2) what estimate he has made of the (a) gross and (b) net cost to public funds of implementing the proposals for post-primary education embodied in the Draft Education (Northern Ireland) Order. [50718]

Angela E. Smith: The focus of the new post-primary arrangements is on the educational needs of the child. The new arrangements will be implemented locally by schools and school managing authorities working together, taking account of local needs and circumstances. Until local arrangements are developed the financial implications cannot be assessed. £24.7 million has been made available over the period 2005–06 to 2007–08 to support the preparation for, and phased introduction of, key elements of the new post-primary arrangements.

On 31 January 2006 the Secretary of State announced an independent review of education spending as well as the planning of the school estate and the effect of falling school rolls. The outcome of this review and the implementation of the new post-primary arrangements will result in a more effective and efficient education system for the benefit of all pupils.

Prostate Cancer

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the change in the numbers of those diagnosed with prostate cancer in Northern Ireland has been in each of the last 10 years. [51328]

Mr. Woodward: The following table details the number of incidences of prostate cancer (ICD-10 C61) in Northern Ireland since 1994.

	Number
1995	510
1996	452
1997	485
1998	492

2000	574
2001	543
2003	715

This information has been provided by the Northern Ireland Cancer Registry and is the most up-to-date currently available.

Rates

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will place in the Library a copy of the internal guidance on the assessment and valuation of domestic properties produced by the Valuation and Lands Agency for the rates revaluation in Northern Ireland. [49815]

Angela E. Smith: Yes.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the (a) value significant codes and (b) property attribute types that the computer assisted mass appraisal system being used in Northern Ireland rates revaluation has the capacity to store and evaluate. [49568]

Angela E. Smith: A full list of data fields relating to value significant codes and property attributes which are stored and evaluated by the computer assisted mass appraisal system being used in Northern Ireland will be placed in the Library.

Statins

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he plans to make statins available free to patients with high cholesterol in Northern Ireland. [51181]

Mr. Woodward: Statins are currently available on health service prescription in Northern Ireland. The National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence has recently published detailed guidance recommending the use of statins for treating adults with cardiovascular disease and adults at risk of this disease. My Department will be reviewing this guidance and will advise the health and personal social services on its applicability to Northern Ireland.

Teaching Staff (Absenteeism)

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, what the absenteeism rate was in 2005 among teaching staff at (a) controlled and (b) maintained schools in each of the Education and Library Boards in Northern Ireland. [51354]

Angela E. Smith: The rate of absenteeism among teaching staff in the academic year September 2004 to August 2005 at (a) controlled and (b) maintained schools in each of the five Education and Library Boards in Northern is detailed as follows.

Board area	School type	Number of full time Teachers	Number of working days available	Number of sick days	% of working days lost (absence rate)
BELB	Controlled	1,627	317,265	11,659	3.67

Vandalism

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the acts of vandalism which have been perpetrated (a) inside and (b) on the outside of his Department's buildings in the last 12 months. [49501]

Mr. Woodward: There have been no recorded acts of vandalism, which have been perpetrated (a) inside and (b) on the outside of Northern Ireland Office buildings in the last 12 months. This information does not include the Department's Agencies and NDPBs.

WALES

Robert Powell

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will establish a public inquiry into the death of Robert Powell of Swansea on 17 April 1990 of Addison's disease. [51486]

Mr. Hain: The responsibility in this instance rests with the National Assembly for Wales. The First Minister is currently considering whether a public inquiry should be held or what other steps if any should be taken.

CHURCH COMMISSIONERS

Clerical Pensions

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners what provision the Pension Board has made for the retention of pension rights for partners of those clergy who have entered into a civil partnership. [50871]

Sir Stuart Bell: All pension schemes are required by the Civil Partnership Act 2004 and the regulations made under that Act to provide benefits for a civil partner following the death of the scheme member on the same basis as for widows and widowers in respect of all pensionable service from December 2005.

The Pensions Board will of course comply with those requirements in respect of the schemes that it administers and scheme rules have been amended accordingly.

Departmental Staff

Bob Spink: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners how many of the Church Commissioners' staff are paid on a performance-related basis. [50078]

Sir Stuart Bell: None.

Tenants

Mr. Swayne: To ask the hon. Member for Middlesbrough, representing the Church Commissioners what measures the Commissioners are taking to expedite the transfers of their tenants who cause a nuisance to their neighbours. [50249]

Sir Stuart Bell: The Commissioners experience very few occasions of nuisance on their estates. If this arises they will seek to resolve the matter with the parties concerned. On the very rare occasions where this is unsuccessful, they reserve the right in leases to take legal action to protect the interests of all residents, and do so when necessary.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Barristers

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Solicitor-General if he will list the 10 barristers instructed to prosecute on behalf of the Crown who received the highest sums for this work in the last financial year; how much each received; and if he will make a statement. [23498]

The Solicitor-General: The Law Officers have ministerial responsibility for the Crown Prosecution Service, the Serious Fraud Office and the Revenue and Customs Prosecutions Office. The Law Officers do not have ministerial responsibility for the other prosecuting authorities. The 10 barristers instructed to prosecute on behalf of the Crown by the Crown Prosecution Service, Serious Fraud Office and Revenue and Customs Prosecutions Office who were paid the highest sums for this work in the financial year ending 31 March 2005 and the amounts paid are:

Counsel	Amount paid in last financial year including VAT (£)
Richard Horwell	568,253.63
Mark Dennis	566,981.08
Jonathan Laidlaw	540,885.02
Nigel Ingram	509,894.21
Brian Altman	485,065.55
David Cocks, QC	474,935.25
Nicholas Milliard	448,861.83
Richard Lissack, QC	429,124.73
Aftab Jafferjee	409,451.46
Patrick Harrington, QC	391,139.01

A number of qualifications need to be added to these figures:

The amount paid to barristers in one financial year is not necessarily reflective of the work carried out during that year. Payment may take place during or some time after the work, including in different years, and Departments have different payment practices.

The figures must be interpreted carefully and do not represent the personal earnings of the barristers listed—figures are inclusive of VAT and disbursements incurred. After VAT has been deducted, barristers will typically pay 25–30 per cent. of fees in professional expenses. Additionally, barristers face the same expenses as any other self-employed person, including income tax and national insurance contributions.

Not all payments could be verified with the individuals concerned. Cases in dispute, where records of payments held by the Departments differ to those held by the practitioners, have been included. Where possible, amounts have been verified by practitioners and adjusted where necessary. Records may differ due to the inevitable lag caused by the post and bank clearing services.

Crown Prosecution Service

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Solicitor-General if he will make a statement on the (a) role and (b) effectiveness of the involvement of the Crown Prosecution Service in determining delayed charge bail cases in Northamptonshire. [50711]

The Solicitor-General: Under the statutory charging arrangements, the Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) is responsible for making the charging decision in all but minor and routine cases. The aims of the charging scheme are a reduction in the rate of discontinuance, an increase in the guilty plea rate, and a reduction in the rate of attrition.

In some cases, where there is insufficient evidence available to make an immediate charging decision, delay charge bail is used to ensure that the investigative process is complete before the charging decision is given. This approach has ensured a steady reduction of post-charge discontinuance rates and decisions of 'No Further Action' in Northamptonshire.

The police and CPS jointly performance manage the charging arrangements. This includes the management of delay charge bail to ensure that this is only used in appropriate cases and the number of cases on delay charge bail awaiting a charging decision does not increase month-on-month. This joint approach should lead to steady reduction of delay charge bail in the county.

Incitement to Murder

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Solicitor-General how many prosecutions have been brought for incitement to murder in each year since 1995; and how many resulted in a conviction. [50132]

The Solicitor-General: The following table shows (a) the number of defendants who had proceedings commenced against them for the offence of soliciting to commit murder contrary to section 4 of the Offences Against the Person Act 1861, or conspiracy to commit that offence, and (b) the number found guilty, in each year, of that specific offence, or conspiracy to commit that offence, for which figures are available.

Some defendants proceeded against for soliciting to commit murder, or conspiracy to commit that offence, will have pleaded guilty or will have been found guilty of other offences. The following conviction figures do not include those other offences, and therefore understate the number of defendants who were convicted of an offence in each year.

Defendants prosecuted at magistrates courts and found guilty at all courts for conspiring or soliciting to commit murder, 1994 to 2004[1,2], England and Wales

Number

	Prosecuted	Guilty
1995	53	12
1996	69	7
1997	50	15
1998	58	14
1999	97	13
2000	75	18
2004	59	10

[1] Data are on the principal offence basis.
[2] Offences under section 4 of the Offences Against the Person Act 1861 and conspiracy to commit this offence under section 1 of the Criminal Law Act 1977.

Military Officer Promotions

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Solicitor-General when the Attorney-General next plans to address military officers who have been identified as suitable for promotion to the highest levels; and if he will make a statement. [50245]

The Solicitor-General: On 30 January the Attorney-General addressed military officers, attending the Higher Command and Staff Course organised by the Defence Academy of the United Kingdom at the Joint Services Command and Staff College, on the "International Legal Framework".

There are no immediate plans for the Attorney-General further to address military officers who have been identified as suitable for promotion to the highest level but he will consider doing so where a suitable opportunity arises.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Animal Welfare

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the implications of the EU animal welfare action plan for the UK; and what legislative changes will be required. [49378]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Community Action Plan on the Protection and Welfare of Animals 2006–10 will provide a more strategic and joined up approach within the Commission and member states, so that animal welfare is improved. It includes a range of proposals, including legislation.

We look forward to contributing to the development of the action plan.

Avian Influenza

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what research her Department is commissioning into a vaccine to cure avian influenza, with particular reference to the H5N1 strain. [49455]

Mr. Bradshaw: Defra is heavily involved with research into avian influenza. This includes making sure that the department's own research and development programme is tied into further work on vaccine development that the European Union and the Biotechnology and Biological Sciences Research Council are taking forward; especially their recent published call for new research proposals.

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what vaccine is available for use in poultry to prevent avian influenza. [49635]

Mr. Bradshaw: Currently available vaccines do not make vaccination effective or efficient as a disease control or prevention measure for avian influenza in the UK as, although vaccines are able to reduce mortality, it is likely that some vaccinated birds would still be capable of transmitting the disease if they became infected.

However, as part of our readiness for a disease outbreak, and being conscious that there was no authorised vaccine available for AI, the Veterinary Medicines Directorate has recently issued a Provisional Marketing Authorisation for the Nobilis vaccine, produced by Intervet. The use of any approved vaccine is also subject to European Community legislation on the control of avian influenza and would have to be specifically authorised by the Chief Veterinary Officer. We are continuing to work closely with vaccine manufacturers to assess information on other vaccines.

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what representations she has received (a) in favour of and (b) against vaccination of poultry against avian influenza. [49642]

Mr. Bradshaw: We are engaging closely with a wide range of stakeholders on this issue.

There is a broad consensus that preventive vaccination does not currently provide an effective and efficient means of controlling avian influenza. Good biosecurity followed by housing of birds is the best response to a heightened threat. There is a minority view that preventive vaccination for birds of high genetic value, birds in zoos, and free-range birds in areas of high risk should be considered as part of the overall control strategy.

There is also an acceptance that emergency vaccination should be considered during an outbreak. This could form part of a wider disease control strategy but would also depend on the efficacy of the vaccines available. A plan for using vaccination would also have to be approved by the European Commission. We will continue to involve stakeholders in our consideration of these issues.

Bovine Tuberculosis

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what information she will make available by the Independent Scientific Group to inform the current consultation on bovine TB policy; and if she will make a statement. [47847]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 6 February 2006]: Significant interim results from the proactive element of the Randomised Badger Culling Trial (RBCT) were published by the Independent Scientific Group on Cattle TB (ISG) in Nature on 14 December 2005. These, combined with other scientific evidence, including results of the Irish Four Area badger culling trial, led Government to conclude that consultation is needed to inform the decision on whether to introduce badger culling as a bovine TB control measure.

Full results of the RBCT are still being collected and analysed by the ISG and have not yet been made available.

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what total Government expenditure on tackling TB in cattle was in each year since 1996–97, broken down by main area of expenditure. [49168]

Mr. Bradshaw: The information requested is in the following table.

Breakdown of government expenditure on bovine tuberculosis

£ million

Activity	1996–97	1997–98	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01	2001–02	2002–03	2003–04	2004–05

Total	16.99	16.06	21.77	38.2	36.2	30.5	74.5	88.2	90.5

[1] Testing was suspended due to foot and mouth disease.
[2] The culling trial was effective from 1999.

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what advice her Department has provided to Shropshire farmers on bovine tuberculosis. [50767]

Mr. Bradshaw: Our aim is to slow down and prevent the geographic spread of bovine tuberculosis (TB) to areas currently free of the disease, and achieve a sustained reduction in disease incidence in cattle in high incidence areas like Shropshire.

Defra has issued farmers with guidelines on measures to help stop bovine TB affecting their cattle. More information can be found on the Defra website at: http://www.defra.gov.uk/animalh/tb/publications/index.htm.

In December, we announced new measures to tackle bovine TB in England, including a public consultation on a badger culling policy in areas of high TB incidence in cattle, the introduction of pre-movement testing of cattle and changes to current compensation procedures.

Cattle Valuation

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what advice she received on the variations in value of cattle by (a) breed and (b) pedigree. [49097]

Mr. Bradshaw: New cattle compensation arrangements were introduced on 1 February 2006.

The Department has obtained cattle sales data from a wide range of sources across Great Britain for the last 14 months. Analysis of these data has identified the degree of variation within each of the 47 cattle categories now used to determine compensation through our system of table valuation. And this approach will be repeated on an annual basis. No breed specific reviews have been carried out.

Compulsory Cattle Slaughter (Compensation)

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs for what reason the compensation tables for cattle which have been compulsorily slaughtered do not provide values for pedigree beef bovines under six months of age. [49092]

Mr. Bradshaw [holding answer 6 February 2006]: Compensation categories have been drawn up with the assistance of industry advisers. There is no table value for pedigree cattle under six months. Animals that age would always be suckling, and it would be unusual to sell them without the dam.

Correspondence

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to her answer of 25 January 2006, Official Report, column 2110W, on correspondence, if she will send the promised reply by 10 February. [50989]

Mr. Morley: A reply to my right hon. Friend was despatched on 7 February 2006.

Early Retirement

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many of her Department's employees have taken early retirement due to ill-health in each of the past five years for which figures are available. [46871]

Jim Knight: Defra was created in June 2001, and the figures in the following table show the number of staff who have taken early retirement due to ill-health since then.

	Number of staff
2002	16
2003	19
2004	13

[1] 9 June to 31 December.
[2] Less than 5.

The figure for 2001 is not specified on grounds of confidentiality.

Fallen Stock

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to review the fallen stock scheme. [49984]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Department commissioned an independent review of the scheme at the end of 2005, and a report is expected around Easter.

Kyoto Targets

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what progress the Government have made towards meeting the Kyoto summit targets; and what steps are being taken to ensure that the targets are met. [50901]

Mr. Morley: The UK's commitment under the Kyoto protocol is to achieve a reduction of 12.5 per cent. of emissions in the basket of six greenhouse gases. The gases in the basket are carbon dioxide (CO_2), methane (CH_4) and nitrous oxide (N_2O), plus the hydrofluorocarbons (HFCs), perfluorocarbons (PFCs) and sulphur hexafluoride SF_6. The reduction is to be achieved relative to base year emissions in 1990 for CO_2, CH_4 and N_2O, and in 1995 for the other gases. It applies to average emissions, weighted together using global warming potentials, over the first commitment period, 2008–12.

Latest available figures indicate that, on this basis, UK greenhouse gas emissions were 14.6 per cent. lower in 2004 than the base year total. Policies and measures already in place, plus the additional policies and measures introduced as part of the current review of the UK's climate change programme, will achieve further reductions during the commitment period. This will ensure that the Kyoto commitment is met.

Quarantine Regulations

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on her review of quarantine regulations. [50807]

Mr. Bradshaw: I assume that the hon. Member is referring to the review of avian quarantine following publication of the independent report of quarantine procedures for captive birds (excluding poultry) in the UK in December 2005.

The report contains 32 recommendations to improve the safeguards to animal and human health that the current avian quarantine system provides. We are looking carefully at all of the recommendations in close consultation with EU partners and other stakeholders. And we will implement any essential recommendations before imports of captive birds resume.

Stroud EU Life Bid

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what reasons were given for the rejection of the Stroud EU Life bid; and whether a new bid may be submitted to EU Life Plus. [49441]

Mr. Morley: Life-Environment is a Europe-wide programme to fund innovative demonstration projects that support the development of European environment policy.

Selection of projects for co-financing is competitive as there are no national allocations in the Programme. Projects are evaluated by policy officers at the European Commission and a panel of independent experts. Projects are evaluated against a range of criteria using a point scoring system. In the 2004–05 application round €71 million was available to co-finance projects and the Commission received 534 bids, of which 88 (16 per cent.) were supported.

The UK submitted 26 bids and 10 (35 per cent.) were co-financed. However, the bid submitted by Stroud did not score highly enough under the evaluation process to secure co-financing. The Commission advises applicants directly of the reasons for rejection.

The full political process to agree the Life+ Regulation has yet to be completed but it is envisaged that in 2007 Life+ will replace the current Life Programme and a number of other funding programmes currently managed by DG-Environment in the European Commission. One major difference from the current arrangements will be that the Programme will be implemented at member state level through national annual work programmes, agreed by the European Commission. Until the details of the work programme are developed and approved, it is not possible to say if the Stroud bid would be eligible for support under the new Life+ Programme.

Waste Management

Mr. Rogerson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Lewes (Norman Baker) of 28 November 2005, Official Report, column 20W, on waste management, if she will break down the figures by local authority area. [43804]

Mr. Bradshaw: Pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Lewes (Norman Baker) of 28 November 2005, Official Report, column 20W, the results provided for both commercial and industrial waste at regional level cannot be broken down to local authority level.

The amount of municipal waste disaggregated by disposal method is only available for local authorities with a responsibility for municipal waste disposal. Therefore figures for disposal and unitary local authorities for 2001–02, 2002–03 and 2003–04 from the Defra Municipal Waste Management Survey have been placed in the Library of the House.

CABINET OFFICE

Departmental Staff

Bob Spink: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many of his Department's staff are paid on a performance-related basis. [50077]

Mr. Jim Murphy: All Cabinet Office employees are rewarded based on their performance. Annual salary increases reflect overall performance and bonuses are available to reward delivery of specific outcomes.

HOUSE OF COMMONS COMMISSION

Staff

Bob Spink: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission how many staff of the House are paid on a performance-related basis. [50492]

Nick Harvey: At 18 January 2006 1,292 of the House's 1,626 staff were in pay arrangements with a performance-related element.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Commission for Africa

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps his Department has taken to make copies of the Commission for Africa Report available in Africa. [49223]

Hilary Benn: The Commission for Africa (CfA) report was launched on 11 March in parallel events at the British museum in London and at the headquarters of the African Union in Addis Ababa. A press conference held after the launch in Addis Ababa led to good media coverage in Africa.

Hard copies of the report were sent to the New Partnership for Africa's Development (NEPAD) and the African Union. Copies were also sent to all British embassies and DFID offices in Africa, many of which will have been passed to African partner organisations.

The story of the Commission's work is told on the Commission website www.commissionforafrica.org which will remain as a permanent online archive. The full report can be downloaded from this website, without charge in English and French and Part One in Arabic, Swahili, Portuguese (as well as Mandarin and Japanese). The cost of a hard copy of the full report is £10 which includes postage and packing, irrespective of where it will be sent globally.

In addition, I understand that over 26,000 copies of the Penguin version of Part One of the Commission for Africa report have been sold worldwide.

Departmental Expenditure

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many widescreen televisions have been purchased by his Department for use in London Headquarters in each of the last five years; and what the cost was in each year. [39145]

Mr. Thomas: DFID has purchased 38 widescreen TV displays for use in the London Headquarters in the past five years, as follows:

2001–02	0
2003–04	12
2005–06	7

Of these, two are used for general display purposes, and 36 form part of video-conferencing facilities. DFID makes extensive use of video-conferences between the two Headquarters in London and East Kilbride, and also to and between offices overseas. These save travel costs and enable meetings to take place which would not otherwise be feasible. The displays are usually purchased as part of complete video-conference units, and it is not possible to separate the cost of the displays from the total equipment costs.

Departmental Staff

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what plans his Department has to change the London allowance of its staff; and if he will make a statement. [50011]

Mr. Thomas: Under the Treasury's delegated pay arrangements for staff below the senior civil service, DFID has consolidated its London weighting allowance into basic pay.

We are currently in the second year of a three year pay deal. Salary levels for all UK based staff will be reviewed as part of the pay negotiations for the next pay settlement that takes effect from 1 August 2007.

Economic Partnership Agreements

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what the UK position is on trade liberalisation conditions of the economic partnership agreements between the EU and African, Caribbean and Pacific countries; and if he will make a statement on the progress made in negotiations of these issues during the UK presidency of the EU. [49222]

Mr. Thomas: The UK position on economic partnership agreements (EPAs) was published in March 2005. It states that EPAs must be designed to deliver long-term development, economic growth and poverty reduction in African, Caribbean and Pacific (ACP) countries. We believe that the ACP countries can benefit from trade liberalisation in the long run, provided they have the economic capacity and infrastructure they need to trade competitively. However, without this capacity or the right conditions including appropriate complementary policies to help manage the change, trade liberalisation can be harmful. The UK also believes that each region in the ACP should have flexibility and make its own decisions on the timing, pace, sequencing, and product coverage of market opening in line with individual countries' national development plans and poverty reduction strategies. We will not force trade liberalisation on developing countries either through trade negotiations or aid conditionality.

During the UK presidency in 2005, the European Commission and the ACP did not negotiate on trade liberalisation issues. These issues will be negotiated over the coming year for all ACP regions.

GM Crops (Terminator Seeds)

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he has made of the impact of Terminator seed technology on the food security and livelihoods of small-scale farmers in developing countries. [50139]

Mr. Thomas: Terminator technology (genetic use restriction technologies or GURTs) involves a wide range of complex issues that are developing rapidly. While the Government monitor the impact of this technology, DFID has not undertaken an assessment of the effects of terminator technology on the food security and livelihoods of small-scale farmers in developing countries.

DFID takes genetic modification (GM) in crops and foods and its potential impacts on poor people, including small-scale farmers, in developing countries very seriously. Our approach is based on the principle that the health of people and their environment is of primary concern. We recognise that GM technology in itself will not solve the problem of world hunger. However, biotechnology has the potential to make a contribution to development and poverty reduction, if managed responsibly and applied to those crops on which the poor rely.

Recognising that there are both potential benefits and risks associated with gene technologies and GM crops, developing countries should be able to make their own informed choices. To this end, DFID worked with the Department for the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (Defra) and the international community to establish the Cartagena Protocol on Biosafety, under the UN convention on biological diversity (CBD). The protocol adopts a strong precautionary approach and aims to ensure that countries are provided with the information necessary to make informed decisions before agreeing to the import of genetically modified organisms. It also facilitates the exchange of information on living modified organisms and assists countries in the implementation of the protocol. This means that importing countries are able to make a decision to avoid or minimise potential adverse effects of GM organisms, even if the potential extent of such effects is uncertain.

With regard to GURTs, the parties to the CBD decided in 2000, that there should be a precautionary approach to their use while research into the possible impacts of these technologies was carried out. Parties will look to re-affirm this decision at the CBD meeting in March this year. Parties will also discuss the need for further research on the impacts of GURTs and how to share information from these studies.

Kenya

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what aid and support is being given to the Wajir region of Kenya by the UK to deal with the present drought and consequential famine in the region. [51474]

Hilary Benn: The Wajir and Mandera districts are the worst affected areas in northern Kenya. Levels of malnutrition are unacceptably high. The Department of International Development's support is channelled through UN agencies and competent non-governmental organisations (NGOs) to help save the lives of those most at risk.

The total DFID contribution stands at £12.7 million since the start of the crisis in July 2004. This includes the commitment of an additional £3 million made during my recent visit to Wajir.

Our support is focused on the worst affected areas, particularly Wajir, where DFID's main implementing partners are Oxfam, Merlin and UNICEF. The support given in Wajir includes food aid channelled through the World Food Programme, emergency health support, feeding programmes for malnourished children and water provision (boreholes services and water trucking).

Parliamentary Questions

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) how many ordinary written parliamentary questions tabled for answer by him in the last 12 months have been answered (a) within 14 days, (b) between 14 and 28 days, (c) between 28 days and two months and (d) in excess of two months after the date of tabling; and if he will make a statement; [49899]

(2) how many parliamentary questions tabled in the last 12 months for answer by him on a named day (a) were transferred and (b) received a substantive answer (i) on the day named and (ii) after the day named. [49876]

Mr. Thomas: The Department for International Development (DFID) aims to ensure that Members receive a substantive response to their Named Day question on the named day and to endeavour to answer ordinary written questions within a working week of being tabled. Unfortunately, this is not always possible but this Department makes every effort to achieve these timescales.

During the last 12 months, DFID answered 1,136 ordinary written parliamentary questions within 14 days after the date of tabling; 12 ordinary written questions were answered between 14 and 28 days and one question was answered after 28 days.

During the same 12 month period, DFID answered 115 parliamentary questions substantively on the named day; 31 questions received a substantive response after the named day. DFID transferred six named day questions to other Government departments for response.

South Asian Earthquake

Mr. Fallon: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many (a) tents and (b) other forms of shelter have been airlifted from the UK to aid victims of the South Asia earthquake. [50294]

Mr. Thomas: DFID does not have a figure for the total number of tents and shelter materials sent from the UK in response to the earthquake in South Asia. DFID however, sent 9,000 tents, 36,000 tarpaulins, 125,000 pieces of plastic sheeting and 125,000 lengths of 16.5 metre rope. Support to shelter represents a sizeable proportion of DFID financial assistance to UN agencies, non-governmental organisations and the Red Cross Movement Specifically, it was included in the £1.4 million channelled through Save the Children, £700,000 through the Norwegian Refugee Council, £300,000 through the Agency for Technical Co-operation and Development (ACTED), £498,964 through Tearfund, £1,830,000 through the International Organisation of Migration and £4.57 million through the Red Cross Movement. Tents and shelter materials were also included in the 78 relief flights arranged by DFID on behalf of the Disasters Emergency Committee.

DFID further supported UN activities through its support to the NATO airlift, transporting relief items including tents from UN warehouses in Europe and the Middle East to Pakistan (airlifts provided by the Ministry of Defence (MOD), at DFID's request, with DFID paying the marginal costs of the assistance). DFID also provided funding for an 86 strong team drawn from 59 Independent Commando Squadron Royal Engineers, deployed under NATO command, to undertake emergency shelter building operations in remote high-altitude areas in the Bagh region. The Royal Engineers unit are highly specialist troops who are trained to operate in winter and mountainous conditions.

Sudan

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development (1) what assessment he has made of the impact of returnees to the south of Sudan, with particular reference to the (a) implications for civil society and (b) the possibility of localised conflict; and if he will make a statement: [50042]

(2) what research he has commissioned into the possible impact of returnees to southern Sudan. [50043]

Hilary Benn: To date, the large number of returns of refugees and internally displaced people predicted by the UN and others has still not taken place. There is still potential for increasing movement in the run up to the rainy season. The returns process is likely to be a gradual process, but aid agencies need to retain the flexibility to respond rapidly to any changes in this pattern or a sudden deterioration in the humanitarian situation that can be heightened by this process. DFID stands ready to provide assistance when required.

The prospects for sustainable returns to southern Sudan are undermined by a number of factors including chronic under-development and very poor economic prospects for returnees, disease outbreaks and increasing levels of HIV/AIDS associated with population movements, and insufficient protection on the way home and in the areas of return. To support the returns process, the UK is providing early and significant contributions to the UN 2006 Work Plan, from which the UN humanitarian co-ordinator has already allocated over $40 million to the south. The UK is also establishing a £10 million service delivery fund in the south, which will act as a bridge while the Multi-Donor Trust Fund develops projects for funding and is able to assist longer term development needs. We are continuing to fund non-governmental organisation (NGO) humanitarian programmes.

The UK and other donors are supporting various civil society groups in undertaking reconciliation and peace building activities in areas of return; these efforts will need to expand to match the scale of returns. There is the potential for localised conflict and violence following return, through inter-tribal disputes and as factions adapt to the changing political landscape.

The UK has not itself commissioned any research into the impact of returns, but has been pressing the UN to enhance its analysis of the situation and the potential impacts emerging from the returns process, so that it can prioritise its interventions. DFID is regularly monitoring the situation in the south and the UN's response.

Syngenta

Mr. Crabb: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will list the occasions on which (a) he and (b) his officials met representatives of Syngenta during (i) 2004 and (ii) 2005. [50555]

Mr. Thomas: DFID officials attended a meeting at 11 Downing Street in November 2005 for a launch of the book "Going for Growth". The book was published by the Smith Institute and sponsored by the Syngenta Foundation. DFID officials also attended the following meetings where representatives from Syngenta were present: the annual general meetings of the Consultative Group for International Agriculture Research held in Mexico City in October 2004, and in Marrakech in December 2005; and the Bureau meeting of the International Assessment of Agriculture Science and Technology held in Bangkok, January 2005.

Timber

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development pursuant to the answer from the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs of 25 January 2006, Official Report, columns 2119 20W, on timber, what plans he has to sign voluntary partnership agreements with (a) Brazil, (b) Indonesia and (c) China. [50873]

Mr. Thomas: The European Commission and member states have started consultations about Partnership Agreements with four counties, Cameroon, Ghana, Indonesia and Malaysia. Consultations with Indonesia are being led by the European Commission. The UK Government are closely involved, drawing on our experience under the Indonesia-UK Memorandum of Understanding to tackle illegal logging.

Consultations with Brazil about a Partnership Agreement have not yet started. Discussions will take place on illegal logging with Brazil in the second quarter of 2006.

Consultations with China will take place within the framework of the agreement reached at the Eighth EU-China Summit for China and the EU to work together to tackle illegal logging. The Government have discussed this with the European Commission who will take this forward from the Delegation in Beijing.

Vandalism

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will list the acts of vandalism which have been perpetrated (a) inside and (b) on the outside of his Department's buildings in the last 12 months. [49502]

Mr. Thomas: The only act of vandalism recorded against DFID buildings in the last 12 months was graffiti which was found on our small external storage site in East Kilbride.

TREASURY

Banks

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will introduce legislation requiring all banks operating in the UK to donate 1 per cent. of their UK profits to local community projects. [50559]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Government's approach to responsible business practice is voluntary and business led we aim to set an appropriate framework for responsible business and other stakeholders, encouraging business to go further, facilitating the sharing of best practice and promoting responsible operations, while meeting our better regulation objectives.

Child Trust Fund

Mr. Davey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many Child Trust Fund accounts have been opened by families in London. [50768]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: I refer the hon. Gentlemen to the answer given to him on 1 December 2005, Official Report, column 658W.

The next release of Child Trust Fund statistics is due at the end of February 2006.

Mr. Davey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many Child Trust Fund accounts have been opened by local authorities on behalf of children in their care since the programme began (a) in total, (b) in each region and (c) in each local education authority. [50769]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Local authorities are not authorised to open Child Trust Fund accounts for the children in their care. Local authorities notify HMRC of the children in their care so that HMRC can ensure that these children do not miss out on a Child Trust Fund account.

The total number of Child Trust Fund accounts opened by HMRC for looked after children will be published along with other annual CTF statistics later this year.

Climate Change Levy

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what research into the effectiveness of the climate change levy his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated; and if he will make a statement. [50451]

John Healey: The Government commissioned Cambridge Econometrics to carry out an independent evaluation of the climate change levy. This evaluation, "Modelling the initial effects of the climate change levy", concluded that the levy is effective and should save over 3.5 million tonnes of carbon per annum by 2010. In particular, Cambridge Econometrics concluded that the announcement effect of CCL in Budget 1999 will, in combination with the price effect, have reduced energy demand in the commerce and public sector by 14.6 per cent. by 2010.

Companies Incorporated in India

Ms Dari Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate his Department has made of the value in pounds sterling to the UK economy of companies originally incorporated in India in 2004-05. [51452]

John Healey: There are no direct estimates of the value to the UK economy of companies originally incorporated in India. However, figures show that UK companies are increasingly investing in India: outward foreign direct investment to India increased by over 200 per cent. over the decade to 2004, a faster growth rate than that of total foreign direct investment abroad by UK companies. The stock of direct investment in India owned by UK companies stood at £1.7 billion in 2004.

Departmental Estate (Castle Point)

Bob Spink: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what (a) land and (b) property is owned by his Department in Castle Point. [42900]

John Healey: HM Treasury owns no land or property in Castle Point.

Departmental Staff

Kate Hoey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans his Department has to change the London allowance of its staff; and if he will make a statement. [50014]

John Healey: The Treasury pays a London Allowance of £2,000 p.a. to staff at SCS Payband 1 and has no plans to review or change this level of allowance.

Euro Transactions

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the number of UK companies that accept payment in euros for transactions in the UK. [50854]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Government have not made any assessment of euro-based transactions in the UK. Information on the use of the euro in the City of London and UK's external trade was published in Box 6.1 on Page 29 in the "Report on Euro Preparations, December 2004", available in the House of Commons Library.

It is entirely a commercial decision for UK business to determine whether or not they wish to accept the euro or any other foreign currency. The Government published updated fact sheets "The euro: its your business", in June 2005 to provide information for UK business that wish to do so. These are available to download or order free of charge from the Treasury's euro website www.euro.gov.uk.

European Bank for Reconstruction and Development

Mr. Hurd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether (a) salaries and (b) emoluments paid by the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development are exempt from UK income tax by virtue of being subject to the Bank's own internal tax. [50291]

Dawn Primarolo: Article 14 of the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development (Immunities and Privileges) Order 1991 provides:

"(1) As from the date on which an internal effective tax for the benefit of the Bank on the salaries and emoluments paid to him by the Bank is applied, any Director, Alternate, Officer and Employee of the Bank shall enjoy exemption from income tax in respect of such salaries and emoluments, provided that nothing in this paragraph shall be interpreted as precluding such salaries and emoluments from being taken into account for the purpose of assessing the amount of taxation to be applied to income from other sources.

(2) Paragraph (1) of this Article shall not apply to pensions or annuities paid by the Bank."

An internal effective tax system for this purpose was introduced by the Bank on 28 March 1991.

Mr. Hurd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 19 January 2006, Official Report, columns 1492–93W, on the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development (EBRD), whether there has been a change in the rights of employees and retirees of the EBRD to dispose of their lump sum benefit as they see fit. [50292]

Dawn Primarolo: The position remains as set out in my earlier answer. The EBRD provides a lump sum which is intended for individuals to make investments to provide income in retirement. The form of these investments is for individuals to determine.

Mr. Hurd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 19 January 2006, Official Report, columns 1492–3W, on the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development (EBRD), whether employees of the EBRD who do not choose to buy an annuity or other taxable investment will receive the enhancement to their lump sum originally granted for the purpose of paying income tax; and by what (a) formula and (b) amount benefit deriving from the EBRD pension fund was increased for the purpose of paying income tax. [50293]

Dawn Primarolo: The EBRD provides a lump sum which is intended for individuals to make investments to provide income in retirement. The lump sum is calculated on the same basis for all staff.

My earlier answer set out in full the rationale behind the changes to the level of lump sum payment. As I made clear, contributions to the EBRD's pension funds were increased in 1992 not for the payment of income tax, but to ensure consistency with comparable organisations.

Mr. Hurd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what mechanisms are in place to ensure that employees and retirees of the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development pay income tax if they choose not to make a taxable investment with their lump sum benefit and if additional shareholder funds have been added to that lump sum for the purpose of paying income tax; and who is responsible for overseeing these mechanisms. [50290]

Dawn Primarolo: I advised the hon. Gentleman in my written answer of 19 January, Official Report, columns 1492–93W, that the EBRD provides a lump sum which is intended for individuals to make investments to provide income in retirement. The form of these investments is for individuals to determine. My earlier answer of the 20 December 2005, Official Report, column 2797W, stated that retirement income arising from the investment is liable to income tax in the normal way.

Fair Trade

Andrew George: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his Department's policy is on the procurement of fair trade produce for consumption on its premises. [49961]

John Healey: The Treasury's catering contractor is encouraged to offer fair trade products for sale to staff. Fair trade coffee is served at all official meetings, and fair trade tea is also available.

Andrew George: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much and what proportion of his Department's catering budget was spent on fair trade produce in the last period for which figures are available. [49964]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Treasury's catering contractor does not separately identify the cost of fair trade produce within its charges to the Treasury. They reviewed orders for the week ending 3 February. Total orders for the week were £8,604, of which £3,915 (45 per cent.) consisted of fair trade produce.

Manufacturing Jobs (Beverley and Holderness)

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people in Beverley and Holderness were employed in manufacturing in each year between 1992 and 1997. [51519]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 13 February 2006:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question about manufacturing. (51519)

The attached table shows estimates of the number of people resident in the Beverley and Holderness constituency employed in manufacturing for the 12 month periods ending February 1995 to February 1998 from the annual local area Labour Force Survey. Comparable figures for earlier years are not available.

These estimates, as with any from sample surveys, are subject to a margin of uncertainty. Changes in the estimates from year to year should be treated with particular caution.

People employed in manufacturing, resident in the Beverley and Holderness Parliamentary Constituency

12 months ending	Numbers (thousands)

Marriages

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assumptions he has made (a) for the purposes of demographic modelling and (b) for other reasons about the number of marriages in the decade to 2016 between UK nationals and citizens of (i) Pakistan, (ii) India and (iii) Bangladesh where the latter seek settlement in the UK. [50246]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 13 February 2006:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question regarding the assumptions made (a) for the purposes of demographic modelling and (b) for other reasons about the number of marriages in the decade to 2016 between UK nationals and citizens of (i) Pakistan, (ii) India and (iii) Bangladesh where the latter seeks settlement in the UK. (50246)

The Government Actuary's Department has periodically produced projections of the future population of England & Wales by marital status. Responsibility for such projections has recently transferred to the Office for National Statistics. As part of this work, assumptions are made about future marriage rates. However, these assumptions are not broken down by nationality.

Money Laundering

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the Financial Services Authority's press release of 8 March 2001, (1) if he will list the UK banks which laundered money for the former Nigerian dictator Sani Abacha; and how much money was handled by each bank; [50557]

(2) if he will undertake an inquiry to establish whether banks in (a) the UK and (b) Crown Dependencies offered their facilities to General Pinochet to evade taxes and launder money. [50569]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The handling of accounts linked to the late General Abacha or to General Pinochet by banks in the United Kingdom is a regulatory matter, responsibility for which lies with the Financial Services Authority, and the financial regulatory authorities on each Crown Dependency.

HM Treasury and the Governments of the Crown Dependencies are responsible for the overarching framework of legislation and guidance in relation to money laundering, which has been subject to a wide ranging modernisation programme to safeguard the integrity of the financial services sector.

Myeloma

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the life expectancy of a patient suffering from myeloma was in England in the last period for which figures are available. [49870]

John Healey: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 13 February 2006:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent question concerning what the life expectancy of a patient suffering from myeloma was in England in the last period for which figures are available. (49870)

Data on life expectancy for patients with specific types of cancer are not available. Available information relates to survival from diagnosis. Survival rates are calculated from the proportion of patients in each age group still alive at a given period after diagnosis.

The latest available survival rates for multiple myeloma[1] in England are for adult patients (aged 15–99 years) diagnosed during 1998–2001 and followed up to 31 December 2003. The five-year age-standardised[2] relative survival rates for patients diagnosed with multiple myeloma during 1998–2001[3] in England, was 25.6 per cent. for both male and female patients.

The survival statistics are available on the National Statistics website at: http://www.statistics.gov.uk/statbase/Productasp?vlnk=14007

[1] International Classification of Diseases, Tenth Revision (ICD-10) code C90.

[2] As cancer survival varies with age at diagnosis, rates have been age standardised to control for changes in the age profile of cancer patients over time.

[3] Complete five-year follow-up is currently only available for those diagnosed in 1998. For patients diagnosed in later years the most up-to-date estimates of shorter-term survival were used in this analysis of survival rates.

Parliamentary Questions

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many parliamentary questions tabled in the last 12 months for answer by him on a named day (a) were transferred and (b) received a substantive answer (i) on the day named and (ii) after the day named. [49882]

John Healey: A parliamentary question is transferred when it is more appropriate for an answer to be given by a Department other than that to which it was originally tabled. Records are not kept of the number of questions transferred to and from the Treasury.

In the 2004–05 Session, Treasury Ministers answered 79 per cent. of named day questions substantively on the day nominated by questioners. The figure for the 2005–06 session to date is 70 per cent.

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many ordinary written parliamentary questions tabled for answer by him in the last 12 months have been answered (a) within 14 days, (b) between 14 and 28 days, (c) between 28 days and two months and (d) in excess of two months after the date of tabling; and if he will make a statement. [49894]

John Healey: The information requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. However, in the 2004–05 session, Treasury Ministers answered 84 per cent. of ordinary written questions within a working week of their having been tabled, as provided for in "Erskine May" (Twenty-Third Edition, page 342). The corresponding figure for the 2005–06 session to date is 79 per cent.

Pool Re

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether buildings insurance provided through Pool Re covers radiological, biological and chemical terrorist attack where the building is subsequently uninhabitable due to contamination without significant structural damage. [51108]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Pool Re provides reinsurance cover for commercial property damage and consequent business interruption resulting from an act of terrorism on mainland Great Britain (excluding war and cyber terrorism risks).

Where purchased, insurance cover provided under the Pool Re scheme by its members (insurance firms) is subject to the terms and conditions which appear in the underlying policies issued by those members, which will contain no exclusions for chemical, biological, radiological or nuclear effects applying to the terrorism cover. This means that such policies will include cover for property damage relating to radiological, biological and chemical effects where the cause is an act of terrorism. The extent of the insured's cover will ultimately depend on the contract between the insurer and insured.

Post Office Card Account

Mr. Leech: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people in Manchester, Withington use a Post Office card account to access child benefit. [50373]

Dawn Primarolo: Approximately 920 recipients in Manchester, Withington used a Post Office card account to access child benefit in November 2005.

Qinetiq

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what professional advice his Department received about the offering of shares in Qinetiq to retail investors at flotation; when this advice was received; whether (a) officials and (b) Ministers challenged this advice; and if he will make a statement. [50931]

Mr. Des Browne: The recommendation that the Qinetiq IPO should not include a retail offer was received by the MOD from its professional advisers and the final decision was taken in consultation with other Government Departments.

Real Estate Investment Trusts

Andrew George: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the impact of the changes proposed in his pre-Budget statement in respect of real estate investment trusts upon (a) availability of housing for rent; (b) the amount and proportion of second and holiday homes, (c) the availability of housing in areas with a preponderance of second and holiday homes and (d) other aspects of the housing market. [50255]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Real estate investment trusts (UK-REITs) will provide a publicly quoted vehicle for investment in both commercial and residential property. As part of the Government's response to Kate Barker's Review of Housing Supply, one of the aims of introducing UK-REITs is to improve efficiency, affordability and professionalism in the private rented sector to the benefit of residential tenants. The Government will publish a final regulatory impact assessment alongside Finance Bill legislation.

Andrew George: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what criteria will apply to the purchase of residential properties under his proposed changes to real estate investment trusts. [50256]

John Healey: As is set out in the draft legislation, published in December 2005 and updated in January 2006, real estate investment trusts (UK-REITs) will, among other rules, be required to be companies listed on a Recognised Stock Exchange, as defined for tax purposes, and to hold at least three properties, of which no one property can exceed 40 per cent. of the value of the total portfolio. These rules will apply to UK-REITs investing in commercial and/or residential property.

Scottish Bank Notes

Miss Begg: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether it is legal to use Scottish bank notes in (a) England, (b) Scotland and (c) Wales. [50618]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Under the Bank Notes (Scotland) Act 1845, certain commercial banks are allowed to issue their own banknotes in Scotland. There is no Act of Parliament that makes provision for Scottish banknotes to be legal tender in any part of the UK including Scotland itself. However, legal tender is a narrow legal concept that has little to do with the way in which most payments are made. Contrary to popular belief, the payment arrangements for transactions are not dependent on whether the means of payment are "legal tender" but are rather a matter for the parties concerned to agree upon as a matter of contract. Many transactions are settled through means of payment that are not legal tender such as credit and debit cards, and cheques.

Legally, no one is obliged to accept Scottish notes, or indeed other methods of payment, in any part of the UK as a means of payment if they do not wish to do so.

St. Bartholomew's Hospital

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the role of his Department in the funding of the scheme to rebuild St. Bartholomew's Hospital. [50084]

Mr. Des Browne: The business case for the proposed redevelopment of St Bartholomew's Hospital and the Royal London Hospital is being considered by the Department of Health. As with any other large investment scheme, once Health Ministers have approved it, it will be formally referred to the Treasury.

NHS investment schemes are not funded directly by the Treasury, but are paid for at a local level by trusts, from within the NHS spending review settlement allocated to Department of Health.

Staff Absences (High Cholesterol)

Dr. Stoate: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent estimate he has made of the annual cost to the economy in terms of lost working hours through staff absence and reduced productivity of people with unhealthy cholesterol levels. [36769]

Caroline Flint: I have been asked to reply.

The Secretary of State has made no estimate of this kind. There are published estimates suggesting that coronary heart disease (CHD) caused 65.4 million certified incapacity days in 1999, entailing £2.2 billion in lost production that cholesterol levels above five millimoles litre account for half of the burden of CHD.

Tax (Shrewsbury and Atcham)

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the average amount of tax paid by families in Shrewsbury and Atcham constituency was in (a) 2004, (b) 2005 and (c) 2001. [50109]

Dawn Primarolo: Estimates of the average amount of income tax paid by families at constituency level are unavailable.

Available information on the number of taxpayers and their mean and median total income by constituency, can be found in table 3.15 "Total Income by Parliamentary Constituency" on the HM Revenue and Customs internet website http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/income_distribution/menu-by-year.htm-315.

Tax Avoidance Schemes

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer in which court cases, heard by (a) special commissioners in which proceedings are complete and (b) the European Court of Justice his Department successfully challenged tax avoidance schemes operated by (i) corporate and (ii) non-corporate entities. [49716]

Dawn Primarolo: The information is not readily available in the form requested and obtaining it would incur disproportionate cost.

Tax Credits

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which tax credit decisions carry the right of appeal. [50157]

Dawn Primarolo: Appeal rights of tax credit decisions are prescribed by section 38 of the Tax Credits Act 2002. The Act can be found on the website of the Office of Public Sector Information. http://www.opsi.gov.uk/acts/acts2002/20020021.htm.

UK Coinage

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the costs were of minting each denomination of UK coinage in each of the last five years. [50855]

John Healey: I refer my right hon. Friend to the written answer I gave him on 4 February 2005, Official Report, column 1188W.

VAT Fraud

Mr. Soames: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the cost to the public purse of VAT fraud in each of the last three years. [50630]

Dawn Primarolo: Estimates of VAT revenue loss—the "VAT gap", for each of the last three years, are available in the paper "Measuring Indirect Tax Losses", published in December 2005. The publication can be found in the Library of the House or in the following link: http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/pbr2005/mitl2005.pdf

Vegetable Oil

Tony Baldry: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will reduce the level of taxation on vegetable oil to the level for natural gas; [50900]

(2) how much revenue the Government expect to receive from the changes to the level of tax on vegetable oil as a fuel in 2005–06; [50902]

(3) what the level of taxation on vegetable oil as a fuel was in each year since 2001; [50903]

(4) what estimate he has made of the number of motorists using vegetable oil as a fuel; and what assessment he has made of the effect of changes to the taxation of such fuel on the numbers of motorists using it. [50905]

John Healey: Fuel produced from vegetable oil is eligible for the rate of duty for biodiesel (currently 27.10 pence per litre) if it meets the legal definition of biodiesel for tax purposes set out in section 2AA of the Hydrocarbon Oil Duties Act 1979. In other cases it is liable to duty at 47.10 pence per litre, as has been the case since Royal Assent to the Finance Act 2002.

Duty rates for all fuels are reviewed annually as part of the Budget process. Duty rates for biodiesel are set according to the principles of the Alternative Fuels Framework, published in the 2003 pre-Budget report. In line with the commitment to provide rolling three-year certainty set out in the framework, the current differential for biodiesel of 20 pence per litre is guaranteed until 2008.

There has been no increase in excise duty on road fuels, including biofuels, since October 2003, when duty dates were revalorised on line with inflation.

The rates of duty for fuel produced from vegetable oil since 2001 are as follows:

	Pence per litre
Date	Fuel produced from vegetable oil that meets the fiscal definition of biodiesel	All other fuel produced from vegetable oil used as road fuel
7 March 2001	45.82	45.82
26 July 2002	25.82
1 October 2003	27.10	47.10

The Government continue to review its progress in encouraging the development of a biofuels market in the UK. In January 2006, over 4 million litres of biodiesel were released for consumption in the UK, representing a three-fold increase in the level of consumption since the same period last year.

Vehicle Excise Duty

Mr. Walker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what criteria were used in making the decision no longer to use the rolling 30-year period for exempting older, historic cars from vehicle excise duty; and if he will make a statement. [50314]

John Healey: In his 1998 Budget speech, the Chancellor announced his intention to introduce a more environmentally sensitive system of VED. The Government have since re-structured VED so that it more closely reflects environmental impacts.

The continuation of the 25-year rolling exemption was difficult to justify on environmental grounds within the reformed VED system because older cars tend to be less clean—especially in terms of local air pollutants such as particulates and nitrogen oxides—than newer cars.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Carers (Equal Opportunities) Act

Annette Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps she is taking to ensure that local authority children's services are aware of their new obligations under the Carers (Equal Opportunities) Act 2004 when assessing young carers' needs. [48806]

Maria Eagle [holding answer 6 February 2006]: In August 2005 the Department of Health published, jointly with my Department, combined policy guidance on the Carers and Disabled Children Act 2000 and the Carers (Equal Opportunities) Act 2004. This was the product of extensive consultation with local authorities and other agencies and voluntary organisations. The guidance is widely available via the Department of Health website. Local authorities are required to act in accordance with the guidance under section 7(1) of the Local Authority Social Services Act 1970. Local authorities also have a duty under Schedule 2, paragraph 1(2) of the Children Act 1989 to publicise their services to families with children in need, and to take steps to ensure that those who might benefit from the services receive the information.

Choice Advisers

Mr. Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how many choice advisers she expects will be required in each local education authority; and if she will make a statement; [50785]

(2) what (a) training and (b) qualifications will be required to be a choice adviser; and if she will make a statement. [50786]

Jacqui Smith: The number of choice advisers required in each local area will vary in relation to levels of deprivation.

We intend to publish guidance for local authorities on choice advice which will cover a range of issues including the role of the choice adviser, potential delivery models, and the training and skills necessary to perform the role.

Citizens Juries

Mr. Wills: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills on how many occasions her Department consulted citizens' juries on departmental policies in the last five years; in how many of those consultations the recommendations of the citizens' jury differed from existing departmental policy; and on how many occasions departmental policy was changed to reflect the recommendations of the citizens' jury. [46230]

Bill Rammell: The Department has not conducted any citizens' juries on departmental policies in the last five years.

Class Sizes

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the average class size is in (a) primary and (b) secondary schools in (i) Leicester and (ii) England. [49612]

Jacqui Smith: The requested information has been placed in the House Libraries.

Contact Centres

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list the contact centres for children and absent parents funded by her Department. [44665]

Maria Eagle: The information requested is listed as follows.

New supervised child contact centres

York (Family Mediation Service)
Stoke (Mediation Advisory Service)
Nottinghamshire (Nottinghamshire Domestic Violence Forum)
North Wiltshire (Family Mediation Service)
Merseyside (National Youth Advocacy Service)
Blackburn (Diocese)
South London (African Caribbean Family Mediation Service)

Demographics

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment her Department has made of the impact of the projected increases in the population of England upon demand and capacity in schools. [50791]

Jacqui Smith: The latest population projections produced by the Government Actuary's Department show that although the population of England is projected to rise by nearly 7 million people between 2004 and 2031, the trends are different depending on the age group. In particular, the population of children of approximately primary school age (5–10) has been falling since 1999 and is projected to continue falling until 2008. The population of children of compulsory secondary school age (11–15) started to fall in 2005 and is expected to continue falling until 2014.

Population in England at mid-year by age at last birthday (thousand)

Age 5–10	3,645	3,480	3,591	3,601	3,683	3,703
Age 11–15	3,252	3,032	2,881	3,008	3,004	3,086
Age 16–18	1,957	1,942	1,837	1,772	1,821	1,848
All ages	50,094	51,715	53,009	54,344	55,594	56,832

Government Actuary's Department 2004-based principal population projections

The Department uses these population projections (along with annual schools census data and estimates of participation in education for non-compulsory ages) to produce pupil projections by age and school type to 2020. These pupil projections are used by the Department to inform the setting of teacher training places.

The impact of demographic changes will also be considered by the Department in work on revenue funding as part of the spending review process. On planning the supply of school places our policy is that this is best done at a local level by the local authority, and they are allocated the capital resources to meet future demand. Local authorities have a duty to ensure that there are sufficient places and that high quality education is provided in a cost effective way.

Many local authorities are facing falling primary rolls. Funding empty places can represent a poor use of resources particularly where schools with spare places also perform poorly. Working with local authorities and other partners we have developed a toolkit offering practical advice to help local authorities and schools manage falling rolls. The toolkit is available at www.teachernet.gov.uk/falling_rolls.

Departmental Staff

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many staff employed by her Department live in Castle Point. [42814]

Maria Eagle: The numbers of staff employed in my Department who live in Castle Point are less than five.

Early Retirement

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many of her Department's employees have taken early retirement due to ill-health in each of the past five years for which figures are available. [46870]

Maria Eagle: The numbers of employees in my Department who have taken early retirement due to ill-health in each of the past five calendar years are:

2002	15
2001	21

Engineering Academy

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment she has made of the merits of establishing an engineering academy. [46083]

Jacqui Smith: We are currently examining the possibility of a proposal to establish an academy in Staffordshire with a specialism in engineering and international business. During the current feasibility stage the project team is preparing detailed plans, including an educational vision, curriculum model and an outline building design. Consultation with the local community will also take place. At the end of the current feasibility stage we expect to sign a funding agreement with the project's sponsor.

Fuel Cell Technology

Mrs. Maria Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps her Department is taking to encourage schools to use fuel cell technology. [50065]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 9 February 2006]: The Department is keeping a watching brief on the development of fuel cells. At the moment they are in prototype stage and too unreliable or expensive to be used in schools but future developments may make them a cost-effective replacement for boilers and for the internal combustion engine.

GCSEs

Mr. Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list secondary schools in England where the percentage contribution of BTEC first diplomas to the percentage of 15-year-olds achieving five plus A* to C grades at GCSE and equivalent was (a) 0.5 to 1 per cent., (b) 1 to 2 per cent., (c) 2 to 5 per cent., (d) 5 to 10 per cent., (e) 10 to 20 per cent., (f) 20 to 30 per cent. and (g) greater than 30 per cent. in 2005. [50944]

Jacqui Smith: The following table provides the information requested.

Grandparents (Access Rights)

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what guidance her Department provides to grandparents on remaining in contact with their grandchildren after a parental separation. [45881]

Maria Eagle: The Government's 'Parenting Plans' publication is available to parents, grandparents and other family members. They contain a checklist of issues that might usefully be considered, when planning contact and other arrangements following parental separation. My Department has recently revised the 'Parenting Plans' publication to include a range of case examples which indicate how others have reached agreement and to provide details of advisory services and agencies which families can turn to for advice.

In addition, my Department is undertaking work to make information available to grandparents and other relatives who are considering caring for a child. The Government has funded the Family Rights Group to develop advice sheets. Pages have also been added to the Every Child Matters website. These provide information on the legal arrangements for caring for a child by family and friends, parental responsibility, the availability of universal services and benefits and details of support that may be provided by local authorities. Further pages will be added to the Direct Gov website in the spring.

Higher Education (Pay)

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how much the Government have allocated to higher education institutions to tackle unequal pay; [49138]

(2) what guidance has been given to the Higher Education Funding Council for England meet the Government's equal pay objectives. [49141]

Bill Rammell [holding answer 6 February 2006]: By 2006, the Government will have provided nearly £0.8 billion to higher education institutions through the Rewarding and Developing Staff (RDS) initiative, managed by the Higher Education Funding Council. Developing equal opportunity targets—encompassing the need-address equal opportunity issues including equal pay for work of equal value—is one of the six priority areas for RDS. The KPMG evaluation of round 1 of RDS (2001–02 to 2003–04) showed that approximately £43 million (13 per cent. of the total round 1 allocation) was spent by HEIs on this priority area.

Overall funding available to institutions also influences what they can pay their staff. State expenditure on higher education will increase by around £2 billion between 2004–05 and 2007–08, taking total investment to almost £9.5 billion. Moreover the introduction of variable fees in 2006/07 will increase the funding available to the sector by an estimated further £1.35 billion per year, when it reaches steady state. It is, of course, a matter for individual institutions to decide how best to use the resources they have. The Government has provided guidance to the Higher Education Funding Council for England (HEFCE), through its Grant Letters, on issues concerning equal opportunities—for example in the most recent letter (January 2006) we have asked HEFCE to continue to support institutions so that they can fulfil their statutory duties. We have not provided specific guidance on equal pay.

Home Education

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 23 January 2006 to the hon. Member for Tamworth (Mr. Jenkins), Official Report, column 1916W, on home education, if she will commission research on the number of parents who educate their children at home. [50869]

Jacqui Smith: The research needs for my Department are currently under review, and research into the prevalence of elective home education in England is under consideration.

LEA Finance

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the funding per pupil from the Dedicated Schools Budget will be for (a) primary and (b) secondary schools in each local education authority for 2006–07. [51516]

Jacqui Smith: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Lichfield (Michael Fabricant) on 15 December 2005, Official Report, column 2200W.

Lesley Staggs

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what reasons Lesley Staggs gave to her Department for resigning as National Director of the Foundation Stage; and who has been appointed to the post. [46133]

Maria Eagle: Lesley Staggs, the present National Director for the Foundation Stage within the Primary National Strategy, has tendered her resignation to her employer, The Capita Group plc. Her resignation from the post is a matter between Lesley Staggs and Capita.

Capita are currently undertaking a recruitment process to appoint a new Director for the Foundation Stage, with interviews scheduled for early February. The successful candidate will be announced in due course.

List 99

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to paragraph 27 of her Review of the List 99 decision-making process and policy implications document published on 19 January whether the 10 cases are regarded by the police as not posing a risk because (a) none of the individuals is currently teaching in schools or (b) the individuals themselves are regarded as not posing a risk. [46585]

Ruth Kelly: As I said in my statement and the accompanying report of 19 January, current inquiries suggest that none of the individuals concerned is working in a school. Police have been asked to visit each of these individuals to check whether any is a cause for concern. None is judged by the police to pose a current risk.

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many people on List 99 have been permitted, at Ministers' discretion, to work in (a) sixth form colleges, (b) colleges of further education, (c) nurseries and (d) playgroups in each of the last five years. [47215]

Ruth Kelly [holding answer 31 January 2006]: It is not possible to provide this information in the format requested.

The Secretary of State does not give permission for people to work in specific settings; employment decisions are a matter for individual employers. Any individual who appears on List 99 or the POCA List (other than provisionally) on the grounds of unsuitability to work with children is barred from working in a "regulated position" within the meaning of section 36 of the Criminal Justice and Court Services Act 2000 which includes, for example, a position whose normal duties include caring for, training, supervising or being in sole charge of children.

Protection of Children Act

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many people have (a) been on and (b) been removed from the Protection of Children Act List in each year since it was first compiled. [44810]

Ruth Kelly: The Protection of Children Act List is a referral system for employers who have dismissed an individual for misconduct that harmed a child or placed a child at risk of harm. For all regulated child care settings it is mandatory to CRB check individuals prior to appointment. The Protection of Children Act List provides an additional safeguard within the CRB system for a limited range of circumstances set out in legislation, for example where somebody employed in a regulated child care position has been dismissed because they harmed a child. Since the establishment of the Protection of Children Act List in October 2000 the following number of people have been added or removed from the Protection of Children Act List in each year since it was first compiled:

	Names added	Names removed
(b) 2001	48	52
(c) 2002	53	14
(d) 2003	68	9
(e) 2004	129	12
(f) 2005	227	26

The names added includes people transferred from the Consultancy Service Index, which was maintained by the Department of Health prior to the introduction of the Protection of Children Act.

Pupil Exclusions

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the rates of (a) temporary and (b) permanent exclusions are at schools run with (i) exclusively public money and (ii) financial assistance from the Vardy Foundation. [44066]

Jacqui Smith: The Emmanuel Schools Foundation sponsors three schools—King's academy; Trinity academy and Emmanuel city technology college.

Trinity academy only opened in September 2005 so no exclusions data have yet been collected from this establishment. Information on exclusions during the 2005/06 academic year should be available by June 2007.

Information on fixed period exclusions from academies and city technology colleges will start to be collected on a termly basis from May 2006. Figures for the full 2005/06 academic year should be available by June 2007.

The available information relating to permanent exclusions in the 2003/04 academic year is given in the table.

Maintained secondary schools, city technology colleges and academies[1]: number and percentage of permanent exclusions 2003/04: England

	Permanent exclusions
	Number	Percentage
The Emmanuel Schools Foundation
The King's academy[2]	27	2.60
Trinity academy[3]	[4]	[4]
Emmanuel city technology college[2]	0	0.00
Total schools receiving funding from the Emmanuel Schools Foundation[2]	27	1.19
Other schools
Maintained secondary schools	8,315	0.25
City technology colleges (excluding Emmanuel CTC)[2]	24	0.16
Academies (excluding the King's academy and Trinity academy)[2]	58	0.63
Total other schools[2]	8,397	0.25

[1] Includes middle schools as deemed.

[2] Information on permanent exclusions collected from academies and city technology colleges has not been validated. Figures are as reported by schools.

[3] Permanent exclusions data are collected retrospectively. The 2005 Annual Schools Census collected information on pupils on roll as at January 2005 together with permanent exclusions in 2003/04 school year. Trinity academy opened in September 2005, so information on permanent exclusions from this establishment is not currently available.

Regulatory Reform

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many regulatory reform orders her Department has laid before Parliament in each of the last five calendar years. [46809]

Maria Eagle: My Department laid one regulatory reform order in 2001. The order was made. The order was: The Regulatory Reform (Voluntary Aided Schools Liabilities and Funding) (England) Order 2002 (2002/906).

Safeguarding Children

Sir George Young: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to her oral statement of 19 January 2006, Official Report, columns 966–70, on safeguarding children, what arrangements are in place to ensure that teachers from overseas meet the standards set for teachers based in the United Kingdom. [45243]

Ruth Kelly: Overseas teachers are subject to the same vetting procedures as UK teachers. However, where staff are recruited from countries outside the UK, the CRB or List 99 may not be appropriate, particularly when they are newly arrived. We currently advise employers to take extra care in other checks on overseas candidates and to seek information as to any criminal history from the authorities in their country of origin wherever possible. The CRB has an information service which can help with this.

It is important that any checks we have in place are as effective as we can make them, and we are reviewing the current process for vetting overseas teachers.

School Meals

Mr. Crabb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate she has made of the amount of Brazilian beef procured for school meals during the last year for which figures are available. [47471]

Maria Eagle: The Department does not collect this information.

School Nursing

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how much funding was allocated to school nursing in each of the past 10 years; [24428]

(2) what action she is taking to ensure school nurses have sufficient (a) time and (b) resources to provide a full range of services for children. [24430]

Mr. Byrne: I have been asked to reply.

Historically, allocations for school nurses were not determined centrally and until the September national health service work force census, the school nurse establishment was not identified separately from other services for children. The 2004 census showed there were 2,409 (91,619 full-time equivalent) qualified nurses working in the school nursing service.

The Choosing Health White Paper made a commitment to provide new funding for school nursing so that by 2010, every primary care trust (PCT) working with children's trusts and local authorities, will be resourced to have at least one full-time qualified school nurse working with each cluster of primary schools and its related secondary school. Roll out will start from 2006–07 in the 20 per cent. of PCTs with the worst health deprivation indicators (spearhead PCTs). There are 3,122 secondary schools.

The identified funding for school nurses is £20 million in the 2006–07 allocation, and £42 million in 2007–08. The majority of the funding is prioritised for spearhead PCTs in 2006–07, with the allocation for 2007–08 shared among all PCTs.

Our aim is to ensure there is sufficient work force capacity to provide high quality health services in schools. There is scope to reinforce the school nurse role by drawing in other workers and the chief nursing officer has been leading work to modernise the school nurse's role. In the new year, we will be publishing updated material entitled, 'School Nurse Development Pack', which will outline the principles of a modern role and will enable school nurses to expand their knowledge, skills and competencies to further develop their child-centred public health role.

School Staff (Child Protection)

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many (a) teachers and (b) other school staff have been cautioned for having indecent pictures of children on their computers in each of the last five years. [48541]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 7 February 2006]: The information is not available in this form.

Schools

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate she has made of the number of additional (a) secondary and (b) primary schools that will be required in Aylesbury Vale to meet planned expansion of housing. [43305]

Jacqui Smith: The Government have announced, in the run-up to the Comprehensive Spending Review 2007, and in response to Kate Barker's review of Housing Supply, a cross-cutting review into supporting housing growth to effectively co-ordinate across departments the strategic delivery of local and regional infrastructure necessary to support additional housing.

DfES rely on local authorities for planning additional schools in their area. This is because local authorities are in the best position to asses, in the light of existing schools1 provision, whether additional (a) secondary and (b) primary schools are required in areas of planned expansion of housing.

David Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will make a statement on the level of debt carried by schools in Cambridgeshire. [50713]

Jacqui Smith: Based on latest section 52 outturn statements received from local education authorities for the financial year 2004–05, 21 schools in Cambridgeshire had deficit balances totalling £2.7 million; 227 schools had credit balances totalling £17.1 million; and two schools had zero balances. It is for the local authority to distribute funding to its schools using its locally agreed funding formula, and it is for schools governing bodies to decide how to spend their available resources.

While schools are responsible for their own financial management, where a school is in deficit, it has to agree a three year recovery plan with the local authority to eliminate it. New school funding arrangements starting this year to replace annual budgets with multi-year ones will also help these schools better plan and manage their finances.

Services Education

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will revise the Pupil Level Annual Census to include children of servicemen and women; and if she will make a statement. [47377]

Jacqui Smith: Data on all pupils in maintained schools and non-maintained special schools in England is collected via the school census. This includes data on the children of servicemen and women attending schools in England. Although there is no mandatory requirement for service education schools located abroad to provide this information, they do provide individual pupil data in line with the school census on a voluntary basis. Currently however there is no provision to separately identify details on the children of servicemen and women within the school census.

Sex and Relationships Education

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how many schools in (a) England, (b) the Tees Valley and (c) Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland have been rated (i) unsatisfactory, (ii) poor and (iii) very poor by Ofsted in sex and relationships education; [45113]

(2) how many schools in (a) England, (b) the Tees Valley and (c) Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland were without a sex and relationships education policy on their last visit by Ofsted inspectors. [45114]

Jacqui Smith: These are matters for Ofsted. HM Chief Inspector, Maurice Smith, has written to my hon. Friend and a copy of his reply has been placed in the House Library.

Letter from Maurice Smith, dated 24 January 2006:

Your recent parliamentary questions have been passed to me, as Her Majesty's Chief Inspector, for reply.

In PQ 45113 you asked how many schools in (a) England, (b) the Tees Valley and (c) Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland have been rated (i) unsatisfactory, (ii) poor and (iii) very poor by Ofsted in sex and relationships education. Ofsted inspectors do not make this type of judgement thus we are unable to provide any further details.

In PQ 45114 you asked how many schools in (a) England, (b) the Tees Valley and (c) Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland were without a sex and relationships education policy on their last visit by Ofsted inspectors.

Inspectors have never specifically reported about the lack of policy on sex and relationship education. However, between January 2000 and July 2005 they were asked if there was evidence of non-compliance with policies relating to sex and relationship education. The table overleaf shows the responses recorded for schools in England, the Tees Valley and Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland.

Is there evidence of non-compliance with policies relating to sex and relationship education? January 2000 to July 2005[1]

	Number of schools
	England	Tees Valley	Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland
Primary schools
No	17,088	210	86
Yes	118	1	1
Secondary schools
No	3,117	38	16

[1] In the period 2000/2003 inspectors were asked about non-compliance in sex education; from 2003 to 2005 the judgement related to non-compliance in sex and relationship education.

A copy of this response has been sent to Jacqui Smith and will be placed in the library of both Houses.

Sex Offenders

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many referrals have been made to the Protection of Children Act list since it was established; and how many referrals have resulted in a name being added to the list. [45512]

Ruth Kelly: 1,141 referrals have been made to the Protection of Children of Children Act List since it was established and 451 names have been added to the list.

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many persons in the employment of (a) her Department and (b) its agencies have convictions or cautions for sex offences; and how many of those have responsibility for policy or implementation of policy in relation to (a) sex offences, (b) List 99, (c) teacher recruitment and (d) related areas. [45823]

Ruth Kelly [holding answer 26 January 2006]: We are not aware of anyone working for DfES who is, or has been on the Sex Offenders Register.

The Department undertakes 'Character Enquiry' checks prior to any unconditional offers of employment being made as part of its recruitment procedures. The procedure requires potential recruits to complete a stencil detailing any current or previous criminal convictions. Any declared convictions are followed up by obtaining details directly from the relevant courts. Decisions on whether the information would prevent the Department from offering the individual an appointment are taken as appropriate at this stage.

Additionally, procedures are in place for serving staff to report any convictions received since their employment with the Department commenced. If the position requires working in direct contact with children or vulnerable adults, Criminal Record Bureau (CRB) checks are carried out prior to any unconditional offers of employment being made. The information is available to staff and managers via the Department's Intranet. Personal criminal convictions, are potentially disciplinary issues, as is the failure to declare a conviction.

Specialist and Academy Schools Trust

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what (a) allowances, (b) expenses and (c) other moneys from public funds have been paid to Lord Levy in connection with his role as president of the Specialist and Academy Schools Trust. [45972]

Jacqui Smith: Lord Levy does not receive any public funds in connection with his role as president of the Specialist Schools and Academies Trust. His appointment is a matter for the trust and he receives no remuneration for this.

Statutory Instruments

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list the statutory instruments introduced by her Department since 6 May 2005. [46252]

Maria Eagle: As of 3 February 2006, my Department has produced 106 statutory instruments since 6 May 2005. Of these, 81 were general and 25 were local. Four of the general statutory instruments were Orders in Council. These related to appointments to the Office for Standards in Education (England) (Ofsted). A list of general statutory instruments by the DfES from 6 May 2005 to 2 February 2006 has been placed in the Libraries.

Teachers

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many teachers of (a) Australian, (b) New Zealand, (c) South African, (d) Malawian, (e) Ghanaian, (f) Namibian, (g) Kenyan and (h) Nigerian origin have been dismissed from teaching posts in the past five years because of criminal activity in (i) their country of origin and (ii) the United Kingdom. [45537]

Ruth Kelly: My Department does not collect this information.

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps are being taken by her Department to ensure that teachers of (a) Australian, (b) New Zealand, (c) South African, (d) Malawian, (e) Ghanaian, (f) Namibian, (g) Kenyan and (h) Nigerian origin do not have criminal histories in (i) their country of origin and (ii) the United Kingdom which would make them unfit to teach under departmental guidelines. [45538]

Ruth Kelly: Overseas teachers are subject to the same vetting procedures as UK teachers. However, where staff are recruited from countries outside the UK, the CRB or List 99 check may not be appropriate, particularly when they are newly arrived. We currently advise employers to take extra care in other checks on overseas candidates and to seek information as to any criminal history from the authorities in their country of origin wherever possible. The CRB has an information service which can help with this.

It is important that any checks we have in place are as effective as we can make them, and we are reviewing the current process for vetting overseas teachers.

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many teachers of (a) Australian, (b) New Zealand, (c) South African, (d) Malawian, (e) Ghanaian, (f) Namibian, (g) Kenyan and (h) Nigerian nationality have had their applications for teaching posts in the United Kingdom rejected because of previous criminal convictions in each of the past five years. [45539]

Ruth Kelly: The Department does not collect this information.

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many teachers of (a) Australian, (b) New Zealand, (c) South African, (d) Malawian, (e) Ghanaian, (f) Namibian, (g) Kenyan and (h) Nigerian nationality who are working in schools in the UK have a criminal record in (i) their country of origin and (ii) the UK. [45545]

Ruth Kelly: My Department does not collect this information.

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how many (a) teachers and (b) full-time equivalent teaching posts there were in schools in West Lancashire constituency in each year since 1997; [45005]

(2) how many (a) classroom assistants and (b) full-time equivalent classroom assistant posts there were in schools in West Lancashire constituency in each year since 1997. [45004]

Jacqui Smith: The following table provides the full-time equivalent number of teachers and teaching assistants employed in schools in West Lancashire constituency in each January since 1997.

The full-time equivalent number of teachers and teaching assistant posts in schools in West Lancashire constituency is not collected centrally.

Full-time equivalent number of teachers and teaching assistants in maintained sector schools including pupil referral units in West Lancashire constituency

Truancy

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will make a statement on measures to reduce truancy in schools; what objectives have been set since 1997; and when she expects these will be met on current trends. [39883]

Jacqui Smith: I refer the hon. Member to the replies given on 9 November 2005, Official Report, column 623W, to the Members for Romford and Buckingham and on 7 December 2005, Official Report, column 1344W, to the Member for Chorley. The Department expects schools to take steps to improve attendance and requires all schools to agree targets for improving attendance with their local authority.

My Department has had two public service agreement (PSA) targets to reduce unauthorised absence. They were in:

1998 – to reduce unauthorised absences by a third by 2002; and in 2002 – to reduce the 2002 level of unauthorised absence by 10 per cent. by 2004.

Neither of these targets was met. We are now focused on improving attendance levels through tackling all forms of absence because attendance correlates to pupils' attainment levels and subsequent life chances, while continuing to prioritise truants within this approach. The PSA target agreed in 2004 is, therefore, to reduce the 2002/03 level of absence (i.e. both authorised and unauthorised combined) of 6.83 per cent. by 8 per cent. by 2008. Since 2002/03 there has been a reduction in absences of 5.7 per cent. which is over two-thirds of the way towards the PSA target.

Young Sex Offenders

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what information she collects on the number of pupils who have (a) convictions and (b) cautions for sex offences who are in schools; of how many such pupils she is aware; and what advice she gives to schools on the (i) inclusion and (ii) management of such pupils. [45489]

Ruth Kelly: The Department does not collect this information. Guidance on working with children and young people who abuse others is included in 'Working Together to Safeguard Children', the core inter-agency guidance on safeguarding and promoting the welfare of children.

DEFENCE

Afghanistan

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what military assistance his Department (a) is providing and (b) plans to provide to the Afghan Government to tackle the problem of heroin production. [49446]

Mr. Ingram: Counter-narcotics (CN) operations are the responsibility of the Government of Afghanistan. United Kingdom forces deployed under the international security assistance force (ISAF) in Afghanistan contribute to the broader CN effort by helping to provide the secure environment in which the rule of law can be applied, reconstruction can take place and legal rural livelihoods can be developed.

Under NATO's operational plan for the ISAF mission in Afghanistan, UK forces under ISAF can also provide, within means and capabilities, training and operational support to Afghan CN forces. They do not have a direct role in targeted interdiction operations or in eradication of opium poppy in the fields.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many troops each country which has participated in the operation in Afghanistan has provided for active service in each year since the start of the war. [49447]

Mr. Ingram: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what resources are being allocated by the Department to protect (a) engineers and (b) teachers from attacks by the Taliban in Afghanistan. [49449]

Mr. Ingram: British troops in Afghanistan are deployed primarily under the NATO-led international security assistance force (ISAF), which helps the Government of Afghanistan to maintain security and to extend its authority across all of the country. In doing so, ISAF helps create a secure environment in which the rule of law can be applied, reconstruction and development can take place, and teachers and others can carry out their work.

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the threat posed by the use of improvised explosive devices in Helmand Province to UK armed services personnel. [50623]

Mr. Ingram: We continuously assess all threats to UK armed forces personnel wherever they are deployed. It is true that the operating environment in the South of Afghanistan is less benign than in the ISAF's current area of operation, and improvised explosive devices do pose a threat. The safety of our troops is paramount and our troops will deploy with appropriate force protection, tactics and procedures.

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what agreement between the UK and the Afghan Government has governed the arrest and detention of prisoners captured in Afghanistan since the UK led the first international security assistance force (ISAF) deployment to Kabul in 2001; and what agreement between the UK and the Government of Afghanistan will govern the arrest and detention of prisoners captured during ISAF operations in the Helmand province. [44263]

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what arrangements have been agreed between the British and Afghanistan Governments in relation to the arrest and detention of suspects captured by international security assistance forces personnel. [45799]

Mr. Ingram: As my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence stated on 7 February 2005, Official Report, column 1078W, troops deployed under international security assistance forces (ISAF) are able to arrest and detain by virtue of the authorisations permitting use of all necessary measures to fulfil its mandate contained in, most recently, UNSCR 1623 (2005), and by agreement with the Government of Afghanistan. ISAF policy is that individuals should be transferred to the Afghan authorities at the first opportunity and within 96 hours or released.

There is currently no separate agreement specifically on detention between the United Kingdom and the Government of Afghanistan, and we will continue to act under the above agreements.

Ascension Island

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the future role of Ascension Island in the United Kingdom's defence strategy. [47329]

Mr. Ingram: Ascension Island fulfils a strategic role as a staging post in support of our Defence interests in the South Atlantic. This role will continue for as long as necessary to protect the right of self-determination of the inhabitants of the South Atlantic Overseas Territories.

Brazilian Beef

Mr. Crabb: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of the amount of Brazilian beef procured for departmental establishments in the last year for which figures are available. [47473]

Mr. Ingram: For the financial year 2004–05, the total value of Brazilian beef procured for the British armed forces worldwide was approximately £3.7 million.

Civil Servants (Overseas Visits)

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what costs were incurred by his Department as a result of sending civil servants on overseas visits in each of the last 10 years. [46287]

Mr. Touhig: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. All travel is conducted in accordance with the guidelines set out in the civil service management code and in the most cost-effective manner.

Civilian Prisoners (Japan)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many compensation payments to civilian prisoners of the Japanese were made before the introduction of the birth link criterion; and on what basis they were paid. [50833]

Mr. Touhig: In view of my statement to the House on 12 December 2005, Official Report, columns 1119–21, reliable information is not currently available on how many payments to civilians interned by the Japanese were made before the introduction of the birthlink criterion. During my attendance at the evidence session of the Public Administration Select Committee on 1 December 2005, I announced that I had set in hand a review to look at the criteria used for deciding claims under the ex-gratia payment scheme. As part of this, we are examining when the birthlink criterion was applied for deciding applications from former civilian internees. I expect the review to conclude shortly. I will make a further statement to the House on the findings of the review as soon as possible thereafter.

Correspondence

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he will reply to the letter of 11 November 2005 by the hon. Member for Mid Bedfordshire on Gulf War Syndrome; and if he will make a statement. [49542]

Mr. Touhig: I replied to the hon. Member on 10 February.

Defence Export Services

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when Alan Garwood's contract as Head of Defence Export Services ends; what steps have been taken to appoint a successor; who will be on the appointment panel; and if he will make a statement. [49805]

Mr. Touhig: Mr. Alan Garwood was seconded to the Ministry of Defence in September 2002 on a three-year contract with the possibility to extend the contract to a maximum of five years. The contract has already been extended to cover the period to September 2006. No action is yet required to find a successor.

Defence Science and Technology Laboratory

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many new personnel were employed in the Defence Science and Technology Laboratory in each year since 2002. [44410]

Mr. Ingram: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Defence Training Review

Mr. Ian Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) direct and (b) indirect jobs are provided by the Defence College of Aeronautical Engineering, Cosford, in (i) Shropshire and (ii) the West Midlands region. [40384]

Mr. Touhig: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave on 2 February 2006, Official Report, columns 701–02W to my hon. Friend the Member for Wolverhampton, South-East (Mr. McFadden).

Defence Vetting Agency

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether civilian staff may be employed on his Department's premises before basic security check by the Defence Vetting Agency has been carried out. [49751]

Mr. Ingram: Ministry of Defence policy requires a Basic Check (BC) to be carried out for all civil servants, including casual, temporary and work experience staff, prior to the date from which they start their employment. The Basic Check forms part of the MOD's system of protection against risks from terrorism, espionage and crime by providing assurance about the identity and integrity of individuals who have access to MOD assets and establishments. Exceptionally, in the case of short term contractors who only require physical access to MOD sites (with no access to classified information) for less than two weeks, there is provision for the requirement for BC to be waived, providing that measures are taken by the establishment concerned to control access, including, where possible, escorting.

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many applications for (a) security checks and (b) developed vetting the Defence Vetting Agency has processed in each of the last five years. [49755]

Mr. Ingram: The following numbers of applications for security checks and developed vetting, including vetting reviews, have been completed in each of the last five complete years. The figures exclude applications that were cancelled during the vetting process:

	Security checks	Developed vetting	Total
2000–01	86,915	8,682	95,597
2001–02	83,025	7,011	90,036
2002–03	103,330	8,441	111,771
2003–04	100,304	11,611	111,915
2004–05	89,199	10,632	99,831

Departmental Entertainment

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much was spent on entertainment by his Department in 2004–05; and how much of that sum is accounted for by (a) food, (b) alcohol, (c) staff and (d) accommodation. [50895]

Mr. Touhig: Information on expenditure on "hospitality and entertainment" for the financial year 2004–05 has been published at Note 3 of our Annual Report and Accounts, a copy of which is available in the Library of the House.

A breakdown of the total figure by subcategory is not held and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Expenditure on official entertainment is subject to strict departmental rules and compliance with the principles of propriety set out in Government Accounting.

Departmental Estimates

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will break down the (a) main estimate, (b) winter supplementary estimate and (c) spring supplementary estimate Request for Resources (i) 2 and (ii) 3 provision by (A) direct resource departmental expenditure limit (DEL) and (B) indirect resource DEL for financial years 1999–2000 to 2004–05. [49767]

John Reid: Prior to the introduction of Stage 2 Resource Accounting and Budgeting (RAB) in financial year 2003–04, indirect RDEL did not exist as a budgeting aggregate, and I therefore provide figures for Request for Resources 2 for financial years 2003–04 and 2004–05.

£ million

		RDEL
RFR2 – costs: 2003–05	Total	Direct	Indirect
Total conflict prevention costs: 2004–05	1,413.610	1,398.510	15.100
of which:
Main estimate	36.700	36.700	0.000
Winter supplementary estimate	1,140.000	1,139.900	0.100
Spring supplementary estimate	236.910	221.910	15.000
Total conflict prevention costs: 2003–04	949.884	916.746	33.138
of which:
Main estimate	50.360	50.360	0.000
Winter supplementary estimate	0.000	0.000	0.000
Spring supplementary estimate	899.524	866.386	33.138

Request for Resources 3 is for the payment of war pensions and allowances, which was the responsibility of the Department of Work and Pensions until financial year 2002–03. All costs are classified as annually managed expenditure (AME), rather than as Resource DEL, and there are no separate direct and indirect controls on AME. The total figures published in the estimates, are therefore not split between direct and indirect elements. Copies of the estimates are available in the Library of the House.

Departmental Expenditure Limit

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will break down the Request for Resources (a) 2 and (b) 3 outturn by (i) direct resource departmental expenditure limit (DEL) and (ii) indirect resource DEL for financial years 1999–2000 to 2004–05; [49768]

(2) if he will break down each of the figures for conflict prevention costs in (a) note 2 page 188, (b) note 2 page 159 and (c) note 2 page 135 of his Department's Annual Report and Accounts 2004–05 (HC 1080) by (i) direct resource departmental expenditure limit (DEL) and (ii) indirect resource DEL. [49771]

John Reid: Prior to the introduction of Stage 2 Resource Accounting and Budgeting (RAB) in financial year 2003–04, indirect RDEL did not exist as a budgeting aggregate, and I therefore provide figures for Request for Resources 2 for financial years 2003–04 and 2004–05 in the following table. These are the same figures as those disclosed in the Annual Report and Accounts 2004–05 page 188 note 2 (HC464) and 2003–04 page 159 note 2 (HC1080), to which I assume the hon. Member refers.

£ million

	Outturn	RDEL direct	RDEL indirect
Total conflict prevention costs 2004-05	938	865	73
Of which
Balkans (Bosnia/Kosovo)	85	75	10
Afghanistan	58	58	0
Iraq	747	684	63
Conflict Prevention Programme	48	48	0
Total conflict prevention costs 2005-06	1,233	1,089	144
Of which
Balkans (Bosnia/Kosovo)	103	94	9
Democratic Republic of the Congo	1	1	0
Afghanistan	36	34	2
Iraq	1,051	918	133
Conflict Prevention Programme	40	40	0

Request for Resources 3 is for the payment of war pensions and allowances, and all costs disclosed in the Annual Report and Accounts for each year since the introduction of RAB are classified as annually managed expenditure (AME), rather than as resource DEL. There are no separate direct and indirect controls on AME. The outturn figures for each year are published in the Ministry of Defence Annual Report and Accounts for financial years 2002-03 onwards, which are available in the Library of the House. Prior to that the Veterans Agency (formerly the War Pensions Agency), which administers these payments, was the responsibility of the Department of Work and Pensions, and the Ministry of Defence did not have a Request for Resources 3.

Departmental Staff

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans his Department has to change the London allowance of its staff; and if he will make a statement. [50008]

Mr. Touhig: The Ministry of Defence last changed its London Weighting allowance in 2002 as part of its four year pay settlement which concluded in 2005. London Weighting will be one of a number of issues being considered during this year's pay negotiations.

Depression/Post-traumatic Stress Disorder

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many service personnel are suffering from (a) clinical depression and (b) post-traumatic stress disorder. [48026]

Mr. Touhig: Figures are not held centrally on the total number of Service personnel who are suffering from clinical depression or post traumatic stress disorder and this could therefore only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Eurofighter Typhoon

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer of 11 January 2006, Official Report, column 667W, on RAF aircraft, whether the current estimated cost of Eurofighter Typhoon is (a) substantially below, (b) substantially above and (c) similar to the original cost. [49633]

Mr. Ingram: In view of the commercial sensitivity of the Eurofighter Typhoon programme, it remains inappropriate to provide any indication of its current estimated cost.

Gibraltar

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he last discussed departmental requirements in Gibraltar with the (a) Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, (b) Governor of Gibraltar and (c) Chief Minister of Gibraltar. [50985]

Mr. Ingram: There are no plans to change Gibraltar's current military role, which centres on providing a forward mounting base and other facilities to support overseas operations. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence has had no discussions on this issue with the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, the Governor of Gibraltar or the Chief Minister of Gibraltar.

Gulf War Syndrome

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many representations his Department has received on Gulf War Syndrome; and if he will make a statement; [49544]

(2) what representations the Government has received on Gulf War Syndrome; and if he will make a statement. [49546]

Mr. Touhig: The Government has received a significant number of representations about Gulf War Syndrome over the years. It places a high priority on addressing the concerns of 1990-91 Gulf veterans and we continue to respond to representations from parliamentarians and others on various issues relating to Gulf veterans' illnesses, including Gulf War Syndrome. We remain committed to providing medical assistance through the Medical Assessment Programme, financial support through the War Pensions Scheme and armed forces occupational schemes. We have commissioned a large amount of research on these illnesses and remain committed to openness in response to this complex issue.

As indicated in my written statement of 24 November 2005, Official Report, columns 128-29WS, the Government was pleased to note the recent decision of the Pensions Appeal Tribunal (PAT) in the case of former Guardsman Daniel Martin which accepted the use of Gulf War Syndrome as an umbrella term to cover accepted conditions which are causally linked to the 1990-91 Gulf conflict. We hope that the use of the umbrella term will address the known concern of some Gulf veterans that we have not recognised a link between their ill-health and the 1990-91 Gulf conflict. The PAT decision also confirmed our position that there is insufficient reliable evidence to indicate that Gulf War Syndrome exists as a discrete pathological entity, or in other words as a recognised disease.

Gulf War-related Illnesses

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what analysis was made by the Government of the RAND report on pyridostigmine bromide before ordering its use during Operation Telic. [50297]

Mr. Touhig: The RAND Report entitled "A Review of the Scientific Literature as it Pertains to Gulf War Illnesses, Volume 2: Pyridostigmine Bromide" was published in October 1999. Following its publication, a detailed review and written assessment were produced by the Ministry of Defence's Gulf Veterans Illness Unit. A copy of this is available in the Library of the House.

In summary, the review presented no new scientific work on pyridostigmine bromide and its possible association with Gulf Veterans Illness; rather it discussed a series of possible hypotheses drawn from speculation and debate at the time. The report did not advance our understanding as to whether pyridostigmine bromide was a contributing factor to illness suffered by Gulf Veterans. MOD has not commissioned any further work on the RAND Report.

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what weapon systems using propellants and explosives containing pyridines were employed by UK forces during Operation (a) Granby and (b) Telic. [50299]

Mr. Touhig: No weapon systems using propellants and explosives containing pyridines were used by UK forces during either Operation Granby or Operation Telic. There are no explosives or propellants currently in service with UK armed forces that contain pyridine.

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence to what extent the decision to provide nerve agent pre-treatment tablets to forces serving during the Iraq war in 2003 was based upon information on chemical weapons in Iraq; what chemical weapons were identified in this information; and for how many of those chemicals the information on use in Iraq was not borne out by the report of the Iraq Survey Group. [50301]

Mr. Touhig: In preparing for operations in Iraq, an assessment was produced on the likely CBRN threats to UK forces. A number of nerve agents were assessed to be available for use by the Iraqi regime. Delivery systems were assessed to include mortars, artillery, rocket artillery, aerial bombs, ballistic missiles, spray tanks and UAVs.

The decision to issue NAPS, a licensed pre-treatment for nerve agent poisoning, to UK deployed forces and subsequently to order its use was a sensible and prudent measure, partly based upon this assessment and Iraq's previous use of CW during the Iran/Iraq war and against the citizens of Hallabja.

The Iraq Survey Group did not discover any large scale CW agent production facilities or stockpiles. However, in their findings they judged that Iraq had the intention to pursue WMD programmes when UN sanctions were lifted.

HMS Sheffield

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to his answer of 19 December 2005, Official Report, column 2341W, on HMS Sheffield, what the timetable is for completion of the departmental review of HMS Sheffield; and what the reasons are for the length of time being taken for the review. [47967]

Mr. Ingram: The Departmental review is still ongoing but is expected to be completed by spring. Once it is complete I will write to the hon. Member to advise him of the timetable for releasing documents relating to the Board of Inquiry into the loss of HMS Sheffield into the public domain. The BOI report and its associated annexes runs to over 3,000 pages and its disclosure raises many complex issues, including the duty of care to the crew and next of kin, and the need to protect personal data under the provisions of the Data Protection Act 1998. Of necessity, therefore, the review that is in hand is a lengthy process.

Identity Cards

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer of 31 January 2006, Official Report, column 318W, on identity cards, whether his Department has finalised its estimates of the cost of using the Identity Cards Scheme to support the services which it oversees. [50453]

Mr. Ingram: The Ministry of Defence has not finalised its estimates of the cost of using the Identity Cards Scheme to support the services which it oversees.

Incapacity Benefit

Jeremy Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) service personnel on long-term sick leave and (b) former service personnel are claiming incapacity benefit. [49959]

Mr. Touhig: The payment of incapacity benefit is a matter for the Department for Work and Pensions. Former service personnel who are incapable of working due to an illness or injury caused by service before 6 April 2005 may receive an unemployability allowance from the Ministry of Defence and are precluded from receiving incapacity benefit. Any personnel categorised as medically downgraded are still on the Ministry of Defence pay roll and would not be eligible for incapacity benefit.

Iraq

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the total strength was of UK forces in Iraq in each month since May 2003; and what he expects the figure to be by May 2006. [44462]

Mr. Ingram: At the peak of the UK troop commitment in Iraq, there were some 46,000 British forces personnel committed to Operation Telic. The figures in the following table record the numbers deployed (rounded to the nearest hundred) on the last day of each month since then. Around 15 per cent. of the troops on Operation Telic will be stationed outside Iraq, supporting the operation from aboard ships, or from airfields or other bases outside the country.

The numbers deployed in May 2006 will depend on the prevailing conditions during the period of transition in which the new Government is forming.

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many troops in Iraq have been issued with improved coverage body armour. [50371]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 9 February 2006]: There are three types of body armour used on Operation Telic. Enhanced combat body armour has been standard issue for all troops. Over 3,000 sets of enhanced personal protection equipment (known as 'Kestrel') have been issued to 'top cover' sentries. Following recent successful trials, the first 200 of over 9,000 sets of the improved performance body armour ('Osprey') have been despatched this month, with the remainder due in theatre by May.

Joint Strike Fighter

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions the UK has had with the US Administration in the last six months on (a) the cost of and (b) technology transfer in relation to the Joint Strike Fighter project. [49807]

Mr. Ingram: The United Kingdom's contribution remains fixed at $2 billion for the current system development and demonstration phase of the programme. There is regular dialogue with the United States Administration on the potential costs of the follow-on sustainment phase of the programme and technology transfer. The US Administration are aware of our requirements for the necessary Joint Strike Fighter technical information to meet our sovereign requirements. These will need to be satisfied before we are able to commit to the next phase of the project.

Military Explosive Manufacturing

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) which military explosives will continue to be manufactured in the United Kingdom following proposed closures of former Royal Ordnance factories; [49649]

(2) from which countries he expects United Kingdom armed forces to obtain military explosives after the proposed closure of former Royal Ordnance factories. [49652]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 9 February 2006]: As set out in the Defence Industrial Strategy, we aim to retain a substantive and flexible capability in the final stages of the general munitions manufacturing process, specifically fill, assemble and pack. We do not, however, consider it necessary to retain all aspects of bulk explosives manufacture in the UK; although we do intend to retain a capability in the manufacture of Polymer Bonded Explosives (PBX) for artillery ammunition and demolition explosives on shore. PBX will continue to be manufactured at the BAE Systems Land Systems (BAES LS) facility at Glascoed following implementation of the company's recently announced rationalisation plans.

Decisions on sourcing explosives are principally a matter for BAES LS. However, as set out in the Defence Industrial Strategy, we intend to retain an on shore capability to manufacture PBX.

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what long-term plans he has for the security of supply of military explosives for UK forces. [49651]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 9 February 2006]: As set out in the recently published Defence Industrial Strategy the MOD's long-term plans for general munitions are being taken forward through Project MASS (Munitions Acquisition, The Supply Solution), which seeks to ensure long term security of supply for general munitions and deliver value for money.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the future of work being carried out at the former Chorley Royal Ordnance site for his Department's contracts. [50173]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 9 February 2006]: BAE Systems Land Systems is responsible for the security of supply of items currently manufactured at Chorley and will remain so after the closure of the site. Detailed plans on how they intend to achieve this without impacting on their delivery of existing contracts have been provided to MOD and we remain confident in their ability to do so. These plans are, however, commercial in nature and it would not be to the benefit of the company or MOD to release them.

Opposition Visits

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the formal visits undertaken by official Opposition spokespersons which were funded by his Department over the last two years. [35209]

Mr. Touhig [holding answer 7 December 2005]: The information relating to the principal official Opposition spokespersons is given in the following table.

Date of visit	Member of Parliament	Place visited
*17–18 December 2003	The right hon. Nicholas Soames MP	Accompanied Minister of State for the Armed Forces to Iraq
2 March 2004	The right hon. Nicholas Soames MP	HQ Brussels
4 March 2004	The right hon. Nicholas Soames MP	RAF Cranwell
17 June 2004	Paul Keetch MP	Hereford Cocktail Party
1 July 2004	The right hon. Nicholas Soames MP	Tidworth
6 July 2004	The right hon. Nicholas Soames MP	PJHQ
17 November 2004	The right hon. Nicholas Soames MP	Defence Procurement Agency
22–23 November 2005	The right hon. Michael Ancram MP	Afghanistan

Note:
Other than the visit starred no costs other than lunch, refreshments and travel by car to and from the base fell to the MOD budget.

Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder

Justine Greening: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) servicemen and (b) ex-servicemen have received treatment for post traumatic stress disorder or related conditions in the last year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [49185]

Mr. Touhig [holding answer 6 February 2006]: Figures are not held centrally on the total number of service personnel who have received treatment for post traumatic stress disorder (PTSD) or related conditions and this could therefore be provided only at disproportionate cost.

We do not hold information on the treatment received by ex-service personnel because the NHS has responsibility for the treatment of ex-service personnel suffering from both mental and physical disorders. We can, however, provide data regarding the number of ex-service personnel who have claimed for a war pension. Between 1 October 2004 and 30 September 2005 (the most recent 12 month period for which data is currently available), some 320 ex-service personnel made a successful war pensions claim where one of the accepted conditions related to the individual's service was PTSD or a related condition.

For those ex-service personnel whose condition is due to service and for whom it is appropriate, courses of remedial care are funded at facilities provided by the charity, Combat Stress. For the year ending December 2005, funding was some £2.8 million.

Service Children's Education

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many and what proportion of military bases (a) in England and (b) overseas have (i) primary and (ii) secondary schools located on them; and how many pupils attend these schools. [47159]

Mr. Touhig: Within the United Kingdom, service children attend local education authority schools, but information on how many and what proportion of military bases have schools located on them and how many pupils attend these schools is not held centrally.

Overseas, Service Children's Education (SCE)—an MOD agency—operates a total of 36 primary, two middle and six secondary schools. Currently some 10,200 pupils attend these schools. All of these schools are located within garrison areas, and 15 are sited on a military base.

Strategic Tanker Aircraft

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the original timetable was for the development of strategic tanker aircraft; what the current timetable is; and if he will make a statement. [49428]

Mr. Ingram: The Future Strategic Tanker Aircraft (FSTA) is a prospective PFI project currently in the assessment phase. As such, it does not have a formally approved development programme or date for introduction to service.

Negotiations with industry are ongoing.

US Interrogation Centres

Mr. Clegg: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many individuals detained by UK forces in (a) Iraq and (b) Afghanistan who have been handed over to US forces have subsequently been transferred to US interrogation centres in each year since 2001. [45342]

Mr. Ingram: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Carmarthen, East and Dinefwr (Adam Price) on 7 February 2006, Official Report, column 1083W.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Antisocial Behaviour Orders

Mr. Amess: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what training has been provided to magistrates in (a) England and Wales and (b) Northern Ireland on the use of antisocial behaviour orders in each of the last two years; and what the cost of the training provided was in each year. [48724]

Ms Harman: The Judicial Studies Board (JSB) is responsible for the provision of guidance and training materials for magistrates in England and Wales. The delivery of training is performed on a local basis. There is currently no central data collected on the information requested and to provide the information would incur disproportionate cost.

In April 2001, the JSB issued training materials for magistrates in respect of the antisocial behaviour provisions contained in the Crime and Disorder Act 1998. These materials have been updated twice since that date. The latest update was issued in March 2004 and includes changes in the law introduced by the Anti-Social Behaviour Act 2003. The chairman of the JSB Magisterial Committee issued a letter in 2004 to all court areas indicating that the JSB expectation was that all magistrates will receive a minimum of two hours of face to face training on ASBOs within the first 18 months following the implementation of the Anti-Social Behaviour Act 2003.

The Magistrates' Court Sentencing Guidelines include guidance on how to deal with breach of an ASBO and lists examples of possible aggravating factors.

Audible Fire Alarms

Bob Spink: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs pursuant to the answer of 19 January 2006, Official Report, column 1446W, on audible fire alarms, what plans she has to extend audible fire alarm coverage to all buildings. [47046]

Bridget Prentice: It is the policy of my Department that all remises must have an audible fire alarm system. Pursuant to my answer on 19 January 2006, Official Report, column 1446W, the locations that do not currently have audible fire alarms have systems in place to manage the fire risk until audible alarms are installed. Works are currently under way in one location to repair an existing system and in another to install a new audible system. The remaining locations will assessed by way of a fire safety risk assessment and audible fire alarms provided when funding is secured.

Baroness Usha Prashar

Keith Vaz: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs when she next plans to meet Baroness Usha Prashar. [48909]

Ms Harman: I have no plans to meet Baroness Prashar.

Burial and Cemeteries Advisory Group

Dr. Tony Wright: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs when she expects the Burial and Cemeteries Advisory Group to report. [47240]

Ms Harman: In accordance with its then terms of reference the Advisory Group reported to Ministers in December 2002. The group continues to meet for the purpose of providing advice and recommendations for Government. The issues include memorial safety, on which I hope to see proposals later this year.

Census Records

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many requests her Department has received regarding access to census records before 1970 in the last 12 months. [50996]

Ms Harman: The National Archives holds the 1911 and earlier censuses, while censuses from 1921 onwards are in the custody of the Office for National Statistics. Since the implementation of the Freedom of Information Act on 1 January 2005, the National Archives has received 171 specific requests for access to information contained in the 1911 census returns.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what recent representations her Department has received regarding the denial of public access to census records before 1970. [50997]

Ms Harman: Since the implementation of the Freedom of Information Act on 1 January 2005, the National Archives has received 14 appeals from inquirers who have been denied access to information contained in the 1911 census returns.

Citizens Juries

Mr. Wills: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs on how many occasions her Department consulted citizens juries on departmental policies in the last five years; in how many of those consultations the recommendations of the citizens jury differed from existing departmental policy; and on how many occasions departmental policy was changed to reflect the recommendations of the Citizens' Jury. [46240]

Ms Harman: The Department for Constitutional Affairs has not convened any citizens' juries in the last five years. However it has made extensive use of other forms of consultation during that period, ranging from formal consultation papers to an online discussion forum.

Cohabitation

John Bercow: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what plans she has to reform the law relating to unmarried couples to provide legal protection for cohabitants in the case of relationship breakdown. [45743]

Ms Harman: The Government have no plans to reform the law in this area. The Law Commission is working on a project on cohabitation as part of its ninth programme of law reform. The Law Commission is considering how the law affects cohabiting couples on the termination of their relationship by separation, or death, and the merits of providing greater legal protection. The Government will consider any recommendations made by the Law Commission when it reports in summer 2007.

Commonhold

Mr. Heald: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many (a) households and (b) developments have adopted commonhold tenures since the introduction of commonhold. [46406]

Ms Harman: As at 26 January 2006, there were seven commonholds registered at Land Registry: six in England and one in Wales. These comprise 97 units. 18 residential units have been transferred to unit-holders.

No statistics are available for unregistered commonhold developments, but proposals for a £500 million mixed-use commonhold, including up to 2,000 homes, were announced on behalf of the developer on 16 December 2005.

Community Legal Service

Keith Vaz: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many inquiries were referred through to the community legal service by (a) citizens advice bureaux, (b) law centres, (c) high street solicitors and (d) other independent advice centres in the last year for which figures are available. [50149]

Bridget Prentice: A variety of organisations, such as citizens advice bureaux, law centres and high street solicitors, provide advice under the Community Legal Service (CLS). Information is not held centrally on inquiries referred to, or between, CLS providers.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many inquiries were submitted through the Community Legal Service network in (a) Leicestershire and (b) England and Wales in each year between 2000 and 2005. [50150]

Bridget Prentice: Information is not held centrally on inquiries referred to, or between, Community Legal Service providers. The Legal Services Commission (LSC) record numbers of new matter starts. New matters started in Leicestershire and England and Wales between 2000 and 2005 are set out in the following table.

	England and Wales	Leicestershire
2000–01	803,828	14,975
2001–02	764,697	11,423
2002–03	811,848	11,986
2003–04	709,769	9,378
2004–05	654,267	7,719

The above represents controlled work; that is the number of cases, or matter starts, the supplier is authorised to start in a particular year under their General Civil Contract as issued by the LSC.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what was the running cost of the Community Legal Service in each year between 2000 and 2005. [50151]

Bridget Prentice: Legal Services Commission payments made in relation to the running of the Community Legal Service for the years 2000–05 are provided in the following table:

	Payments (£ million)
2000–01	791.9
2001–02	734.5
2002–03	812.8
2004–05	845.9

Keith Vaz: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what research she has commissioned on the perceptions of (a) Citizens Advice Bureaux, (b) Law Centres, (c) high street solicitors and (d) other independent legal advice centres of the effectiveness of the Community Legal Service. [50152]

Bridget Prentice: The Department commissioned an independent review of the Community Legal Service (CLS) in 2004. This was conducted by Matrix Research and Consultancy. The review looked at how the CLS had impacted on the accessibility of legal advice services and the quality of provision. Key stakeholders and suppliers were consulted on their views and perceptions of the CLS.

In 2005 the Legal Services Commission published a consultation paper, "Making Legal Rights a Reality", outlining its proposals for the future development of the CLS. Key stakeholders and suppliers were consulted on the proposals outlined in the document.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what research she has commissioned on satisfaction of members of the public with the Community Legal Service. [50153]

Bridget Prentice: The Legal Services Research Centre (LSRC) has conducted two surveys relating to the Community Legal Service and Civil and Social Justice since 2000 (covering England and Wales). The findings of the first of these surveys are available in the LSRC's "Causes of Action: Civil Law and Social Justice" publication.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many inquiries were referred to the Community Legal Service in the last period for which figures are available, broken down by type. [50154]

Bridget Prentice: A variety of organisations, such as Citizens Advice Bureaux, Law Centres and High Street Solicitors, provide advice under the Community Legal Service (CLS). Information is not held centrally on inquiries referred through the Community Legal Service. The information in the table concerns new matters started, and certificates issued, in 2004–05 by suppliers contracted by the Legal Services Commission (LSC) to deliver publicly funded advice through the CLS. This information is broken down by category.

Compensation Bill

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what assessment she has made of the likely impact of section 1 of the Compensation Bill on the funding of employers' liability cases. [47945]

Bridget Prentice: Clause 1 of the Compensation Bill contains a provision relating to the law of negligence, which reflects the existing law and guidance given by the higher courts. It is not anticipated that this provision will have any impact on the funding of employers' liability cases.

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what assessment she has made of the likely impact of the Compensation Bill on the work of small claims courts. [47954]

Bridget Prentice: It is not anticipated that the Bill will have any impact on the work of the small claims courts.

Coroners

Mr. Heald: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what assessment she has made of the adequacy of the powers of the coroner to conduct inquiries into major public incidents; and if she will make a statement. [44775]

Ms Harman: I am satisfied that coroners within England and Wales have sufficient powers to hold inquests into fatalities arising from major public incidents. I will be publishing a draft Bill to reform the coroner service, and to improve the law relating to coroners' functions, later this session.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs pursuant to the answer of 1 February 2006, Official Report, column 490W, to the hon. Member for North-East Hertfordshire (Mr. Heald), on coroners, what is the timetable for the appointment of a judge to conduct inquests into the fatalities arising from the Potters Bar rail crash; and how soon she expects such inquests to be held. [50160]

Ms Harman: I understand that the coroner will proceed to set a date for the inquests and appoint a judge as his deputy once a current application for judicial review of a decision relating to the incident has been resolved.

Correspondence

Mr. Amess: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many (a) letters from hon. Members, (b) letters from members of the public and (c) parliamentary questions from (i) hon. Members and (ii) Lords were dealt with by her Department in each year since 1995; in respect of what percentage her Department took (A) more than one month and (B) more than three months to provide a substantive answer; and if she will make a statement. [37411]

Bridget Prentice: The figures, in so far as I am able to provide them, are contained in the following table. I am unable to provide percentage figures for those letters and parliamentary questions that have taken more than one month and more than three months to answer as this information is not collected and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

My Department endeavours to provide prompt, comprehensive and helpful replies to all correspondence, whether from hon. Members or members of the public, and within the targets it sets for itself; and, where possible, to parliamentary questions within parliamentary deadlines.

The Cabinet Office, on an annual basis, publishes a report to Parliament on the performance of Departments in replying to Members/Peers correspondence. The publication of the report for 2004 was announced on 6 April 2005, Official Report, columns 137–40WS. This and reports for earlier years are available in the Libraries of both Houses.

In 2004 my Department began publishing details of its performance on correspondence from members of the public. A copy of the report is available in the Libraries of both Houses.

Courts Act 2003

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many people convicted of offences have (a) failed to furnish a statement of their financial circumstances in response to an official request and (b) been prosecuted for failing to do so under section 95 of the Courts Act 2003 in the last two years. [47531]

Ms Harman: The information is as follows.

(a) Information on the non-provision of means information by offenders is not collected centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

(b) To date, no offenders have been prosecuted for failure to provide means information under section 95 of the Courts Act 2003.

Data Sharing

Mr. Heald: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs whether the technical specifications for the co-ordinated Online Record of Electors will allow two-way data-sharing with the proposed identity cards database. [43540]

Ms Harman: The technical specifications for CORE will be drafted in the light of responses to the current consultation paper on providing national access to local electoral registration data. There is currently no proposal for these specifications to provide for two-way data-sharing with the proposed identity cards register.

Departmental Catering Budget

Andrew George: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how much and what proportion of her Department's catering budget was spent on Fair Trade produce in the last period for which figures are available. [49909]

Bridget Prentice: Catering services to meet my Department's requirements are contracted out and provided by commercial suppliers. Consequently, my Department does not procure Fair Trade produce directly.

However, a proportion of spend on Fair Trade produce against total food purchases by commercial suppliers providing catering services to my Department is set out in the following table. These figures relate to financial year 2004–05.

Total food purchases	Proportion spent on fair trade produce
2,796,582	171,641

Andrew George: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what her Department's policy is on the procurement of Fair Trade produce for consumption on its premises. [49919]

Bridget Prentice: My Department does not currently have a specific policy in relation to Fair Trade produce.

Catering services to meet my Department's requirements are contracted out and provided by commercial suppliers. Consequently, my Department does not procure Fair Trade produce directly.

However, within the overarching objective of achieving best value, my Department encourages its suppliers to make use of Fair Trade produce.

Departmental Expenditure

Mrs. Villiers: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how much was spent by her Department on refreshments in each year since 1997. [41250]

Bridget Prentice: It is not possible to provide details of how much the Department spent on refreshments in each year since 1997 without incurring disproportionate costs.

However, for overall expenditure on entertainment for the Department from 1998–99 to 30 November 2004, I would like to refer the hon. Member to a previous PQ tabled by the hon. Member for Tatton (Mr. Osborne) answered on 10 January 2005, Official Report, column 118W.

All expenditure on official entertainment is made in accordance with published departmental guidance on financial procedures and propriety that is based on principles set out in Government Accounting.

Departmental IT Systems

Mrs. Villiers: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how much her Department has spent on IT systems in each year since 1997; what the purpose of each system is; what the outturn against planned expenditure of each system was; and what the (a) planned and (b) actual date of completion was of each system. [41320]

Ms Harman: The expenditure on IT systems since 1997 is contained within three main areas; Crown and county courts, magistrates courts and headquarters. These three areas are covered by separate contracts: LOCCS, ARAMIS and the LIBRA contracts. Details of the individual contracts are as follows:

LOCCS (Local County Court System) provides operational IT systems to Her Majesty's Courts Service.

Expenditure for each year was as follows:

	£ million
1998–99	5.92
1999–2000	14.35
2000–01	24.9
2001–02	33.4
2002–03	17.5
2003–04	41.46
2004–05	25.13

ARAMIS (Resource Accounting and Management Information System) provides accounting, financial, HR/payroll and management information services to the Department.

Expenditure for each year was as follows:

	£ million
1997–98	3.07
1998–99	13.54
1999–2000	14.47
2000–01	18.5
2001–02	18.39
2002–03	24.74
2003–04	28.54
2004–05	31

The LIBRA contracts

The first part of the Libra Project provided new IT infrastructure and office automation for the magistrates courts. The second part of the project will deliver a national case management system.

Expenditure on the Libra contracts for each year was as follows:

2000–01	11.2
2001–02	22
2002–03	68
2003–04	79.6
2004–05	65.25

All three are overarching contracts through which large numbers of IT projects have been delivered since 1997. Information about individual projects could now be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Website

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the cost of maintaining her main departmental website was for the last year for which figures are available; and how many visitors there were to the site in each of the last 12 months. [46291]

Bridget Prentice: The cost of maintaining my Department's main website is part of a larger contract with Cable and Wireless to provide hosting services for all of my department's associated websites and as such figures cannot be provided for a single website. The full contract totals £555,096 per annum.

For the period January to December 2005, the number of unique visitors to the Department for Constitutional Affair's website were as follows:

	Number
January	242,261
February	213,170
March	204,306
April	240,528
May	206,200
June	212,799

Deputy Lieutenants (Lancashire)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs pursuant to the answer of 30 January 2006, Official Report, columns 150–51W, on deputy lieutenants (Lancashire), in which geographical area each of the existing deputy lieutenants for Lancashire not recently appointed resides. [50135]

Ms Harman: There are 14 administrative areas in the ceremonial county of Lancashire, including 20 districts of Lancashire county council, and the two unitary authorities of Blackpool and Blackburn with Darwen. According to this measure of geography, the areas in which each of those existing deputy lord lieutenants for Lancashire reside (excluding those six most recently appointed) are as follows:

Domestic Violence

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what training courses were provided for (a) magistrates and (b) district judges on domestic violence in each region since 2003; what percentage of each attended courses in each region in this period; and if she will make a statement. [50581]

Ms Harman: Judicial training is the responsibility of the Judicial Studies Board (JSB), an independent body chaired by Lord Justice Keene. The JSB organises its training for the professional judiciary, including district judges (magistrates courts), nationally rather than regionally. It provides advice and support to those providing training in the magistrates courts but the training is organised and delivered locally. Data on the provision of magistrates training courses is not currently held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Since the amalgamation of the Court Service and the magistrates courts into HM Courts Service on 1 April 2005, the JSB is putting in place processes to monitor and evaluate the training delivered to magistrates.

Domestic violence training is not compulsory for magistrates. The JSB offered training for trainers in each region between October 2003 and March 2004 to enable them to provide domestic violence training for magistrates in their local areas. Representatives from all HM Courts Service regions attended these courses which were supported by the publication of a JSB domestic violence training pack for use in the training of magistrates.

All newly appointed fee-paid judges, and all judges who are authorised to take on new jurisdictions, are required to attend a relevant induction course and normally receive continuation training in each jurisdiction they exercise every three years. district judges (magistrates courts) attend dedicated annual courses. Additionally, they are invited to attend specialist family courses on a three-year cycle. The annual DJ(MC) courses run between 2003 and 2005 did not deal specifically with domestic violence, but the courses planned for 2006 will include a domestic violence session and will be run for both full and part time district judges who sit in magistrates courts. Those expected to attend will constitute 99.3 per cent. of the district judge (magistrates courts) bench. District judges who sit in the county courts attend a dedicated annual seminar which included a session on domestic violence in 2003. They also attend civil and (where appropriate) family law continuation courses every three years. These courses include sessions on domestic violence. In addition to training courses, the JSB has produced training materials for magistrates and judges, which are available in hard copy and electronic form.

Electoral Administration

Mr. Heald: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs pursuant to the answer of 9 January 2006, Official Report, column 236W, on electoral administration, whether data and information from marked registers will be placed in the co-ordinated online record of electors once it is operational. [43542]

Ms Harman: The particular types of information that the proposed co-ordinated online record of electors should hold once operational is the subject of a current consultation paper, issued by my Department last month.

In that paper, we raise the possibility that a CORE dataset might in future hold copies of marked registers, and request views on whether or not we should seek to implement that functionality. Decisions on whether or not to proceed with this aspect of CORE will be taken in light of the responses to the consultation, which is due to close on 7 March.

European Court of Human Rights

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what representations she has made to her counterparts in other Council of Europe member countries on the proficiency in (a) English and (b) French of judges of the European Court of Human Rights; and if she will make a statement. [50131]

Ms Harman: In a recent independent review of the working methods of the European Court of Human Rights, the former Lord Chief Justice, Lord Woolf, made 26 recommendations, of which provision of language training to new judges was one. I understand that the President of the Court has welcomed Lord Woolf's report and referred its proposals to the Court's Working Methods Committee.

Freedom of Information Act

Mr. Drew: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what steps she is taking to speed up responses to Freedom of Information Act inquiries made to Government Departments. [45904]

Ms Harman: In the third quarter of 2005 Departments of State responded to Freedom of Information requests within their statutory obligations in an average of 86 per cent. of cases. This figure reflects an increase of 11 per cent. on performance in the second quarter of last year, which in itself had improved significantly on performance in the first quarter.

However, there is still work to be done and DCA continues to work with departments to improve performance. In particular each Department of State has a dedicated liaison point within DCA to address specific performance issues. The Information Rights Practitioners Conference also provides a regular forum in which officials across Whitehall can share best practice and raise any specific issues with experts both from my Department and elsewhere in Government.

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what assessment she has made of the extent to which local authorities are complying with the Freedom of Information Act 2000; and if she will make a statement. [47216]

Ms Harman: The Department for Constitutional Affairs does not directly monitor Freedom of Information Act compliance in local government in order to avoid imposing an administrative burden. However, independent surveys and reports in the regional press indicate that FOI is working well in local government, and a great deal of new information is being released to local communities.

Compliance with the Act is regulated by the independent Information Commissioner, who has statutory powers of investigation.

HM Court Service

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will make a statement on the proposal put forward by HM Court Service to merge the three local justice areas of Chorley, Ormskirk and South Ribble. [48103]

Ms Harman: The proposed alteration of the Chorley, Ormskirk and South Ribble Local Justice Areas is presently subject to the formal consultation procedures contained in section 8 of the Courts Act, 2003. The consultation period expires on 3 February 2006 and the Area Director for HMCS, Lancashire will consider the responses, prepare a summary of same and determine whether to submit a formal proposal to the Lord Chancellor. The outcome of this process will be published in due course.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what costings have been carried out by HM Court Service in relation to the proposals to merge the three local justice areas of Chorley, Ormskirk and South Ribble. [48104]

Ms Harman: No detailed costings have been carried out regarding the proposal, which is predicated on the need to improve the service afforded to court users and the provision of an equal opportunity for all magistrates in the South West Lancashire area to carry out a fair share of the work of the courts in that area. The proposal does not involve any capital expenditure and the likely impact on revenue expenditure is expected to be cost neutral.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will make a statement on how the principle of local magistrates sitting on local courts will be sustained under the proposals to merge the proposed merger of the three local justice areas of Chorley, Ormskirk and South Ribble. [48105]

Ms Harman: The consultation paper seeks views on the proposal to combine the local justice areas referred to above and it is expected that, if the proposal goes ahead, local magistrates will be based at a local courthouse in which matters affecting the local community are likely to be heard and will sit there for the majority of their time. It seeks to assure consultees that no courthouse closures are planned. Existing magistrates will be invited and any new magistrates appointed to the combined area will be expected to sit elsewhere in the South West Lancashire area from their base court, subject to the provisions of the Disability Discrimination Act, 1995, to enable the development of a more responsive and flexible service to the communities that the courts serve.

Information Commissioner

Mr. Drew: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what meetings she has held with the Information Commissioner in the last 12 months; what issues were discussed at these meetings; and if she will make a statement. [45905]

Ms Harman: The Information Commissioner is an independent body created by statute. He has responsibilities for handling complaints made to him under the Freedom of Information Act 2000 and the Data Protection Act 1998. I have had no meetings with the Commissioner. However my noble and learned Friend the Lord Chancellor meets regularly with the Information Commissioner to discuss issues of mutual interest, covering both Freedom of Information and Data Protection. At some of these meeting he is accompanied by the Parliamentary Under-Secretary, Baroness Ashton. Baroness Ashton has also met the Information Commissioner separately to discuss issues of both Freedom of Information and Data Protection.

These issue have included such matters as the implementation and operation of Freedom of Information in its first full year, the promotion of public understanding of Freedom of Information and Data Protection, the promotion of best practice among authorities subject to the Acts, and the Commissioner's report on his work in 2004–05 and his plans for his office in 2005–06 and 2006–07.

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many complaints the Information Commissioner has received about the time taken by his office to handle cases. [47533]

Ms Harman: The Information Commissioner is an independent body created by statute with responsibility for handling complaints made under the Freedom of Information Act 2000 and the Data Protection Act 1998.

The Commissioner's Office has not routinely maintained statistics relating to complaints about the length of time it has taken to handle cases. Any complaints received are treated in accordance with the Information Commissioner's policy in complaints. This policy has recently been updated and from 1 February 2006, the office has maintained a database of information about complaints received which include the reason for the complaint.

Since the introduction of the Freedom of Information Act, the Commissioner has also received 17 FOI requests relating to the time taken to close cases.

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many appeals have been received by the Information Commissioner's officer against refusals to release information under the Freedom of Information Act 2000; and how many of these appeals have (a) been upheld, (b) been rejected and (c) yet to be determined. [47534]

Ms Harman: The Information Commissioner's Office receives appeals under the Freedom of Information Act and the related Environmental Information Regulations on a range of matters and not only refusals to release information including complaints about failure to comply with time limits.

Not all complaints result in a formal decision by the Commissioner. Many are resolved informally, withdrawn or remitted to the public authority. The total number of Freedom of Information Act complaints outstanding on 31 December 2005 was 1,325.

Of the 1,060 cases closed during 2005, 135 have resulted in formal Decision notices being issued by the Commissioner. In 70 cases the complaint was upheld, in 44 cases the complaint was not upheld and in 21 cases the complaint was partially upheld.

Paul Flynn: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many complaints the Information Commissioner is dealing with; and what the average amount of time taken to deal with such a complaint was in the last period for which figures are available. [47803]

Ms Harman: The Information Commissioner's Office is an independent body created by statute with responsibility for handling complaints made to him under the Freedom of Information Act 2000 and the Data Protection Act 1998.

The total number of Freedom of Information complaints outstanding on 31 December 2005 was 1,325, with 1,060 cases closed. The number of Data Protection Act complaints outstanding on the same date was 2,477.

The average time taken from receipt to closure for all cases closed during 2005 was 95 days. 48.1 per cent. of cases were closed within 60 working days of receipt. The ICO target is to close 50 per cent. of cases within 60 working days.

Inquests

Ms Keeble: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what steps the Government are taking to reduce delays in holding inquests; and if she will make a statement. [47771]

Ms Harman: I am committed to reducing delays in holding inquests. On 6 February, I announced our plans for reform of the coroner system—and I also placed further details in the House Library. Major priorities for the reform programme will be addressing the needs and expectations of bereaved people, including those cases where inquests are required, and improving the speed and effectiveness of investigations. I will be bringing forward a draft Bill for scrutiny in the late spring.

Ms Keeble: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many inquests in each coroner's court area have been adjourned for longer than a year; and if she will make a statement. [47824]

Ms Harman: A list of coroner districts with the number of inquests concluded which took over 12 months to resolve in 2004, the latest year for which figures which are available has been placed in the Libraries of both Houses. Information about inquests which are still in progress is not collected centrally.

Judges' Conduct

Mr. Amess: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many complaints have been made about the conduct of judges in each year since 1997; how many of those complaints have been upheld in each year; and what action was taken to redress each successful complaint. [48872]

Ms Harman: The Judicial Correspondence Unit was set up in 1998 and records commence from 1999. The following figures show the number of complaints about judges received for each year from 1999 to 2005; the number which were investigated in that year; and the number of disciplinary actions taken by the Lord Chancellor in that year. (It should be noted that there will have been a number of active cases carried over from year to year and so the second two columns do not simply represent a percentage of the first.)

The Lord Chancellor has a range of disciplinary actions open to him, from issuing guidance, a warning as to future conduct or a reprimand, to, in the most serious cases, removal from office for judges below the level of the High Court. (Judges at the level of the High Court and above may only be removed by the Queen following an Address in both Houses.) The following figures do not show cases where the complaint was upheld but no formal disciplinary action was deemed necessary as the JCU does not hold this information.

In all years, a large number of complaints received would have been rejected without further investigation because they related to a judicial decision and not to an issue of personal conduct.

The figures provided do not cover tribunal members or lay magistrates.

	Complaints received	Complaints investigated	Disciplinary action taken
1998–99[1]	1,965	367	8
2000	1,491	402	8
2001	1,285	352	3
2002	1,191	260	3
2003	1,122	263	1
2004	1,004	253	2
2005	1,600	298	3

[1] These figures run from when the JCU opened: August 1998 to December 1999

Mr. Amess: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many complaints have been made about judges sitting at Chelmsford Crown court in each year since 1997; how many of those complaints have been upheld; and what action was taken to redress each successful complaint. [48873]

Ms Harman: The Judicial Correspondence Unit does not collate information on complaints by reference to the court at which the judge was sitting.

Judicial Appointments

Keith Vaz: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many (a) judicial members, (b) tribunal members, (c) lay justice members, (d) professional members and (e) lay members applied for the new Judicial Appointments Commission. [48796]

Ms Harman: The number of (a) judicial members, (b) tribunal members, (c) lay justice members, (d) professional members and (e) lay members who applied for positions as Commissioners of the new Judicial Appointments Commission (as specified in the Constitutional Reform Act 2005) are set out in the table.

Category	Number of applicants
Judicial	41
Tribunal	29
Lay Justice	64
Professional	53
Total	424

Keith Vaz: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs on how many occasions since his appointment, the Secretary of State for Constitutional Affairs has overruled a recommendation for judicial appointment. [48854]

Ms Harman: Officials present a report on a competition for judicial office to my right hon. and noble Friend the Lord Chancellor. He then selects for appointment the candidate or candidates most fitted for appointment, taking account of all the information contained in that report.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many staff from her Department will be transferred to the new Judicial Appointments Commission. [48855]

Ms Harman: No Departmental staff will transfer to the Judicial Appointments Commission at its launch on 3 April 2006. Some Departmental staff will go into the Commission on secondment agreements.

Judicial Complaints Protocol

Mr. Amess: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will make a statement on the working of the Judicial Complaints Protocol. [47962]

Ms Harman: The Judicial Complaints Protocol was launched by Lord Irvine of Lairg in April 2003 when he was Lord Chancellor. It explains the handling process that is followed by officials in the Judicial Correspondence Unit in considering complaints against members of the judiciary. Its contents were adopted by Lord Falconer of Thoroton when he became Lord Chancellor.

Most complaints relate to decisions taken by judges in the course of proceedings and those decisions (including those relating to case management) are not and should not be subject to ministerial review because that would be inconsistent with the principle of judicial independence.

In a minority of complaints, issues are raised about the personal misconduct of judicial office holders and the Judicial Complaints Protocol sets out what officials will do to assist the Lord Chancellor in resolving such complaints. The protocol also sets out the Lord Chancellor's powers to discipline judicial office holders in the event that a complaint is upheld.

Judicial Correspondence Unit

Mr. Amess: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many letters were received by the Judicial Correspondence Unit in each week in (a) 2004 and (b) 2005. [47186]

Ms Harman: The Judicial Correspondence Unit receives letters both directly from members of the public and Members of Parliament on behalf of their constituents. They are recorded on a monthly basis. The following table therefore shows the numbers received each month in 2004 and 2005.

January	77	134
February	59	131
March	102	145

Mr. Amess: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many officials are employed by the Judicial Correspondence Unit; at what (a) grade and (b) salary they are employed; and what the equivalent figures were in each year since 1997. [47187]

Ms Harman: The following information shows how many officials have been employed by the Judicial Correspondence Unit, their grade and average salary since 2001, from which point this information is available.

13 officials (one Grade 7, two SEOs, four HEOs, five EOs, one AO)

2002

14 officials (one Grade 6, two SEOs, six HEOs, four EOs, one AO)

15 officials (one Grade 6, one Grade 7, two SEOs, six HEOs, three EOs, two AOs)

13 officials (one Grade 6, one Grade 7, one SEO, five HEOs, four EOs, one AO)

Average salaries: G6: £52,507, G7: £44,019, SEO: £32,055, HEO: £26,320, EO: £20,567, AO: £16,725

Mr. Amess: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many complaints were received by the Judicial Correspondence Unit about the work of that unit in each month since 2000. [47188]

Ms Harman: The Judicial Correspondence Unit records all correspondence received from members of the public and Members of Parliament. It does not, however, distinguish letters about the work of the unit from those letters that are making complaints against judicial office holders.

The Department for Constitutional Affairs has had a centralised system for handling departmental complaints since 2005 and records show that six complaints have been received since that time, which have specifically focused on the way in which officials in the Judicial Correspondence Unit have responded to letters, complaining about judicial office holders.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what advice is produced by the Judicial Correspondence Unit for members of the public wishing to make a complaint about a member of the judiciary. [47477]

Ms Harman: Leaflets are available in courts for users who wish to complain and information is also provided by way of frequently asked questions on the Department for Constitutional Affairs' website at www.dca.gov.uk/legalsys/complain.htm. More detailed guidance is provided in the Lord Chancellor's Judicial Complaints Protocol which is available to members of the public on request.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what representations she has received about the Judicial Complaints Protocol in each of the last two years. [47478]

Ms Harman: Lord Irvine of Lairg launched the Judicial Complaints Protocol in April 2003 in his capacity as Lord Chancellor. It sets out the Lord Chancellor's arrangements through the Judicial Correspondence Unit for the handling of complaints against members of the judiciary, together with his powers to discipline judicial office holders. Lord Falconer of Thoroton adopted the contents of that protocol on taking up appointment as Lord Chancellor.

Since its publication I am not aware of any representations that have been received about the protocol.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will list the (a) publications, (b) periodicals and (c) newspapers purchased by the Judicial Correspondence Unit in each month since 2002. [47957]

Ms Harman: The Judicial Correspondence Unit has not purchased any of these items. It holds no budget for such items.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how much was spent by the Judicial Correspondence Unit on refreshments in each year since 1997. [47958]

Ms Harman: The Judicial Correspondence Unit is part of the Judicial Policy and Correspondence Division and its budget is managed as part of the resources allocated to that division. It would therefore be disproportionately costly to retrieve information about the cost of refreshments specifically for the Judicial Correspondence Unit from the wider budget. I understand, in any event, that the unit only very rarely requires refreshments, if for example it was holding a team event in a building away from its base in Selborne House.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many parliamentary questions were answered by the Judicial Correspondence Unit in each Session of Parliament since 1997–98. [47959]

Ms Harman: The Judicial Correspondence Unit has answered the following numbers of parliamentary questions:

1997	0
1998	1
1999	3
2000	7
2002	6

Mr. Amess: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many letters sent by (a) hon. Members and (b) Members of the House of Lords were received by the Judicial Correspondence Unit in each month since 1997; and how many and what percentage were replied to within the target time set by her Department. [47961]

Ms Harman: The Judicial Correspondence Unit (JCU) was created in 1998, and the relevant records start with effect from January 1999. The information requested for each year, 1999 to 2005 is as follows.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what recent discussions she has had with stakeholders about the work of the Judicial Correspondence Unit; and if she will make a statement. [47963]

Ms Harman: As part of the Lord Chancellor's constitutional reforms and based on the agreement made with the Lord Chief Justice in the Concordat in January 2004, the handling of judicial complaints will be undertaken by the Office for Judicial Complaints from April 2006. That office will take over the responsibilities of the Judicial Correspondence Unit but will work jointly to the Lord Chancellor and the Lord Chief Justice in doing so, reflecting their joint responsibility for judicial discipline matters after April this year. Discussions have been taking place over the past year with the senior judiciary to work up proposals for the handling of judicial discipline matters in the future.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will list the occasions when members of the Judicial Correspondence Unit have been required (a) to appear before and (b) to give advice to officials in her Department giving evidence to (i) the Scottish Parliament, (ii) the National Assembly for Wales, (iii) Northern Ireland Assembly committees, (iv) House of Commons select committees and (v) House of Lords select committees in each session since 2001–02. [47964]

Ms Harman: I am not aware that there have been any such occasions.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will list the publications produced by the Judicial Correspondence Unit in each month since 2002. [48113]

Ms Harman: The only publication produced in this time is the Judicial Complaints Protocol which was published in April 2003.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what estimate she has made of the number of complaints dismissed by the Judicial Correspondence Unit on the grounds that they were (a) scandalous, (b) frivolous and (c) vexatious in each of the past 10 years. [48114]

Ms Harman: The Judicial Correspondence Unit records all complaints received from members of the public and Members of Parliament but they are not differentiated into the categories listed in this question.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what research has been (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated by the Judicial Correspondence Unit; and if she will make a statement. [48117]

Ms Harman: The Judicial Correspondence Unit has not commissioned any such research.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will place in the Library copies of research that has been (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated by the Judicial Correspondence Unit; and if she will make a statement. [48118]

Ms Harman: The Judicial Correspondence Unit has not commissioned any such research.

Legal Services Commission

Keith Vaz: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what representations she has received regarding the decision of the Legal Services Commission to withdraw its funding from specialist legal support services; and if she will make a statement. [50148]

Bridget Prentice: In addition to the issues raised by hon. Members on 2 February 2006, Official Report, column 570W, we have received representations made by both Solicitors and not for Profit organisations expressing their concern at the decision to withdraw funding for specialist support services.

This decision will mean that £2.3 million will be redirected to fund about 9,000 opportunities for people to get direct legal advice in the next financial year. This will increase access to legal aid services for vulnerable people.

Mr. Walker: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will reverse the decision taken by the Legal Services Commission to withdraw funding in July from specialist providers of support and advice on cases relating to housing, debt, welfare benefits, immigration, employment and money; and if she will make a statement. [50312]

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will ask the Legal Services Commission to review its decision to withdraw funding from specialist support services; and if she will make a statement. [50868]

Bridget Prentice: This is a matter for the Legal Services Commission (LSC), acting under the powers contained in the Access to Justice Act 1999. I am satisfied that the LSC has acted properly in reaching this decision, which will result in more acts of direct assistance being made available to vulnerable clients.

Media Monitoring

Philip Davies: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how much her Department and its predecessors has spent on media monitoring activities in each of the last eight financial years. [35635]

Bridget Prentice: The department spent £106,293 in 2000–01, £66,580 in 2001–02, £81,389 in 2002–03, £112,632 in 2003–04, £173,248 in 2004–05 and £100,609 in 2005–06.

Figures prior to 2000–01 are not available because of a change in departmental accounting systems. All figures include VAT. The figures for 2005–06 are for the period up to 24 January 2006.

Pension Contributions

Pete Wishart: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the cost was of pension contributions incurred by (a) her Department, (b) each (i) non-departmental public body, (ii) executive agency and (iii) other public body for which she is responsible in (A) Scotland, (B) Wales, (C) each of the English regions and (D) Northern Ireland in each of the last three financial years; and what the planned expenditure is for 2005–06. [40005]

Bridget Prentice: For 2005–06 employers' contributions for civil servants are payable to the Principal Civil Service Pension Scheme (PCSPS) at one of four rates in the ranges 16.2 to 24.6 per cent. of pensionable pay, based on salary bands. The Scheme Actuary reviews employer contributions every four years following a scheme valuation; last carried out as at 31 March 2003. The contribution rates reflect the cost of benefits as they accrue (net of employee contributions), not the costs as they are actually incurred, and reflect past experience of the scheme. Staff at the Legal Services Commission are not civil servants, and are not members of the Principal Civil Service Scheme, but the Department does contribute to a funded pension scheme.

The following table shows the employer's contributions paid for the last three years broken down into the core department, agency (where this can be separately identified) and non-departmental public bodies for which the Secretary of State is responsible. The contributions are not recorded by country or region and these costs could be obtained only at a disproportionate cost.

The forecast for 2005–06 includes the costs incurred for approximately 12,000 former Magistrates Courts Service staff who became civil servants on 1 April 2005 on the creation of Her Majesty's Courts Service.

Employer's pension contributions for the Department for Constitutional Affairs

	Actual costs (£)
	2002–03	2003–04	2004–05
Department for Constitutional Affairs (including Court Service)	29,230,000	32,478,000	33,234,000
Public Guardianship Office (Agency)	955,000	902,000	956,000
Information Commissioner's Office (NDPB)	403,000	481,000	556,000
Legal Services Commission (NDPB)	5,939,193	10,739,087	11,676,207

Estimate for employer contributions for 2005–06

Department for Constitutional Affairs	13,851,920
Her Majesty's Courts Service (Agency)	53,742,673
Public Guardianship Office (Agency)	1,338,692
Information Commissioner's Office (NDPB)	1,027,000
Legal Service Commission (NDPB)	8,811,587
Total estimated cost to Department	78,771,872

Personal Injury Litigation

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what information her Department collects on the costs of personal injury litigation in other developed countries. [48630]

Bridget Prentice: The Department does not routinely collect information on personal injury litigation in other countries. However, information is sought as appropriate to assist in policy development.

For example, information was sought from other European countries prior to consultation in 2002 on proposals to allow the courts to order that personal injury damages be paid in the form of periodical payments (which subsequently formed part of the Courts Act 2003). In addition, research has recently been commissioned on the funding of personal injury litigation which includes a survey of approaches in several European jurisdictions. This will be published later this month.

Southend County Court

Mr. Amess: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what the average waiting time was from allocation to hearing for small claims at Southend county court in the last period for which figures are available. [50495]

Ms Harman: The figures for the Southend county court show that between April 2003 to March 2004 there were 270 case dealt with, with an average waiting time of 15.2 weeks. Between April 2004 and March 2005 the average waiting time was 12.0 weeks (217 cases), and between April and December 2005 the average waiting time was 10.5 weeks (165 cases).

Specialist Support Services

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs for what reasons the Legal Services Commission has decided to withdraw funding from specialist support services; and what assessment has been made of the likely impact of this decision. [50784]

Bridget Prentice: Specialist support services form part of the Legal Services Commission's (LSC) special projects budget. Given the pressure on the limited legal aid budget and the number of clients needing legal advice, the LSC has concluded that the money would now be better spent on direct, frontline advice to vulnerable legal aid clients.

The decision will mean that £2.3 million will be redirected to fund about 9,000 opportunities for people to get direct legal advice in the next financial year. This will increase access to legal aid services for vulnerable people.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what recent research on the effectiveness of specialist support services she has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated. [50867]

Bridget Prentice: Research undertaken by the Legal Services Commission (LSC) which underpins their consultation paper "Making legal rights a reality" points to an increasing demand for front line advice for the most needy. The LSC has concluded that specialist support services do not represent the most cost-effective approach to delivering this need for more and better services for clients.

Squatting

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what changes to legislation relating to squatters there have been since 1997. [47889]

Ms Harman: The following changes have been made:

The Civil Procedure Rules 1998 were amended to permit Interim Possession Orders to be made against trespassers. The amendments came into force in December 2002.

The Land Registration Act 2002 reformed the law and procedures relating to acquisition of title to registered land by squatters. The reforms came into force in October 2003.

The Anti-Social Behaviour Act 2003 introduced a new police power to remove trespassers from unauthorised encampments where an alternative site is available. The provisions came into force in February 2004.

War Memorials

Mr. Grogan: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will introduce proposals to amend the provisions of the War Memorials (Local Authorities Powers) Act 1923 to introduce an obligation upon local authorities to maintain war memorials situated within their boundaries. [46796]

Ms Harman: Local authorities are already able to maintain, protect and restore local war memorials where they believe this to be an appropriate use of local funds. We have no plans to impose any new duties in relation to these functions.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Arson (Peterborough)

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what funding assistance he plans to offer to the Arson Task Force in Cambridgeshire and Peterborough to reduce the incidence of arson in the Greater Peterborough area. [50343]

Jim Fitzpatrick: On 23 January 2006, the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister announced £11.4 million grant funding for fire and rescue authorities in England for 2006-08 to support fire prevention work including community fire safety, arson reduction and work with children and young people. Cambridgeshire and Peterborough fire authority were awarded a total of £89,043 for this two-year period.

Commonhold Tenure

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether shared ownership leases can participate in a commonhold tenure development; and if he will make a statement. [46967]

Ms Harman: I have been asked to reply.

There is no express prohibition in the commonhold legislation against shared ownership leases. However, to ensure that the problems of long leasehold ownership are not recreated in commonhold, the Commonhold Regulations 2004 prohibit the grant of a lease for longer than seven years in residential commonhold units. As a result of this restriction shared ownership lease arrangements, which typically require the grant of a 99 or 125-year lease, cannot be used in these units.

Other forms of shared ownership, such as trust and mortgage based arrangements, are permitted and are being developed by the property industry and the social housing sector. In the light of this work we are considering whether an exception to the prohibition on long leases is necessary for shared ownership leases of residential commonhold units.

Condover Parish Council

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what recent representations he has received from Condover parish council; and what response he plans to make. [50240]

Mr. Woolas: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister received correspondence from Condover parish council on 17 January. This was acknowledged but, as it concerned a highways matter, it was transferred to the Department for Transport on the same day.

Council House Exchanges

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what guidance his Department has issued to local authorities on council housing exchanges between tenants. [46983]

Yvette Cooper: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister does not provide any guidance to local authorities on council housing exchanges between tenants.

Departmental Assets

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the items valued at over £100 that have been reported as stolen from buildings occupied by his Department in the past 12 months. [43431]

Jim Fitzpatrick: There were 12 items individually valued at £100 or over reported as stolen from the buildings occupied by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister and its agencies in the last 12 months.

Items reported stolen from the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's headquarters were:

One white Peugeot racing bicycle valued at approximately £120

One official black leather briefcase valued at approximately £100

Five official laptops valued at approximately £3,000

Items reported stolen from ODPM agencies were:

Two mac250 + mobile lights valued at approximately £491 each

One mac600 mobile light valued at approximately £805

One Mountain bike valued at approximately £300

One official desktop PC and monitor valued at approximately £350

None of the laptops or the PC mentioned above contained any sensitive material.

This answer does not include buildings occupied by Government offices, who carry out functions on behalf of 10 Government Departments.

Departmental Catering Budget

Andrew George: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much and what proportion of his Department's catering budget was spent on Fair Trade produce in the last period for which figures are available. [49916]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister does not collect this data and the information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The catering services provided in the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's properties are mostly outsourced at nil subsidy. The restaurants sell Fair Trade products including coffee, tea and items including fruit, chocolate and health bars directly to staff. The hospitality menus offer Fair Trade tea and coffee for official meetings and conferences.

This answer does not include catering in the buildings occupied by Government Offices, who carry out functions on behalf of 10 Government Departments.

Departmental Entertainment

Mr. Heald: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much has been spent on entertainment by his Office in 2004-05; and how much of that sum is accounted for by (a) food, (b) alcohol, (c) staff and (d) accommodation. [50893]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (excluding the Government Offices) spent £213,438 on official entertainment, catering and hospitality in 2004–05. The breakdown of this expenditure in the form requested is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

All expenditure on official entertainment is made in accordance with published departmental guidance on financial procedures and propriety, based on the principles set out in 'Government Accounting'.

Directly-elected Mayors

Mr. Kemp: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many councils have indicated to his Department that they want to introduce directly elected mayors; and what the (a) estimated cost is and (b) average cost has been of transferring from a traditional local authority system to a directly elected mayor. [49326]

Mr. Woolas: Local authorities which are to hold a referendum on whether to have a directly elected mayor are required to send proposals for this to the Secretary of State, my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister. To date 33 local authorities have done so. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister does not hold information about the cost of transferring from a traditional local authority system to a directly elected mayor.

Disabled Facilities Grants

Mr. Hunt: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many accidents resulting in hospitalisation have been reported in relation to applicants for disabled facilities grants while waiting for their grant to be approved in each of the last three years. [49788]

Yvette Cooper: The information requested is not held centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Domestic Violence

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what proportion of people accessing a service through Supporting People were at risk of domestic violence on the latest date for which figures are available. [51347]

Mr. Woolas: Information is collected by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister from service providers on the number of new clients accessing services through the Supporting People programme.

Of the 82,000 clients that took up services through the programme during April-September 2005, 11 per cent. were defined primarily as women at risk of domestic violence, while a further 2 per cent. of clients were defined secondarily as women at risk of domestic violence.

Empty Homes

Anne Main: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the trend in the number of empty homes since 2001. [45825]

Yvette Cooper: The number of vacant dwellings in England, from 2001 to 2004, is tabled as follows. These figures are the latest available data:

	Snapshot date	Number of vacant dwellings
2001	1 April	753,100
2002	1 November	758,100
2003	3 November	745,000
2004	1 November	716,800

Source:

The 2001 figure is based on a combination of the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's Housing Strategy Statistical Appendix (HSSA) return, and the Housing Corporation's Regulatory Statistical Return (RSR). For the years 2002 to 2004 the figures are based on ODPM's Council Tax Base 1 (CTB1) return.

These figures are for all vacant dwellings, including dwellings that have been empty for fewer than six months, some for less than one month.

The number of vacant dwellings in England has fallen from 2001 to 2004, by approximately 36,000. There is not sufficient data to establish a firm trend. As indicated in its response to Kate Barker's Review of Housing Supply, the Government are exploring ways to make significant reductions in the number of empty homes, particularly those that remain empty for long periods. The Government are introducing new powers from April 2006 for local authorities to reduce the number of long-term empty homes in their area.

Euro

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will place in the Library a copy of the Valuation Tribunal Service's plan approved by his Department on preparing for the introduction of the Euro. [47141]

Mr. Woolas: All Central Government Departments and their sponsored bodies have been asked by HM Treasury to prepare high level plans for introducing the Euro. A copy of the Euro Conversion (High Level Plan) produced by the Valuation Tribunal Service has been made available in the Library of the House.

Falmer Stadium Application

Norman Baker: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what advice he received from officials in respect of the four planning applications for a stadium at Falmer, near Lewes, between the receipt of the report from Mr. John Collyer in December 2003 and the issuing of the decision letter on 27 October 2005. [46012]

Yvette Cooper: Information relating to internal meetings, discussion and advice is not disclosed as to do so could harm the frankness and candour of internal discussion.

Fire Services

Mr. Bone: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what recent discussions he has had with the fire service regarding the provision of equipment. [47625]

Jim Fitzpatrick: Fire and rescue authorities are required by the Fire and Rescue Service National Framework to have in place and maintain an integrated risk management plan (IRMP) which reflects local need and sets out plans to tackle effectively both existing and potential risks to communities. It is, therefore, for each fire and rescue authority to determine appropriate fire cover in its area including the provision of equipment.

It is also not the role of Ministers to agree the operational proposals in an authority's plan; that is for elected members of the authority concerned. They are best placed to act on the professional advice of principal officers and to balance the competing local demands on available resources for the benefits of the communities they serve.

John McDonnell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many firefighter vacancies there are in each fire authority area. [49709]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The information requested is not held centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

John McDonnell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many retained duty system firefighter vacancies there are in each fire authority area. [49710]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The information requested is not held centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

John McDonnell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many firefighters have been retired due to ill-health and injury before retirement age in each of the last five financial years. [49708]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The number of firefighters in England that have been retired due to ill-health and injury in each year is presented as follows:

	1999–2000	2000–01[1]	2001–02	2002–03	2003–04
Total number of ill-health and injury retirements	625	647	630	587	531
Whole-time firelighter ill health retirements	557	578	570	545	485
Retained duty system firefighter ill-health retirements	68	69	60	42	46
Percentage of total whole-time firefighter retirements	52.0	50.9	50.7	42.1	46.5
Percentage of total retained duty system firefighter retirements	30.5	28.9	20.5	17.1	21.3

ODPM annual returns

John McDonnell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what contribution employers have made to the Firefighters' Pension Scheme in each of the last five financial years. [49707]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Firefighters' Pension Scheme is an unfunded scheme and pensions are paid by fire and rescue authorities from revenue. There is therefore no employer contribution. The cost of the scheme is currently estimated to be 37.5 per cent. of pensionable pay and has increased from 34.75 per cent. since 1998. Members pay a contribution of 11 per cent. of pensionable pay which has remained unaltered since 1991.

Galileo European Satellite

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans the Ordnance Survey has to use the Galileo European satellite. [51073]

Jim Fitzpatrick: Ordnance Survey makes significant use today of global positioning system (GPS) technology to maintain the national geospatial database in Great Britain and plans to replace its existing national GPS infrastructure with GPS+Galileo enabled receivers over the next two years as part of its routine asset replacement programme. It is expected that Galileo will give Ordnance Survey, and all professional users of satellite navigation, greater signal availability, acquisition speed and accuracy.

Gaming International Ltd

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the contracts which have been awarded to Gaming International Ltd. by English Partnerships; and for what project each contract was awarded. [47668]

Yvette Cooper: English Partnerships has contracts with Gaming International Ltd. relating to the development agreement for land in the Ashland area and Elfield Park in Milton Keynes:

(i) a deed of variation and agreement for health care provision relating to the Ashland area;

(ii) a lease relating to the use of Milton Keynes Bowl for public events;

(iii) an agreement for the construction of a stadium facility at Elfield Park in Milton Keynes.

In addition English Partnerships has granted Gaming International a licence to charge which allows it to make charges relating to land at the East Ashland Greyhound Stadium and the operating of the National Bowl.

The development agreement releases brownfield land for the housing development of 380 new homes.

Home Information Packs

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to his answer of 28 November 2005, Official Report, column 203W, on home information packs, which elements of the pack are liable to VAT. [48157]

Yvette Cooper: The contents of the pack will be specified in Regulations to be made later this year. The answer given to the hon. Member on 28 November 2005, Official Report, column 203W, reflected our intention to include a home condition report and drainage and water search in the pack. Both of these elements are liable to VAT. Local searches provided by a local authority are not liable to VAT.

Homelessness

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what funding the Government has given to faith groups to address homelessness since May 1997. [49691]

Yvette Cooper: This information requested is not collected centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister allocates homelessness grants to local authorities and voluntary sector agencies. A significant proportion of homelessness grants to local authorities is in turn used by those authorities to fund voluntary sector homelessness services that contribute to local strategies to tackle homelessness. A number of voluntary sector agencies allocated homelessness grants since 1997 are likely to have been faith-based but ODPM's records do not categorise them in this way.

Emily Thornberry: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) what (a) revenue grant and (b) capital grant payments were made by the Homelessness Directorate in support of local homelessness strategies in each local authority in London in 2004–05; [47178]

(2) how much was paid in (a) revenue grant and (b) capital grant payments to the voluntary sector in London by the Homelessness Directorate in 2004–05. [47177]

Yvette Cooper: Homelessness grants from the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister supplement other sources of Government funding that help to tackle homelessness, including housing capital investment, supporting people and revenue support grant.

In 2004–05 a total of just over £44 million in homelessness grants was allocated to organisations in London by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister.

The following table provides details of homelessness revenue and capital grant payments made by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister in 2004–05 to each local authority in London. Some of this funding may have been passed on by these authorities to voluntary sector agencies to pay for homelessness services.

Some funding was provided direct to voluntary sector agencies from the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister. The following table also shows the total value of these grants in London. Most of the voluntary sector homelessness services funded direct by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister operate across more than one local authority area.

Housing Corporation

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the (a) total and (b) administration expenditure of the Housing Corporation was in each year since 1996–97; and what the estimates are for (i) 2005–06 and (ii) 2006–07. [46984]

Yvette Cooper: The total expenditure and administration expenditure by the Housing Corporation for each year since 1996–97 is shown as follows:

£ million

	Admin spend	Total spend
1996–97	29.90	1,638.10
1997–98	29.00	1,327.80
1998–99	28.80	1,245.80

2005–06	44.13	1,706.74
2006–07	41.80	1,891.74

Figures for 1996–97 to 2004–05 are based on information from the Housing Corporation's annual accounts.

The figures for 2005–06 and 2006–07 are based on proposed budgets as at 30 January 2006.

The administration figures include expenditure on staff costs and capital. The total includes all administration costs along with all programmes, both capital and revenue operated by the Housing Corporation for each year provided.

Leisure Centres

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) what assessment he has made of the effect of the transfer of leisure facilities from local authorities to newly-formed charitable trusts on their access to capital for refurbishment; [50118]

(2) if he will list the local authorities that have transferred the ownership of leisure centres and swimming pools to newly-formed charitable trusts; and which facilities were transferred. [50119]

Mr. Caborn: I have been asked to reply.

Specific information on the transfer of ownership of leisure centres from local authorities to newly-formed charitable trusts is not centrally collated. However, information from the Leisure Data Base Company suggests that approximately one-fifth of public leisure facilities in England are provided through trusts.

My Department recognises the importance of this issue in ensuring the continued sustainability of publicly provided sports facilities. The Audit Commission is currently undertaking a study into the different types of management arrangements available to local authorities for running these services and how they approach the task of choosing the option best suited to local needs. This is expected to include a consideration of the potential implications of each of these options, including for charitable trusts.

I will ensure a copy of the study is placed in the House Libraries once it is published.

Local Authority Housing

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many council houses in (a) England and (b) Tamworth constituency (i) have been brought up to the decent homes standard and (ii) remain to be brought up to that standard. [48657]

Yvette Cooper: The information is as follows.

(a) The number of local authority owned non-decent homes in England has decreased from £1,869,000 in 1996 to 972,000 in 2003[1].

(b) Tamworth has reported that their number of local authority non-decent homes has decreased from 2,664 in 2001 to 1,371 in 2005[2].

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what proportion of local authority housing stock in (a) England, (b) London and (c) each London borough has been sold under the right to buy scheme in each year since 1980. [48706]

Yvette Cooper: The number of right to buy (RTB) sales in England, London and each London borough are shown on the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's website at: http://www.odpm.gov.uk/pub/373/Table4StatisticsonRighttoBuyandothercouncilhousesalesExcel242Kb_id1156373.xls. http://www.odpm.gov.uk/pub/371/SalesoflocalauthoritystockinEnglandregionalgrossedtotalsExcel43Kb_id1156371.xls.

Information on local authority housing stock is available in Table 116 at: http://www.odpm.gov.uk/pub/22/Table116Excel127Kb_id1156022.xls.

The proportion of local authority stock that has been sold through the right to buy scheme is the number of RTB sales in each financial year divided by the local authority stock at the beginning of that same period. Information is only available for years shown. Regional and national figures have been grossed to compensate for missing data.

Local Elections

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister which local authorities (a) are in the process of changing and (b) have formally requested a change to a whole council election cycle. [47870]

Mr. Woolas: The changes since the information given in answers of 30 November 2005, Official Report, column 581W, and 1 December 2005, Official Report, column 681W, are that Hart district council are now considering whether to move to whole council elections and Broadland's request has been agreed. The local authorities listed have either expressed an interest or made inquiries regarding the process of change. Whether that means a formal request will be made in the future is a matter for the local authority concerned.

Mr. Walker: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans he has to postpone the 2007 local elections; and if he will make a statement. [51367]

Mr. Woolas: We expect and intend the 2007 elections to go ahead.

Local Government Finance

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what access private sector firms have to the council tax banding list for individual domestic properties; and what the costs are for such access. [47868]

Mr. Woolas: The council tax valuation list is compiled and maintained by listing officers and can be accessed free of charge through the Valuation Office Agency website (www.voa.gov.uk) or through the relevant billing authority.

Local Government Reform

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether the creation of new unitary local authorities in England would require (a) primary and (b) secondary legislation; and if he will make a statement. [47872]

Mr. Woolas: No decisions have been taken about creating new unitary local authorities. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister intends to finalise our position around the middle of the year at about the same time as the publication of the proposed White Paper. Intentions would be to seek new local government legislation to effect any proposed structural changes.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to the recent article by the Minister for Local Government and Communities in the Local Government Chronicle, what estimate the Government have made of the transitional costs of introducing unitary local government. [47874]

Mr. Woolas: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member on 30 November 2005, Official Report, column 584W.

Management Consultants

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how often his Department has used management consultants in the last year for which figures are available; and at what cost. [48204]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister does not hold information centrally on the number of times consultants including management consultants have been used centrally, and could provide it only at disproportionate cost. Information on the cost for consultants which includes the cost of management consultants. For 2005–06 to date the cost is £39.661 million.

Millennium Dome (Redevelopment)

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what progress has been made on the redevelopment of (a) the millennium dome and (b) the surrounding land, including the millennium village; and if he will make a statement. [49712]

Jim Fitzpatrick: Inside the dome the construction of the arena and the first phase of the entertainment district are in progress. Outside the dome, the building of millennium square has begun, and work on the housing development is due to follow later in the year.

On the adjoining land, the David Beckham Football Academy has been opened since October 2005, and the current phase of Greenwich millennium village comprising of 198 homes is due for completion in September 2006. Of these, 30 homes were completed in December 2005.

Planning consent for phases 3 & 4 of Greenwich millennium village was recently granted by London borough of Greenwich.

Mobile Telephone Masts

Anne Main: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many refusals of planning permission for mobile telephone phone masts by local authorities have been overturned by the Planning Inspectorate in each year since 1997. [45650]

Yvette Cooper: The Planning Inspectorate does not hold information about mobile phone masts specifically, and it could be obtained only at a disproportionate cost.

Northern Way Strategy

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the timetable is for the implementation of the Northern Way strategy; and which bodies are responsible for the strategy. [49714]

Yvette Cooper: The Northern Way Steering Group produced and launched 'Moving Forward: The Northern Way First Growth Strategy Report' in September 2004. The Northern Way Steering Group is independently chaired and Regional Development Agency led. It contains representatives from business, the housing sector, higher education and northern cities as well as the three northern Regional Assemblies, English Partnerships and Government

It is a long-term strategy to establish the North of England as an area of exceptional opportunity, combining a world-class economy with a high quality of life by 2025. The Northern Way published a business plan in June 2005 setting out how they would take the strategy forward until 2008. Both this and the growth strategy can be found on the Northern Way's website at: http://www.thenorthernway.co.uk/documents.html

Open Market Homebuy Option

Michael Gove: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what discussions he has had with (a) the Council of Mortgage Lenders, (b) the Financial Services Authority and (c) the three lenders expected by the Department to be offering the Open Market Homebuy (OMH) product on progress with OMH. [48902]

Yvette Cooper: My right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister met with the Council of Mortgage Lenders and two of the Lenders expected to joint fund the expanded Open Market HomeBuy product on 26 October, 2005. Since the Chancellor's announcement of 5 December, officials have been involved in regular progress discussions with the Council of Mortgage Lenders, the Financial Services Authority, and lenders.

Michael Gove: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether the Open Market Homebuy option will be available by October. [48908]

Yvette Cooper: The Open Market HomeBuy Product will be available from April. The Government are working with three lenders, Yorkshire Building Society, Nationwide and HBoS, to joint fund an expanded Open Market HomeBuy product from October.

Ordnance Survey

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether (a) aerial and (b) satellite photography are used to help provide information for the Ordnance Survey's (i) MasterMap and (ii) Land-Line. [51106]

Jim Fitzpatrick: Ordnance Survey uses aerial photography for the revision of the National Geospatial Database. Both Land-Line and the OS MasterMap Topographic Layer are generated from the database.

The potential for using satellite photography for a similar purpose in the future is kept under regular review. At the moment it is not considered suitable for maintaining the largest scale of data that is used in Land-Line and OS MasterMap, but there is scope for it to be used as a source of intelligence about change that will be collected by other survey techniques.

Planning

Norman Baker: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what his policy is in respect of (a) accepting hospitality from and (b) meeting an applicant of a live planning application where the application might be referred to him for decision. [45979]

Yvette Cooper: My right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister follows the policy on live planning cases set out in "Guidance on Propriety Issues in the Handling of Planning Applications in ODPM", copies of which have been made available in the Library of the House and a copy of which I am sending to the hon. Member.

Once a decision has been made, my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister has no further role. Even if my right hon. Friend's decision is challenged, it is not live before him unless and until the decision is quashed by the court and returned to him for redetermination.

Planning Blight (Compensation)

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the statutory compensation process is for (a) planning blight and (b) highway developments. [49689]

Yvette Cooper: Provisions exist in Part VI of the Town and Country Planning Act 1990 to assist the owner-occupiers of blighted land who cannot sell their property except at a reduced price because some formal plan or document indicates that it may be required by a body with compulsory purchase powers.

Under these provisions the owner-occupier may require the body responsible for the blight to purchase the property in advance by serving a blight notice. The effect of this notice is to bring forward the compulsory purchase procedure to a time of the blight claimant's choosing. When a blight notice is accepted by the appropriate authority that authority must acquire the interest specified in the blight notice and the purchase is deemed to be a compulsory purchase.

In the case of highway development, the Land Compensation Acts 1961 and 1973 establish that compensation is payable where an interest in land is acquired compulsorily. Following ministerial confirmation of the compulsory purchase order the acquiring authority will take possession of the land and negotiate the level of compensation. The principle underlying the level of compensation is that a claimant should be left no worse off and no better off in monetary terms after the acquisition than before. Compensation may also be available where a reduction in the value of land is caused by the execution or subsequent use of public works.

Population Projections

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to the answer of 19 December 2005, Official

Report, column 2574W, on population projections, what consideration is being given to the inclusion in the calculations for future local government finance settlements for local authorities in Northamptonshire of housebuilding numbers and population projections in the Milton Keynes and South Midlands sub-regional spatial strategy. [50703]

Mr. Woolas: The population projections used by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister in the 2006–07 and 2007–08 Local Government Finance Settlements are the 2003-based sub-national population projections for England produced by the Office for National Statistics, as these are the best data available produced on a consistent basis for all authorities.

These projections represent how the population in an area would change given the continuation of past demographic trends.

Rates

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the average business rates bill levied in (a) England and (b) each local authority billing area in England was in each year since 1997–98; and what the estimated averages are for 2005–06. [49779]

Mr. Woolas: The requested information has been made available in the Library of the House.

Right to Buy

Emily Thornberry: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many (a) initial applications and (b) completed sales were made under the right to buy in each local authority in London in each quarter since 2003–04. [47179]

Yvette Cooper: The number of right to buy applications and sales as reported by each local authority in London are in the following table.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Alternative Energy

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the effect of the different tax rates on energy sources on incentives for companies to carry out research to identify alternative sources. [50929]

Malcolm Wicks: The Department has not made a formal assessment of the effect of different tax rates on the incentives for companies to carry out research into alternative sources of energy. The Department does provide financial support for R&D in alternative energy sources.

There is good evidence to suggest that the establishment of a price for carbon, whether by taxation or emissions trading, will impact on incentives for research and innovation and that this can contribute to differences in projected fuel mix and to reduced overall costs for meeting carbon targets.

The Department has published a review of studies looking at the costs of long-term carbon reductions, including the role of innovation and technology change. This study is available at: http://www.dti.gov.uk/economics/6228-OccasionPaper1.pdf

Evidence to the Stern review on the economics of climate change from the University of Cambridge and Imperial College Centre for Energy Policy and Technology illustrates the importance of technological change for the economics and policy of climate change. This study is available at: http://www.hm-treasury.gov.uk./media/F72/C6/climatechange_imp_1.pdf

Auditing

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will require the Financial Reporting Council to publish reports on the weaknesses of all auditing firms inspected by it. [51509]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Government's Review of the Regulatory Regime of the Accountancy Profession, published in 2003, recommended enhancing the monitoring of the audits of listed and other public interest entities through a new independent inspection unit (the Audit Inspection Unit) reporting to the Professional Oversight Board for Accountancy (POBA), a Board of the Financial Reporting Council.

In June 2005 the POBA published the Audit Inspection Unit's findings from its monitoring of the quality of the auditing function of the Big Four firms.

Autumn Performance Report

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to his Department's 2005 autumn performance report, what steps he proposes to take to meet the target for business investment in research and development of 1.7 per cent. of gross domestic product by 2014. [48413]

Alun Michael: The Government's policies on business investment in research and development can be found in the 10-year Science and Innovation Investment Framework 2004 to 2014 (July 2004), particularly Chapter 4.

We are doing a number of things to encourage business investment in R&D:

The technology programme is supporting collaboration, knowledge transfer and R&D into promising new technologies under the business-led Technology Strategy Board's guidance;

We are encouraging knowledge transfer from universities through such things as the Higher Education Innovation Fund (HEIF). Taking our strengths in basic research and encouraging innovation by helping ideas move towards the applied research that is so important to business R&D;

The Patent Office is building on its role as enforcer of intellectual property rights (DPR) by running a successful programme of activities educating people about innovation and the role IPR plays;

Public procurement of innovative solutions through initiatives such as the Small Business Research Initiative (SBRI) and work with the Office for Government Commerce are making Government a more intelligent customer prepared to buy the outputs of business R&D.

R&D tax credits help reduce the financial impact of R&D costs on a business and are expected to contribute around £600 million each year to innovative businesses; and,

Skills are a major contributor to improving levels of innovation and productivity, we are working to increase skills in science, engineering, technology and mathematics, and emphasise the importance of management and leadership skills.

The first annual report for the 10-year science and innovation investment framework was published in July 2005.

Bank of Credit and Commerce International

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry in respect of how many (a) accountants and (b) auditors prosecutions have been sought by his Department for their role in frauds at the Bank of Credit and Commerce International; and if he will make a statement. [49834]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Department of Trade and Industry was not the Prosecution Authority responsible for the above named matter. The Serious Fraud Office was the relevant Authority and the answer is therefore nil.

Belarus

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the total value of imports was from Belarus to the UK in (a) 1997, (b) 2000 and (c) 2005. [49062]

Ian Pearson: Information on the UK's imports of goods from Belarus is not yet available for the whole of 2005. The latest data available is for the period January to November 2005. This is provided in the following table:

UK imports of goods from Belarus

	£000 (current prices)
1997	15,615
2000	34,158
January to November 2005	244,824

Carbon Dioxide Emissions

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will introduce legislation requiring companies to disclose annually the amount of their carbon dioxide emissions. [49728]

Mr. Morley: I have been asked to reply.

There are no plans to introduce legislation that will specifically require companies to disclose information on their carbon emissions.

However, from April 2005 quoted and large companies must produce a business review in their Directors' report, which must include information on environmental matters to the extent necessary for an understanding of the development, performance or position of the business. In addition, the Government are currently consulting on company narrative reporting requirements in the context of the Company Law Reform Bill.

The Government recently produced 'Environmental Reporting Guidelines—Key Performance Indicators' that can assist companies to identify and report on the most significant environmental impacts to the company.

Colin Challen: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will introduce proposals to require gas and electricity companies to publish in consumers' bills the relevant carbon dioxide emissions of their use of energy. [50604]

Malcolm Wicks: Under fuel mix disclosure provisions inserted into electricity supply licences by regulations under the European Communities Act, suppliers are required to calculate and make available to consumers information on the amount of carbon dioxide that is produced for each kWh of electricity generated.

No equivalent provision exists for gas. However interested consumers could calculate the information themselves based on energy consumption information included in their gas bill and carbon emission factors contained in Defra environmental reporting guidelines.

The Government have no plans to introduce further requirements in this area.

Citizens Juries

Mr. Wills: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on how many occasions his Department consulted citizens' juries on departmental policies in the last five years; in how many of those consultations the recommendations of the citizens' jury differed from existing departmental policy; and on how many occasions departmental policy was changed to reflect the recommendations of the citizens' jury. [46242]

Alan Johnson: DTI is committed to best practice on consultation in line with the Cabinet code of practice.

DTI's own consultation standards exceed that code in requiring at least one additional form of consultation to ensure full participation in policy making from a diversity of individuals and organisations. Non-written approaches to consultation used routinely by DTI include national and regional focus groups, stakeholder workshops, listening events, web forums, targeted leaflet campaigns, road shows and exhibitions.

Citizens' jury is another example of this and was used in the DTI consultation Work and Families: Flexibility and Choice in 2004. The results were considered as part of the overall consultation exercise and are discussed in the Government Response to that consultation:

Coal Health Claims

Mr. Kevan Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the firms of solicitors that have been involved in processing coal health claims; and how much has been paid to each firm in costs. [50802]

Malcolm Wicks: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Vale of Clwyd (Chris Ruane) on 31 January 2006, Official Report, columns 329–30W.

Mr. Kevan Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much Thompson's Solicitors have received in fees for coal health claim cases in (a) total and (b) North Durham. [50803]

Malcolm Wicks: In total, Thompsons solicitors have received £92.5 million for handling coal health claims as of 8 February 2006, of which £2.5 million relates to cases in North Durham.

Mr. Kevan Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much has been paid in coal health claim compensation to clients of Thompson's Solicitors (a) in total, (b) in County Durham and (c) in North Durham. [50804]

Malcolm Wicks: As of 8 February 2005, £518 million has been paid in compensation in coal health claims handled by Thompsons solicitors, of which £118 million was in cases in County Durham[1] and £14.5 million in North Durham.

[1] County Durham is made up of the following constituencies—North Durham, North West Durham, City of Durham, Easington, Sedgefield and Bishop Auckland.

Company Audits

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will limit each auditing firm to auditing no more than 10 per cent. of the FTSE 350 companies. [50022]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Government do not propose to introduce such measures.

Company Director Duties

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will bring forward legislation to give company directors a duty of care to (a) each shareholder and (b) employers in respect of the probity and efficacy of the actions of the board. [50823]

Alun Michael: Part 10 of the Company Law Reform Bill provides a statutory statement of directors' general duties, which is in line with the current law and states the general duties that are owed by a director to the company. Clause 156 provides that a director of a company must act in the way he considers in good faith, is most likely to promote the success of the company for the benefit of its members as a whole. In fulfilling this duty, he must (so far as reasonably practicable) have regard to the factors listed in subsection 156(3), including the interests of the company's employees and the need to act fairly as between members of the company.

Company Fraud

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will provide a list in relation to those cases where all proceedings are complete regarding the (a) prosecutions and (b) successful prosecutions for insider trading since 1997. [49723]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The following is a list of individuals against whom prosecutions have been brought by the DTI for offences contrary to s52 Criminal Justice Act 1993 or s1 Criminal Law Act 1977 (insider dealing) have been instituted since 1997. Other prosecutions may have been brought by other prosecution agencies. Prosecutions have been considered "successful" where a conviction has been recorded. Those that did not result in convictions may be due to the prosecution withdrawing those offences or not guilty verdicts being entered by the jury or at the judge's direction. Since 1997 proceedings have been brought against 15 individuals of which nine were "successful".

Name of Defendant
Laurence Henry Champion	Convicted

Company Law

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will seek to introduce legislation to require companies to publish a list in their annual accounts of the names and locations of all (a) subsidiaries, (b) affiliates, (c) shell companies and (d) trusts, together with the (i) turnover, (ii) profit and (iii) tax paid by each. [50023]

Alun Michael: The Government's intention is that Clause 382 of the Company Law Reform Bill (Information about related undertakings) will replace the provisions of section 231 of the Companies Act 1985. The Government intends to make regulations under clause 382 to replace the current Schedule 5 to the 1985 Act.

Schedule 5 requires the disclosure of the names and locations of subsidiary undertakings. It also covers joint ventures, associated undertakings and other significant holdings. Shell companies are covered by Schedule 5 to the extent that they fall within these categories. If subsidiaries, affiliates and shell companies are Companies Act companies they will have to publish their own Companies Act accounts. There are also detailed accounting rules which, depending on the degree of control of the parent company, will require any of these categories to be brought into its consolidated accounts.

Trusts are not specifically covered in the Companies Acts. However, to the extent that a trust or other undertaking qualifies as a quasi subsidiary under Financial Reporting Standard 5, accounting standards require lengthy disclosures relating to the trust. The Urgent Issues Task Force of the Accounting Standards Board has issued UITF abstract38 on accounting for Employee Share Ownership Plan trusts. This requires the disclosure of information sufficient to enable readers to understand the significance of the ESOP trust in the context of the sponsoring company. Trusts which relate to pension schemes of a company (more specifically, their obligations under the scheme) are subject to lengthy disclosure requirements by accounting standards.

The EU is expected later this year to adopt a directive amending the 4th and 7th company law directives on accounting. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State intends to consult fully on implementation of its requirements, including on the disclosure of off balance sheet arrangements and related party transactions. The latter are also covered by the disclosure requirements of accounting standards.

Consultants/Special Advisers

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many (a) consultants and (b) special advisers were employed by his Department in each year since 1997; what the cost of each was in each year; and if he will make a statement. [27423]

Alan Johnson: Specific data on the number of consultants employed by the Department of Trade and Industry is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

With respect to special advisers, this information is published on an annual basis. For the most recent information I refer the hon. Member to the statement made by my right hon. Friend, the Prime Minister, on 21 July 2005, Official Report, columns 158–62WS.

Correspondence

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects to reply to letters from the hon. Member for Canterbury dated (a) 3 August 2005 and (b) 10 October 2005. [38770]

Alan Johnson [holding answer 20 December 2005]: I apologise for the long delay in responding to the hon. Member's letters; this was due to an administrative error. The issue he was raising is a matter for HM Treasury and has been transferred to them for reply.

Departmental Assets

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the items of departmental property worth over £100 that have been reported as (a) lost and (b) broken in the last 12 months. [47675]

Alan Johnson: Thirty items of small portable equipment which have a value of £100 or above (21 laptops, one monitor and eight data projectors) have been reported as missing or stolen from all DTI buildings in the last twelve months. No separate record is kept of broken items as these are replaced or repaired as part of the Department's normal maintenance regimes.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much was spent on external consultants and advisers by (a) his Department, (b) each (i) non-departmental public body and (ii) executive agency for which his Department is responsible and (c) each independent statutory body, organisation and body financially sponsored by his Department in each year since May 1997. [39092]

Alan Johnson: Central records indicate that the cost to the Department of engaging external consultants and advisers in each of the following financial years has been as follows:

£ million

	Amount
1999–2000	21
2000–01	36
2001–02	64
2002–03	93
2003–04	112
2004–05	86

I have asked the chief executives of the Executive Agencies to respond directly to the hon. Member.

Further information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Letter from Jeff Llewellyn, dated 13 February 2006:

The Secretary of State for Trade and Industry has asked me to reply on behalf of the National Weights and Measures Laboratory (NWML) to your question regarding how much was spent on external consultants and advisers by (a) his Department, (b) each (i) non-departmental public body and (ii) executive agency for which his Department is responsible and (c) each independent statutory body, organisation and body financially sponsored by his Department in each year since May 1997.

The total expenditure by NWML on external Consultants and Advisers in each year during the period 1997–1998 to 2004–2005 was:

	Amount
1997–98	[1]
1998–99	[1]
1999–2000	[1]
2000–01	64,087
2001–02	80,290
2002–03	71,010
2003–04	68,119
2004–05	53,837

Letter from Tim Moss, dated 13 February 2006:

I am responding to your recently tabled Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on behalf of Companies House, which is an Executive Agency of the DTI.

Spend on external consultants and advisers by Companies House is as follows:

	Amount
2004–05	664,000
2003–04	931,000
2002–03	674,000
2001–02	504,000
2000–01	565,000

Details from earlier years are unavailable due to the disproportionate cost of retrieval.

Letter from Jeanne Spinks, dated 13 February 2006:

You asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, how much was spent on external consultants and advisers by (a) his Department, (b) each (i) non-departmental public body and (ii) executive agency for which his Department is responsible and (c) independent statutory bodies, organisations and bodies financially sponsored by his Department in each year since May 1997.

The Employment Tribunals Service (ETS) has spent the following amounts on external consultants and advisors in the following financial years:

	Amount
2001-02	119,255
2002-03	457,757
2003-04	441,838
2004-05	384,907

Information requested relating to earlier years is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate costs.

Letter from Desmond Flynn, dated 13 February 2006:

The Secretary of State for Trade and Industry has asked me to reply to you directly on behalf of The Insolvency Service in respect of your question (2522/2005) requesting information on money spent on external consultants and advisors since May 1997.

The Insolvency Service Executive Agency of the Department of Trade and Industry spent the following amounts on external consultants and advisors:

	Amount
1997-98	Nil
1998-99	[1]5
1999-2000	Nil
2000-01	Nil
2001-02	[2]125
2002-03	Nil
2003-04	[3]34
2005-06	[4]20

[1] Training strategy.
[2] E-business.
[3] £18,000 race equality impact study and £16,000 help line study.
[4] Publishing to the Intranet.

Letter from Ron Marchant, dated 13 February 2006:

I am responding to this parliamentary question, tabled on 19 December 2005, concerning how much was spent on external consultants and advisers in each year since May 1997.

The Patent Office response is:

	Amount
1997-98	39,000
1998-99	8,000
1999-2000	16,000
2000-01	26,000
2001-02	53,000
2002-03	69,000
2003-04	32,000
2004-05	10,400
2005-06[1]	17,500

[1] To date.

Departmental Groups

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many staff are employed by (a) the Human Resources and Change Management Directorate, (b) Legal and Enforcement Unit, (c) Information and Workplace Directorate and (d) the Legal Group in (i) England and (ii) London; and what the (A) salary bill and (B) accommodation costs of each were in 2004-05. [48833]

Alan Johnson: The number of staff in post, taken from DTI's headcount monitoring system, as of 1 February 2006, and the full pay cost (including superannuation and employers NI contributions) for the financial year 2004-05, in the requested directorates are as follows:

	Staff	Full pay cost 2004-05 (£)
HR and Change Management Directorate
England	61	n/a
Of which in London	61
Legal and Enforcement Unit
England	110	4,274,793.38
Of which in London	40
Information and Workplace Directorate
England	206	8,586,985.56
Of which in London	206
Legal Group (excluding Legal and Enforcement Unit)
England	132	8,754,785.66
Of which in London	132

n/a = Not available.

Pay costs are only available for all UK employees which would disproportionably skew the 'full pay cost figure' for HR and Change Management Directorate due to the large number of employees based in Cardiff. Separated costs for HR in England and London could be achieved only at disproportionate cost.

Specific data on the accommodation costs of separate directorates is not kept by the Department and this information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many staff work in the (a) Employment Tribunals Service, (b) Insolvency Service and (c) Companies House in (i) England and (ii) London. [48851]

Alan Johnson: The following table shows a breakdown of the number of staff that work in England and London in their respective agencies as at 31 January 2006.

Number

	Permanent	Casual
Employment Tribunals Service
England	669	9
Of which, London	269	6
Insolvency Service
England	1,883	394
Of which, London	419	116
Companies House
England	7	0
Of which, London	7	0

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many staff work in (a) the Women and Equality Group, (b) the Women's National Commission, (c) the Export Control and Non-proliferation Directorate, (d) UK Trade and Investment, (e) the Consumer and Competition Policy Directorate, (f) Corporate Law and Governance and (g) the energy (i) industries and technology, (ii) markets, (iii) strategy and (iv) resources and development units; and what the total salary costs in each case were in the last year for which figures are available. [48896]

Alan Johnson: The number of staff in post, taken from DTI's headcount monitoring system, as of 1 February 2006, and the full pay cost (including, superannuation, and employers NI contributions) for the financial year 2004–05, in the requested directorates are as follows:

	Staff	Full pay cost 2004–05 (£)
Women and Equality Group	36	2,652,545.40
Womens National Commission	12	332,000
Export Control and Non-proliferation Directorate	133	5,995,830.91
UK Trade and Investment (DTI posts only)	507	23,226,000
Consumer and Competition Policy Directorate	88	5,271,976.51
Corporate Law and Governance	103	5,969,567.45
Energy
(i) industries and technology	90	5,718,587.50
(ii) markets unit	60	2,763,915.24
(iii) strategy unit	99	3,750,685.59
(iv) resources and development unit	141	6,356,625.11

Departmental IT Systems

Mrs. Villiers: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much his Department has spent on IT systems in each year since 1997; what the purpose of each system is; what the outturn against planned expenditure of each system was; and what the (a) planned and (b) actual date of completion was of each system. [41323]

Alan Johnson: Due to a change in the Department's accounting system during 2003–04 and the devolved nature of the Department's ICT up until 2006, consistent information as requested cannot be obtained without disproportionate cost.

However, since 1997 the Department's IT services have been provided through a PFI agreement with Fujitsu Services covering desktop services, web infrastructure services, document management and HR systems. The annual running costs for 2004–05 was £32 million.

Departmental Property

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the items valued at over £100 that have been reported as stolen from buildings occupied by his Department in the past 12 months. [43439]

Alan Johnson: Thirty items of small portable equipment which have a value of £100 or above (21 Laptops, one monitor and eight data projectors) have been reported as missing or stolen from all DTI buildings in the last 12 months.

Departmental Recruitment

Mrs. Villiers: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many job advertisements were placed by his Department (a) in total, (b) in print newspapers and magazines and (c) on a recruitment website in each year since 1997; and at what (i) total and (ii) average cost in each case. [50743]

Alan Johnson: When placing job advertisements, my Department uses the most appropriate advertising media; be it national, regional, local, trade magazine or website, depending on the nature of the posts to be filled. Any combination of these may be used in each exercise. Data on the total number of advertisements placed is not collected centrally.

The costs of recruitment advertising are generally met from individual management units from their own delegated budgets and there are no centrally held records of the breakdown of advertising costs.

Departmental Staff

Mr. MacNeil: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many staff work in his Department's (a) the Employee Relations Directorate, (b) the European World Trade Directorate, (c) Finance and Resource Management and (d) the Energy Resources and Development Unit; and what the total salary costs in each case were in the last year for which figures are available. [49686]

Alan Johnson: The number of staff in post, taken from DTI's headcount monitoring system, as of 1 February 2006, and the full pay cost (including superannuation and employers NI contributions) for the financial year 2004–05, in the requested directorates are as follows:

	Staff	Full pay cost 2004–05 (£)
Employee Relations Directorate	94	4,379,519.96
European World Trade Directorate	79	4,614,225.83
Finance and Resource Management	124	4,741,095.77
Energy Resources and Development Unit	141	6,356,625.11

Departmental Website

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the cost of maintaining his main departmental website was for the last year for which figures are available; and how many visitors there were to the site in each of the last 12 months. [46308]

Alan Johnson: The support costs for the Department's websites is included in the overall service charge paid monthly under the IT service contract in place since 1 April 1999. There is no separation of website costs in this charge. The number of visits to dti.gov.uk in the last 12 months was as follows:

	Number of visits
February 2005	975,173
March	804,671
April	790,981
May	915,573
June	667,124
July	671,397

	Number of visits
August	795,329
September	786,446
October	1,121,153
November	833,252
December	602,885
January 2006 (2–13)	925,430

Early Retirement

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many departmental employees have taken early retirement due to ill-health in each of the past five years for which figures are available. [46774]

Alan Johnson: The number of staff who have taken early retirement due to ill-health in each of the past five years are as follows:

	Number of ill-health retirements
2001	11
2002	11
2003	8
2005	[1]

[1] Fewer than five, so information not provided on grounds of confidentiality.

Electricity Generation Licences

Mr. Crabb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what discussions he has had with Ofgem regarding a review of electricity generation licences; [50771]

(2) what discussions he has had with Ofgem regarding a review of SLC 14 and SLC 15 with regards to electricity generation licences; [50772]

(3) if he will place a moratorium on applications for compulsory purchase powers by electricity generating companies until Ofgem has completed its review of SLC 14 and SLC 15; [50773]

(4) when Ofgem will undertake its reviews of (a) SLC 14 and SLC 15 and (b) the electricity generation licence. [50774]

Malcolm Wicks: I understand that Ofgem are anticipating publishing a consultation document in relation to SLCs 14 and 15 in April. The review will consider whether or not the Gas and Electricity Markets Authority should bring SLCs 14 and 15 into effect in all Electricity Generation Licences in order to allow Electricity Generation Licence holders to seek compulsory purchase powers from my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State.

Ofgem does not have any immediate plans to publish a consultation document in relation to a wider review of the generation licence.

DTI officials are in touch with Ofgem and expect to be fully involved in the review process. There are no plans for a moratorium on applications for compulsory purchase powers in the interim.

Employee Pension Schemes

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will introduce legislation under which large companies, as defined in the Companies Act 1985, would be required to contribute at least 5 per cent. of their profits to employees' pension schemes. [49733]

Mr. Timms: I have been asked to reply.

We have no plans to do so. The Pensions Commission published their report on 30 November 2005 containing recommendations for reform. This includes a recommendation that employers should make a financial contribution to the pensions of employees who are themselves contributing to a workplace scheme. The Government are now reflecting on the report and are committed to consulting with the public and stakeholders on the key issues as part of the national pensions debate. There is much to be discussed and decided on the detail of the recommendations and our response must meet the five tests we have set out—that is that the overall package of reforms must promote personal responsibility; must be fair, affordable, simple and sustainable.

As far as the specific recommendations are concerned, the Government are ruling nothing in and nothing out. Ministers have asked the Pensions Commission to continue their involvement in the public debate over the next few months.

The Government plan to publish a White Paper in the spring in response to the Pensions Commission's report. The White Paper will set out what legislation will be needed and a planned timetable for reforms.

Energy Review

Mr. Chope: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment his Department has made of the impact of the projected increases in the population of England upon demand for energy. [50794]

Malcolm Wicks: Work to update UK energy and emissions projections is ongoing and includes a review of all key assumptions on fossil fuel prices and economic growth (including demographic projections on population and the number of households). The latest projections will be published shortly.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry for what reason evidence submitted to the Energy Review is not available on a publicly accessible Department of Trade and Industry website. [50806]

Malcolm Wicks: All responses that are not subject to a confidentiality provision will be published on the DTI website together with a summary of the responses.

Peter Law: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether the National Assembly for Wales Government's energy strategy of March 2003 is being considered as part of the Energy Review. [50250]

Malcolm Wicks: In bringing forward policy proposals to help the UK meet its medium and long-term energy policy goals, the Review will be working closely with the Devolved Administrations. My officials are meeting their counterparts from the Welsh Assembly Government on a regular basis and will be engaging directly with stakeholders in Wales.

Equitorial Guinea

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the total value was of exports to Equitorial Guinea in (a) 2000 and (b) 2005. [50765]

Ian Pearson: Information on the UK's exports of goods is not yet available for the whole of 2005.

The latest data available is for the period January to November 2005. In 2000, the UK's exports of goods to Equatorial Guinea amounted to £28.1 million. In January to November 2005 the UK's exports of goods amounted to £35.9 million.

Estate Agents

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many estate agent businesses there were in each year since 1997 in (a) Leicester and (b) England. [49739]

John Healey: I have asked to reply.

The information requested falls within the responsibility of the national statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 13 February 2006:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your question concerning how many estate agents businesses there were in each year since 1997 in (a) Leicester and (b) England. (49739)

The figures for estate agents (SIC 7031) are provided in the attached table.

These figures are based on the criteria used in the National Statistics publication "UK Business: Activity, Size and Location" (formerly known as PA1003: Size Analysis of United Kingdom Businesses), published on the National Statistics website: www.statistics.gov.uk/ukbusiness, and relate to the number of local units operated by businesses registered for VAT as at March 1997 through to 2005.

All figures have been rounded to the nearest five to avoid disclosure.

Analysis shows the count of VAT based local units in England and Leicester UA from 1997 to 2005 for SIC2003.7031, real estate

Data as at March of each year

Local unit count by specified year	England	Leicester UA
1997	11,530	50
1998	11,275	45
1999	11,720	50
2000	11,770	50
2001	12,955	60
2002	11,785	55
2003	12,550	60
2004	13,725	65
2005	14,725	70

EU Emissions Trading Scheme

Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the scale of windfall profits made by the energy generating sector as a result of the EU Emissions Trading Scheme; and if he will make a statement. [51175]

Malcolm Wicks: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to my hon. Friend the member for Morley and Rothwell (Colin Challen) on 19 January 2006, Official Report, column 1511W.

Fair Trade

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much and what proportion of his Department's catering budget was spent on Fair Trade produce in the last period for which figures are available. [49971]

Alan Johnson: Sales of fairly traded products on DTI premises including sales in the staff restaurants and coffee bars is estimated at approximately £700,000 which equates to 38 per cent. of total sales.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what his Department's policy is on the procurement of Fair Trade produce for consumption on its premises. [49972]

Alan Johnson: DTI has adopted a policy to use fairly traded produce within its catering operations for a number of years and includes clauses within its service contract specification with its catering service provider.

Freedom of Information Act

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what total sum has been received by his Department for the provision of information under the Freedom of Information Act 2000 in its first year of operation. [48489]

Alan Johnson: My Department did not charge for information released under the Freedom of Information Act during 2005.

The Freedom of Information Act allows for public authorities to determine when the cost of processing a request will exceed the appropriate limit, which for central Government is set at £600 and for the wider public sector £450. In this instance the public authority may decide to either approach the applicant to help them refine their request and where possible to bring it under the appropriate limit. Alternatively, public authorities may charge the applicant the cost of processing the request. There is, however, no obligation for Departments to provide information if the cost of processing the request exceeds the appropriate limit.

Public authorities may also charge for disbursements when handling requests where it is deemed appropriate. Further information on the FOI fees regime can be found on the DCA website at http://www.foi.gov.uk/feesguide.htm.

Fuel Poverty

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of how many people fall into fuel poverty for each percentage point increase in energy prices; and if he will make a statement. [50537]

Malcolm Wicks: We estimate that for each percentage point real increase across energy prices a further 40,000 vulnerable households would become fuel poor in England, with a proportionate increase in the devolved administrations. Each percentage point real increase in income reduces the number of vulnerable households in fuel poverty by about 40,000 households.

Work on the best ways to tackle fuel poverty in the light of rising energy prices is being taken forward in the context of the energy review.

Gas Storage Capacity

Mr. Crabb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he is taking to increase the UK's gas storage capacity. [48613]

Malcolm Wicks: The Government's policy is to ensure an effective gas market, to provide the price signals that incentivise commercial gas storage projects. Some 10 new projects are currently being developed, which (if they all proceed to commissioning) would more than double GB's gas storage capacity; the projects are listed in my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State's "First Report to Parliament on Security of Gas Supply and Electricity Supply in Great Britain", available at www.dti.gov.uk/energy. The reports of JESS (the Joint Energy Security of Supply Working Group), also on the Department's website, help the market to work effectively by publishing information about the potential contribution of proposed gas infrastructure projects to gas supply. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has announced that the Government are reviewing the onshore consents regime for gas supply infrastructure, with new legislation if appropriate; and that the Government propose to introduce legislation to facilitate the construction of offshore salt caverns for gas storage. In addition, my right hon. Friend is preparing for submission to Parliament a statement of the national need for additional gas supply infrastructure, including storage facilities, to reinforce the existing arrangements for informing planning authorities. The Energy Review, and the Barker Review of the Planning and Land Use System, are also considering related issues.

Harlow North Sustainability Symposia

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the representatives from his Department and public bodies for which his Department is responsible who attended the Harlow North Sustainability Symposia on 6 June. [37446]

Alan Johnson: No representatives from this Department or its public bodies attended the Harlow North Sustainability Symposia.

Home Credit Companies

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the status of the consultation on improving the transparency of the process used by home credit companies to obtain written permission to offer a cash loan; and if he will make a statement. [50082]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Government announced their intention to consult stakeholders seeking views on ways to improve the transparency of the process whereby home credit companies gain the written permission needed to offer a cash loan on the doorstep through the credit agreement on another product, in "Promoting Financial Inclusion" which was published alongside the pre-Budget report 2004. Subsequently the Office of Fair Trading referred the supply of home credit to the Competition Commission and an inquiry is ongoing. The canvassing of loans is one issue being considered by the Competition Commission as part of this inquiry. The Government will decide what further action may be necessary following the publication of the findings of this inquiry.

Home Information Pack

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps the Government have taken to publicise to consumers the provisions of the Home Information Pack redress scheme. [49573]

Mr. Sutcliffe [holding answer 9 February 2006]: In approving a redress scheme for estate agents under Part 5 of the Housing Act 2004, we expect the Secretary of State to take into account applicants' proposals for raising awareness among consumers and members of the existence, content and scope of the redress scheme.

The Government plan an extensive public information campaign about Home Information Packs before they are implemented in June 2007.

Identity Cards

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the answer of 12 December 2005, Official Report, column 1667W, on identity cards, whether his Department has finalised the current best estimates of the cost of using the identity card scheme to support the services which it oversees. [50317]

Alan Johnson: My Department does not at present anticipate a need to use the identity card scheme to support the services which it oversees and so has not made any estimate of the cost of using them. However, we will keep this matter under review.

Internet Services

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received regarding charges for internet services provided by mobile telephone companies. [49646]

Alun Michael: To date, the Department has received no representations as regards to charges for internet services provided by the mobile network operators. Regulation of the mobile telecommunications sector, including pricing, is primarily a matter for the independent regulator Ofcom which has the power to review such matters if there is evidence of a need to do so.

Inward Investment/International Trade

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what schemes his Department employs to encourage (a) inward investment and (b) international trade; and what the annual cost has been of each. [48922]

Ian Pearson: The major schemes employed by UK Trade and Investment to encourage inward investment and in trade development activity, with the actual direct programme expenditure for those schemes in 2004–05, are as follows:

	£ million
(a) Inward Investment Schemes
Grants to Regional Development Agencies	13.2
Promotional Expenditure	9.7
(b) Trade Development Schemes
Support for exhibitions and seminars	19.5
International Trade Advisors	14.7
Sector Support in Markets	11.5
Promotional Expenditure	9.0
Passport	5.2
Enterprise Scholarship Scheme	2.2
Export Promoters	1.9
Export Market Research Scheme	1.1
Outward Missions	1.0
Overseas Project Fund	0.6
Sales Lead Service	0.4

Jewish Festivals

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what his Department did to (a) celebrate Hanukkah and (b) mark Yom Kippur in 2005. [46765]

Alan Johnson: The Department does not centrally organise celebrations for religious or cultural events. All staff are encouraged to observe or celebrate the dates of such events via announcements on a weekly intranet bulletin, and many choose to do so.

Guidance aimed at increasing staff awareness of a wide range of diversity, faith and cultural issues is also available on the Department's intranet.

Launch Investment

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will extend launch investment to British non-prime contractors. [49958]

Alun Michael: British non-prime contractors are not excluded from launch investment which is available to all civil aerospace manufacturers in the UK for the design and development of new civil aerospace projects. However, the provision of launch investment is entirely discretionary. There is no budget for launch investment and each application is considered on its merits against a range of established criteria and against public expenditure constraints.

London Allowance

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans his Department has to change the London allowance of its staff; and if he will make a statement. [49997]

Alan Johnson: There are no London Allowances for staff in DTI. For non-SCS staff there are London and national rates of pay. The London rates of pay are currently £3,500 higher than the equivalent national rates of pay. Under delegated pay bargaining changes to the pay system for non-SCS staff are subject to negotiation with the trade unions. Negotiations for pay in 2006 have not yet begun.

Mineworkers' Compensation Claims

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the answer of 9 January 2006, Official Report, columns 289–90W, on mineworkers' compensation claims, which solicitors were retained by the Department for advice relating to mineworkers' compensation claims. [49515]

Malcolm Wicks: The Department has received advice from Nabarro Nathanson and McClure Naismith solicitors relating to the mineworkers' compensation schemes since 2002.

Parliamentary Questions

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many parliamentary questions tabled in the last 12 months for answer by him on a named day (a) were transferred and (b) received a substantive answer (i) on the day named and (ii) after the day named. [49880]

Alan Johnson: The information requested is as follows:

Named day questions

	Number
Transferred	[1]38
Answered on the day	211
Answered after the day	405

[1] Includes questions transferred before, on and after the answer date.

Departments aim to ensure that Members receive a substantive response to their named day question on the named day and to endeavour to answer ordinary written questions within a working week of being tabled. Unfortunately, this is not always possible but this Department makes every effort to achieve these time scales.

Political Donations

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will introduce legislation requiring company employees to vote on all political donations made by their companies. [49732]

Alun Michael: The Political Parties, Elections and Referendums Act 2000 implemented the recommendation by the Committee on Standards in Public Life that any company intending to make a donation to a political party or organisation should be required to have the prior authority of its shareholders. We do not believe that there is any justification for legislating to require employees to vote on such donations.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will introduce legislation requiring companies to disclose all donations made to (a) political organisations and (b) parliamentarians. [49734]

Alun Michael: Companies are required to disclose donations to political organisations, including registered political parties, in the directors' report under the reporting requirements of Schedule 7 to the Companies Act 1985. Such disclosure is not required if the aggregate amount of donations and political expenditure did not exceed £200 in the relevant financial year.

A "political donation" for the purposes of this reporting requirement is defined by reference to sections 50 to 52 of the Political Parties, Elections and Referendums Act 2000. Section 50(6) of that Act provides that anything given or transferred to any officer, member, trustee or agent of a registered party in his capacity as such (and not for his own use or benefit) is to be regarded as given or transferred to the party.

The Company Law Reform Bill and regulations made under it will largely restate the current regime relating to the authorisation and disclosure of political donations by companies, but the Government has announced its intention to raise the £200 threshold for disclosure to £2,000.

Post Office Card Account

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions he has had with banks which do not have agreements with Post Office Ltd. on offering access to their current account customers through the Post Office branch network. [48719]

Barry Gardiner: None. Access to current accounts at post offices is a commercial matter between the Post office and individual banks.

Post Offices

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the average number of transactions in the last three years of trading at each (a) rural and (b) urban post office which has closed in each of the last five years; and what the average distance is that customers travel to the nearest post office following such closures. [50622]

Barry Gardiner: This is an operational matter for Post Office Ltd. (POL). The chief executive has been asked to reply direct to the hon. Member.

Public Bodies

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many staff the (a) Business and Innovation Groups, (b) British National Space Centre and (c) Business Relations and Support Unit had in the last year for which figures are available; how much each spent on (i) salaries and (ii) accommodation in that year; and whether these costs are identifiable or non-identifiable for the purpose of public expenditure statistical analysis. [50032]

Alan Johnson: The number of staff in post, taken from DTIs headcount monitoring system, as of 1 April 2005, and the full pay cost (including superannuation and employers NI contributions) for the financial year 2004–05, in the requested directorates are as follows:

	Staff	Full pay cost 2004–05 (£)
Business and Innovation Groups	718	43,385,531.90
British National Space Centre	30	1,376,384.95
Business Relations and Support Unit	373	17,408,241.79

Specific data on the accommodation costs of separate directorates is not kept by the Department and this information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

These costs are non-identifiable for the purpose of public expenditure statistical analysis.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many staff the (a) Regions Directorate, (b) Strategy Communications Unit and (c) Strategic Policy Analysis Unit of his Department had in the last year for which figures are available; how much each spent on (i) salaries and (ii) accommodation in that year for which figures are available; and whether these costs are identifiable or non-identifiable for the purpose of public expenditure statistical analysis. [50033]

Alan Johnson: The number of staff in post, taken from DTI's headcount monitoring system, as of 1 April 2005, and the full pay cost (including superannuation and employers NI contributions) for the financial year 2004–05, in the requested directorates are as follows:

	Staff	Full pay cost 2004–05 (£)
Regions Directorate	63	2,918,048.22
Strategy Communications Unit	57	n/a
Strategy Policy Analysis Unit	54	n/a n/a = Not available.

Pay costs are only available as a group total for Strategy Communications Unit and Strategy Policy Analysis Unit combined. Due to the distribution of cost centres the specific information requested could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Specific data on the accommodation costs of separate directorates is not kept by the Department and this information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

These costs are non-identifiable for the purpose of public expenditure statistical analysis.

Queen's Awards

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how judges are selected and appointed for the Queen's Awards; and who the judges will be for the Queen's Awards in 2006. [47413]

Alan Johnson: The business Awards are made by the Queen on the advice of the Prime Minister. The most senior Queen's Award selection committee is the Prime Minister's Advisory Committee, chaired by the Cabinet Secretary. The Advisory Committee is the only committee where the entire membership is made public, and is served by three separate Panels of Judges, one for each business Award category. Each Panel is chaired by a Permanent Secretary or equivalent position: Department of Trade & Industry (Innovation), Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (Sustainable Development), and the chief executive of UK Trade & Investment (International Trade).

The Queen's Awards for Enterprise Promotion (an Award to individuals) are made by the Queen on the advice of the Prime Minister, who is advised by an Enterprise Promotion Assessment Committee (EPAC). EPAC is chaired by the director-general of Business Group, Department of Trade & Industry, and includes representatives of Government Departments and Agencies including the Small Business Service, the Department for Education and Skills, DTI, as well as the Small Business Council.

Other than Government appointments, Queen's Award panel members are chosen on an ex-officio basis (i.e. it goes to a Chairman, president, or chief executive of a chosen organisation identified as a relevant body for a particular Award category. The PM's Advisory Committee has two independent members. Membership of junior panels is deliberately excluded from the public domain to avoid direct lobbying of panel members.

Membership of the Prime Minister's Advisory Committee

	Organisation

Regional Development Agencies

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the answer of 7 November 2005, Official Report, column 45W, on regional development agencies, when he will write with the relevant information. [47553]

Alun Michael: I replied to the hon. Member on 4 February 2006. Copies of the letter and accompanying tables have been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry where each Regional Development Agency office is located; and how much (a) inward investment and (b) trade each brought to its region in the last period for which figures are available. [49155]

Alun Michael: The location of each Regional Development Agency (RDA) and the number of inward investment successes and associated employment that each secured in 2004–05 is detailed in the following table:

RDA	Location (Head Office)	2004–05 Investments	New jobs	Safeguarded jobs
Advantage West Midlands	Birmingham	34	2,645	461
East of England Development Agency[1]	Histon	33	994	819
East Midlands Development Agency	Nottingham	37	1,238	1,371
London Development Agency[2]	London	77	1,882	359
North West Regional Development Agency	Warrington	54	3214	2,389
ONE North East	Newcastle	44	1,912	3,999
South East England Development Agency	Guildford	57	2,059	1,056
South West of England Regional Development Agency	Exeter	12	1,053	847
Yorkshire Forward	Leeds	35	2,107	569

[1] Inward Investment co-ordinated by East of England International based in Cambridge
[2] Inward Investment co-ordinated by Think London also based in London

UK Trade and Investment, not the RDAs, is tasked with developing international trade in the English regions, where it operates as the "international trades arm" for RDAs.

Renewable Power

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether the Government supports co-firing biomass with coal in power stations as a method of reducing carbon dioxide emissions. [50780]

Malcolm Wicks: The Government identified co-firing of 5–10 per cent. biomass with coal as an option for reducing carbon dioxide emissions from coal-fired generation in its Carbon Abatement Technology Strategy published in June 2005.

Co-firing of biomass is supported through the Renewables Obligation and contributes to the Government's renewable electricity and climate change targets.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what arrangements are in place to ensure joined-up cross-departmental working with the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs on incentives to use bio-mass for electricity generation. [50782]

Malcolm Wicks: Cross-departmental working on sustainable energy is co-ordinated through the Sustainable Energy Policy Network.

In the biomass area, officials from DTI and Defra work closely together—particular issues on which we have worked together include the Energy White Paper, assessment of Bioenergy Capital Grants Scheme proposals, the Biomass Task Force, the Royal Commission on Environmental Pollution's Biomass Report, the EU Biomass Action Plan, and the Renewables Obligation Review.

Smaller Companies

Grant Shapps: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what measures the Department has taken to make it easier for smaller companies to win orders from Government Departments. [51487]

Alun Michael: Together with the Office of Government Commerce, and the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (ODPM) the Department has taken forward the recommendations of the Better Regulation Task Force/Small Business Council Report 'Government: Supporter and Customer?' (May 2003). A progress report was issued in December 2005[1]. Highlights include:

delivery of training to help procurers in the public sector across the English regions to understand the benefits of procurement from small businesses, social enterprises and the voluntary and community sector; working with the regional development agencies to deliver training across all the English regions to small businesses and social enterprises; awarding the contract to develop a national opportunities portal to be launched in spring 2006 to improve the visibility of public procurement opportunities to simplify the process for bidders and to enable public sector buyers to identify potential suppliers; implementing the mandatory requirement that at least 2.5 per cent. of public sector external research will be with small businesses; production of guidance on effective supply chain management for procurers and work with key suppliers to Government to make their sub contracting opportunities more visible to smaller companies;

the launch of the simplified national pre-qualification questionnaire which will reduce the time businesses have to spend providing information when bidding for Government contracts; an investigation of the public sector's use of third party accreditation services; publication of research which demonstrates that removing barriers to the participation by small businesses in the public procurement market helps achieve efficiency[2].

Strategic Nuclear Assets and Capabilities

Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what he defines as the United Kingdom's strategic nuclear assets and capabilities. [50327]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 9 February 2006]: We have carried out no specific exercise covering civil nuclear power to define which assets and capabilities could be defined by the terms "strategic" or "non-strategic". However, consistent with our policy of Keeping the Nuclear Option Open, we have sought to maintain those skills, facilities and capabilities that might be required in the future.

Task Forces

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list each task force set up by his Department since 1997; who the members of each task force are; and with which businesses each non-departmental member is affiliated. [49729]

Alan Johnson: My Department has had involvement in a large number of task forces since 1997 and full details of the various business affiliates could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

UK Exports

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the value was of United Kingdom exports to Liechtenstein in 2005. [49298]

Ian Pearson: Information on the UK's exports of goods is not yet available for the whole of 2005. The latest data available is for the period January to November 2005. In this period, the UK's exports of goods to Liechtenstein amounted to £3.4 million.

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the value was of UK exports to North Korea in (a) 1998 and (b) 2005. [49299]

Ian Pearson: Information on the UK's exports of goods is not yet available for the whole of 2005. The latest data available is for the period January to November 2005.

In 1998, the UK's exports of goods to North Korea amounted to £10.8 million. In January to November 2005 the UK's exports of goods amounted to £0.3 million.

UK Trade and Investment

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the running cost was of each UK Trade and Investment office in the last period for which figures are available; and how much (a) inward investment each attracted and (b) trade each produced for UK businesses in that period. [48923]

Ian Pearson: Running costs are not separately broken down for each of UK Trade and Investment regional and overseas offices, so figures are not available in the form requested. In the financial year 2004–05, £14.7 million was paid to support trade development work by the organisation's regional network, and some £3 million was made available by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister for the salary costs of Government office civil servants providing administrative support. UK Trade and Investment paid £13.2 million through the DTI single pot for the provision of inward investment services by the regional development agencies.

UK Trade and Investment's resource accounts for 2004–05 (Stationery Office HC785: available from the Libraries of the House) show that total UK Trade and Investment resource deployed overseas through the Foreign and Commonwealth office was £118 million on trade and £20 million on inward investment work.

The remainder of UK Trade and Investment's resource is deployed for operations housed in the headquarters buildings in London and Glasgow.

UK Trade and Investment does not record at local, regional or national level, information about the monetary value of trade or inward investment generated by its individual offices. In practice, individual companies may deal with regional, head office and overseas arms of the organisation. In addition, an individual company's performance in international trade, or its investment location decisions, are influenced by many external factors beyond UK Trade and Investment's control, including support services from other sources, as well as general economic factors.

Universal Banking Services

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions he has had with banks and building societies who signed the agreement with the Government on the provision of universal banking services on the future of those services. [48675]

Barry Gardiner: None. Discussions about the future of the universal banking services are commercial matters for Post Office Limited and the individual banks.

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the banks and building societies which signed the agreement with the Government on the provision of universal banking services. [48762]

Barry Gardiner: The following financial institutions signed up to the concept of universal banking: Abbey National Group, Alliance and Leicester, Bank of Ireland, Barclays, Co-operative Bank, First Trust, Halifax—Bank of Scotland, HSBC, Lloyds-TSB, National Australia Group, Nationwide Building Society, Northern Rock, Royal Bank of Scotland Group.

Vandalism

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the acts of vandalism which have been perpetrated (a) inside and (b) on the outside of his Department's buildings in the last 12 months. [49498]

Alan Johnson: There have been no acts of vandalism on DTI buildings in the last twelve months.

Voice Stress Software

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions his Department has had in the last two years on the use of voice stress software in the assessment of claims for compensation under schemes for which his Department is responsible; and if he will make a statement. [49992]

Malcolm Wicks: In view of the increasing use of voice stress software in the insurance industry, discussions involving the Department's contractors took place in October 2004. The decision was taken not to proceed with the use of such technology and no further discussions have taken place.

WEEE Directive

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on what date the draft regulations in respect of the waste electronic and electrical equipment directive will be published; and for what reason publication has not yet taken place. [50811]

Malcolm Wicks: As I announced on 14 December 2005, we are currently reviewing progress on implementation of the WEEE directive. We expect to be able to publish new draft regulation for public consultation in the spring once the review has concluded.

Working Time Legislation

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list those categories of personnel exempted from European working time legislation as not being classified as workers. [50539]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The following categories of people are not regarded as "workers" under the European Working Time Directive (and the Working Time Regulations 1998 which implement the directive)—holders of political and elected office, voluntary workers and the self-employed. Domestic servants are also expressly excluded.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Asbestos

Jim Dobbin: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps he is taking to ensure that consultees are able to respond fully to (a) the consultation on the Control of Asbestos Regulations 2006 and (b) the Health and Safety Executive's newly commissioned research; and what the time scales are for the consultations. [47013]

Mrs. McGuire: The consultation on proposed amendments to the Control of Asbestos at Work Regulations 2002 was widely publicised and the Consultative Document was distributed to the Health and Safety Executive's list of stakeholders and partners at the start of the consultation period. The document was available on the Health and Safety Executive's website, and responses were accepted by email. I am informed by HSC that key stakeholders have submitted their views.

When agreeing to the publication of the Consultative Document the HSC questioned whether the research into work with textured decorative coatings reflected the way this work is actually carried out. In response to this the Health and Safety Executive has arranged for the work to be peer reviewed and commissioned a piece of further research. The Health and Safety Executive will announce the results of this research when these become available. They will discuss this with stakeholders or their representatives as part of the consultation analysis. This, with the original responses to the consultation, will inform any recommendations the Health and Safety Executive makes to the Health and Safety Commission for new regulations.

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the timescale for removing asbestos from buildings; what assessment he has made of where in the country is worst affected by asbestos; what penalties are in place for those who disregard the new asbestos regulations; and where the safe disposal of asbestos will take place. [48680]

Mrs. McGuire: The information requested is as follows:

(a) A Risk Assessment provided as Annex D(A) of the Consultative Document on "Proposals for Revised Asbestos Regulations and an approved Code of Practice" (CD205) contains an estimate that about one third of installed asbestos has already been removed and the remaining asbestos material would be removed over a 50-year period. This is an overall estimate and the amount removed will vary for particular products.

(b) Asbestos is present in buildings widespread throughout Great Britain. Figures are not available on the worst affected areas.

(c) The penalties for breach of the proposed new asbestos regulations are as follows:

on summary conviction, a fine not exceeding the prescribed sum, currently £5,000; or on conviction on indictment an unlimited fine.

In the case of licensing offences the penalty may be imprisonment for up to two years.

There is also the possibility of prosecution under the Health and Safety at Work Act and the penalties are as follows:

on summary conviction, a maximum fine of £20,000, or on conviction on indictment and an unlimited fine.

For breach of an improvement or prohibition notice, similar penalties are available with the addition of imprisonment for up to six months on summary conviction or two years on conviction on indictment.

(d) Asbestos waste goes to landfill. Regulation 16 of the 2004 Landfill Regulations sets out the criteria for land filling of asbestos waste and construction materials containing asbestos.

Benefit Fraud

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the savings from detected benefit fraud for (a) his Department and (b) local authorities were in each of the last six years. [42548]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information is not available for local authorities as data is not collated centrally.

The available information for DWP is in the table.

Monetary Value Adjustments (MVA)[1] by DWP

2003–04	14,588,905
2004–05	10,722,213

[1] Previously Weekly Benefit Savings.

Note:
The MVA scheme was introduced from 1 April 1999. MVA is the difference between the weekly amount of benefit that would have been paid or would have continued to be paid, and the benefit paid following the decision maker's decision on the information gathered. It includes both increases and decreases.

Source:
Fraud Information by Sector (FIBS) and General Matching Service (QMS).

The overall figures for MVA have reduced each year. This is due to a reduction in the amount of Instrument of Payment (IOP) fraud detected over this period. Non IOP related MVA has remained stable at around £6 million. Detected IOP frauds have fallen because of the Department's success in reducing the prevalence of this type of fraud through detection and, more recently, changes to the methods of payment that prevent this type of fraud. As at April 2005, 98 per cent. of pensioners and 95 per cent. of working age customers were paid by Direct Payment.

The MVA figures do not relate to the published fraud and error overpayment figures used for the PSA target. This is because the published fraud and error figures use a sampling system to estimate how much has been overpaid or underpaid in fraud and error. This includes overpayment that has not been uncovered and identified but is estimated to exist. MVAs only relate to adjustments made to a claim after a fraud investigation and so will not include any figures for error, or any estimates of fraud that has not been uncovered and investigated.

Benefit Payments

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) if he will make a statement on delays in payment of new benefit claims in (a) West Dumbartonshire and (b) the UK for (i) jobseeker's allowance, (ii) income support and (iii) incapacity benefit in the last 12 months; [46638]

(2) what his Department is doing to reduce the backlog of claimants waiting for their correct entitlement of (a) jobseeker's allowance, (b) income support and (c) incapacity benefit. [46639]

Margaret Hodge: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lesley Strathie:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your questions asking if he will make a statement on delays in the payment of new benefit claims in West Dumbartonshire, and the UK, for Jobseeker's Allowance, Income Support and Incapacity Benefit in the last 12 months; and what his department is doing to reduce the backlog of claimants waiting for a decision on their claim for these benefits. This is something that falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

Claims for Income Support and Incapacity Benefit made in Great Britain were within our profile clearance times of 12 and 19 days respectively in December 2005. They were also within profile for the year to December 2005. Claims processed at the Clydebank Combined Social Security Office (CSSO) were also within these profiles.

The time taken to clear a Jobseeker's Allowance (JSA) claim (the Actual Average Clearance Time) increased between April and November 2005. In Clydebank CSSO, JSA clearance times were consistently within the planning assumption up until September resulting in a year to date figure that is also within the planning assumption.

A JSA taskforce has been created to address fluctuating clearance times and set in place immediate recovery measures, whilst longer term and more fundamental issues are also being taken forward. More immediate measures include the more effective distribution of workloads amongst the Contact Centre network to improve performance.

Building on the taskforce work, the Jobcentre Plus Chief Operating Officer will shortly launch a National Action Plan. The Action Plan is built around a mandatory series of "health checks", taking local managers through the whole end to end process, identifying key risk elements and, where a part of the process fails the health check, directing managers to appropriate good practice products and tool-kits.

This will be strengthened by regular senior management attention particularly in this area. Where performance is below expectation, Districts and Contact Centres will be required to draw up their own individual recovery plans.

I hope this is helpful.

Benefit Statistics

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people in the Kettering constituency received (a) widow's benefit, (b) housing benefit, (c) council tax benefit and (d) income support in each year since 1997. [22605]

Benefits

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what arrangements are made for assessing over time the (a) quality of advice and (b) delivery to claimants of benefit systems adopted by the Department. [45199]

Margaret Hodge: The Department monitors the quality and effectiveness of service delivery to customers through a set of targets and key management indicators. Our mystery shopping monitoring programme measures the speed, accuracy and quality of the advice given and other targets measure the efficiency and accuracy of six key processes against a set of agreed standards. Together they provide an overall assessment of performance at a local, regional or national level.

We also regularly analyse customer complaints data about the advice and information we provide to enable us to target areas for improvement; and additionally the Department's disability and carers service works with voluntary sector organisations to enable them to provide consistent and accurate information about benefits available to disabled people.

Child Poverty

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether progress towards the target of halving child poverty by 2010 will be measured (a) before and (b) after taking into account housing costs. [43819]

Margaret Hodge: The document 'Measuring child poverty' published in December 2003 outlines the Government's measure of UK child poverty for the long term. This measure forms the basis for the Public Service Agreement (PSA) target set in the 2004 spending review to halve the number of children in relative low-income households between 1998–99 and 2010–11, on the way to eradicating child poverty by 2020.

The new measure will consist of three tiers; absolute low income, relative low income and material deprivation and low income combined. In 2006, we are planning to set the material deprivation and relative low income measures.

Across all three tiers income is equivalised, that is, adjusted to take into account variations in both size and composition of the household, and aiming to match current European conventions to make international comparisons easier, as we aim to be among the best in Europe. The modified Organisation for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD) equalisation scale will be used; this scale is used with income on a before housing costs basis.

The Government will continue to monitor progress on an after housing costs basis in order to monitor the impact of high housing costs on child poverty. Meanwhile the new material deprivation tier contains a range of items which capture housing deprivation including: the number of bedrooms for children, heating adequacy, and keeping the home in a decent state of decoration.

Housing is also an important part of the Government's overall strategy on poverty and social exclusion. Our annual opportunity for all report monitors the proportion of children in non-decent homes, and includes an indicator that monitors the proportion of families with children in temporary accommodation.

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what progress has been made to date in meeting the Government's child poverty targets (a) before and (b) after taking into account housing costs. [43823]

Margaret Hodge: The Prime Minister made a pledge in March 1999 to eradicate child poverty within 20 years. Since then the Government have succeeded in arresting and reversing the previous trend in rising child poverty.

The most recent data shows that between 1998–99 and 2003–04 the number of children in relative low-income households fell from 3.1 million to 2.6 million on a before housing cost basis (BHC) and from 4.1 million to 3.5 million on an after housing cost basis (AHC).

The Government are broadly on track to meet their target, set in the 2002 spending review, to reduce the number of children in low-income households by at least a quarter by 2004–05, as a contribution towards the broader target of halving child poverty by 2010 and eradicating it by 2020.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on the Government's plans to end child poverty. [47106]

Margaret Hodge: The seventh annual 'Opportunity for all' report (Cm 6673) sets out the Government's strategy for tackling poverty and social exclusion and reports progress against a range of indicators.

The Government's target, set in the 2002 spending review, is to reduce the number of children in low-income households by at least a quarter by 2004–05, as a contribution towards the broader target of halving child poverty by 2010 and eradicating it by 2020.

The technical note setting out details of how the child poverty PSA target announced in the 2004 spending review will be measured has now been published on the DWP and HM Treasury websites. We have made a clear commitment to set a target on the new material deprivation measure when data on material deprivation becomes available. All of these targets will need to be met for us to have fully realised our ambition to halve child poverty by 2010.

We will continue to report progress on the target to decrease the number of children living in relative low income by 2004–05. Final data for this target will be published later this year.

As set out in Households Below Average Income (HBAI), between 1998–99 and 2003–04 (the latest data available) the number of children living in relative low-income households fell by 500,000 on a before housing costs basis and by 600,000 on an after housing costs basis.

The Government are broadly on track to meet its 2004–05 target. Final data for the 2004–05 target will be available in March 2006.

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many and what proportion of children were living in families which received below 60 per cent. of median household income in (a) England, (b) each English region, (c) Scotland and (d) Wales in 2004–05. [49189]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer on 6 February 2006]: The information requested is in the tables.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many Child Support Agency new scheme cases were stockpiled in the year to March 2003; how many of these cases are still waiting to be processed; what proportion of these cases originated from (a) parents with care on income support or income-related jobseeker's allowance and (b) parents with care not on income support or income-related jobseeker's allowance; how many are in (i) the pre-application stage, (ii) the application stage, (iii) the information-gathering stage and (iv) the calculation and collection set-up stage prior to first payment being received; and what average time these stockpiled cases have spent at each stage. [19631]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Hilary Reynolds:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency, the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive, as Stephen Geraghty is on leave I am replying on his behalf.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, how many new scheme cases were stockpiled in the year to March 2003; how many of these cases are still waiting to be processed; what proportion of these cases originated with concern (a) parents with care on income support or income-related job seeker's allowance and (b) parents with care not on income support or income related job seeker's allowance; how many are in (i) the pre application stage (ii) the application stage (iii) the information gathering stage and (iv) the calculation and collection set-up stage prior to first payment being received; and what the average time is these stockpiled cases have spent at each stage.

5,500 new scheme applications had a date for first contact with the Agency between 1st January and 2nd March 2003. Of these, 1000 of were still waiting to be cleared at the end of September 2005, where an application is defined as cleared if it:

has had a calculation and a payment arrangement set up;

has been closed;

is identified as having had a good cause decision accepted;

is identified as being subject to a reduced benefit decision; is identified as a change of circumstances to an existing case, as opposed to a new application.

In 25 per cent. of these 5,500 cases, the parent with care had applied for income support or income-related jobseekers allowance and had been referred to the Agency by Jobcentre Plus, with the remaining 75 per cent. having applied direct to the Agency in a private capacity.

The table below details the current status of the 1,000 cases that were waiting to be cleared—as at September 2005.

Status of uncleared CSA new scheme applications received between 1 January and 2 March 2005 as at end September 2005

Application Stage	Number of cases
1st contact to pre-application clearance	Less than 50
Awaiting application clearance	500
Awaiting post calculation clearance	500

There were an additional 500 cases that had cleared the application process, but were still awaiting the first payment.

The average time the 5,500 cases had spent in each stage of the application process, and also the subsequent first payment stage, can be split between cases that had cleared that particular stage and those that were still in that stage. These figures are detailed in the table below:

Average time spent in particular stages of the application process by cases received between 1 January and 2 March 2005 as at end September 2005

	Average number of days spent in particular stages
Application stage	Cases that have cleared this stage	Cases that have not cleared this stage
1st contact to pre-application clearance	95	979
Application intake to application clearance	193	775
Post calculation intake to post calculation clearance	51	634
Post calculation clearance to first payment	91	540

Notes to tables:
1. The pre-application stage is where a potential application is screened to establish whether it is valid. Pre-application clearance is where the case either progresses to the application stage, a reduced benefit decision (RBD) is applied, good cause is accepted, or the case is closed.
2. A case enters application stage where it has been accepted as valid at the pre-application stage. An application clearance occurs when a calculation is carried out, a RBD is subsequently applied, good cause is subsequently accepted or the case is subsequently closed.
3. A case enters post calculation stage where clearance at the application stage results in a calculation being carried out. Post calculation clearance is where a collection schedule is set up, an MD arrangement is set up immediately after calculation, a RBD is subsequently applied, good cause is subsequently accepted, the case is subsequently closed, or the calculation is classified as being a nil liability meaning that no further action is required.

4 The first payment stage is the time between a collection schedule being set up and a first payment being made to the PWC, or a Maintenance Direct arrangement being put in place. Additionally, there are a small number of cases where payment was made to the PWC prior to a schedule or Maintenance Direct arrangement being agreed (i.e. voluntary payments), which have been excluded from the analysis aforementioned.

5 There are 161,000 cases received via the Jobcentre Plus interface for which we do not currently have sufficient management information to decide how many of them would or would not fall within the scope of this analysis.

6 Figures are rounded to either the nearest day or hundred cases.

I hope you find this information helpful.

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his latest estimate is of the total pensions liability for senior civil servants at the Child Support Agency; and if he will make a statement. [30014]

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many court cases have been commenced by the Child Support Agency in respect of non-payment of assessed maintenance by non-resident parents in Scotland in each of the last five years, broken down by parliamentary constituency; [39539]

(2) how many cases are under consideration for court action by the Child Support Agency for non-payment of assessed maintenance by non-resident parents in Scotland, broken down by parliamentary constituency; [39540]

(3) how many cases of non-payment of maintenance by non-resident parents in Scotland have been reported by the Child Support Agency for prosecution in each of the last five years, broken down by parliamentary constituency; [39541]

(4) how many of the cases of non-payment of maintenance reported by the Child Support Agency in Scotland for possible prosecution in each of the last five years have resulted in proceedings being commenced; [39542]

(5) for what reasons proceedings have been dropped in cases reported by the Child Support Agency for prosecution due to non-payment of maintenance by non-resident parents in Scotland in which no prosecution has been commenced in each of the last five years; [39543]

(6) what the average penalty imposed against non-resident parents for non-payment of assessed child maintenance where prosecutions have been commenced after report by the Child Support Agency in Scotland was in each of the last five years, broken down by parliamentary constituency. [39544]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is matter for the Chief Executive. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Hilary Reynolds:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions about enforcement activity in the Child Support Agency, the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive, as he is currently on leave I am responding on his behalf.

I will respond to each question sequentially.

(1) You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many court cases have been commenced? v the Child Support Agency in respect of non-payment of assessed maintenance by non-resident parents in Scotland in each of the last five years broken down by parliamentary constituency [39539].

It is not possible to provide historical information according to Parliamentary constituency as this could only be provided at a disproportionate cost. The information provided covers all cases held which fall within Scottish legal jurisdiction, that is where the non-resident parent is domiciled in Scotland irrespective of where the parent with care is resident within Great Britain.

The commencement of civil debt recovery action requires that a liability order is obtained from the Magistrates courts in England and Wales or the Sheriff courts in Scotland. The liability order is legal recognition that the debt exists and enables the Secretary of State to use enforcement measures to recover the debt.

The table below shows the number of Liability Order applications submitted to the Sheriff courts in Scotland during the last five years.

	Liability Order applications
2000-01	116
2001-02	110
2002-03	282
2003-04	459
2004-05	731
2005 to November 2005	827
Total	2,525

(2) You asked how many cases are under consideration for court action by the Child Support Agency for non-payment of assessed maintenance by non-resident parents in Scotland broken down by parliamentary constituency [39540].

As at 22 December 2005 there were 15 cases under consideration for liability orders through the Scottish legal system. The following table breaks the information down by Scottish Parliamentary constituency area and is based on the domiciliary address of the non-resident parent resident in Scotland.

Scottish parliamentary constituency area	Cases under consideration for court action for non-payment of assessed maintenance
Edinburgh, South	1
Central Ayrshire	1
North Ayrshire and Arran	3
Ochill and South Perthshire	2
Edinburgh, East	1
West Dumbartonshire	1
Paisley and Renfrewshire, South	1
Edinburgh, North and Leith	1
Falkirk	2
Perth and North Perthshire	1
Glasgow, East	1
Total	15

Note

The reason for the low volume of cases awaiting action is due to there being an internal target in place to have any case progressed within 2 days of receipt by the Enforcement Directorate to ensure swift commencement of legal proceedings.

(3) You asked how many cases of non-payment of maintenance by non-resident parents in Scotland have been reported by the Child Support Agency for prosecution in each of the last five years broken down by parliamentary constituency [39541].

There is no difference in the total number of cases reported for committal or disqualification from holding or obtaining a driving licence, and the total number commenced for which figures are shown in my response to the next question.

(4) You asked how many of the cases of non-payment of maintenance reported by the Child Support Agency in Scotland for possible prosecution in each of the last five years have resulted in proceedings being commenced [39542].

Detailed below are the number of non-resident parents who have been issued with a citation to attend an initial hearing date in the Sheriff Courts in Scotland for commitment to prison or disqualification from holding or obtaining a driving licence.

Non-resident parents referred to solicitors for committal/disqualification from holding or obtaining a driving licence

	Number of non-resident parents cited to attend committal hearings in Scotland
September 2003 to March 2004	1
2002-05	19
2005 to November 2005	74
Total	94

(5) You asked for what reasons proceedings have been dropped in cases reported by the Child Support Agency for prosecution due to non-payment of maintenance by non-resident parents in Scotland in which no prosecution has been commenced in each of the last five years [39543].

Cases withdrawn or dismissed from court will be at the Agency's request either as a result of the debtor entering into an agreement to pay or settling his debt in full or as a result of the non-resident parent providing information which allows the Agency to reassess his liability which wipes out his arrears.

(6) You asked what the average penalty imposed against non-resident parents for non-payment of assessed child maintenance where prosecutions have been commenced after report by the Child Support Agency in Scotland was in each of the last five years broken down by Parliamentary constituency [39544].

In the period to the end of November 2005 there has been one suspended prison sentence, two suspended driving licence withdrawals and two suspended driving licence sentences. The information is broken down by Parliamentary constituency in the table below.

Scottish parliamentary constituency area	Sentences passed	Year
Airdrie and Shotts	1 driving licence withdrawn for 180 days	2004-05
Glasgow, South	1 suspended driving licence withdrawal (180 days)	April to November 2005
Livingston	1 suspended committal sentence (21 days)	April to November 2005
Paisley and Renfrewshire, South	1 driving licence withdrawn for180 days	April to November 2005
Berwickshire, Roxburgh and Selkirk	1 suspended driving licence withdrawal (91 days)	April to November 2005

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency, the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the compliance rate for deduction of earnings orders issued by the Child support Agency were in each reporting period since 1st January 2000; and if he will make a statement.

The information requested can be found in the annex.

To place these figures into context, it should be noted that, whilst the general trend in the compliance rate for deduction from earnings orders has been negative, the rate of compliance as a whole has been stable since April 2004, with the Agency obtaining some form of payment from 70 per cent. of cases in which maintenance was due via the collection service, with the remainder of non resident parents not taking any financial responsibility for their children.

I hope you find this helpful.

August 2005	76

Notes:

1. Percentages are rounded to the nearest whole number.
2. Robust information covering the period May 2003 to February 2004 is not currently available.
3. The above includes those old scheme cases with a full maintenance assessment, and those new scheme cases with either a full maintenance calculation, or a default maintenance decision. Old scheme cases with a punitive interim maintenance assessment (an imposed assessment due to the non co-operation of the Non Resident Parent), a small number of which would have deductions from earnings orders in place, are excluded from this analysis in line with the Agency's target definitions, as are new scheme cases being processed clerically.
4. Compliance is defined here as all those cases that are currently open and have paid money via the collection service over the preceding quarter expressed as a percentage of all those (currently open) cases with a collection service maintenance liability over the same quarter.

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to the answer of 30 January 2006, Official Report, columns 274–75W, in how many of the 5,673 cases in the last five years where the Independent Case Examiner found failure by the Child Support Agency and recommended that the Agency should pay compensation, the Child Support Agency paid compensation; and in how many of those cases the amount of compensation was in excess of £1,000. [48894]

Mr. Plaskitt: The Independent Case Examiner makes recommendations for the award of financial redress, but has no authority to specify the amount of such payments. This decision remains the responsibility of the Child Support Agency. The following information reflects data held by the Independent Case Examiner's Office.

Number

	Financial redress recommendations	Awards made	Awards over £1,000
2000–01	1,117	n/a	n/a
2001–02	1,080	n/a	n/a
2002–03	868	1,306	126
2003–04	1,004	1,163	104
2004–05	1,604	1,800	160

Notes:

1. Information on awards made is only available from 2002–03, since when ICE has collated relevant data from information provided by the Child Support Agency.
2. Case review may lead to more than one recommendation should multiple instances of maladministration be identified.
3. More than one award can be made on a case, in respect of different types of financial redress.
4. For similar reasons, case resolution/reports may include more than one recommendation for financial redress. Financial redress may include consolatory payments, ex-gratia payments, payments for actual financial loss, deferment of arrears, advance payments of maintenance, interest payments, or refunds of maintenance paid.

Civil Servants

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many civil servants working in his Department are aged between 18 and 25 years. [38530]

Mrs. McGuire: As at 31 October 2005, a total 10,123 civil servants were working in the Department who were aged between 18 and 25 years. This figure includes temporary staff.

Consultants

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list the main (a) technology suppliers, (b) consultancy firms and (c) strategy consultants engaged by the Department in each year since 1997; and how much was spent on each. [44505]

Margaret Hodge: Information is provided for the years since the Department for Work and Pensions was formed in 2001. The Department's information systems categorise expenditure into IS/IT suppliers and consultancy. The consultancy category will also contain strategy consultants but this expenditure could not be isolated without incurring disproportionate cost. The Department's expenditure with its top five IS/IT and consultancy suppliers by expenditure in 2004–05 and the expenditure with these firms in the three earlier years is provided in the following table. The figures provided relate to IS/IT and consultancy expenditure with these suppliers in the year, a number of suppliers provide both types of service to the Department.

DWP expenditure with its top five IS/IT and consultancy suppliers since 2001–02

Council Tax Benefits (West Midlands)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people in (a) Coventry, South and (b) the West Midlands region are (i) entitled to council tax benefits and (ii) receiving council tax benefits; and if he will make a statement. [50074]

Mr. Plaskitt: The latest available information on unclaimed council tax benefit is in "Income Related Benefits Estimates of Take Up in 2003/2004", a copy of which is in the Library.

Information on council tax benefit claimants is not available by parliamentary constituency. As at August 2005 there were 488,200 households in the West Midlands and 32,100 households in the Coventry city council area receiving council tax benefit.

Deduction from Benefits

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the impact on the extent of financial exclusion has been of the introduction of the scheme to enable lenders to recover debts through deduction from benefits. [49261]

Mr. Plaskitt: DWP plays an active part in contributing to the Government's aims of ensuring that people who are financially excluded have access to low cost credit in a way that does not encourage vulnerable people into unsustainable debt.

In addition to administration of the Growth Fund, the Department is working with the Treasury to set up a facility whereby certain low cost lenders will be able to apply for deductions from benefits in the event of default. These measures should help increase the supply of affordable credit and reduce the need for people without access to mainstream banking to rely on high cost lenders.

Departmental Estate

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what (a) land and (b) property is owned by his Department in Forest of Dean constituency. [47256]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department's estate has been sold or transferred under a PFI partnership deal to Land Securities Trillium (LST) and in return for the payment of a unitary charge, LST is responsible for providing a full facilities management service across the estate. Therefore the Department does not own any (a) land or (b) property in the Forest of Dean constituency.

The Rent Service and The Health and Safety Executive are not part of the Department PFI arrangement, but neither owns any (a) land or (b) property in the Forest of Dean constituency.

Departmental Relocation

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many staff in his Department have been relocated into London and the South East in each of the last five years for which records are available; [31761]

(2) what plans he has to relocate staff in his Department and related agencies into London and the South East. [31762]

Mrs. McGuire: No staff within the Department for Work and Pensions have been relocated into London and the South East since June 2003. Information is not available on relocations prior to this date.

The Department has no plans to relocate staff into London and the South East.

Departmental Running Costs

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the running costs of his central Department for 2005–06; and if he will make a statement. [44760]

Mrs. McGuire: Information on departmental running costs in resource terms, including a breakdown by client group, is published on an annual basis in the Department's Departmental Report, which can be found in the Libraries of the House. The 2005 Departmental Report was published in June 2005 (Cm 6539).

Departmental Staff

Mr. Pelling: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps his Department takes to support staff with mental ill-health. [36866]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department for Work and Pensions (DWP) recognises that mental health conditions are one of the major causes of certified sickness absence among working age people. The Department has a number of policies, procedures and other interventions in place which aim to identify and support our own staff who may be suffering from such conditions.

The Department's Attendance Management policy is designed to help managers deal with all kinds of absences, including those which are due to mental ill health. The policy requires managers to keep in touch with staff while they are absent, and conduct welcome back discussions on their return to work. It also provides guidance to managers on how to spot symptoms of possible mental ill health and how to consider what adjustments might be necessary in order to support the member of staff in doing their job. Adjustments might include changes to the job role or duties, a change of job, additional support or considering part time working or use of the flexible working hours arrangements. The Department's Occupational Health Contractor (Atos Origin) provides advice on reasonable adjustments and the impact the medical condition may have on the member of staff's ability to work effectively.

The Department also has an Employee Assistance service provided by Right Corecare which provides counselling and support to staff on a range of issues including stress (whether at work or at home) and health. Corecare can also advise and support managers who have staff who are experiencing mental ill health. In addition, DWP introduced a Well-being at work policy in September 2004 in order to prevent, identify and address the causes of work-related stress. The policy is based on the HSE Management Standards and aims to assess stress at both an organisational and individual level.

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on the action he is taking to improve the security of the (a) payroll and (b) other personal data relating to staff of his Department. [38218]

Mrs. McGuire: DWP has robust policies and systems in place that deal with data protection and the security of payroll and other personal data relating to its staff. These are subject to rigorous managerial checks and regular internal and external auditing. In the light of recent events we have reviewed all our processes and security arrangements.

Where recommendations are made for improvements these are taken seriously and acted upon.

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many civil servants in his Department worked from home for at least one day a week in the last year for which figures are available. [40280]

Mrs. McGuire: There are currently six DWP employees who are contracted as home workers. However, DWP employees may make ad-hoc arrangements to work from home for a variety of reasons, for example, to complete performance appraisal reports; to complete reports of home visits carried out; as reasonable adjustments for disabled employees; to avoid travel disruption during industrial action on public transport.

Managers also have discretion to authorise employees to work from home for domestic reasons that may otherwise have required their absence from duty.

Statistical data have never been collected about ad-hoc home working arrangements, which are treated the same as any other absence from the normal work place on official duties.

Because no official records are kept, and none are required to be kept by individuals, any data that may be gathered could be obtained only at a disproportionate cost.

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what arrangements are in place to assess the morale of departmental staff. [45190]

Mrs. McGuire: The DWP carries out a departmental staff survey annually, inviting all staff to say how they feel about a comprehensive range of issues affecting their working lives. This includes indicators that allow staff morale to be assessed.

Because morale is a multi-faceted issue, DWP uses its survey to collect data on a range of issues to gain a reliable assessment, rather than rely on a single indicator, such as staff satisfaction. Over time, it has developed a more informed view of what drives staff morale and incorporated these factors into the survey questionnaire. These include areas such as how people feel about their job, the support they get from colleagues and managers, opportunities to develop skills and pursue a career, their confidence in handling challenging aspects of their job, terms and conditions and how they perceive the culture of the organisation.

The DWP has also adopted the Health and Safety Executive's Management Standards model as the basis of its Well-being at Work policy to measure and help manage pressures and demands in the workplace; to minimise the risks of stress; and to continually assess the levels of pressure placed on its people.

The fourth DWP survey was completed in October 2005. In addition to the centralised DWP survey, business areas and teams carry out smaller scale reviews which include consideration of staff attitudes connected to Investors in People, Excellence or performance improvement initiatives locally.

Disability Rights Commission

Julie Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the total budget was of the Disability Rights Commission in (a) 2004–05 and (b) 2005–06; how much funding the Commission received to support its work with public bodies to promote equality for disabled people in each year; and how much it will receive in 2006–07 for that work. [44874]

Mrs. McGuire [holding answer 25 January 2006]: Grant-in-aid paid to the Disability Rights Commission (DRC) in 2004–05 was £16.597 million and its grant in aid allocation for 2005–06 is £21.641 million. These figures reflect the expansion of the DRC's remit as a result of the Disability Discrimination Act (DDA) 2005 which includes the Disability Equality Duty. The figures include some £0.9 million in 2004–05 and some £4.7 million in 2005–06 for work deriving from the DDA 2005. My Department's planning assumption is that the Commission's grant-in-aid for 2006–07 will be £20.902 million to cover all its work including that in respect of the DDA 2005.

The actual amount of resource which the Commission allocates to its work with public bodies in relation to the duty to promote equality for disabled people is an operational matter for decision by the DRC in the light of its statutory duties.

Disabled People (Life Chances)

Mr. Hunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he expects to publish the next annual progress report on the objectives set out in Improving the Life Chances of Disabled People. [49789]

Mrs. McGuire: The Office for Disability Issues will report annually to the Prime Minister on cross-government progress in implementing the Prime Minister's Strategy Unit report, Improving the Life Chances of Disabled People. The first report is due to be published in summer 2006.

Energy Review

Peter Law: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the source was of the funds earmarked by the Health and Safety Executive to pay for the comparative risk review of energy sources commissioned by the Department of Trade and Industry in January as part of the Energy Review; and whether he expects the Health and Safety Executive to apply cost recovery in respect of the Nuclear Reactor Safety Review to be conducted as part of the review. [46568]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department of Trade and Industry has asked the Health and Safety Executive for an expert report on health and safety risks arising from recent and potential energy developments and HSE's approach to ensuring that these risks are sensibly managed by industry. The report will not seek to compare the risks of different energy sources. The cost of producing the report is expected to be small and will be met from existing resources by reprioritising other work. HSE does not intend to recover any of this cost from nuclear site licensees.

Health and Safety

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what action he has taken in conjunction with the Health and Safety Executive to respond to the four high level themes identified in the Government's strategy for workplace health and safety. [45240]

Mrs. McGuire: As the sponsoring Department for the HSC/E, DWP Ministers are very supportive of the workplace strategy and its themes, and committed to working with the Commission and Executive to facilitate delivery of our targets for health and safety improvement. The strategy has four themes designed to encourage good practice and increase understanding of health and safety requirements: partnership working; effective health and safety management; focusing on our core business and the right interventions; and communicating effectively. A report on the first year of the strategy was published in March 2005 and a report of the second year is due towards the end of March.

There are several examples of partnership working being successfully employed. The Health, Work and Well Being strategy, HSE's Stress Management standards and the soon to be launched Workplace Health Connect have all benefited from partnership working across a wide range of stakeholders. These initiatives will help to deliver HSE's occupational health targets and will also contribute to the Government's wider health agenda.

HSE has developed two specific programmes of work to help others benefit from effective health and safety management. The Business Involvement Strategic Enabling Programme promotes effective health and safety management as an integral part of effective business management. HSE has published relevant case studies to help demonstrate this. The Worker Involvement Strategic Enabling Programme encourages more and better worker involvement in sensible health and safety risk management. The Worker Safety Adviser Challenge fund targeting those workers—particularly in small organisations—that do not have access to trade union safety representatives, made £3 million available to partnerships who could demonstrate innovative ways for getting workers and managers to solve health and safety issues together.

HSE has also been concentrating on their core work and being clear about their priorities—risk and poor performers. They have consulted publicly on the role they should play in protecting the public rather than just workers, from work-related risks. The consultation was designed to promote and ensure a coherent overall approach to public safety, with greater clarity of responsibilities for the many agencies involved in protecting the public. The consultation has now closed and HSE will be publishing their findings shortly. HSE have also consulted on how they and local authorities can make best use of their resources to deliver health and safety improvements. This culminated in an account of the regulatory methods they employ, why they intervene and what they aim to achieve with each intervention.

Over the last two years, all of this good work has been underpinned by strong HSE communications. This has been evident in their Backs 2005 campaign where they have successfully raised the profile of back pain as a major contributor to work-related ill health and the sensible risk debate they have been running since last summer where they have emphasised the key message of managing risks sensibly, not completely eliminating them. HSE continues to provide authoritative health and safety information using its website as the main point of contact. Since 2002 they have seen a three-fold increase in traffic on their website.

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what action his Department is taking in conjunction with the Health and Safety Executive (a) to improve liaison on and (b) to foster sharing of good practice in health and safety regulation with local authorities. [45241]

Mrs. McGuire: Local authorities (LAs) have responsibility for health and safety both as employers (dutyholders) and also as enforcing authorities, in the latter case mainly for health and safety regulation of the service industries.

As employers:

The Health and Safety Executive (HSE) has established a Local Authority Forum, which has representatives from the Local Government Associations (LGAs) in England, Scotland and Wales and from trade unions, where debate and discussion takes place about health and safety issues in LAs, including examples of good practice.

At a regional level regular contact is made with LA Chief Executives, either directly or through the Chief Executive local liaison groups, to discuss issues around the Health and Safety Commission's priorities and to share good practice.

As enforcing authorities:

HSE has been developing partnership arrangements with LAs through work on the 'LAs and HSE Working Together strategic programme'. A Statement of Intent, agreed by HSC/HSE and each of the LGAs in England, Scotland and Wales has set out the principles of such partnership working.

LGA representatives at both officer and elected member level form part of the governance of the partnership arrangements and are involved at the earliest stages in developing policy and delivery around the HSC health and safety priorities. LGA representatives are also involved in the governance of all the HSE strategic programmes.

Regional partnership structures are in place, which allow for joint planning and delivery by both HSE field staff and LA enforcement officers—there are many examples of such joint working around the country.

In May 2005 a 'Good Practice Guide' was launched to share examples of good practice between LAs and between HSE and LAs. This has been supplemented by the creation of a web base 'Extranet' that all LAs can access for information held by HSE on its intranet but also as a means of logging and sharing good practice.

Lord Hunt met with CEO of the LGA in October last year and subsequently met with the chair of the LGA and other key members, on 16 January. Further liaison meetings are planned.

HIV

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what guidelines his Department has produced to assist employers in developing good practice concerning the employment of people with HIV. [48588]

Mrs. McGuire: My Department undertakes a wide range of publicity activity to raise awareness of employers' responsibilities under the Disability Discrimination Acts 1995 and 2005. A series of recent campaigns has focused on the duties of employers and service providers. In particular, a major campaign aimed at small and medium-sized businesses was undertaken during 2004, involving direct mailings to over one million businesses. In the last financial year alone, around £3 million was spent on raising awareness of the Act.

A new campaign, also aimed at small and medium-sized businesses, started in December 2005 and will run to May 2006. In this campaign, we are working closely with business, trade organisations and third parties such as accountants, as our research shows that small businesses are turning more and more to these sources of advice for information about legislation that affects their business.

We are also working closely with key stakeholders, including organisations like the National Aids Trust and "Ensuring Positive Futures", to communicate messages about changes made by the Disability Discrimination Act 2005. Our aim is to help ensure that employers, and employees, are aware that, for the purposes of the DDA, a person with HIV infection is treated as a disabled person from the point at which they have the infection, effectively from the point of diagnosis. Therefore, they have a legal right to be treated fairly, and to have reasonable adjustments made to accommodate them, in the workplace.

The Department's awareness raising activity complements that of the Disability Rights Commission, which is sponsored by my Department. The Commission has a statutory duty to provide advice and guidance on rights and responsibilities under the Disability Discrimination Act. It publishes codes of practice and a range of guidance on the employment duties under the Act. These include examples relating to people who are infected with HIV.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many claimants left incapacity benefit at the (a) four month and (b) 12 month stage of their claim in each quarter since January 2003 in (i) pathways to work pilot areas and (ii) non-pathways areas. [43347]

Margaret Hodge: Pathways to work pilots were introduced in October 2003. The available figures are in the tables.

Incapacity benefit (IB) and severe disablement allowance (SDA) terminations in Pathways areas, by duration of claim

	All durations	Up to 4 months	Over 4 up to 12 months	Over 12 months
February 2003	16,000	5,200	4,200	6,700

August 2005	111,100	32,400	30,700	48,000

Notes:

1. Figures are rounded to the nearest 100. Totals may not sum due to rounding.
2. Figures for the latest quarter do not include any late notifications and are subject to major changes in future quarters.
3. Earlier quarters have been updated to include late notified terminations, including terminations for State Pension.
4. Pathways to work pilot areas were introduced in October 2003 and expanded in April 2004.

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions under what circumstances a person may receive incapacity benefit without having passed the personal capability assessment; how many such people there were in each of the last three years; and what the procedure is for the withdrawal of benefits from people deemed fit for work. [44203]

Mrs. McGuire: Claims to incapacity benefit are initially paid on the basis of supporting medical evidence until such time as the Own Occupation Test or the Personal Capacity Assessment is carried out. People with certain severe medical conditions and those in receipt of the highest rate care component of disability living allowance are exempt from the Personal Capability Assessment.

The Personal Capability Assessment is usually carried out after a person has been incapable of work for 28 weeks. If they do not meet the threshold of incapacity, their benefit stops, form IB65 is issued which gives details of the decision, and entitlement to incapacity benefit ceases from the next available payment date. No one can continue to receive incapacity benefit if they fail to satisfy the Personal Capability Assessment.

Form IB65 gives details of the disallowance and the scoring applied, and is accompanied by a notes section on what to do next and leaflet IB203 "Incapacity Benefit Getting Back to Work".

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions who will decide under the proposed legislation which claimants will have their incapacity benefits withdrawn; and if he will make a statement. [44417]

Margaret Hodge: Our proposals are about extending opportunity, not cutting benefits. Where a sanction on an individual's benefit is considered necessary, we have yet to determine the exact process and indeed will only do so following extensive consultation. However, the checks and balances we have in place in our successful Pathways to Work pilots have proven to be reliable and provide a good starting point.

Our experience in the Pathways to Work pilots is that, because many claimants wish to return to work, the number of occasions when it was necessary to apply a sanction were small.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what discussions he has had with employers on his proposals to reform incapacity benefit, with particular reference to extending employment opportunities. [46373]

Margaret Hodge: The Government acknowledge that working with employers to expand employment opportunity is crucial for getting incapacity benefit claimants into work, and have recognised this in both "Health, Work and Well-Being" and the recent Green Paper "A new deal for welfare: Empowering people to work".

Each of the Pathways to Work Pilots has developed an Employer Engagement Strategy to establish a closer business relationship with employers to both influence their recruitment practice and to ensure that the support services understand employers' recruitment needs.

We now look forward to the participation of employers in the formal consultation on the Green Paper, which will be run until 21 April 2006.

Colin Challen: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what use is made of occupational psychology in reducing the number of people claiming incapacity benefit. [47978]

Margaret Hodge: Occupational psychology and consultation with occupational psychologists have been used in the design, staff training and delivery of services that help people claiming incapacity benefit return to employment.

For example, occupational psychologists were part of the team that designed the training for Jobcentre Plus staff involved in our successful Pathways to Work programme (the recently published green paper, A New Deal for Welfare: Empowering people to work Cm 6730, gives more detail about Pathways to Work). Also in Jobcentre Plus, incapacity benefit personal advisers and disability employment advisers are able to refer people to occupational psychologists where there is a need for the types of specialist assistance that those psychologists can provide.

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the average payment of incapacity benefit was in each year since 1995. [48428]

Mrs. McGuire: The information is in the table.

Average weekly amount of incapacity benefit and severe disablement allowance in payment: Great Britain

August 1995	76.79
August 1996	76.44
August 1997	75.62
August 1998	76.49
August 1999	77.04
August 2000	76.32
August 2001	77.42
August 2002	78.12
August 2003	78.56
August 2004	79.79
August 2005	81.59

Notes:
1. Amount in payment is average of all incapacity benefit and severe disablement allowance beneficiaries, and excludes incapacity benefit credits-only cases.
2. All amounts are in nominal terms.

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many claimants of incapacity benefit there were in each social services authority (a) in 2001 and (b) in the most recent year for which figures are available. [51318]

Mrs. McGuire: The information is not available in the format requested. The information for local authorities in Great Britain has been placed in the Library.

Income Support

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people received (a) income support on the grounds of incapacity, (b) income support disability premium, (c) income support enhanced disability premium and (d) income support severe disability premium in each year since 1995. [48429]

Mr. Plaskitt: The available information is in the following table.

Income support (IS) paid for incapacity and disability, by type of disability premium in Great Britain

August	IS and IB/SDA, no DP	IS with DP only	IS with DP and EDP	IS with DP and SDP	IS with DP and EDP and SDP

IT Equipment

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his Department's policy is on depreciation of IT equipment. [45709]

Mrs. McGuire: Depreciation is provided on IT equipment, using the straight-line method, at rates calculated to write off, in equal instalments, the current replacement cost of each asset over its expected useful life, in this case five years. The assets are depreciated from the month following acquisition. No depreciation is charged in the month of disposal.

Jewish Festivals

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his Department did to (a) celebrate Hanukkah and (b) mark Yom Kippur in 2005. [46769]

Mrs. McGuire: My Department publishes an annual religious calendar for all staff on its intranet site. The calendar includes information on all the major religions, including Judaism, and provides dates and background to all the key religious festivals and events. We take into consideration the religious festivals and events when arranging interviews with our customers.

My Department allows all staff to:

request time off work to celebrate any religious festival;

take time away from desks during the working day if individuals need access to designated areas in order to pray; apply for an advance of salary for any religious festival.

My Department delivers faith awareness training for our staff via a learning and development toolkit, which provides information on religious beliefs, observances and practices.

Jobcentres

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether further reductions in numbers of jobs for jobcentre workers in West Dumbartonshire are planned. [46640]

Margaret Hodge: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lesley Strathie:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question asking whether further reductions in numbers of jobs for jobcentre workers in West Dunbartonshire are planned. This is something that falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

As announced in the 2004 Spending Review, the Department has plans to reduce overall staff numbers by 30,000 by 31 March 2008. Our staffing plans for West Dunbartonshire take account of the challenging headcount targets Jobcentre Plus has to meet annually up to 2008 as part of the wider DWP Efficiency Challenge.

By way of background, Jobcentre Plus had 223.8 full time equivalent staff in West Dunbartonshire at the end of April 2005. The latest available month end figure, for December 2005, was 226.2 full time equivalent staff. Just over 13 per cent. of staff included in the December figure are employed on temporary contracts.

The budget allocation for 2006/07 for our Highland, Islands, Clyde Coast & Grampian District, which includes West Dunbartonshire, has yet to be finalised. At the moment, planning assumptions are, however, that staffing in West Dunbartonshire will reduce by approximately 5 per cent. by the end of 2006/07.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) whether the amount of jobseekers' allowance to which 16-year-olds are entitled varies between regions; [50096]

(2) what unemployment benefit is available to people aged 16. [50101]

Mr. Plaskitt: Jobseeker's allowance (JSA) is intended for those people seeking work. 16-year-olds are not normally entitled to JSA, as the policy intention is to encourage young people of that age to be in education or training rather than become dependent on the benefits system.

However, as a safety net for the most vulnerable, income based JSA may be paid for a limited period in certain circumstances while a young person looks for suitable training, education or employment that involves training. JSA rates, payable in such cases, are prescribed nationally and are not subject to regional variations.

Language Support

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the departmental target is for the time taken to process a benefit application when a customer requires language support or documentation from other Government Departments; and how many days applications took in the last period for which figures are available. [48985]

Margaret Hodge: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lesley Strathie, dated 13 February 2006:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply direct to your question asking what the departmental target is for the time taken to process a benefit application when a customer requires language support or documentation from other Government departments; and how many days applications took in the last period for which figures are available. This is something that falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

Jobcentre Plus does not have a separate target for the processing of benefit claims that involve language support or documentation from other Government Departments.

Lone Parents

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what progress has been made in helping lone parents back to work in the last three years. [47104]

Margaret Hodge: Considerable progress has been made in helping lone parents back into work in the last three years. The lone parent employment rate rose 3.3 percentage points between spring 2002 and spring 2005, and, since it started in 1998, new deal for lone parents has been successful in helping more than 423,000 lone parents into work, 230,810 of whom have gone into work through the programme in the last three years.

In October, we introduced a requirement for lone parents whose youngest child is aged at least 14 to participate in quarterly work focused interviews. We are also piloting a number of measures to help lone parents, including the new deal plus for lone parents, which is testing whether a range of additional support will help lone parents to find and to stay in work.

In our recently published Green Paper 'A new deal for welfare: Empowering people to work', we have proposed increased contact with lone parents through more frequent work focused interviews, as well as the intention to pilot a work-related activity premium to encourage lone parents with older children to take serious steps to return to work.

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many lone parents moved from income support to incapacity benefit when their youngest child reached age 16 in the last five years. [48296]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 2 February 2006]: The information is not available in the format requested; the available information is in the table.

Time period during which the customer left income support	Number of lone parents leaving income support within three months of their youngest child turning 16	Number of these claiming incapacity benefit (IB) within 12 months	Proportion that claimed IB within 12 months of leaving IS (percentage)
August 1999-July 2000	12,000	2,000	16.4

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many lone parents whose youngest child is aged between 11 and 16 years are caring for a child who is sick or disabled in (a) Coventry, South and (b) the West Midlands region. [50075]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information is not available in the format requested. Figures are only available for those receiving income support.

As at August 2005, there were 1,600 lone parents in receipt of income support in the West Midlands, whose youngest child was aged between 11 and 16 years, and whose benefit included a disabled child premium.

Due to the very small numbers of claimants involved it is not possible to accurately estimate the number of such claimants in the Coventry, South parliamentary constituency.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many lone parents whose youngest child is 14 years had received benefits for more than a year in Coventry, South in the last year for which figures are available. [50076]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information is not available in the format requested.

As at August 2005, there were 100 lone parents whose youngest child is 14 who had been in receipt of income support for a year or more in the Coventry, South parliamentary constituency. The number of such claimants in receipt of other benefits is too small to provide accurate estimates.

MPs (Outside Appointments)

Julia Goldsworthy: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list the former hon. Members who left Parliament in 2005 who have since been appointed to public bodies by his Department, broken down by party; and who was responsible for making each appointment. [36690]

Mrs. McGuire: Information about the political activity of appointees is recorded and publicised in accordance with the independent Commissioner for Public Appointments' Code of Practice. This shows that no former hon. Members who left Parliament in 2005 have since been appointed to public bodies sponsored by this Department.

New Deal

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what percentage of New Deal leavers in Beverley and Holderness have gained sustained unsubsidised employment. [48484]

Margaret Hodge: The available information is in the table.

New Deal in Beverley and Holderness—percentage of leavers to a sustained unsubsidised job

Programme	Percentage
New Deal for Young People	56
New Deal 25 plus	29
New Deal for Lone Parents	30

Notes:
1. A measure of job sustainability is not available for new deal 50 plus and new deal for partners.
2. Information on new deal for disabled people is not available at constituency level.
3. For the purposes of new deal for young people and new deal 25 plus, a job is regarded as sustained if a person gaining a job through these new deals does not claim jobseeker's allowance for at least 13 weeks after gaining employment.
4. Since October 2005, employment sustainability for those participating on new deal for lone parents, which is a voluntary programme, has been measured through the Work and Pensions Longitudinal Study. If a job gained through the programme lasts at least 13 weeks, it is regarded as sustained. A measure of sustainability was not available prior to October 2005.
5. Figures are to August 2005.

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many (a) over 25s, (b) lone parents, (c) over 50s and (d) young people in Peterborough have participated in the New Deal in each year since its inception. [50429]

Margaret Hodge: The available information is in the table.

1. New Deal 25 plus started in July 1998.
2. New Deal for Lone Parents started in October 1998.
3. Starts to the New Deal 50 Plus programme are only available from January 2004.
4. New Deal for Young People started in January 1998.

Pathways to Work

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many professionals are involved in condition management programmes in each of the Pathways to Work pilots, broken down by profession; what the annual cost of the work of healthcare professionals has been in each pilot; how many people in each pilot have been receiving incapacity benefit for (a) less than six months, (b) between six and 12 months and (c) 12 months or longer; and what assessment he has made of the implications for the number of healthcare workers needed if Pathways to Work is extended to all areas. [44205]

Margaret Hodge: Condition management programmes (CMPs) are jointly delivered by Jobcentre Plus and the NHS. Actual spend figures for the provision of services via health care professionals are not available. The funding agreed between individual districts and primary care trusts (PCTs) is set out in the following table:

District	2004-05 (£)	2005-06 (£)
Renfrewshire, Inverclyde, Argyll and Bute	1,526,079	1,845,027
Bridgend, Rhondda, Cynon and Taff	767,979	1,209,800
Derbyshire	1,380,000	1,921,621
Essex	2,126,516	3,029,072
Gateshead	929,260	1,267,528
East Lancashire	504,627	1,215,946
Somerset	640,500	870,515

Information on how many people in each pilot have been receiving incapacity benefit for (a) less than six months (b) between six months and 12 months and (c) 12 months or longer, is in the following table.

IB/SDA Claimants in Pathways to Work areas, by duration May 2005

District	Less than 6 months	6 months to 1 year	1 year or over	Total
Renfrewshire, Inverclyde, Argyll and Bute	2.5	1.6	22.5	26.6

Delivery is not standardised in the pilot areas. The services within the CMPs are provided by a range of healthcare professionals, including: occupational therapists, mental health practitioners, GPs, physiotherapists, speech therapists, health psychologists, and nurses. The number and type of healthcare professionals varies between each pilot and is set locally.

We will continue to work with the NHS to deliver this vital element of our Pathways to Work initiative. We will also seek to ensure our proposals deliver the pilots in innovative and more cost-effective ways as we roll out to the rest of the country. We have set out our proposals in the Green Paper "A new deal for welfare: Empowering people to work" (Cm 6730) published on 24 January 2006.

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many general practitioner surgeries are participating in the Pathways to Work pilots; and in how many of them employment advisers have been placed. [44431]

Margaret Hodge: As part of the Pathways to Work approach Jobcentre Plus has been working closely with a wide range of NHS professionals in surgeries and other health settings to promote the health and employment message. Many non-governmental organisations have already placed employment advisers in general practitioner surgeries across the country and our proposals came from this experience.

We want to build on the knowledge gained from these experiments and will be running pilots in five of the seven current Pathways to Work Pilot areas, where we will place employment advisers in general practitioner surgeries. We do not have information at this stage on the number of advisers we will place. However, two surgeries in the pilot areas are already using the services of employment advisers.

The lessons learned from these pilots will help to ensure the success of our proposals recently published in our Green Paper; "A new deal for welfare: Empowering people to work" to place an Employment Adviser service in GPs' surgeries.

Pensions

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the number of people likely to switch from current occupational or private pension schemes into the proposed National Pension Savings Scheme, if it is implemented. [49580]

Mr. Timms: The Government is in the process of examining the recommendations made by the Pensions Commission in detail. This includes recommendations on a National Pension Savings Scheme. At this stage, nothing is ruled in and nothing is ruled out. In looking at options we will of course take account of the possible impacts on existing schemes.

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will commission research into the likely impact on economic growth in the UK of the national pension savings scheme proposed in the Pensions Commission's second report. [49581]

Mr. Timms: The Government are in the process of examining the recommendations made by the Pensions Commission in detail. At this stage, nothing is ruled in and nothing is ruled out. We will give careful consideration to the need for additional research into the likely impact of the NPSS on economic growth in the UK.

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the persistency levels for (a) regular premium personal pensions and (b) group and individual personal pensions was in each of the last 10 years. [49582]

Mr. Timms: Such information as is available is contained in an annual survey on persistency of life and pension policies produced and published by the Financial Services Authorities (FSA). The latest publication is the 2004 survey and it can be found on the FSA's website at:

http://www.fsa.gov.uk/pubs/other/Persistency_2004.pdf

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will commission research into the likely levels of persistency if a national pension savings scheme were to be established as proposed in the Pensions Commission Report. [49583]

Mr. Timms: The Government are in the process of examining the recommendations made by the Pensions Commission in detail. At this stage, nothing is ruled in and nothing is ruled out. As part of this process we will be giving careful consideration to the need for additional research into the likely levels of persistency if the NPSS were to be established.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will introduce legislation requiring companies who have taken a pensions contribution holiday since 1997 to make the payments not made. [49724]

Mr. Timms: We have no plans to do so. The level of contributions paid by the sponsoring employer of a private sector defined benefit pension scheme is determined and reviewed under the rules of the scheme, subject to overriding legislation. From April 1997 schemes were required to be funded above the level of the minimum funding requirement (MFR) before the sponsoring employer could take a contribution holiday.

New scheme funding requirements, replacing the MFR, came into force from 30 December 2005. Pension scheme trustees now have greater powers to frame their scheme's funding strategy and determine the appropriate level of contributions payable by the employer.

In addition, from 6 April 2006 current HM Revenue and Customs requirements for pension schemes to reduce an actuarial surplus will be abolished. This will remove a factor which may have played a part in some decisions to allow pension fund contribution holidays in the past. Under the revised requirements sponsoring employers will still be able to take a contribution holiday where the scheme is sufficiently well-funded, but only where the trustees agree that it is appropriate.

Perceived Disability

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will extend existing Disability Discrimination Acts to protect groups and individuals from discrimination on the basis of perceived disability in addition to actual disability. [48589]

Mrs. McGuire: The Disability Discrimination Act 2005 significantly extended the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 in a number of important areas. It fulfilled the Government's commitment to put in place a comprehensive and enforceable package of civil rights for disabled people. We have no current plans to make any additional amendments to this legislation.

Post Office Card Accounts

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions which areas have been selected as pilots for the replacement of the Post Office card account. [50706]

Mr. Plaskitt: DWP is not undertaking any pilots of a "replacement" for the Post Office card account. Rather we are undertaking some small-scale pilots to test various approaches to moving people from having their benefit or pension paid into a Post Office card account to payments into a bank account.

The three DWP pilot schemes will involve:

(a) Not promoting the option for some customers to open a Post Office card account when they make a new claim to benefit. The pilots will cover a small number of customers making a new claim to jobseeker's allowance in three Jobcentre Plus Offices in the North East of England and a small number of customers claiming retirement pension or pension credit nationwide.

(b) Writing to some existing Post Office card accounts customers asking for bank account details. This will be a random sample of customers in England and Wales.

(c) Converting some customers who have one benefit paid by Post Office card account and another already paid into a bank account. This will be a random sample of customers in England and Scotland.

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people use the Post Office card account for the payment of benefits and pensions, broken down by parliamentary constituency. [50707]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information is not available in the format requested.

Information showing the number of DWP benefit and pension payment accounts paid by direct payment into a Post Office card account for each parliamentary constituency has been placed in the Library.

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what alternatives to the Post Office card account he plans; and what income streams will be received by the Post Office as a result. [51485]

Mr. Plaskitt: It will be for Post Office Ltd. to bring forward proposals for new products and services, and I understand they currently have some under development. There are already some 25 bank and building society accounts which can be used at post offices, with each transaction at the post office generating income for Post Office Ltd. We want to work with the post office to ensure customers are fully aware of developments and continue to have a range of choices in how they access their money.

Susan Kramer: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people are using the Post Office card account to withdraw their benefits and pensions; and how many people the Government estimate will be using the Post Office card account by the end of (a) 2006 and (b) 2007. [48941]

Mr. Plaskitt: There were 4.27 million Post Office card accounts in use at December 2005.

We would expect this number to decline over time as customers move on to other accounts which offer more features. However, we have made no estimates of the precise volumes at specific points in time.

Poverty

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the relationship between disability and poverty; and how many disabled people his Department defined as poor in (a) the UK and (b) Stroud constituency in each year since 1997. [39185]

Mrs. McGuire: Specific information regarding low income for Great Britain is available in "Households Below Average Income 1994/95–2003/04", available in the Library. The threshold of below 60 per cent. contemporary median income is the most commonly used in reporting trends in low income.

The data source does not allow us to provide robust estimates below regional level.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his latest estimate is of the number of (a) pensioners, (b) disabled people, (c) couples, (d) single people and (e) children living in (i) absolute poverty and (ii) relative poverty in each year since 1996–97; and if he will make a statement. [44736]

Margaret Hodge: We are making sustained progress against poverty—41 of our 60 indicators now show an improving trend over time, compared with 35 last year. There are fewer children living in relative, absolute and persistent poverty (700,000 fewer children in relative low income than in 1997); there are fewer children in workless households (400,000 fewer than in 1997); there are fewer older people fewer living in relative, absolute and persistent poverty (700,000 fewer people of state pension age in relative low income and 2 million fewer in absolute low income compared with 1997) and for those living in deprived communities there have been improvements in employment, education and housing. The information requested is in the tables.

Realising Health and Safety Strategy

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what progress there has been in meeting targets for major reductions in fatal accidents and severe injuries in each year since the publication of the Realising Health and Safety Strategy in 2000. [42657]

Mrs. McGuire: The information is as follows.

Progress on fatal and major injuries

The mid-point 'Revitalising' Health and Safety target (2004-05) for fatal and major injuries is to reduce the incidence rate by 5 per cent. from the base year (1999-2000).

Since 2000, HSE has concentrated on priority areas in partnership with industry. This has resulted in significant improvements in, for instance, construction and falls from height where targets have been met. This activity has not yet shown through as a clear change to the overall fatal and major injuries rate. HSE continues to prioritise its programmes, focussing on delivering targets.

The figures for each year are shown in the following table, and further detailed information is available from the HSE website.

Rate of reported fatal and major injuries to employees

	Rate of reported injury (per 100,000 employees)
	Fatal injury	Major injury	Fatal and major injury
1999-2000	0.7	116.6	117.3

Retirement Age

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to the oral answer to the hon. Member for Bury St. Edmunds (Mr. Ruffley) of 9 January 2006, Official Report, column 7, whether it is the case that no one who is (a) a teacher, (b) a national health service employee and (c) in the civil service, and remains so until the age of 60 years, will be required to defer their retirement beyond the age of 60 years. [48360]

Mr. Timms: No one, in any occupation, in the private or public sector, can be required to defer their retirement beyond a particular age – individuals always retain the right to retire at a time of their choosing (subject to any compulsory maximum retirement age imposed by the employer).

I assume that the hon. Gentleman is in fact referring to normal pensionable ages, the age from which an unreduced pension is available.

Under the agreement on public sector pensions announced last October, a current teacher, NHS employee or civil servant who is already a member of their occupational pension scheme and who does not leave that employment at any subsequent point in their career will retain their existing normal pensionable age of 60. However, the probability is that, of public sector workers aged 20 today 90 per cent. (source: Government Actuary's Department) will not meet this criterion (i.e. they will not remain in the same employment until age 60).

Social Security Fraud

Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the annual cost to the public purse resulting from social security fraud in each of the last three years. [50629]

Mr. Plaskitt: In recent years, benefit fraud has been reducing and now stands at £0.9 billion per year – less than 1 per cent. of total benefit expenditure.

The Department produces estimates for the amount overpaid through fraud across the benefits system. Previously published results are in the table.

	Estimate of benefit overpaid	Comment
1998–99 to 2002–03	£2 billion per annum	Figure rounded to nearest £1.0 billion.
2003–04 revised estimate	£1.0 billion	Figure rounded to nearest £0.1 billion. Development work to improve the quality of the estimate suggested that the original figure of £1.5 billion was an overstatement.
2004–05	£0.9 billion	Figure rounded to nearest £0.1 billion.

The estimates in the table refer to fraudulent payments of benefit. Some overpayments will be subsequently recovered, so the net loss to the public purse will be less than the level of overpayments.

On 13 October 2005, the Department published our achievements in reducing levels of fraud in the benefit system and plans to reduce it further in 'Reducing fraud in the benefit system: Achievements and ambitions.' Copies are available in the Library.

Stakeholder Pensions

Mr. Dunne: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the lapse rate of stakeholder pension contributors was in each year between 2000 and 2005. [50017]

Mr. Timms: This information is not available. Stakeholder pensions are designed to be flexible, with policy holders being permitted to take breaks in contributions without incurring penalty charges. The Financial Services Authority (FSA) publishes a yearly survey on persistency of life and pension policies which has a table on the levels of persistency for stakeholder pensions. The latest publication is the 2004 survey and it can be found on the FSA's website at http://www.fsa.gov.uk/pubs/other/Persistency_2004.pdf

Sunbeds

Mrs. James: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what recent discussions he has had with the Health and Safety Executive on the operation of unstaffed coin-operated sunbed retail outlets. [48745]

Mrs. McGuire: There have been no recent discussions with HSE on the operation of unstaffed coin-operated sunbed retail outlets; no recent concerns have been expressed to HSE regarding serious injuries at such outlets.

Mrs. James: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what guidelines the Health and Safety Executive has issued to operators of unstaffed coin-operated sunbed tanning salons. [48747]

Mrs. McGuire: Leaflet INDG209, Controlling Health Risks from the use of UV Tanning Equipment applies to the risks from sunbeds generally.

No guidance has been issued specifically on unstaffed coin-operated tanning salons. However, the guidance in INDG209, including the advice aimed at customers, provides a sensible approach to controlling the risks from using such facilities.

Mrs. James: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what inspections of sunbed tanning retail outlets the Health and Safety Executive (HSE) undertakes; and what period of notice is given by the HSE for such an inspection. [48753]

Mrs. McGuire: HSE is not responsible for the inspection of retail tanning outlets. This is a local authority responsibility. Each local authority decides on the relative priority of such inspections. Many local authorities also require these facilities to be licensed for public health purposes, and a licensing visit will be made on receipt of the necessary application.

Mrs. James: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether the Health and Safety Executive has taken enforcement action against companies operating sunbed tanning salons since 1995; and if he will make a statement. [48759]

Mrs. McGuire: No enforcement action has been taken by HSE against companies operating tanning salons as enforcement responsibility for these premises is allocated to local authorities. HSE only holds voluntary submissions of local authority activity; these records show no enforcement against tanning outlets under health and safety legislation.

Telephone Helplines

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the response rates against targets were for telephone helplines for (a) incapacity benefit, (b) jobseekers allowance and (c) crisis loans in each region in the UK in the last period for which figures are available. [42561]

Margaret Hodge: Jobcentre plus is introducing a new approach to claiming working age benefits, including incapacity benefit and jobseeker's allowance in which customers call a contact centre to make their claim for benefit. This approach is being gradually introduced across the country.

The information provided in the following table relates only to those areas of the country where the new service has been introduced, and it details the percentage of calls answered by each contact centre during December 2005.

It is not possible to identify the response rates for calls by region as calls are not necessarily answered by the nearest geographical contact centre to the customer. We also do not hold information on the individual benefits that each call relates to and, therefore, I am unable to provide information on the response rates specifically for incapacity benefit and jobseekers allowance.

Contact centre	Region in which the contact centre is based	Percentage of calls answered
Derby	East Midlands	95.2
Grimsby	Yorkshire and Humber	98.4
Halifax	Yorkshire and Humber	93.5
Lincoln	East of England	96.7
Lowestoft	East of England	96.7
Sheffield	Yorkshire and Humber	94.9
Blackburn	North West	93.4
Bootle	North West	97.2
Coventry	West Midlands	93.9
Garston	North West	93.9
Marton Mere	North West	97.2
Telford	West Midlands	94.1
Banbury	South East	96.3
Dundee	Office for Scotland	93.8
Hastings	South East	94.7
Middlesbrough	North East	96.5
Newcastle	North East	93.0
Paisley	Scotland	97.1
Bridgend	Office for Wales	88.2
Cwmbran	Office for Wales	92.1
Pembroke Dock	Office for Wales	93.3
Poole	South West	96.3
Taunton	South West	87.7
Torquay	South West	92.5

Our aim is to answer 90 per cent. of calls. We are aware that two contact centres are not meeting this aim. Measures have been put in place to improve performance, including temporary adjustments to our processes, further recruitment and improved training programmes. These activities have already produced positive results and we are confident that the week-on-week improvements in customer service will continue.

We do not have a specific target for answering calls to Crisis Loan helplines. Specific information on call response time is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Winter Fuel Payments

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people are receiving winter fuel payments in each constituency in Scotland. [51309]

John Barrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will extend winter fuel payments to those people who are severely disabled. [51310]

Mr. Timms: There are no plans to extend the winter fuel payment scheme to severely disabled people under age 60. Help is already available through disability benefits and the disability premium in income-related benefits in recognition of the extra costs, including heating, which disabled people may have.

Workless Households

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what target he has for reducing (a) the number and (b) the proportion of children in workless households; and what progress has been made against those targets. [43821]

Margaret Hodge: As a result of this Government's successful policies and stewardship of the economy there are 700,000 fewer children living in relative low income than in 1997, and 400,000 fewer children in households where no one works.

The Spending Review 2002 Public Service Agreement (SR02 PSA) target is to reduce the proportion of children in households (CIWH) with no one in work over the three years from spring 2003 to spring 2006 by 6½ per cent.

The Spending Review 2004 Public Service Agreement (SR04 PSA) target is to reduce the proportion of children living in workless households by 5 per cent. between spring 2005 and spring 2008.

At the beginning of the SR02 PSA target period (spring 2003) the proportion of children living in workless households was approximately 16.1 per cent. (1.8 million). Achieving the SR02 PSA target will require a reduction of 1 percentage point to 15.1 per cent., equivalent to a reduction in the number of CIWH of approximately 150,000 by spring 2006.

At spring 2005 the proportion of children living in workless households was 15.7 per cent. (1.75 million), representing a reduction of 0.4 percentage points from the baseline. A further reduction of 0.6 percentage points would have to be achieved in 2005–06 to meet this target.

The spring 2005 figures form the baseline for the CIWH SR04 PSA. Achieving this target will require a reduction of 0.7 percentage points to 15 per cent. by spring 2008 equivalent to a reduction in the number of CIWH of approximately 128,000 by spring 2006.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Religious Festivals

15. David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans the Home Office has to celebrate religious festivals over the coming 12 months. [50404]

Paul Goggins: The Home Office has lead responsibility for race equality, diversity and cohesion. At various times throughout the year we celebrate the contribution made by all the main faiths including Christian, Muslim, Jewish, Hindu and Sikh. We are still considering our programme of events for the next 12 months.

Incitement to Violence

17. Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he plans to amend the law relating to incitement to violence. [50406]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Existing law already makes it an offence to incite murder or other crimes of violence. However, we are strengthening our law by creating a new offence of encouragement to terrorism. This will cover both direct and indirect encouragement and the Government believes it should also encompass glorification of terrorism.

Commissioner for Victims and Witnesses

18. Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made in establishing a commissioner for victims and witnesses; and if he will make a statement. [50407]

Andy Burnham: The recruitment campaign to appoint a new Commissioner for victims and witnesses was launched on 25 January.

The Commissioner will build on our recent reforms to the criminal justice system and be an independent voice for victims and witnesses in Government, influencing policy and championing their rights.

The Commissioner's role will include keeping the Code of Practice for Victims of Crime under review, making recommendations on funding of services to victims and their families via the victims' fund, and ensuring criminal justice system partners work together more effectively to meet the needs of victims and witnesses.

We aim to announce an appointment in April.

Departmental Accounting

19. Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what research he has commissioned to establish whether good accounting practices are followed in his Department. [50408]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Home Office is in the process of commissioning a review of the factors that caused the delay to the accounts, an analysis of the current state of financial accounting environment; an assessment of the existing improvement plans; and recommendations for additional steps that need to be taken. This short-focussed review is due to commence in early March and initial conclusions will be reported to the Home Office Audit Committee on 27 March 2006.

25. James Brokenshire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the decision of the National Audit Office not to sign off his Department's accounts. [50414]

Mr. Charles Clarke: I am disappointed at the National Audit Office's (NAO) decision. A great deal of work has already been done to put right the problems which arose from the introduction of the new accounting system.

Although the NAO could not sign off the Home Office resource accounts, they did confirm that no fraudulent payments were made during 2004-05. Both our systems and financial control frameworks are being strengthened and we are recruiting additional qualified accountants to improve our financial accounting capability.

I will be appointing a firm of accountants to undertake an urgent review to establish whether any additional steps need to be taken.

Prisons

20. Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what changes have taken place in the number of (a) males and (b) females imprisoned since 1991. [50409]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The number of people imprisoned, which includes those remanded in custody, was 45,626 in 1991 of whom 44,082 were males and 1,544 female. In 2005 there were 76,190 people imprisoned, 71,676 males and 4,514 females.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the drop-out rate for prison officers within two years of recruitment at each prison; and if he will make a statement. [44352]

Fiona Mactaggart: The proportion of prison officers leaving the service within two years of beginning their careers as officers is 11.2 per cent. This figure includes both newly recruited officers and existing Prison Service staff who converted to the officer grade. The nature of the prison officer role means that the Prison Service considers it acceptable that eight out of nine new officers stay in post for more than two years. A breakdown of the drop-out rates within two years of starting, by geographic area is shown in the table. Highest drop out rates are recorded in London and the South East, where more competitive and fluid employment markets operate.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many serving staff in the Prison Service are in receipt of a Long Service Award; and if he will make a statement. [48425]

Fiona Mactaggart: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. However, approximately 2,900 staff are eligible for the Director General's Long Service Award, having served 25 years in the Prison Service (or 25 years in the civil service, with 20 of those years in the Prison Service).

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps are being taken to reduce the supply of (a) controlled drugs and (b) mobile telephones into HMP Wandsworth; what assessment he has made of their effectiveness; and if he will make a statement. [48510]

Fiona Mactaggart: Wandsworth has developed robust anti-trafficking measures, using intelligence and visible deterrence including wall patrols and dogs. All visitors to prisoners are warned of the risks they are taking if they try to smuggle drugs. All visitors are subject to standard search procedures using prison staff and passive drug dogs. The prison works closely with the Metropolitan police in action against organised drug gangs. Regular searching of prison staff takes place to check that contraband is not being brought into the prison. Intelligence is assessed against individuals suspected of corruption. A substantial number of mobile phones have been seized over the past 12 months as a result of a combination of searching and intelligence. The number of mobile phones seized has impacted on the trade of drugs. This is evidenced by a year on year reduction in the Mandatory Drug Testing (MDT) rate. MDT failure rates in November 2004 were at 18 per cent. compared with 12 per cent. in November 2005.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which prisons in (a) England and (b) the north east hold more prisoners than their normal certified level; and by how much each is over its limit. [48662]

Fiona Mactaggart: As at 3 February 2006 there were no prisons in (a) England or (b) the north east that held more prisoners than their certified operational capacity.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the number of prisoners in (a) England and (b) London who (i) enter and (ii) successfully complete education training and employment upon release. [48703]

Fiona Mactaggart: The Home Office routinely collects data on the proportions of prisoners in England and Wales reporting having employment, training or education (ETE) arranged on release. The latest figures for November 2005 show that 35 per cent. of prisoners about to be discharged reported having ETE arranged.

The figure for prisoners being released from London prisons (not the same as returning to live in London) is also 35 per cent. It should be noted that the figures refer to the proportions of prisoners reporting having ETE arranged and no checks are routinely made to examine the proportions who actually do enter ETE on release or how soon after release this occurs. No information is currently collected on the proportions or numbers of discharged prisoners who successfully complete any training or education after release or how long discharged prisoners stay in employment.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners in (a) England and (b) each prison in London entered education training and employment in each year since 1996–97. [48705]

Fiona Mactaggart: There are no records kept of the numbers entering education, training or employment (ETE) in custody. Education is measured in outcomes as opposed to entries, and employment and training in prisons are not measured as specific activities during custody. Information is recorded for prisoners leaving establishments in England with ETE arranged.

ETE outcomes also include those who attended FRESHSTART appointments at Jobcentre Plus. FRESHSTART is the initiative whereby prisoners who do not have a job or training place to go to on release are linked into employment, training and benefits advice and support immediately after release. Figures for ETE are available for the last three years and are recorded in the table.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the reasons are for the underestimate of the overall cost of the building programme at HMP Chelmsford; why the underestimate was discovered as early as one month after building work commenced; what steps are to be taken to rectify the situation; and if he will make a statement. [48369]

Fiona Mactaggart [holding answer 2 February 2006]: The National Offender Management Service (NOMS) is currently carrying out a review to establish the reasons for the underestimate. The outcome of the review should be available early in the new financial year.

Police Restructuring

21. Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on progress with his plans for the reorganisation of police services. [50410]

Hazel Blears: The Home Secretary made a Written Ministerial Statement on the progress of police force restructuring on 6 February.

Under-age Drinking

23. Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made in tackling under-age drinking. [50412]

Paul Goggins: The Government have put in place a number of measures to tackle under-age drinking. Through initiatives like Challenge 21 it has worked closely with the alcohol industry to ensure that drinks retailers reduce sales to under-18s. Targeted enforcement has reduced the number of illegal sales to children. In the latest Alcohol Misuse Enforcement Campaign, the failure rate for supermarkets was 17 per cent., down from 50 per cent. in summer 2005.

Volunteering

24. Sarah McCarthy-Fry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to increase opportunities for volunteers. [50413]

Paul Goggins: The numbers of volunteers in England are at record levels. During the Year of the Volunteer in 2005 over 3,000 events were held across 12 themed months with over 2.2 billion volunteering minutes pledged by the public.

But too many people still face barriers to volunteering, particularly those at risk of exclusion. That is why the Government will invest at least £3 million over the next two years to identify and break down those barriers, making volunteering accessible to all through funding projects across country.

Asylum/Immigration

John Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers who had (a) signed up for and (b) not signed up for section 4 support have returned home since the introduction of section 4 support, broken down by country of origin. [49090]

Mr. McNulty: Statistics on the number of unsuccessful asylum seekers who have left the UK do not distinguish between those who have received section 4 support and those who have not. The available information on the number of unsuccessful asylum seekers who have returned in the last quarter for which figures are available is contained in the table. During this period the total number on section 4 support increased from 6,715 to 7,630 excluding dependants. Asylum statistics can be found on the Home Office website at: www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what status failed asylum seekers have whose country of origin has refused to accept them on deportation and who have been returned to the UK; what provision is made by the Department in such cases; and if he will make a statement. [50018]

Mr. McNulty: Failed asylum seekers whose country of origin has refused to accept them on removal and who have been returned to the UK will not be granted leave to enter or remain. If they are granted temporary admission we will make further attempts to remove them through re-documentation or the use of international instruments as appropriate.

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers with dental qualifications entered the UK in each of the last three years. [50656]

Mr. McNulty: Information on how many asylum seekers with dental qualifications have entered the UK is not available.

Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidance he gives to his officials on the time in which they should respond to requests for information to process entry clearance applications from overseas posts. [50063]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 9 February 2006]: There exists a Service Level Agreement between UKvisas and IND (Evidence & Enquiry Unit), which sets a process time of 25 days from receipt of straightforward written inquiries from posts abroad to the despatch of responses.

Mr. Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether those convicted of offences involving incitement to violence will be covered by his powers to deprive people of (a) citizenship and (b) abode as set out in the Immigration, Asylum and Nationality Bill; and if he will make a statement. [50174]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 9 February 2006]: This kind of offence might well lead us to explore the possibility of taking deprivation action. It would depend on the precise circumstances of the offence and the full context. We would need to make a judgment about the seriousness of the offence and whether it was conducive to the public good to take such action.

John Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many (a) immigration and (b) asylum applications switched to spouse status in each year since 1992, broken down by country of origin; [49072]

(2) how many asylum applicants switched to migration applications in each year since 1992. [49110]

Mr. McNulty: Migrants who wish to vary the basis of their stay while in the UK must meet the relevant requirements of the immigration rules. There has never been any provision for asylum applicants to switch into managed migration routes, including marriage. Statistics on switching into the marriage category from other immigration categories are not available.

However, each case is considered on its individual merits, and caseworkers have discretion to grant leave where there are particular compelling circumstances. To compile statistics would require review of individual cases and hence the information requested is available only at disproportionate cost.

John Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) work permit recipients and (b) immigration applicants switched to asylum applications in each year since 1992. [49109]

Mr. McNulty: Any migrant who is in the UK under an Immigration Rules category such as work permit holder can make a claim for asylum if they believe they have a well founded fear of return under the UN Convention. There are no published statistics on the numbers of people in the UK in another capacity who subsequently make a claim for asylum.

The number of work permit recipients who switched to asylum applications in each year since 2003 (according to our CID records) are:

	Number
2003	41
2005	49

The number of other immigration applications who switched to asylum applications in each year since 2003 (according to our CID records) are:

	Number
2003	897
2005	719

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when Joseph Thabet, reference LR1921 00 5904, will receive notification of his immigration status. [50307]

Mr. McNulty: The Immigration and Nationality Directorate (IND) wrote to Mr. Thabet advising him of his immigration status on 6 February. IND also wrote to the hon. Member to advise him of the outcome of this case on 8 February.

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list ports and airports which have had a permanent presence of immigration officials in each year since 1999–2000. [49753]

Mr. McNulty: Immigration coverage of international arrivals is based upon a range of factors, including the nature and frequency of traffic and the numbers of passengers requiring leave to enter at each port. There are currently 41 manned ports, of which 16 are staffed 24 hours a day in the UK. These ports are Belfast, Birmingham, Bristol, Cardiff, East Midlands, Edinburgh, Gatwick, Glasgow, Heathrow, Liverpool, Luton, Manchester, Robin Hood, Stansted, Harwich and Portsmouth. All except Robin Hood have been staffed permanently since 1999. Robin Hood opened in 2005 and has been staffed 24 hours a day since then. Other ports are covered on a risk assessed and intelligence basis. Officers are deployed to unmanned ports to meet specific arrivals where necessary.

Child Protection

Bob S[illegible]: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidance he has issued to police on the use of cautions in respect of the offence of having indecent pictures of children. [48539]

Fiona Mactaggart [holding answer 2 February 2006]: Guidance on the cautioning of adult offenders is contained in the Cautioning of Adult Offenders Circular 30/2005 issued by the Home Office. The circular offers a framework to help police officers exercise their discretion and professional judgment, but does not provide guidance in relation to individual offences.

The questions to consider in each case are whether a caution is appropriate to the offence and the offender, and whether a caution is likely to be effective in the circumstances. Broadly, the criteria for cautioning are that there should be sufficient evidence of guilt and a clear and reliable admission of the offence, that it is in the public interest to use a caution as the appropriate means of disposal, and that the suspect should be 18 years or over.

Indictable-only cases must be referred to the Crown Prosecution Service. If all the above requirements are met, the police officer must consider whether the seriousness of the offence makes it appropriate for disposal by a caution. In order to assist with this decision, officers have been provided with a Gravity Factors Matrix, which is available on the Police National Legal Database. The guidance offers general advice in relation to sexual offences, which include the offence of possessing indecent images of children under 16.

It advises that a decision to issue a caution in cases involving such offences should not be taken without consulting other relevant agencies. Currently a caution received on or after 1 May 2004 for a relevant sexual offence makes the offender subject to the notification requirements of the Sexual Offences Act 2003 for two years from the date of the caution.

Community Policing

Julie Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to develop community policing. [50411]

Hazel Blears: The Government wants local policing services to be driven by neighbourhood and community needs. We want local people to have a say in what the priorities are, and to know, trust and have confidence in their local policing team.

We are therefore committed to ensuring that, by 2008, every area in England and Wales will benefit from dedicated, accessible and visible neighbourhood policing teams—led by police officers but involving special constables, community support officers, volunteers, neighbourhood wardens and others too. A programme to deliver on this commitment is well under way.

Correspondence

Sir Gerald Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will reply to the letter dated 25 October from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Razia Sultana. [38422]

Mr. Charles Clarke: I replied to the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton on 20 December 2005.

Clare Short: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the Immigration and Nationality Directorate will reply to the letter from the right hon. Member for Birmingham, Ladywood, of 23 September 2005 on behalf of Corene, Germane and Jeremy Williams, children of Conrad Williams (Home Office Reference W1018091, acknowledgement reference B2263815). [49851]

Mr. McNulty: The Immigration and Nationality Directorate wrote to the right hon. Member for Birmingham, Ladywood on 8 February 2006.

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when his Department will reply to the letter of 6th December from the hon. Member for Warley regarding Mr. Faisal Ahmed of Smethwick. [50840]

Mr. McNulty: The Immigration and Nationality Directorate wrote to the right hon. Member for Warley on 8 February 2006.

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when his Department will reply to the letter of 15 November 2005 from the hon. Member for Warley regarding Mr. Tirath Singh of Oldbury. [50841]

Mr. McNulty: The Immigration and Nationality Directorate replied to the right hon. Member for Birmingham, Warley on 10 February 2006.

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when his Department will reply to the letter of 14 November 2005 from the right hon. Member for Warley regarding Mr. Santokh Singh Dhanda, of Smethwick. [50843]

Mr. McNulty: The Immigration and Nationality Directorate wrote to my right hon. Friend on 6 February 2006.

Sir Gerald Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will reply to the letter dated 22 November 2005 from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton with regard to Ms A. Khalik. [41842]

Mr. Charles Clarke: I wrote to my right hon. Friend on 12 January 2006.

Credit Cards

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will take steps to compel credit card companies to report the (a) theft and (b) misuse of credit cards to the police; and if he will make a statement. [47218]

Paul Goggins: It is for credit card companies and individuals to decide whether to report theft or misuse of credit cards to the police and I have no plans to introduce powers to compel them to do so. The banking industry, which maintains comprehensive statistics on the level of plastic card fraud, works closely, with the police to tackle fraud and is funding a successful specialist police unit (The Dedicated Cheque and Plastic Crime Unit) to tackle organised cheque and card fraud.

Criminal Injuries Compensation

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the average length of time taken to settle applications for criminal injuries compensation was in (a) 2004 and (b) 2005. [49046]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority advise that the median average elapsed time from the date of receipt of an application to the date of first offer was 248 days in 2004, and 291 days in 2005.

Departmental Finance

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which functions of his core Department are carried out in (a) England and (b) London; and what administrative costs associated with these functions were for each area in the last year for which figures are available. [39820]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Home Office functions cover a wide range of activities across the United Kingdom and it is not possible, without incurring disproportionate costs, to identify these in the way that has been requested.

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which functions of his core Department are carried out in (a) Northern Ireland and (b) Wales; and what administrative costs were associated with these functions for each area in the last year. [39945]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Home Office functions cover a wide range of activities across the United Kingdom and it is not possible, without incurring disproportionate costs, to identify these in the way that has been requested.

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what functions in his Department are carried out in Scotland; and what the administrative costs of these functions were in the last year for which figures are available. [40014]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Home Office functions cover a wide range of activities across the United Kingdom and it is not possible, without incurring disproportionate costs, to identify these in the way that has been requested.

Departmental Property

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) personal computers, (b) laptops, (c) servers, (d) printers, (e) scanners, (f) photocopiers and (g) fax machines (i) his Department and (ii) each (A) non-departmental public body, (B) executive agency and (C) other public body for which his Department is responsible in each English region owned in (1) 2003–04 and (2) 2004–05. [40074]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The large majority of IT equipment used by the Department is leased from IT provider, Sirius.

The large majority of IT equipment used by the Department does not therefore appear on the asset register as the Home Office does not own it.

IT items of equipment owned outright by Home Office Core are listed, using the same lettering sequence as the question (a) in both 2003–04 and in 2004–05, three were owned (b) in both 2003–04 and in 2004–05, 620 were owned (c) in 2003–04, 181 were owned; in 2004–05, 182 were owned (d) in both 2003–04 and 2004–05, five were owned (e) in both 2003–04 and 2004–05, 54 were owned (f) in 2003–04, 0 were owned; in 2004–05, two were owned (g) in both 2003–04 and 2004–05, one was owned.

This response does not include items owned by non-departmental public bodies, Executive agencies or other public bodies.

Detention, Escort and Population Unit

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many requests for reasons of detention were received by the Detention, Escort and Population Management Unit in each of the last three years. [50647]

Mr. McNulty: None.

DNA

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what response he (a) has made and (b) plans to make to the recommendations in the Select Committee on Science and Technology's Seventh Paper, Forensic Science on Trial, HC96 2004–05, that independent research should be undertaken to assess (i) the public attitude towards retention of DNA samples from convicted criminals and others and (ii) the evidence of benefits associated with retaining DNA samples. [47538]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Government's response to the recommendations in the Select Committee's report was placed in the House Library on 25 July 2005. The benefits of retaining DNA profiles on the national DNA database is evidenced by the number of matches with crime scene stains which provide vital intelligence to the police in the investigation of those offences.

Domestic Violence, Crime and Victims Act

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on progress in implementing section 14 of the Domestic Violence, Crime and Victims Act 2004. [37750]

Fiona Mactaggart: Section 14 of the Domestic Violence, Crime and Victims Act 2004 has not yet been implemented.

Drug Offences

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of people arrested tested positive for (a) opiates, (b) cocaine and (c) any drug at the time of their arrest in each of the last five years. [47716]

Mr. Charles Clarke: We cannot currently provide this information on a national basis, or for the specified years. However, some indication is provided by research published by the Home Office in 2004 from the New English and Welsh Arrestee Drug Abuse Monitoring Programme (NEW-ADAM).

This provided information on the proportion of arrested persons testing positive for drugs who had voluntarily agreed to an interview and to provide a urine specimen for analysis. The research was undertaken in selected large custody suites in 16 police force areas between 1999 and 2001 involving approximately 3,000 arrestees, 95 per cent. of whom agreed to provide a urine sample.

The research showed that for those arrestees voluntarily providing a urine sample, (a) 31 per cent. tested positive for opiates (b) 22 per cent. for cocaine and (c) 69 per cent. for any drug excluding alcohol.

The NEW-ADAM survey programme has been replaced by a new, continuous, nationally-representative Arrestee Survey. Results from the first year of the survey, covering interviews with about 7,500 arrestees in 60 custody suites from around the country conducted between October 2003 and September 2004, will be published shortly. The survey is on-going and will provide information on trends in drug use among all arrestees in the future.

The Drug Interventions Programme (DIP) was introduced by this Government to break the links between drugs and crime. The intensive form of the programme operates in 97 areas with a history of high levels of drug related crime. Individuals charged with a range of trigger offences, identified through research to be closely linked to drug misuse, are drug tested for specified class A drugs.

New provisions contained in the Drugs Act 2005 were successfully implemented in three police force areas on 1 December 2005. Testing on arrest now becomes an alternative to testing on charge for those adults arrested for a "trigger offence", enabling adults misusing specified class A drugs to be identified earlier in their contact with the criminal justice system, so that they may be steered into treatment and away from crime as soon as possible. Those testing positive will be required to attend an assessment of their drug use. The provisions will be rolled out to the remaining intensive areas in England on 31 March 2006.

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were sentenced to 14 years imprisonment for dealing in (a) cannabis, (b) heroin and (c) cocaine in each year since 1993. [48444]

Fiona Mactaggart [holding answer 2 February 2006]: The information requested is contained in the table.

Number of persons sentenced to immediate custody for a period of exactly 14 years for the offence of dealing[1] in cannabis, heroin and cocaine, in England and Wales—1994 to 2004

Offenders

Drug Testing/Treatment Programmes

John Penrose: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many individuals were tested for drugs in North Somerset in (a) 2003, (b) 2004 and (c) 2005; and how many tests were (i) positive and (ii) negative in each year. [45249]

Paul Goggins: The Drug Interventions Programme (DIP) is a critical part of the Government's strategy for tackling drugs. Intensive elements of the programme are operational in 97 high acquisitive crime areas and include testing for class A drugs on charge for certain trigger offences.

From 1 December 2005 new provisions contained in the Drugs Act 2005 have been implemented in three police force areas: Greater Manchester, South Yorkshire and Nottingham. These give police powers to test for specified class A drugs on arrest and to require persons who have tested positive for a specified class A drug to attend an assessment of their drug use (an initial assessment). Whilst the DIP provisions for drug testing are not operational in North Somerset but other key elements of the programme are. Offenders can be tested for drug use as a requirement of a community sentence, either as part of a drug treatment and testing order (DTTO) or, since April 2005, a drug rehabilitation requirement (DRR) of the community order. The number of DTTOs and DRRs made in North Somerset from 2003–05 were:

	DTTOs	DRRs

The results of drug tests on offenders subject to DTTOs/DRRs within North Somerset from 2003–05 is not centrally available. Drug testing of prolific and other priority offenders (PPOs) on licence was introduced across England and Wales from April 2005. Three PPOs within North Somerset had been made subject to such a licence condition up to 31 December 2005. Aggregated drug test data for PPOs on licence within North Somerset are not routinely collected centrally.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 20 December 2005, Official Report, column 2892W, on drug testing (drivers), what discussions he has had with his Australian counterpart on the use of tests on saliva for the presence of drugs. [R] [48120]

Paul Goggins: The Home Office Scientific Development Branch is currently developing a device to test for the presence of drugs via analysis of saliva. The branch keeps fully abreast of relevant work in other countries, including the recent developments in Australia. An official from the branch attended in December a conference reporting the Australian experience and other findings worldwide. All relevant material will be taken properly into account as work continues.

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many drug testing and treatment conditions have been attached to (a) action plan orders and (b) supervision orders. [47713]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Government remain committed to exploring as many avenues as possible to ensure that young people receive appropriate provision to address their substance misuse. Drug treatment and testing conditions attached to action plan orders and supervision orders are part of a range of available interventions.

The latest monitoring data (December 2005), shows that 14 drug treatment and testing conditions have been attached to supervision orders in the five areas where this intervention has been piloted. To date, courts have not applied either a treatment option, or a treatment and testing option to an action plan order. It is recognised that not all young people will be assessed as needing the rigours of an on-going drug treatment or drug treatment and testing requirement to address their substance misuse. The important principle remains to make the widest range of interventions available to young people.

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have committed an offence within a year of completing a drug treatment programme in each of the last five years. [47714]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Information on reoffending following completion of a programme is not routinely collated on an individual basis. Research evidence shows that drug treatment can lead to a significant reduction in drug taking and associated offending. In prisons, research into the effectiveness of drug interventions shows that completion of an intensive treatment programme can lead to significantly lower rates of reconviction (up to 10 per cent.) after two years, provided treatment was continued on release.

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many referrals were made to the Cambridgeshire probation area regarding (a) drug treatment and testing orders and (b) drug rehabilitation requirements in the last period for which figures are available. [48145]

Fiona Mactaggart: 31 drug treatment and testing orders (DTTOs) and 62 community orders with a drug rehabilitation requirement (DRR) were made in Cambridgeshire between April-December 2005, the last period for which figures are available.

Drugs

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what funds his Department has contributed to UK efforts to halt the import of illegal drugs from Afghanistan. [47725]

Paul Goggins: In 2005-06 £380 million is going towards reducing the availability of illegal drugs in the UK. It is not possible to disaggregate the amount by origin of the drugs.

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what policies his Department has developed to deal with the flow of illegal drugs into the UK from Afghanistan. [47727]

Paul Goggins: The Government's Drug Strategy aims to reduce the harms caused by all illicit drugs. It focuses on the most dangerous drugs—heroin, crack and cocaine—the most damaged communities and the problematic drug users who cause the most harm to themselves and others. The Strategy takes a holistic approach which complements efforts to reduce the supply of drugs with action to diminish demand.

The White Paper, "One Step Ahead, a 21st Century Strategy to defeat organised crime" (Cm 6167) set out our plans for tackling organised crime, of which Class A drugs trafficking forms a part. They are based on the principle of reducing harm and include the establishment of the Serious Organised Crime Agency with effect from 1 April.

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures he is taking with European partners to stem the import of illegal drugs from Afghanistan. [47728]

Paul Goggins: We co-operate closely with police, customs and other law enforcement agencies in Europe, both bilaterally and through Europol, to interdict drug supply from Afghanistan, and to target the criminal groups who profit from this trade, all along the supply chain. We are also seeking to increase the amount of assistance provided by the ED to the counter-narcotics work of the Government of Afghanistan. In 2005 the total assistance given by the European Commission and EU member states rose by 250 million euros.

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment his Department has made of the effects on heroin use in the UK of the illegal drugs trade in Afghanistan. [47729]

Paul Goggins: We estimate that over 90 per cent. of the heroin which reaches the UK originates in Afghanistan.

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to ensure that front-line staff in the (a) police and (b) probation services have adequate education and training concerning crack cocaine use and treatment. [47694]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The primary responsibility for the training of police officers and probation officers lies with their respective professional organisations.

To assist both the probation service and police the National Treatment Agency has established a work programme specifically to address this issue, which focuses on: developing a comprehensive training package for front-line staff based on new occupational standards; piloting a range of new materials and tools to enable front-line staff to work more effectively with crack users; evaluating existing specialist services with a view to identifying and disseminating good practice.

Probation officer training has modules on substance misuse, which are consistent with the Drug and Alcohol National Occupational Standards (DANOS).

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his most recent estimate is of the worth of the UK heroin market. [47715]

Mr. Charles Clarke: In 2000 the Home Office published "Sizing the UK Market for Illicit Drugs", www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/pdfs/occ74-drugs.pdf, which provides estimates of the value of the UK market for illicit drugs in 1998. This estimates that the total value of the UK market for heroin in 1998 was £2,313 million.

Feltham Young Offenders

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many accidents in the security links corridors at Feltham young offenders institution have been experienced by prison officers responding to alarm bells in each of the past five years. [48621]

Fiona Mactaggart [holding answer 2 February 2006]: The figures are set out in the table. Figures for 2001 to 2003 are drawn from all available accident books, and for 2004-05 from accident investigation documents.

Number of accidents in the security links corridors at Feltham young offenders institution

	Number of accidents
2001	0
2002	6
2003	6
2004	2
2005	5

Financial Fraud

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of financial fraud suffered by individuals was represented by card-not-present fraud in the latest year for which figures are available. [50275]

Paul Goggins: APACS (the UK payments association) figures show that in 2004 card not present fraud represented just under 30 per cent. of all plastic card fraud losses. Card not present fraud accounted for £150.8 million of the £504.8 million total.

Fixed-penalty Notices

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many fixed penalty notices have been issued for drunk and disorderly behaviour in each of the last four years, broken down by police authority. [29350]

Mr. Charles Clarke: After being piloted in four police forces between August 2002 and September 2003, penalty notices for disorder were rolled out to all police forces in England and Wales during 2004. The following table gives figures for the number of penalty notices issued for being drunk and disorderly in 2004 by each police force, alongside provisional figures for January to July 2005.

Home Detention Curfews

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps are being taken to speed up the process for (a) tagging criminals and (b) prosecuting violators of curfews. [48685]

Fiona Mactaggart: The electronic monitoring contractors must comply with strict Home Office deadlines for tagging people and prosecuting curfew breaches. Any under-performance results in financial deductions from the amount paid to them for delivering the electronic monitoring service.

In December 2005 the contractors met the deadlines for tagging people in 99.5 per cent. of cases and for breaching curfews in 96.0 per cent. of cases. A cross-agency delivery plan is in place to speed up the enforcement of community penalty breaches, which includes cases where curfew requirements have been breached. Prisoners released under the home detention curfew scheme who fail to comply with the curfew conditions are liable to be recalled to prison by the Secretary of State. The National Offender Management Service is required to issue a revocation order within 24 hours of being notified, by the electronic monitoring contractors, of a confirmed breach of curfew. This target is met in 100 per cent. of cases of HDC breach of curfew.

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people breached home detention curfew conditions and were subsequently returned to custody in each of the last five years. [48795]

Fiona Mactaggart: Information on the number of persons recalled to prison from home detention curfew between 1999 and 2004, by reason for recall, can be found in table 10.7 of Home Office Statistical Bulletin 17/05: 'Offender Management Caseload Statistics, England and Wales, 2004'. Copies of this publication can be found in the Library.

Identity Cards

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received from Windsor constituency in support of identity cards. [50186]

Andy Burnham: Since January 2004, the Identity Cards Programme has received one representation in support of the ID Cards Scheme, in which the correspondent's address identifies them as residing within the constituency of Windsor.

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the Government have undertaken research to test the biometric technology to be used in the proposed identity card scheme; and if he will make a statement. [50258]

Andy Burnham: The specific biometric technology to be used in the identity card scheme will not be finalised until a competitive tendering process is complete. This process cannot commence before the Identity Cards Bill receives Royal Assent. Thus, it is not possible to undertake research to test this technology at this point in time.

However, extensive testing of the technology is planned both during and after the procurement process and market sounding activities have been taking place with potential suppliers in accordance with Office of Government Commerce best practice and in co-operation with Intellect, the UK trade association for the hi-tech industry. Additionally, extensive work has been undertaken in the process of setting relevant requirements around biometrics in advance of the procurement process. A dedicated experienced team are working on this area, who review all latest scientific research in the field and co-operate with experts.

This involves working with leading biometric experts from the US National Institute for Standards and Technology, San Jose University, UK National Physical Laboratory and the Communications-Electronic Security Group among others, who have conducted a significant amount of reputable research into the performance of biometrics.

This work is also informed by the experiences of other biometric schemes both within the UK and outside, such as US Visit and biometric cards schemes in the Philippines and Hong Kong. The findings of this work to date is that biometrics are suitable for use in large scale operations such as the proposed identity cards scheme. Finally, this work is subject to significant oversight by the government's Biometrics Assurance Group, chaired by the Government's Chief Scientific Adviser, Sir David King, and the Home Office Senior Biometric Adviser.

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the possibility of incorporating Police National Computer numbers into the National Identity Register is under consideration; and if he will make a statement. [50259]

Andy Burnham: The possibility of incorporating the Police National Computer number into the National Identity Register is not under consideration. At Commons Report stage of the Identity Cards Bill, the Government amended the Bill so that, under Clause 1(6), any number allocated to a person for identification purposes which would reveal personal sensitive data (within the meaning of the Data Protection Act 1998 (c.29)) or whose disclosure would tend to reveal such data was not a registrable fact. This was introduced as a safeguard as it rules out explicitly the possibility of the Police National Computer being recorded on the National Identity Register.

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether (a) planning work and (b) cost estimates have been undertaken regarding the assessment of applications for exemptions when the Identity Card Scheme becomes compulsory; and if he will make a statement. [50260]

Andy Burnham: Detailed planning and cost estimates have not been undertaken in respect of assessments of applications for exemptions. These issues will be considered closer to the time when there is a definitive proposal to implement compulsory registration.

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much he estimates it will cost an individual to obtain a replacement identity card if it is (a) stolen, (b) lost and (c) damaged. [50271]

Andy Burnham: No final decisions have been taken regarding the cost of replacement identity cards if an individual's card is lost, stolen or damaged. Any fee charged in these circumstances will require the approval of Parliament.

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 6 February 2006, Official Report, column 946W on identity cards, if he will publish the security risk assessment reports that have been produced. [50315]

Andy Burnham: The Government will not publish these assessments. To do so would put at risk the future security and integrity of the identity cards scheme.

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 8 November 2005, Official Report, column 344W, on identity cards, what the results were of his Department's further analysis of the estimates for the benefits which are defined as not yet qualified completely in paragraph 25 of the Regulatory Impact Assessment of the identity card scheme of 25 May 2005; and whether that analysis is complete. [50325]

Andy Burnham: The identity cards programme is continuing to identify and quantify benefits alongside detailed benefits realisation planning for those benefits which have already been identified. The analysis is ongoing and the results are fed into the business case at major review points.

Identity Fraud

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to his written statement of 2 February 2006, Official Report, columns 29–31WS, on identity fraud, what his Department's definition of identity fraud is; and whether it is the same as the definition given by the Cabinet Office in its 2002 report. [50283]

Andy Burnham [holding answer 9 February 2006]: The Home Office Identity Fraud Steering Committee (IFSC), a collaboration between UK financial bodies, government and the police to combat the threat of identity theft, has developed a high-level set of identity crime definitions.

The definitions developed by the IFSC evolved from the working definitions and findings in the 2002 Cabinet Office study. The IFSC definition of identity crime is:

1 Identity Crime is a generic term for Identity Theft, creating a False Identity or committing Identity Fraud.

2 False Identity is (a) a fictitious (ie invented) identity, or (b) an existing (ie genuine) identity that has been altered to create a fictitious identity.

3 Identity Theft occurs when sufficient information about an identity is obtained to facilitate Identity Fraud, irrespective of whether, in the case of an individual, the victim is alive or dead.

4 Identity Fraud occurs when a False Identity or someone else's identity details are used to support unlawful activity, or when someone avoids obligation/liability by falsely claiming that he/she was the victim of Identity Fraud.

Imams

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the number of imams admitted to the UK since 2000 as ministers of religion who are no longer working as practising imams. [50141]

Mr. McNulty: Anyone granted entry to the UK as a Minister of Religion is admitted on the basis that they will work full time as a Minister of Religion. The first grant of leave is usually for a period of 12 months. Those who apply for further leave to remain or settlement must show that they fully meet the requirements of these Rules.

Immigration and Nationality Directorate

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many files have been lost by the Immigration and Nationality Directorate in each of the past five years; and if he will make a statement. [47162]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The information is not available in the format requested. The Immigration and Nationality Directorate's IT System File Tracking indicates that at present there are 15,994 files unaccounted for, wholly or in part, representing 0.2 per cent. of a total file holding of approximately 6.5 million. A range of measures including additional training and targeted exercises to locate files and update records is currently being pursued to reduce this number.

Internet (China)

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the scale of (a) internet viruses and (b) attempts at internet fraud emanating from China which aim to obtain data from public and commercial bodies in the UK; what agencies are involved in its detection; and if he will make a statement. [49701]

Mr. Charles Clarke [holding answer 6 February 2006]: The National Infrastructure Security Co-ordination Centre (NISCC) issued an alert last summer warning of concerted Trojan email attacks from the Far East against UK Government and business interests. NISCC described the scale of attacks as almost 'industrial.' NISCC offered mitigating advice and information that allowed the Anti Virus Software community to block the attacks.

Khat

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures he is taking to publicise the health risks of khat. [47707]

Paul Goggins: The Advisory Council on the Misuse of Drugs (ACMD) report on khat, published on 19 January, described the health risks associated with the plant. The report made a number of recommendations including on making users aware of the risks. All of the ACMD's recommendations were accepted and an implementation plan is currently being constructed.

Lyons Inquiry

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether his Department has sent a written submission to the Lyons Inquiry on local government finance. [47894]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Lyons Inquiry addresses issues which are of significant importance to Home Office business and we are fully engaged with this piece of work. We are working closely with Sir Michael and his team; we have been feeding in views through the Lyons Inquiry High Level Liaison Group; and my officials are currently examining the interim report so we can provide even more input. I will look closely at the implications for the Home Office of any recommendations which the Lyons Inquiry makes when it reports fully at the end of 2006.

Merchant Seamen (Identity Verification)

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many staff of merchant ships used International Maritime Organisation certificates rather than passports and visas to stay at UK ports in each year since 1999–2000; and whether he has plans to increase the levels of (a) personal identification for and (b) access controls applied to such staff. [49758]

Mr. McNulty: The information requested about the number of staff of merchant ships using International Maritime Organisation certificates rather than passports and visas to stay at UK ports in each year since 1999–2000 is not available.

The United Kingdom currently accepts identity documents, presented by ship's crew for admission to the United Kingdom, which have been issued under the International Labour Organization (ILO) Seafarers' Identity Documents Convention No. 108 in lieu of a passport. We are however currently considering, in conjunction with the Maritime and Coastguard Agency and the Department of Transport, ratifying the new ILO Convention No. 185 adopted in 2003 which aims to introduce measures to improve the security of seafarers' identification including proposals for a new seafarers' identity document.

The Immigration, Asylum and Nationality Bill contains provisions which will enable the Immigration Service to effectively respond to the risk posed by unscrupulous persons posing as sea crew. The Bill contains a power for the Secretary of State to introduce secondary legislation to enable an immigration officer to require crew particulars to be provided before the arrival of the ship and by a specified means. This will allow the Immigration Service to administer a more effective flexible clearance policy based on a better evaluation of the risk. We envisage that the routine collection of crew data will ultimately be implemented in the longer term as part of the e-Borders programme. In the interim, and following the implementation of secondary legislation we will require details of arriving sea crew to be routinely provided in advance.

Methylamphetamine

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will (a) undertake a public awareness campaign about the impact of the misuse of methylamphetamine and (b) set out the risks associated with misuse of the drug. [49296]

Paul Goggins: The risks associated with the misuse of methylamphetamine were clearly set out in the Advisory Council on the Misuse of Drugs (ACMD) report published in November 2005 and available on the Home Office website, www.drugs.gov.uk. I do not plan to undertake a dedicated public awareness campaign about the impact of the drug at this stage but information is readily available at the Frank website www.talktofrank.com.

Ministerial Meetings

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what meetings he and his officials have had since 1 Januafy 2005 with representatives of the United States correctional industry. [46516]

Fiona Mactaggart: Central records are not routinely collated. The following meetings are known to have taken place since one January 2005: The GEO Group was represented at the contracted prisons conference sector held on 12 and 13 January 2006. This conference was attended by officials only. The GEO Group also attended a meeting with officials on 23 January 2006 for private companies interested in delivering services for offenders under the National Offender Management Service.

Ministerial Travel

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on how many occasions since 7 July he has used the London Underground in connection with his official duties. [35022]

Mr. Charles Clarke: All ministerial travel on official business is undertaken fully in accordance with the rules set out in the Ministerial Code and Travel by Ministers, copies of which are in the Library. Like all Cabinet Ministers, I have the use of a Government Car. We do not discuss particular transport arrangements for security reasons.

Murderers

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the average time served was in each year by those convicted of murder and released in the last five years. [47626]

Fiona Mactaggart: Information on the average length of time served for mandatory life sentence prisoners released between 1994 and 2004 can be found in table 10.5 of Home Office Statistical Bulletin 17/05: 'Offender Management Caseload Statistics, England and Wales, 2004'. Copies of this publication can be found in the Library.

National Identity Register

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the public sector databases to which the National Identity Register will be linked. [50276]

Andy Burnham: The National Identity Register will not be directly linked to other public sector database. The Identity Cards Bill provides for the provision of information by and to the Secretary of State for the purposes of administrating and operating the ID Cards Scheme. Achieving this does not require particular public sector databases to be linked to the National Identity Register.

National Offender Management Service

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, what plans the Government have to implement the recommendation of the Chief Inspector of Prisons that the National Offender Management Service, in conjunction with the Department of Health, should develop a national strategy for older and less able prisoners that conforms to the requirements of the Disability Discrimination Act and the National Service Framework for older people. [47567]

Mr. Charles Clarke: With the introduction of the National Offender Management Information System (NOMIS), the National Offender Management Service will continue the current Prison Service policy of assessing prisoners' individual needs. It will require both the public and private sector prison to provide services that meet the needs of older prisoners on a case-by-case basis. The integration of Prison Service health care within the NHS will ensure that the health care provision for older and less able prisoners will be delivered by and become the responsibility of the primary care trusts.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what additional statutory all-Wales bodies he expects will be established under the National Offender Management Service. [49066]

Fiona Mactaggart: It is not currently envisaged that any new statutory all-Wales bodies will be established under the National Offender Management Service.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made as part of the preparations for the National Offender Management Service of services which might be commissioned in Wales within the 1/4/22 pyramid of templates. [49304]

Fiona Mactaggart: A Pathfinder Project was commissioned by the Home Office with the agreement of the Welsh Assembly Government to examine ways of delivering a reducing re-offending strategy within the specific Welsh context. The outcome has led to the joint launch of Joining Together in Wales: an Adult and Young People's Strategy to Reduce Re-offending on one February 2006 by the Welsh Assembly Government and Home Office Ministers.

The strategy identifies the issues and aims that need to be addressed and forms the basis of a consultation to develop a reducing re-offending action plan for Wales. The outcome of the consultation and the subsequent development of the action plan will help inform future commissioning by NOMS of services for Wales, taking into account the National, regional and unitary authority levels in Wales to which you refer.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking as part of the preparations for the National Offender Management Service to enable the Wales Offender Manager to engage effectively with stakeholders and partners from the (a) courts, (b) voluntary community and (c) private sectors. [49305]

Fiona Mactaggart: We have appointed a Director for the National Offender Management Service in Wales whose responsibilities include engaging with stakeholders and partners in Wales to tackle re-offending. We are also working closely with the Welsh Assembly Government at both Ministerial and official level to ensure that the development of the National Offender management Service in Wales takes full account of the issues and structures relevant to Wales. There is also a programme of major events being held across England and in Wales to support the effective engagement of all stakeholders and partners.

Non-violent Offences

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what use is made of custodial remand for those charged with non-violent offences; and if he will make a statement. [49864]

Fiona Mactaggart: The decision on whether to grant bail or remand a defendant in custody is one for the courts to make, in each case, in line with the statutory framework primarily set out in the Bail Act 1976.

The court may withhold bail if it is satisfied that there are substantial grounds for believing that, if released on bail, the defendant would abscond, commit an offence, interfere with witnesses or otherwise obstruct the course of justice. The nature and seriousness of the alleged offence forms only part of the consideration of the court when making the decision whether to grant bail or remand in custody.

The court will also consider the weight of the evidence against the defendant, the defendant's character, antecedents, associations, community ties and past record of complying with bail, as well as any other factors which appear relevant.

Offences Against the Person Act

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many people have been convicted under Section 20 of the Offences Against the Person Act 1861 in each year since 1997; what their average sentence was in each year; and how many in each year were given a home detention curfew; [48875]

(2) how many people have been convicted of an offence under Section 18 of the Offences Against the Person Act 1861 in each year since 1997; what their average sentence was; and how many in each year were given a home detention curfew. [48876]

Fiona Mactaggart: The information requested is shown in the tables.

[1] Includes all appeals where there was a reduction to any aspect of the sentence.

The amount by which the above sentences were reduced is shown in the following table. The table does not identify those cases where the change was to an aspect of sentence other than imprisonment or where the tariff was reduced on a life sentence. Also, whilst all the cases involved a charge under s20, the change to sentence may not have related to that charge.

[1] Includes all appeals where there was a reduction to any aspect of the sentence.

The amount by which the previous sentences were reduced is shown in the following table. The table does not identify those cases where the change was to an aspect of sentence other than imprisonment or where the tariff was reduced on a life sentence. Also, while all the cases involved a charge under s20, the change to sentence may not have related to that charge.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many of those convicted under section 18 of the Offences Against the Person Act 1861 since 1997 have reoffended within a year. [48879]

Fiona Mactaggart: The most recent reoffending data for adults were published in 'Reoffending of adults: results from the 2002 cohort' which is available through the Home Office's website (http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/index.htm).

The report shows the two-year reoffending rates of those offenders who start community penalties or who are discharged from prison in the first quarter of 2002. Further analysis of the 2000 data shows that 27 per cent. of offenders sentenced under section 18 of the Offences against the Person Act 1861 reoffended within one year and were subsequently convicted. The corresponding figure for 2002 is 24 per cent. Reoffending data broken down by legislative act is not readily available for other years.

Police Pounds

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what advice he has given to police authorities on the levying of charges on owners for the retrieval of stolen vehicles from police pounds. [47776]

Paul Goggins: The police have powers to order the removal of any vehicle that is dangerously, obstructively or illegally parked, broken down or abandoned, including vehicles abandoned after being stolen.

The Government regard such removals as important for road safety and crime reduction. Before owners can regain any vehicle so removed, they are required by law to pay fees prescribed by the Secretary of State to meet the costs of removal and storage. The Government consider it would not be appropriate for such costs to fall on the public purse. We recognise, however, the concerns that have been expressed by and on behalf of the owners of stolen vehicles who have had to pay for return of their own property. Following lengthy consideration of all the issues, we have reached agreement with the Association of Chief Police Officers on recommended best practice in such cases.

This includes an immediate notification on report of a vehicle theft as to the need to pay the statutory fees when the vehicle is recovered, a follow-up letter with more detailed information and further information and advice on police force websites.

Prisoners

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of (a) male and (b) female inmates in prisons in England and Wales are considered to be drug dependent. [47719]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Epidemiological studies show the proportion of prisoners assessed as showing signs of dependence on entry into custody are on average (a) 51 per cent. of males and (b) 54 per cent. of females.

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners underwent treatment for drugs dependence in (a) Haltemprice and Howden constituency, (b) the East Riding of Yorkshire and (c) England and Wales in each of the past five years. [49101]

Fiona Mactaggart: Figures for prisoners undergoing drug treatment are given in the table. There are no recorded figures prior to 2001–02. Figures for programme completion were not collected prior to 2004–05.

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners on licence were recalled to prison following a breach of that licence in each of the last eight years. [48790]

Fiona Mactaggart: Information on the number of persons recalled to prison (a) from Home Detention Curfew, (b) from licence following determinate sentences of four years or more, and (c) from life licence can be found in tables 10.7 to 10.9 respectively of Home Office Statistical Bulletin 17/05: Offender Management Caseload Statistics, England and Wales, 2004. Copies of this publication can be found in the House of Commons Library. Information on the number of persons sentenced to less than four years who were not released on Home Detention Curfew and who were recalled to prison from licence between 1999–2000 and 2004–05 is provided in the following table. Most of these recalls are not the result of new charges but because of breach of conditions or changed circumstances. The increase reflects a determination to make supervision under licence an effective part of a sentence.

Number of persons sentenced to less than four years who were not released on HDC and who were recalled from licence in each year

Probation Service

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) probation officer and (b) probation service officers were in post in each probation area at the end of each of the past five financial years. [48449]

Fiona Mactaggart: Information is not available for the full period requested. Data collected prior to 1 April 2003 is unreliable, and is not directly comparable with the more accurate figures collected since that time. The figures presented in the tables show full-time equivalent (FTE) figures at the close of each year from 1 April 2003 and at 30 September 2005.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what matters relating to (a) the probation service and (b) the Prison Service in Wales are reserved matters. [48981]

Fiona Mactaggart [holding answer 6 February 2006]: The probation service and the Prison Service are not devolved. However the National Offender Management Service works closely with the Welsh Assembly Government in respect of any activity that touches on devolved matters (such as health services in prison), and under the Children Act 2004 the Assembly will be able, with the consent of the Home Secretary, to issue guidance to local probation boards and youth offending teams on co-operating with other public bodies in their area with a view to improving the well-being of children.

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of staff were employed in an operational capacity within the National Probation Service in England and Wales at the end of each of the past five financial years. [48451]

Fiona Mactaggart: Information is not available for the full period requested. Data collected prior to one April 2003 is unreliable, and is not directly comparable with the more accurate figures collected since that time. The figures presented in the table show the proportion of staff, in terms of full time equivalent value, employed in an operational capacity at the close of each quarter from one April 2003 to 30 September 2005.

Operational staff in the National Probation Service operate in multi-disciplinary teams including dedicated support staff. For this reason figures have been provided showing both the number of operational staff, and the number of support staff dedicated to operational service teams. The total of these two staff groups gives an accurate representation of the total resource applied to operational services. The total of these two staff groups gives an accurate representation of the total resource applied to operational services.

Prostitution/Alcohol-related Arrests

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many people in (a) Romford and (b) Havering were arrested for offences relating to prostitution in each of the last five years; [48554]

(2) how many alcohol-related arrests have been made in (a) Romford, (b) Havering and (c) London since 24-hour licensing began; and how many such arrests were made in the same period in 2004. [48560]

Fiona Mactaggart: The information requested on arrests is not available centrally. Information on arrests collected is based on persons arrested for recorded crime (notifiable offences) by main offence group (ie sexual offences, violence against the person, burglary etc.) and at police force area only and therefore does not identify individual offences or circumstances nor constituency areas or local authorities.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many brothels in (a) Romford and (b) Havering have been closed in the last five years. [48555]

Fiona Mactaggart: This information is not held centrally. However, the Metropolitan Police Clubs and Vice Unit (CO14) advise that, during that period, three brothels have been closed in separate investigations in the areas covered by Romford and Havering, and a number of other brothels have been closed in the same area as a result of three major operations.

Racial and Religious Hatred

Ms Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps the Government plan to take to ensure that no undue arrests are made under the Racial and Religious Hatred Bill once that Bill becomes law. [47932]

Paul Goggins: The question of arrests under the Racial and Religious Hatred Bill when it is brought into force will be entirely a matter for the police. The Home Office will issue guidance for the police and other criminal justice agencies prior to commencement.

Ms Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what post-legislative work has been planned to assess the effectiveness of the Racial and Religious Hatred Bill. [48971]

Paul Goggins: Like all new offences, operation of the new offence of incitement to religious hatred will be monitored by the Home Office and criminal justice agencies. We intend to conduct a preliminary review of the effectiveness of the legislation one year after commencement, with a full review three years after commencement. Records will be maintained of the number of prosecutions and convictions for the new offence.

Ms Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what definition he uses of recklessness in the context of religious hatred. [48245]

Paul Goggins: The Government's Racial and Religious Hatred Bill, as amended by Parliament on 31 January, does not contain a "recklessness" provision. The proposed offence of incitement to religious hatred is now limited to words or behaviour that are intended to stir up religious hatred.

Real Women Programme

Dr. Blackman-Woods: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to roll out the Real Women Programme for sentencing following its pilot in 2004. [49214]

Fiona Mactaggart: The Real Women Programme (now called The Women's Programme) was fully accredited by the Correctional Services Accreditation Panel(CSAP) in December 2004. It has been rolled out and is available as a sentencing option in the probation areas of South Wales, Hertfordshire and West Midlands. Leicestershire and Rutland Probation Area and London Probation Area are in the process of implementing the programme. We expect that more probation areas will use the programme in 2006-07.

Residential Care Staff (Vetting)

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people applying for positions within residential care and nursing homes in (a) Tamworth, (b) Staffordshire and (c) England are awaiting clearance from the Criminal Records Bureau. [51224]

Andy Burnham: The information requested by the hon. Member for Tamworth is not available. The Criminal Records Bureau (CRB) is unable to provide information on Disclosure applications based on specific employment sectors or geographical areas. The CRB aims to complete Disclosure applications across all sectors within the shortest time possible. Its published service standards are to issue 93 per cent. of Standard Disclosures within two weeks and 90 per cent. of Enhanced Disclosures within four weeks for all applications.

Sexually Transmitted Diseases

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will bring forward measures to clarify criminal law on the transmission of HIV and other sexually transmitted diseases. [49235]

Fiona Mactaggart: The Government are working with the Crown Prosecution Service to produce guidance on this aspect of the law for prosecutors and for the public.

Student Visas

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the countries, or parts of countries, from which students with student visas are required to report changes of residence; and how many such changes in residence were reported to each police centre in the last two complete academic years. [51351]

Mr. McNulty: The position has not changed since my earlier answer to my hon. Friend on 12 July 2005, Official Report, column 142.

War Criminals

Emily Thornberry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how often the EU network of contacts established to exchange information to help investigate and prosecute suspected war criminals has met with a view to exchanging information about experiences, practices and methods, pursuant to Article 5 of the Council Decision of 8 May 2003 (2003/335/JHA); and if he will make a statement; [50302]

(2) what assessment he has made of the (a) operation and (b) effectiveness of the European network of contact points in respect of persons responsible for genocide, crimes against humanity and war crimes; and if he will make a statement [50303]

(3) if he will list the EU network of contact points established to exchange information to help investigate and prosecute suspected war criminals in accordance with European Council Decision of 13 June 2002 (2002/494/JHA). [50304]

Andy Burnham: The European network of contact points in respect of persons responsible for genocide, crimes against humanity and war crimes has met twice, on 23-24 November 2004 and 28-29 June 2005. A further meeting is planned during the Austrian presidency of the European Union. UK representatives who have attended meetings of the network have found it helpful in establishing contacts with foreign authorities responsible for investigating these offences. The current list of contact points has not been made public.

Work Permits

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 23 January 2006, Official Report, columns 1791-92W, on work permits, if he will break down each figure given by type of application. [50277]

Mr. McNulty: The tables show the number of permits approved for posts in the health and medical industry for each month in 2004 and 2005 broken down by country and type of application. The table one details the figures for 2004 and table two details the figures for 2005. This data is not provided under National Statistics protocols. It has been derived from local management information and is therefore provisional and subject to change. A copy will be placed in the Library.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many work permits were granted to health workers from overseas in each year between 1997 and 2003, broken down by (a) country of origin and (b) applications (i) made overseas, (ii) made in-country, (iii) for extensions and (iv) for change of employment. [50282]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 9 February 2006]: The table shows the number of permits approved for posts in the health and medical industry for each year between 1997 and 2003 broken down by country and type of application. This data is not provided under National Statistics protocols. It has been derived from local management information and is therefore provisional and subject to change. A copy of the table will be placed in the Library.

Young Offenders

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many arrests of minors were made in Wales in each of the last five years. [48561]

Fiona Mactaggart: Information available on arrests of minors in Wales is given in the table.

Number of persons aged 10–17 arrested for recorded crime (notifiable offences), Wales

	Total notifiable offences
2000–01[1]	15,817
2001–02[1]	16,021
2002–03	19,446
2003–04	19,930
2004–05	19,135

[1] Gwent was unable to supply arrests data by age group and therefore excluded from the total.

HEALTH

"Fuel for Living" Booklet

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the cost has been of the development of the "Fuel for Living" booklet; how many copies of the booklet will be published; at what cost; and if she will make a statement. [42189]

Caroline Flint: The cost of developing the "Fuel for Living" recipe booklet was £27,000. One million copies of the booklet have been produced at a cost of £58,500.

The "Fuel for Living" recipe booklet is part of the 5 A DAY campaign, which provides information and practical advice to improve the diet. The booklet targets the young independent group of 16 to 24-year-olds, who have a lower than average intake of fruit and vegetables so there is a need to provide information and help to improve their diet.

"Health Reform in England: Update and Next Steps"

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Health in respect of the proposed NHS reforms outlined in "Health Reform in England: update and next steps", whether practice based contracting will apply to all care or only to non-hospital care. [47469]

Mr. Byrne: The only services that are outside the scope of practice based commissioning for 2006–07 are services that are commissioned regionally or nationally and core general practitioner services.

ADHD

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she will list the attention deficit hyperactivity disorder support groups which receive funding from the NHS; and how much each has received in 2005–06; [48075]

(2) what recent discussions have taken place between her Department and attention deficit hyperactivity disorder support groups. [48076]

Mr. Byrne: Information about national health service support for attention deficit hyperactivity disorder support groups is not collected centrally. However, the Department currently supports one attention deficit hyperactivity disorder support group via the section 64 grant scheme. In 2005–06, the National Attention Deficit Disorder Information and Support Service are receiving £40,000 as a contribution towards their central administrative costs.

Adverse Drug Reactions

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patient reports of adverse drug reactions have been received (a) online and (b) through a yellow card form in each month since patients were permitted to report adverse drug reactions directly. [46402]

Jane Kennedy: Reports of suspected adverse drug reaction (ADR) reports are collected by the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency (MHRA) and Commission for Human Medicines (CHM) through the spontaneous reporting scheme, the yellow card scheme.

Following recommendations from an independent review of access to the yellow card scheme, patients and their representatives are now encouraged to report suspected adverse drug reactions directly to the MHRA and CHM. Direct reporting from patients was launched as a small-scale pilot in January 2005 and expanded to a United Kingdom-wide pilot in October 2005. Patients are able to submit reports both electronically and via a purpose designed paper yellow card.

The table shows the total number of patient adverse drug reaction (ADR) reports received each month between 17 January 2005 and 31 December 2005, along with a breakdown of the number of paper and electronic internet reports.

Number of ADR reports received from patients between 17 January and 31 December 2005

Received month (2005)	Total	Paper yellow card	Internet yellow card
January	31	3	28
February	58	30	28
March	70	42	28
April	82	48	34
May	63	31	32
June	67	33	34
July	60	28	32
August	129	27	102
September	73	27	46
October[1]	69	22	47
November	79	38	41
December	169	134	35

[1] UK-wide direct patient reporting was launched on 25 October 2005

It is important to note that the submission of a suspected ADR report does not necessarily mean that it was caused by the drug. Many factors have to be taken into account in assessing causal relationships, including temporal association, the possible contribution of concomitant medication and the underlying disease.

Alcohol Consumption

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment her Department has made of the effects of drinking alcohol (a) socially and (b) alone; and what assessment she has made of the different effects of drinking particular alcoholic drinks. [46213]

Caroline Flint: The Department has not made an assessment of the effects of drinking alcohol socially versus alone or of the different effects of drinking particular alcoholic drinks.

"Sensible Drinking: Report of an inter-departmental working group (1995)" sets out the Department's guidance on alcohol consumption and suggests:

> A maximum intake of two to three units per day for women and three to four for men, with two alcohol free days after heavy drinking; continued alcohol consumption at the upper level is not advised.

The Department keeps the evidence of the harmful effects of alcohol under ongoing review to ensure messages are accurate and up to date.

Alcohol Dependence

Kelvin Hopkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what her Department estimates to be the prevalence service utilisation ratio for alcohol-dependent individuals accessing treatment in (a) England and (b) each region. [45217]

Caroline Flint [holding answer 24 January 2006]: The Government's alcohol needs assessment research project (ANARP) research, published in November 2005, estimates the gap between those alcohol-dependent individuals seeking treatment and the level of treatment services that is available.

The prevalence service utilisation ratio for alcohol-dependent individuals accessing treatment in England and each region is shown in the table.

England

Gender	Prevalence service utilisation in need of treatment in treatment
Male	20.8
Female	12.4
All (Average) Regions	18.0
East Midlands	15.7
Eastern	31.2
London	13.2
North East	101.9
North West	11.8
South East	20.2
South West	14.3
West Midlands	15.3
Yorkshire and Humber	46.0

Alimta

Jon Cruddas: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the availability of Alimta on the NHS. [46360]

Jane Kennedy: Alimta is licensed for the treatment of malignant pleural mesothelioma and can be prescribed across the national health Service for those patients who fit the licensed criteria with the agreement of the clinicians and primary care trusts (PCTs) concerned.

The National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) is appraising Alimta for the treatment of mesothelioma and guidance is expected in October 2006.

Funding for licensed treatments should not be withheld because guidance from NICE is unavailable. In these circumstances, we expect PCTs to take full account of available evidence when reaching funding decisions. This is confirmed in "Health Service Circular 1999/176", which asks NHS bodies to continue with local arrangements for the managed introduction of new technologies where guidance from NICE is not available at the time the treatment or technology first became available.

Analogue Hearing Aids

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many pensioners use analogue hearing aids. [49242]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is not held centrally.

Brazilian Beef

Mr. Crabb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the amount of Brazilian beef procured for NHS establishments in the last year for which figures are available. [47472]

Jane Kennedy: The expenditure through framework agreements established by the NHS Purchasing and Supply Agency for Brazilian beef have led to purchases by the national health service from November 2004 through to October 2005 of £7,700.

Capio Healthcare UK

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 17 January 2006, Official Report, column 1293W, on Capio Healthcare UK, whether Dr. Thomas Mann was involved in the evaluation of bids for contracts for the provision of treatment centres or other surgical activity; whether Dr. Mann has been employed by her Department in any capacity since leaving the civil service; and in what capacity Dr. Mann was employed between the time he left the post of director of the national implementation team and the time he left the civil service. [47287]

Mr. Byrne: As director of the national implementation team, Dr. Mann was responsible for the oversight of the evaluation of bids for independent sector treatment centres by subject-matter specialists. Dr. Mann left this post in October 2003 and was thereafter strategic lead on clinical service issues for the implementation team until he left the employment of the civil service in February 2004. From 31 March 2004 until 27 May 2005, Dr. Mann worked on a consultancy basis for the Department's commercial directorate and was not responsible for the evaluation of bids for the provision of independent section treatment centres.

Care Homes

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many care home beds in (a) Greater London, (b) the London borough of Hillingdon and (c) Uxbridge are operated (i) privately and (ii) by local authorities. [46544]

Jane Kennedy: I understand from the chair of the Commission for Social Care Inspection (CSCI) that the number of care home beds in Greater London and the London borough of Hillingdon, which includes Uxbridge, is as shown in the tables.

Care homes in Greater London by capacity and ownership type at 1 January 2006

Owner type	Number of homes	Number of beds
Independent (private)	1,163	25,698
Local authority	113	2,652
NHS	24	234
Voluntary	694	10,841
Other	19	369

Care homes in Hillingdon borough (including Uxbridge) by capacity and ownership type at 1 January 2006

Owner type	Number of homes	Number of beds
Independent (private)	30	1,008
Local authority	6	82
Voluntary	15	109

Note:
Data from CSCI registration and inspection database at 30 January 2006

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Health is she will establish a central record of mortality in respect of care homes residents, with particular reference to those residents who are moved consequent on closure of a care home; and if she will make a statement. [29711]

Mr. Byrne: Under the Care Home Regulation 2001, care homes have a duty to notify the Commission for Social Care Inspection of deaths, illness and other events that occur to residents.

I understand from the chair of the Commission for Social Care Inspections (CSCI), that CSCI has a central database that records the death of residents in care homes and can track the number of deaths at a specific care home, but is unable to identify mortality rates in relation to the closure of a care home.

The Government have already announced a review of the national minimum standards and accompanying regulations and a full consultation exercise will be conducted.

Carers

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance and advice her Department provides for carers of elderly people in their own homes; where carers can obtain such guidance; and if she will place copies in the Library. [48351]

Mr. Byrne: The Department published a book entitled 'Who cares? Information and support for the carers of people with dementia' as well as a leaflet entitled 'How to get help in looking after someone'. Both publications are available on the Department's website at www.dh.gov.uk/assetRoot/04/12/36/29/04123629.pdf and www.dh.gov.uk/assetRoot/04/08/02/37/04080237.pdf or ordered from the Department's orderline at P.O. Box 777, London SE1 6XH telephone: 08701 555455. Copies of both publications are available in the Library.

In addition, the Department provides information and useful links for carers and those working with them on their website at www.carers.gov.uk

Chiropody

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress her Department is making towards establishing high-street drop-in centres for chiropody. [49561]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 7 February 2006]: The White Paper, Our health, "our care, our say", sets out the future direction for healthcare, including access to allied health professions (AHPs). The implementation will address additional access for AHP services including chiropody.

Choose and Book System

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the cost was of the infrastructure of choose and book in (a) 2004–05 and (b) 2005–06 to date. [41961]

Mr. Byrne: The cost of the central infrastructure of choose and book was £12.7 million in 2004–05 and £5.4 million in 2005–06 to date.

Citizens Juries

Mr. Wills: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on how many occasions her Department consulted citizens' juries on departmental policies in the last five years; in how many of those consultations the recommendations of the citizens' jury differed from existing departmental policy; and on how many occasions departmental policy was changed to reflect the recommendations of the citizens' jury. [46231]

Mr. Byrne: Officials have not reported using citizen juries during the period specified. However, the Department does use a wide range of consultation methods to inform policy-making. For example, the recent consultation exercise leading up to the publication of the White Paper "Our health, our care, our say" involved a number of deliberative events which brought together ordinary members of the public to debate policy options. The outputs of these discussions strongly influenced the policy choices put forward in the final document.

Civil Servants (Overseas Visits)

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what costs were incurred by her Department as a result of sending civil servants on overseas visits in each of the last 10 years. [46283]

Mr. Byrne: The information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Civil Service Relocation

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many departmental civil service jobs have been relocated to Scotland in each year since 2001. [47326]

Jane Kennedy [holding answer 1 February 2006]: No departmental civil service jobs from the Department have been relocated to Scotland in the period since 2001.

Clinical Guidelines

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if her Department will issue the NHS with a statutory direction to fund clinical guidelines. [47234]

Jane Kennedy: I have no plans to issue such a direction.

Communication Aid Equipment

Miss Begg: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to provide statutory funding for the provision of communication aid equipment. [49084]

Mr. Byrne: Primary care trusts (PCTs) and local councils receive substantial funding from Government each year. Within those allocations, it is for local PCTs and councils to fund and provide appropriate communication aids for their population through their integrated community equipment services in the light of local needs and priorities.

Compensation Claims

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the cost to public funds has been of claims for compensation from the NHS in each year since 1998. [46154]

Jane Kennedy: Information requested on the cost to public funds for all types of compensation claims from the national health service is not identifiable from NHS annual expenditure returns. Compensation payments made by the NHS Litigation Authority (NHSLA) are, however, identifiable and are shown in the following table.

Compensation paid by NHS Litigation Authority by scheme

[3] The apparent drop in payments under the Liabilities to Third Parties Scheme in 2003–04 was due to a change in invoicing policy by the NHSLA.

Computer Equipment

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice her Department has given to local authorities on the purchase and use of washable keyboards, mice and keyboard readers; and what encouragement her Department has offered them to purchase such items. [47689]

Jane Kennedy [holding answer 2 February 2006]: The purchase of computer equipment is a local responsibility. We do not endorse particular products and such products cannot replace standard infection control measures such as hand hygiene. However, manufacturers can choose to submit their products that may contribute to infection prevention and control to the rapid review panel (RRP) for consideration. The RRP was set up to assess new and novel products that may help to improve infection control and reduce rates of healthcare associated infections. The RRP's recommendations are available on the Health Protection Agency's website at www.hpa.org.uk/infections/topics_az/rapid_review?default.htm and can help inform national health service purchasing decisions.

Cystic Fibrosis

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make it her policy to exempt cystic fibrosis sufferers from prescription charges. [45809]

Jane Kennedy: We have no plans to extend the existing list of medical conditions that give exemption from prescription charges.

The extensive exemption and change remission arrangements mean that 87 per cent. of prescriptions are dispensed free of charge. As a result, many people with medical conditions not on the exempt list already get free prescriptions on other grounds. Anyone in work may claim help through the national health service low income scheme.

Prescription charges are currently being looked at by the Health Select Committee as part of its inquiry into NHS charges.

Dentistry

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to increase access to NHS dentistry in North Yorkshire; and how many additional places have been made available since 1997. [7489]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 27 June 2005]: In September 2004, there were 794,177 patients registered with a national health service dentists in the North and East Yorkshire and Northern Lincolnshire strategic health authority (SHA) area, compared with 906,871 in September 1997.

In 2004-05, £1.3 million of access money for NHS dental services was made available to primary care trusts (PCTs) in the North and East Yorkshire and Northern Lincolnshire SHA area. The four PCTs within the North Yorkshire region are using this money to make available an additional 50,000 patient registrations.

Four Polish dentists are providing services to NHS dental patients in the Scarborough, Whitby and Ryedale PCT and a further nine internationally-recruited dentists are working in the Selby and York PCT area. Furthermore, 0.9 whole time equivalent dentists have returned to work under the "Keeping in Touch" scheme.

Departmental Website

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the cost of maintaining her main departmental website was for the last year for which figures are available; and how many visitors there were to the site in each of the last 12 months. [46305]

Jane Kennedy: The cost of the Department's corporate website (www.dh.gov.uk) and sub domain sites (www.info.doh.gov.uk, www.publications.doh.gov.uk, www.performance.doh.gov.uk and www.advisorybodies.doh.gov.uk) for the year 2004-05 was £724,956. These figures include hosting and maintenance, development and dedicated staff costs, using agreed civil service staff costs, including salaries, common services, etc.

The total number of visits to the main Department of Health website (www.dh.gov.uk) for the period January to December 2005 was 16,796,568. There were on average 871,497 unique users per month. The figures broken down by calendar month are shown in the table.

Diamorphine

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what the stocks of diamorphine in England were in each of the last 12 months for which figures are available; [47929]

(2) what steps her Department has taken over the last 12 months to address shortages of diamorphine; [47930]

(3) what guidance her Department has issued to health professionals over the last 12 months regarding the use of diamorphine. [47931]

Jane Kennedy: Overall demand for diamorphine has exceeded supply to such an extent that at no time have significant stocks accumulated within the supply chain.

As soon as it became aware that one of the two United Kingdom suppliers of diamorphine was experiencing problems, the Department, with the NHS Purchasing and Supply Agency (PASA) made arrangements for the other supplier to maximise its production, contacted the suppliers of morphine and other opiates to arrange for them to increase production; explored the possibility of obtaining diamorphine from abroad and routinely monitored production of the two suppliers against historic demand, and ensured as far as possible that supplies were available where needed.

On 23 December 2004, the Department issued an alert to the national health service warning healthcare professionals about the shortage of diamorphine and advising them to consider alternative painkillers wherever possible, and to reserve supplies for those patients whose need was greatest. The alert also included interim clinical guidance which was subsequently updated by the Association for Palliative Medicine. Additional guidance for doctors managing patients dependent on diamorphine was issued on 30 December 2004. The Department has also been in regular contact with healthcare professionals and has issued updates to them on the supply situation.

Diamorphine is now available from both Wockhardt UK and Chiron but supplies are still limited and are likely to remain so for the coming months. The Department is continuing to monitor the situation carefully.

Disabled People (Independent Living)

Mr. Hunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the outcome was of the consultation referred to in Improving the Life Chances of Disabled People on whether people should have a right to request not to live in residential or nursing care; and if she will make a statement. [49830]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 7 February 2006]: Consultation on whether people should have the right to request not to live in residential or nursing care was included in the adult social care Green Paper "Independence Well-being and Choice: our vision for the future of social care for adults in England" which ran between 21 March and 28 July 2005.

An analysis of this consultation was published on 19 October 2005 and is available in the Library.

Domiciliary Care

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people over the age of 65 years were supported to live at home in (a) England and (b) each strategic health authority in each year since 1997. [47935]

Mr. Byrne: Information on the number of older people aged 65 or over helped to live at home in England and each strategic health authority as at 31 March, for the years 1998–99 to 2004–05 is shown in the table.

Following the last spending review, the Department was expected to ensure that, by March 2006, the number of older people supported intensively to live at home increased to 30 per cent. of the total being supported by social services at home or in residential care. This target was met two years early, in 2003–04, when the national average reached 30.1 per cent.

Drug Costs

John Hemming: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many fees have been paid to pharmacists for each price category of (a) amlodipine, (b) simvastatin and (c) lisinopril (i) in each month of the last three financial years and (ii) to date in 2005–06; what the value was of each fee; and what the total payment was for each month for each price category of each drug; [48781]

(2) when (a) amlodipine, (b) simvastatin and (c) lisinopril went out of patent; [48782]

(3) what assessment she has made of the generic rates payable for (a) amlodipine, (b) simvastatin and (c) lisinopril since each drug went out of patent; [48783]

(4) what steps she plans to take to ensure that when drugs are out of patent fees are paid at a generic rate rather than a branded rate; and if she will make a statement. [48784]

Jane Kennedy: Data on the number of prescriptions and costs is recorded on a quarterly rather than monthly basis and is only currently available for the period up to September 2005. Table one, provides the number of items prescribed and their net ingredient cost for each of the medicines in each quarter. The drug tariff prices for each of these medicines during the period in question are provided in table two.

Data held by the Department records the following expiry dates for amlodipine, simvastatin and lisinopril:

Amlodipine—March 2004

Simvastatin—May 2003

Lisinopril—October 2002

The reimbursement prices for generic simvastatin and lisinopril followed the usual procedure and timeframe, moving from category C, reimbursement price based on a brand, to category A, reimbursement price based on a basket of generic suppliers, when the generic became available. However, it became apparent that there were significant differences between these generic reimbursement prices and the prices at which they could be purchased by community pharmacy contractors and dispensing doctors. These differences would normally be recovered by a discount inquiry, but these medicines entered the market after the last inquiry. Therefore, following a consultation, the Government reduced the prices of these medicines on two occasions; the first with effect from 1 December 2003 and the second with effect from September 2004.

Following patent expiry of amlodipine, the Department followed the usual procedure for setting a generic reimbursement price moving from category C to category A. However, the entry of amlodipine into category M was delayed 1 October 2005 by supply side instability.

The Department has already taken considerable action to ensure that off patent medicines are reimbursed appropriately. Following an unexpected increase in prices in 1999, the Department introduced a short term maximum price scheme whilst undertaking a wider consultation on the arrangements for the future supply and reimbursement of national health service generic medicines. Taking account of responses to this consultation, as part introduced a new category M into the drug tariff in April 2005 based on a new mechanism for setting reimbursement prices of commonly prescribed generics. The prices of category M medicines now reflect the average manufacturers' market prices after discount, but leave a margin of unrecovered discount as part of pharmacy funding. The prices for category M are recalculated quarterly.

Drug Treatment Programmes

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people have successfully completed a drug treatment programme in each of the last five years. [47701]

Caroline Flint: There are no exact published numbers for the number of people successfully completing treatment prior to 2003–04. In 2003–04, 90,500 persons successfully completed treatment and in 2004–05 there were 120,700.

Easington Primary Care Trust

John Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made by Easington primary care trust in its cessation of smoking programme; and if she will make a statement. [47916]

Mr. Byrne: Annual data for the monitoring of the national health service stop smoking services, for the periods April 2002 to March 2003, April 2003 to March 2004 and April 2004 to March 2005, is shown in table 1.

Provisional results from the quarterly report that monitors the NHS stop smoking services (for the period April 2005 to June 2005—quarter 1 is shown in table 2.

Elderly Care Provision

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will take steps to ensure that elderly patients in (a) hospitals and (b) nursing and residential homes are afforded privacy for personal care. [48356]

Mr. Byrne: "Standards for Better Health" already describes the level of care that national health service organisations are expected to meet, including care that is supportive of patient privacy. The standards are a key part of the performance assessment undertaken by the Healthcare Commission of all health care organisations.

Similarly, in social care settings, the Commission for Social Care Inspection (CSCI) inspects regulated care services against the national minimum standards described in "Care Homes for Older People National Minimum Standards". Privacy and dignity are covered explicitly by these standards.

Both the Healthcare Commission and CSCI have statutory powers to take action where the relevant standards are not being met.

Foster Review

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) when she expects to publish the findings of the Foster review into non-medical health regulation; and if she will make a statement; [46254]

(2) when she expects to publish the findings of the Donaldson review into regulation of the medical profession; and if she will make a statement. [46255]

Jane Kennedy: The last meeting of the Chief Medical Officer's advisory group on medical regulation took place on 20 December 2005. The Chief Medical Officer is now preparing his report taking account of the deliberations of the advisory group, the responses to his Call for Ideas document, and the report of the Shipman inquiry and other relevant inquiries. The review undertaken by Andrew Foster has also involved extensive meetings and reviews of evidence in the complex field of non-clinical regulation. These major pieces of work will be submitted in reports to Ministers when concluded and a statement on the decisions reached given in due course.

General Medical Council

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what the average period between referral to the General Medical Council and a disciplinary hearing taking place was in each year since 2000; [48133]

(2) how many disciplinary cases were heard by the General Medical Council in each year since 2000; [48136]

(3) how many medical practitioners were referred for disciplinary action before the General Medical Council in each year since 2000. [48137]

Jane Kennedy: The Government do not collect data on the General Medical Council's disciplinary processes. I would therefore suggest that the hon. Gentleman writes to the General Medical Council at Regents Place, 350 Euston Road, London, NW1 3JN.

General Practitioners

Jim Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people have attended general practitioner surgeries in the borough of Lewisham in each of the past five years. [47152]

Jane Kennedy: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the cost of general practitioners claiming entitlement for patients who have moved or died and not informed their general practitioner in each of the last five years. [41052]

Mr. Byrne: The Audit Commission are currently carrying out a study, the national duplicate registration initiative, to identify the costs associated with inaccurate patient registrations, including where patients have moved or died, but also to assess how systems may be improved in order to minimise duplications. The report is expected in the spring.

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she is taking to ensure that general practices have a choice of IT systems within defined interoperability standards. [49430]

Mr. Byrne: All general practitioners are able to exercise choice between general practice clinical systems, including those systems offered by the national programme's local service providers, which meet the programme's requirements for accreditation. These requirements include defined standards for system function and interoperability. The standards are subject to continuing review and updating to ensure increased patient safety and benefits to general practice users. NHS Connecting for Health continues to work with suppliers and general practice professional bodies to expand the range of systems available to general practitioners which are compliant with the standards.

Genetic Testing

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research has been undertaken (a) by the Medical Research Council and (b) through her Department's research and development budget for the NHS into developing genetic testing. [44905]

Jane Kennedy: The Medical Research Council (MRC) is an independent body funded by the Department of Trade and Industry via the Office of Science and Technology.

The MRC has a genetics portfolio and spends some £80 million per year on this area of research. The portfolio has a focus on the identification of disease susceptibility genes, on involvement and interplay of the environment and genes in disease, on analysis of gene expression in disease, and on uncovering disease biomarkers. Outputs from any of this research may contribute to the development of genetic diagnostic tools.

The genetics White Paper, "Our inheritance, our future realising the potential of genetics in the NHS", published in June 2003, announced that the Department would invest up to £4 million to fund pharmacogenetic research on existing medicines. Pharmacogenetics involves the tailoring of medication choice or dose to a patient's genetic make-up, usually assessed with the aid of genetic testing. The £4 million was awarded to six research projects selected in 2004.

The five genetics knowledge parks (GKPs), jointly funded by the Department and the Department for Trade and Industry, are undertaking research that includes an examination of the feasibility and ethical and legal implications of testing for sudden cardiac death syndrome, and for the breast and ovarian cancer susceptibility genes BRCA 1 and BRCA 2. The GKPs' work programmes also feature genetic testing for familial hypercholesterolaemia and the clinical and psychological impact of genetic testing on people being helped to give up smoking.

The National Genetics Reference Laboratories (NGRL) are developing new technologies to meet service needs and exploring the service configurations needed for pharmacogenetic testing in the national health service. Developing quality assurance in genetic testing is part of the NGRL remit, and one important aspect of this is the development of appropriate reference and control reagents.

Over 75 per cent. of the Department's total expenditure on health research is devolved to and managed by national health service organisations. The NHS has reported spending from this funding in support of genetics research as follows:

	£ million
	Spending in support of genetics research
2003-04	28
2004-05	31

Details of individual projects, including those to do with the development and use of genetic tests, can be found on the national research register on the Department's website at www.dh.gov.uk/research.

Health Trainers

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS-accredited health trainers have been employed since September 2004; and if she will make a statement. [47936]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Health White Paper

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will postpone any proposals to merge ambulance trusts arising from the current consultation until the urgent care service strategy described in paragraph 4.51 of the White Paper, "Our Health, Our Care, Our Say", is developed. [49551]

Mr. Byrne: Organisational reconfiguration does not preclude ambulance trusts being involved in the development and provision of integrated urgent care services nor does it prejudge their role in providing urgent care services.

Primary care trusts will continue to commission urgent care services, including ambulance services, and we expect ambulance trusts to continue to provide services tailored to particular localities within their area, whether or not ambulance trusts are merged. Larger ambulance trusts, if established, would have the strategic capacity and flexibility of resources to help them play an even greater part in working in partnership with other health and social care agencies to develop urgent care services that meet the needs of local people.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the national approach to risk management described in paragraph 4.42 of the White Paper, "Our Health, Our Care, Our Say", is expected to be placed on a statutory basis. [49552]

Mr. Byrne: This decision has not yet been taken.

Healthcare Commission

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what complaints procedure is in operation for complaints against the Healthcare Commission; [48183]

(2) how many complaints against the Healthcare Commission were received in 2005. [48184]

Jane Kennedy: The Chairman of the Healthcare Commission has confirmed that current advice, which is published on its website, is that anyone wishing to complain about the Commission should contact a named member of staff. When complaints are received in this way they are referred to the section of the Healthcare Commission concerned to respond to. The Health Commission's chief executive responds to complaints addressed directly to her. Central guidance for its staff on dealing with complaints made against it is being currently developed.

The Chairman has also confirmed that information on the number of complaints made is not held centrally.

Healthy Lifestyle Schemes

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on schemes the Department is funding to promote healthy lifestyles in people aged 50 years and over. [39422]

Caroline Flint: A number of initiatives are under way to promote healthy lifestyles in people aged 50 and over. As part of the partnerships for older peoples project

(POPP) initiative the Department has awarded funding of over £39 million to 19 local authority-led partnerships across England to improve health and well being outcomes for older people. Each pilot site, which will be operational by 1 May 2006 will develop, test and evaluate, a range of different ways of providing more support and care for local older people, which will enable them to have a better quality of life and remain in control of their own lives for as long as possible. Several of the pilot sites include health promotion activities as part of their wide-ranging projects. For example:

The cross-Government leaflet, "Are you over 50?", is being revised and will be available April 2006. The emphasis is very much on active ageing.

Nine local exercise action pilots (LEAP) are under way across England, jointly funded by the Department, the Countryside Agency and Sport England. The pilots are testing different community approaches to increasing physical activity in deprived areas. Three of the pilots based at Ashton, Leigh and Wigan, Nottingham city and West of Cornwall Primary Care Trust have a specific focus on older people.

Health Professions Council

Mr. Vaizey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what complaints she has received about the registration process of the Health Professions Council; and if she will make a statement. [47640]

Mr. Byrne: I am only aware of one complaint involving the registration process of the Health Professions Council since July 2005.

HIV/AIDS

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients in (a) England, (b) the Tees Valley and (c) Middlesbrough, South and East Cleveland were diagnosed as having HIV/AIDS in each year since 1997. [45104]

Caroline Flint: These data are only routinely published at strategic health authority level. These are shown in tables 1 and 2. Full HIV data are not yet available for 2005. The HIV diagnoses are from reports received from laboratories and clinicians by the end of December 2005.

Table 1: Numbers of HIV diagnoses made in County Durham and Tees Valley since 1997

HPA—Reports of HIV Diagnoses

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps her Department is taking to increase access to HIV (a) testing and (b) treatment among African communities living in England; and if she will make a statement. [48479]

Caroline Flint: Through the African HIV Policy Network (AHPN) and partner organizations, the Department has funded the campaign "It's Better to Know" aimed specifically at increasing awareness of HIV testing among people from African communities living in England. We are working with the AHPN to develop a further HIV awareness raising campaign to be taken forward during 2006. We fund the African AIDS helpline, which provides information in a variety of languages. We have also funded a pilot project exploring the feasibility of providing additional HIV testing facilities outside of the genito-urinary medicine setting. This pilot is currently being evaluated.

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps her Department is taking to increase awareness of HIV among (a) heterosexual and (b) homosexual males. [48480]

Caroline Flint: Awareness of sexually transmitted infections, including HIV, will be addressed through a new sexual health media campaign, announced as part of the "Choosing Health" White Paper, to modernise and transform sexual health in England. The campaign will focus on the risks of unprotected sex and the benefits of using condoms to avoid the risk of sexually transmitted infections including HIV.

A major aim for the campaign is normalising condom use and implicitly this will contribute to reducing the risk of HIV. The campaign is additional and complementary to, existing HIV Awareness campaigns for those most at risk, in partnership with key voluntary sector organisations.

HIV awareness for men who have sex with men is delivered by the Terrence Higgins Trust in an ongoing targeted programme of information and selected media campaigns.

Independent Sector Providers

Frank Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the contracts being negotiated with independent sector providers of elective treatment will provide for payments exceeding the NHS equivalent cost by a (a) greater and (b) smaller percentage than the average excess in 2004–05. [46086]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 30 January 2006]: All contracts negotiated with independent sector providers have to demonstrate value for money. Value for money is based upon a combination of price and quality. It is not possible to predict the outcome of current negotiations but we do not expect to pay more than the average excess paid in 2004–05. From 2008, any new provider and existing independent sector treatment centre providers, once their contracts have expired, will be expected to provide services at the agreed national health service price.

Frank Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) under what terms NHS (a) trusts, (b) primary care trusts and (c) health authorities procure independent sector elective treatment; [46088]

(2) what guidance her Department offers to NHS (a) trusts, (b) primary care trusts and (c) health authorities about the procurement of independent sector elective treatment. [46089]

Jane Kennedy [holding answers 30 January 2006]: The Department has not issued guidance nor has it provided standard terms with regard to the procurement of independent sector elective treatment.

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the NHS can withhold payment under contracts with independent sector providers where the number of procedures stipulated in the contract is not fulfilled; and if she will make a statement. [45975]

Mr. Byrne: National health service commissioners can withhold payments where the provider of an independent sector treatment centre does not complete procedures in accordance with the terms of the contract. If the referral of patients to the treatment centre is less than that stipulated in the contract, agreed between the provider and the commissioner, the provider will be paid the difference between the value of referrals and the minimum contract value to cover their costs of providing sufficient resources to honour their contractual obligations.

Influenza Vaccines

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the extent to which general practitioners' surgeries in the Royal borough of Windsor and Maidenhead have been able to obtain sufficient supplies of influenza vaccine to inoculate all patients who fall into risk categories. [40738]

Caroline Flint [holding answer 12 January 2006]: This information requested is not collected centrally.

However, the Department is supplying flu vaccine to any general practitioner surgeries from whom it receives orders.

Information Technology

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many and what proportion of general practitioners use system choice under the National Programme for IT in the NHS; and what target date has been set for achieving system choice throughout the NHS. [49831]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 6 February 2006]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for South Derbyshire (Mr. Todd) today.

Kidney Disease

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the extent to which funding for NHS research into kidney disease is meeting the Government's priorities for the treatment and management of the disease, including the standards set out in the Renal National Service Framework. [45589]

Jane Kennedy: Over 75 per cent. of the Department's research and development (R and D) budget is allocated to research active national health service organisations as R and D support funding. This funding is used to meet the research priorities and needs of the NHS, and to meet the NHS costs of hosting research and development supported by external funders. The priorities and needs funding supports the R and D required to underpin quality improvement and is explicitly linked to the national service frameworks (NSFs). Renal disease is an identified priority for NHS research and NHS organisations report spending some £11 million a year in support of research in that area.

The Department, through its policy research programme, commissioned independent reviews of the available research evidence on kidney disease and its management for both parts of the NSF for renal services, ensuring the standards and quality requirements of the NSF are evidence-based.

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was spent on NHS research into causes, diagnosis and treatment of kidney disease in each of the last five years; and if she will list the research projects on kidney disease funded in each year. [46746]

Jane Kennedy: The Department funds research to support policy and to provide the evidence needed to underpin quality improvement and service development in the national health service through its national research programmes. Expenditure on research into kidney disease supported by these programmes is shown in the table.

2000-01	102
2001-02	138
2002-03	224
2003-04	284
2004-05	203

Over 75 per cent. of the Department's total expenditure on health research is devolved to and managed by NHS organisations. The NHS has reported spending from this funding in support of renal disease research as follows:

	£ million
2002-03	11.1
2003-04	10.6
2004-05	10.8

This expenditure data was not collected centrally prior to 2002.

Details of the individual projects concerned can be found on the national research register on the Department's website at www.dh.gov.uk/research.

Long-term Conditions

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to her answer of 11 January 2006, Official Report, column 729W, on long-term conditions, what is the role of her Department's document, 'Supporting People with Long Term Conditions'; by what process (a) this document and (b) the national service framework for long-term conditions was created; and whether the document has been superseded by the national service framework on long-term conditions. [48201]

Mr. Byrne: The publication, 'Supporting People with Long Term Conditions' was developed to provide a health and social care model for long-term conditions. It was written for a management and senior clinician audience to provide a strategic direction to the national health service and social care. The management model was developed with the active engagement of a number of stakeholders including the NHS, local authorities, patients and the voluntary sector.

The national service framework (NSF) for long-term conditions builds on 'Supporting People with Long Term Conditions' by focusing on the implementation and delivery of improved treatment and care for people with long-term conditions. The NSF was developed with the advice of an independent external reference group consisting of health and social care professionals, service users and carers.

Medical Procedures (Costs)

Mr. Tyrie: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she will list the payments made to (a) Royal Free Hampstead NHS Trust, (b) Barts and The London NHS Trust, (c) Hammersmith Hospitals NHS Trust, (d) St Mary's NHS Trust, (e) University College London Hospital NHS Foundation Trust, (f) Royal West Sussex NHS Trust, (g) Guy's and St Thomas' NHS Foundation Trust, (h) Airedale NHS Trust, (i) Brighton and Sussex University Hospitals NHS Trust, (j) the Dudley Group of Hospitals NHS Trust, (k) Barnet and Chase Farm Hospitals NHS Trust, (l) The Princess Alexandra Hospital NHS Trust, (m) Tameside and Glossop Acute Services NHS Trust, (n) Medway NHS Trust, (o) Bolton Hospitals NHS Trust, (p) Heatherwood and Wexham Park Hospitals NHS Trust, (q) Basildon and Thurrock University Hospitals NHS Foundation Trust, (r) George Eliot Hospital NHS Trust, (s) West Middlesex University Hospital NHS Trust and (t) Burton Hospitals NHS Trust for mitral/aortic valve replacements in each year since 1997; and how many mitral/aortic valve replacements were carried out by each hospital trust in each year; [48084]

(2) if she will list the payments made to (a) Royal Free Hampstead NHS Trust, (b) Barts and The London NHS Trust, (c) Hammersmith Hospitals NHS Trust, (d) St Mary's NHS Trust, (e) University College London Hospital NHS Foundation Trust, (f) Royal West Sussex NHS Trust, (g) Guy's and St Thomas' NHS Foundation Trust, (h) Airedale NHS Trust, (i) Brighton and Sussex University Hospitals NHS Trust, (j) the Dudley Group of Hospitals NHS Trust, (k) Barnet and Chase Farm Hospitals NHS Trust, (l) The Princess Alexandra Hospital NHS Trust, (m) Tameside and Glossop Acute Services NHS Trust, (n) Medway NHS Trust, (o) Bolton Hospitals NHS Trust, (p) Heatherwood and Wexham Park Hospitals NHS Trust, (q) Basildon and Thurrock University Hospitals NHS Foundation Trust, (r) George Eliot Hospital NHS Trust, (s) West Middlesex University Hospital NHS Trust and (t) Burton Hospitals NHS Trust for hernia repairs in each year since 1997; and how many hernia repairs were carried out by each hospital trust in each year; [48085]

(3) if she will list the payments made to (a) Royal Free Hampstead NHS Trust, (b) Barts and The London NHS Trust, (c) Hammersmith Hospitals NHS Trust, (d) St Mary's NHS Trust, (e) University College London Hospital NHS Foundation Trust, (f) Royal West Sussex NHS Trust, (g) Guy's and St Thomas' NHS Foundation Trust, (h) Airedale NHS Trust, (i) Brighton and Sussex University Hospitals NHS Trust, (j) the Dudley Group of Hospitals NHS Trust, (k) Barnet and Chase Farm Hospitals NHS Trust, (l) The Princess Alexandra Hospital NHS Trust, (m) Tameside and Glossop Acute Services NHS Trust, (n) Medway NHS Trust, (o) Bolton Hospitals NHS Trust, (p) Heatherwood and Wexham Park Hospitals NHS Trust, (q) Basildon and Thurrock University Hospitals NHS Foundation Trust, (r) George Eliot Hospital NHS Trust, (s) West Middlesex University Hospital NHS Trust and (t) Burton Hospitals NHS Trust for total hip replacements in each year since 1997; and how many total hip replacements were carried out by each hospital trust in each year; [48086]

Mr. Byrne: Information on payments is not held centrally. National health service trusts do not normally receive funding from the Department, but receive income for the provision of services from commissioners, principally, from primary care trusts.

Data on the number of finished consultant episodes has been placed in the Library.

Mental Health

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many inspectors of mental health facilities are employed by the Healthcare Commission; [48179]

(2) how many mental health establishments were inspected by the Healthcare Commission in 2005. [48180]

Jane Kennedy: The Chairman of the Healthcare Commission has confirmed that it does not have specific mental health inspectors. The Healthcare Commission has moved to a model of assessment managers and senior assessment managers, each of whom has a general job description. There are 37 assessment managers and 104 senior assessment managers across the Healthcare Commission.

The Chairman of the Healthcare Commission has also confirmed that between 1 January 2005 and 31 December 2005, 197 mental health establishments were inspected (statutory announced and unannounced only).

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what consultation between the Healthcare Commission and independent operators of in-patient care facilities for people suffering from mental illness took place in 2005 on inspection procedures. [48181]

Jane Kennedy: The Chairman of the Healthcare Commission has confirmed that it held a public consultation on revisions to its inspection methods between November 2004 and February 2005. The Healthcare Commission also held consultation meetings on inspection methods in each of its four regions in January 2005 and information exchange workshops in June 2005. All registered providers, including mental health establishments, were invited to these events.

Consultation on changes planned for 2006 started on 2 December 2005 and runs until 24 February. Consultation documents are published on the Healthcare Commission's website at: www.healthcarecommission.org.uk/contactus

Mr. Paul Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of mental health services in Buckinghamshire were funded by (a) Wycombe Primary Care Trust, (b) Buckinghamshire Mental Health Trust, (c) Buckinghamshire Hospitals NHS Trust and (d) Buckinghamshire county council in each year for which figures are available. [51372]

Caroline Flint: Revenue allocations are made direct to primary care trusts who determine their expenditure on services according to local priorities.

This information requested is not centrally held by the Department However, information about spend on mental health services is available from "The 2004-05 National Survey of Investment in Mental Health Services" which is available on the Department's website at:

www.dh.gov.uk/assetRoot/04/11/52/96/04115296.pdf.

Monitor

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the total budget of Monitor was in each year since it was established; what it will be in 2006-07; how many whole-time equivalent staff it has; at what salary grades; how much of its budget has been spent on external consultants; and whether these consultants were commissioned on a basis of contestability. [49759]

Mr. Byrne: This is a matter for Monitor, whose statutory name is the independent regulator of national health service foundation trusts. The Chairman will write to the hon. Member and a copy of his reply will be placed in the Library.

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the contracts placed by the Monitor regulatory body with external consultants. [48800]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 6 February 2006]: This is a matter for Monitor, whose statutory name is the Independent Regulator of National Health Service Foundation Trusts. The Chairman will write to the hon. Member and a copy of his reply will be placed in the Library.

National Framework for Continuing Care

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she expects to publish the national framework for continuing care. [48838]

Mr. Byrne: The Department intends to publish the national continuing care framework for consultation in April, subject to the need to take account of any further legal proceedings on relevant issues.

National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will extend the remit of the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence to enable it to judge cost-effectiveness with reference to both NHS and social care budgets. [48849]

Jane Kennedy: The National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) already takes a national health service and personal social services perspective in its economic analysis of clinical and cost effectiveness. This approach is set out in NICE'S 'Guide to the Methods of Technology Appraisal', published April 2004 and is available on the NICE'S website at: www.nice.org.uk/pdf/TAP_Methods.pdf

Mr. Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures are in place to allow the National Institute for Healthcare and Clinical Excellence to fast-track its assessment of cancer drugs; and if she will make a statement. [47019]

Jane Kennedy: On 3 November 2005, the Secretary of State for Health announced a new single technology appraisal process which allows the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) to produce guidance to a faster timetable on important drugs. Work has started on the first tranche of topics, and NICE is consulting in parallel on the detail of the new process.

National Programme for Information Technology

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the progress of the National Programme for Information Technology; and what progress the software supplier has made in supplying systems for use in the programme. [48839]

Mr. Byrne: The national programme for information technology (NPfIT), which is being delivered by the NHS Connecting for Health agency, is an essential part of creating a safer, and more efficient and modern national health service. The foundations have now been laid, and the organisational and commercial infrastructure established, to deploy the systems the NHS needs to provide more effective health care to patients. Implementation work continues to gather momentum and its impact is beginning to be felt more and more widely across the NHS.

The programme has already delivered new systems to thousands of locations in the NHS. The extent of deployment of the programme's many software suppliers' systems across the five regional cluster areas, as at the end of January 2006 has been placed in the Library.

Progress is within budget, ahead of schedule in some areas, and, in the context of a 10-year programme, broadly on track in others. It now has over 180,000 registered NHS users across England. The live IT systems are performing well and are regularly achieving their contracted service and performance levels. Weekly updates of performance and deployment data are being routinely published on the internet.

Altogether, we estimate that well over one and a half million patients have already received improved and safer care as a result of systems and services made available through national programme developments. This figure is increasing every week.

NHS Appointments Commission

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will require the NHS Appointments Commission to change its policy of reappointing chairmen and non-executive members of primary care trust boards where those appointees have presided over trusts that are failing or under investigation. [47656]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 2 February 2006]: The NHS Appointments Commission has recently reappointed members to a number of primary care trusts (PCTs). In making these decisions, the NHS Appointments Commission has taken into account the need to ensure continuity of service pending the outcome of local consultations on potential reconfiguration. All appointments to reconfigured PCTs, will go through a process of fair, open and transparent competition once the outcome is determined.

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what factors affected the decision of the NHS Appointments Commission to proceed with the advertisement of the post of Chairman of the new Regional Ambulance Trust in the east of England; and if she will make a statement. [47802]

Mr. Byrne: The decision to advertise these posts is sensible contingency planning that does not pre-empt the outcome of the public consultation. If a decision is made to change ambulance trust configuration, it would be necessary to move quickly to establish the new organisations in order to minimise uncertainty for staff and for service continuity. This includes having quorate boards as soon as possible so that decisions can be taken and staff transferred to the new organisations.

NHS Capital Building Projects

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the total amount spent on capital building projects in the NHS was in real terms at today's prices in each of the last 30 years. [45572]

Mr. Byrne: The total amount of capital expenditure in the national health service over the last 30 years in 2004–05 prices is shown in the table.

NHS capital expenditure: England 1974–75 to 2004–05

NHS Data Spine

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many individuals have access to the NHS data spine; what safeguards are in place to prevent unlawful access to the spine; what audit arrangements are in place to monitor inappropriate access to the spine; what penalties are available for unlawful use of the spine; and what guidance has been issued on the appropriate course of action if individuals are found to have misused the system. [47577]

Mr. Byrne: The national health service data spine is the technical architecture that underpins the NHS care records service in England (NHS CRS). Eventually all national health service staff involved in patient care will have access to the NHS CRS. The level of access granted will depend on their role. As at 31 January 2006 there were about 181,000 users registered for access.

Access depends on the use of a smartcard with photographic identification and a pass code, which can only be obtained upon verification of identity and through a formal user registration process. This process involves being sponsored by an appropriate user registration sponsor from the organisation in which an individual works and includes determining the level of access that individual will have. Access to a patient's care record is limited to only as much information as is needed for the purpose of the job role being performed in relation to the patient.

An audit trail will be maintained of everyone who has accessed a patient's information. Audits will be carried out to identify suspicious behaviour. Anyone trying to look at patient information contrary to their access rights will trigger an automatic alert. A privacy officer will then take action, including telling the patient where appropriate.

NHS staff have a duty of confidentiality to patients, and a contractual obligation to comply with the NHS Code of Conduct on Confidentiality. Accessing the NHS CRS without a legitimate business reason constitutes a breach of the code, which is a disciplinary offence and could lead to dismissal. Patients' rights are also protected under the Data Protection Act 1998, which provides significant penalties for non-compliance.

As part of a major exercise to prepare the NHS for the arrival of the NHS CRS, NHS Connecting for Health are issuing substantial information to frontline NHS staff about the new service, which includes guidance on information governance.

NHS Debt

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the total NHS debt is in relation to private finance initiative projects. [42669]

Mr. Byrne: Private finance initiative (PFI) unitary payments are just one component of a Trust's total expenditure and the PFI expenditure by all operational schemes in 2005–06 is estimated to be about £215 million, considerably below the deficit shown for the first six months of the year.

Figures for foundation trusts are not included.

NHS Earnings

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average NHS earnings were in real terms at today's prices for (a) consultants, (b) general practitioners, (c) dentists and (d) nurses employed in the NHS in each of the last 30 years. [45570]

Mr. Byrne: The available information is shown in the following tables. Tables 1 and 2 show the average earnings of consultants and qualified nurses band on national health service earnings survey data uplifted to 2004–05 prices. This data is not available prior to 1998–99 and has been collated biannually since 2000–01. Table 3 shows that intended average net income for general practitioners set by the review body doctors and dentists review for the years since 1974–75 in 2004–05 prices. Table 4 shows the estimated average general dental service (GDS) net income for dentists with a reasonable GDS commitment since 1997–98. Figures are not available on a comparable basis for previous years.

1. The earnings survey is based on a sample of approximately 50 per cent. of NHS trusts, derived.
2. Earnings figures are based on monthly payments in August, multiplied by 12 to give annual equivalent amounts.
3. The earnings survey is conducted on a biennial basis from 2000 onwards, hence no figures are available 2001 or 2003.
4. Earnings figures are rounded to the nearest hundred pounds.
5. 2004 equivalent earnings are calculated using HM Treasury Gross Domestic Product Deflator Index.

[1] Dentists with a reasonable commitment to the GDS are defined as dentists with GDS earnings equivalent to at least £40,000 in 1993–94 in fees for treatments and patient capitation. This equivalent is calculated each year by adjusting figures to take into account the effect of fee increases. The equivalent figure for 2004–05 is £59,100.

[2] Commitment payments started in 2001.

[3] Figures since 2000–01 use a different methodology to calculate the contribution from other non-fee/capitation payments.

The income figures cover both estimated fees for treatments and patient capitation as well as other estimated payments such as seniority payments and commitment payments and payments for maternity and sickness.

NHS Employee Grades

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the (a) annual reduction in income expectation and (b) the loss in pension contributions over a five-year period of a Whitley grade 5 NHS employee transferred to the equivalent band 4 Agenda for Change grade. [48913]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 7 February 2006]: There is no automatic equivalence between Whitley and agenda for change pay bands. However, where job evaluation results in assimilation to a pay band with a lower maximum remuneration, and there are no offsetting changes in other aspects of remuneration, staff may be subject to the agenda for change pay protection rules. While these ensure there is no loss in actual income, a person who remains on protected pay this April will forego the benefit of annual pay awards. But the consequent reduction in income expectations cannot be calculated until the relevant pay awards are known.

Similarly, the effect on pension contributions of a person in any protection cannot be calculated until the relevant pay awards are known.

NHS Finance

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 9 January 2006, Official Report, column 145W, on NHS finance, what the total reduction in provision for clinical negligence declared by the NHS Litigation Authority was in 2004–05; and whether it is expected that further such reductions will be declared in (a) 2005–06 and (b) future financial years. [46607]

Jane Kennedy: The total reduction to provisions for the NHS Litigation Authority in 2004–05 was £1,872 million. This overall reduction reflects a £1,497 million recalculation to record the cumulative adjustment to clinical negligence provisions dating back to 2000–01 as a technical change and a £375 million further reduction in budget requirement due to a change in the methodology for calculating clinical negligence claims in 2004–05. These factors will be built into budget management for current and future years.

NHS Foundation Trusts

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the total cost to an average sized NHS trust of preparing an application for NHS foundation trust status. [48850]

Mr. Byrne: Information on national health service trusts preparing for an application for NHS foundation trust (NHSFT) status is not held centrally, as costs will vary from trust to trust.

The decision on when to apply for foundation trust status is one which is taken locally and applicant trusts are responsible for meeting the costs associated with their application and establishment as a NHSFT. However, the Department provides some direct financial and advisory support to applicants to assist them in preparing for their application and establishment as a foundation trust.

NHS Private Treatment

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many operations paid for by the NHS were carried out by private sector providers in December 2005 (a) in England and (b) in Kettering. [47624]

Mr. Byrne: As part of the national independent sector procurement, 8,762 diagnostic assessments and 3,786 clinical procedures were carried out by independent sector providers in England in December 2005. During the same period, the Capio Woodlands Hospital national health service treatment centre in Kettering discharged 25 NHS patients referred for treatment under a national contract. Information is not held on operations which are commissioned locally from the independent sector.

NHS Purchasing and Logistics

Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she has taken to improve efficiency in NHS purchasing and logistics since 1997; and if she will make a statement. [42371]

Jane Kennedy [holding answer16 January 2006]: The Government recognise the importance of achieving value for money in public procurement and the necessity of a modern supply chain in meeting this and other national health service requirements. It also needs to ensure that national purchasing and supply activity is relevant to the needs of the NHS.

In 1997, the national purchasing body for the NHS in England was the NHS Supplies Authority established in 1991. With a remit to obtain best value on supply spending for the NHS as a whole, it accomplished a great deal in moving towards a more strategic and collaborative NHS purchasing structure. However, as a special health authority NHS Supplies had limited powers and spheres of influence.

In 1998 the Cabinet Office Review of NHS procurement identified the need for a central purchasing organisation, with sufficient authority to exert a genuine influence on the NHS, both directly and via input at policy-making level within government. The review recommended:

- the establishment of the NHS Purchasing and Supply Agency (NHS PASA) to act as a strategic adviser on supply issues critical to the NHS;
- a separate logistics operation for the NHS, NHS Logistics Authority, established in April 2000;
- the transfer of staff from NHS Supplies Customer Services Division—which provided dedicated supplies staff based on-site at individual trusts to the employment of individual NHS trusts. This was completed by the end of October 1999.

The role of the NHS PASA was to act as a centre of expertise, knowledge and excellence in purchasing and supply matters for the NHS. Acting not just as an advisory and co-ordinating body but also as a leader in the modernisation of purchasing and supply for the NHS, NHS PASA contracts on a national basis for products and services which are strategically critical to the NHS. It also acts in cases where aggregated purchasing power will yield greater economic savings than those achieved by contracting on a sub-national basis.

NHS PASA contributes to the delivery of fast, responsive patient care by working with suppliers to ensure the availability of cost-effective equipment, goods and services; leading the development of electronic commerce in the NHS to reduce transaction costs and release resources for direct patient care.

The NHS Logistics Authority works to support the operational activity of the NHS by providing best value for the NHS in the supply of goods and supply chain services required in the support of health care.

Since its inception there has been significant progress, most notably in terms of:

- Increase in sales—Sales are forecast to reach £780.5 million by the end of the 2005–06 financial year, an increase of 42 per cent. over 2000–01. Consolidating demand through a single, efficient, primary supply channel enables trusts to save money and improve efficiency. It also enables trusts to benefit from supply services that provide continuously improving value for money.
- Reducing costs—A programme of continuous improvement and cost minimisation to contribute to improved health care and cost reductions that benefit the whole English NHS.
- Catalogue range—The catalogue range has increased from 17,000 products in 2000 to over 43,000 products, giving trusts even greater choice.
- Providing a high quality service—Customer satisfaction now at a record high of 88 per cent. and average service level to trusts consistently above 98 per cent.
- E-commerce—Worked towards maximising the use of e-commerce.
- Supply chain modernisation—offers consultancy and practical support in developing a world class supply chain for the NHS. Supply chain modernisation can save the NHS many millions of pounds each year by reducing excess inventory in trusts and unlocking both staff and funding for improved patient care.

In June 2003, the Department established the commercial directorate in support of gaining efficiencies across the NHS and to ensure value for money in particular areas of spend building relationships with the independent sector using a commercially focused approach.

After a review of the NHS supply chain the commercial directorate launched the supply chain excellence programme (SCEP) in March 2004. The three-year programme is focused on the restructure of the NHS supply chain to gain efficiencies and improve the effectiveness of supply management in the NHS. SCEP aims to gain the best value for the money the NHS spends each year on goods and services. This will ensure the greatest possible share of NHS funding is directed towards improving clinical capacity and ultimately patient care. Overall, SCEP is expected to deliver annualised savings of over £500 million by 2007–08.

The healthcare industries task force, a ministerial led initiative which worked in partnership with industry, recommended that a new device evaluation service should be established to help inform procurement decisions and encourage the uptake of useful, safe, innovative products and procedures used in health and social care. To effect the necessary changes the centre for evidence-based purchasing (CEP)—formerly the device evaluation service—moved to NHS PASA on 1 October 2005 and a new structure and processes are being established in early 2006.

NHS Restructuring

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many civil servants in her Department are involved in policy work on the proposed restructuring of the NHS in England, broken down by grade; and how many are secondees from NHS trusts. [21609]

Mr. Byrne: The senior officer responsible for commissioning a patient led national health service is Sir Ian Carruthers seconded from the NHS. He is supported by a central team of 14 permanent staff, three of whom are secondees from the NHS. This includes three senior civil servants. The remaining posts are all in the integrated payband.

NHS Trusts

Julia Goldsworthy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 9 January 2006, Official Report, column 151W, on NHS trusts, what assessment will be made of the value of turnaround teams. [49160]

Jane Kennedy: The turnaround teams were announced by the Secretary of State in a ministerial statement on 1 December 2005, Official Report, column 37WS.

The first stage of this is a baseline assessment, the aim of which is to ensure there is an agreed understanding of the local financial problem and that actions are in hand to address this. Following the assessment, the local national health service will identify the actions needed to return the organisations to financial balance and what tailored support is needed to support local management.

The value of the teams will be assessed through the delivery of turnaround in the organisations concerned.

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 20 January 2006, Official Report, column 1675W, on NHS trusts (mergers), what savings were anticipated in the risk analysis submitted for each planned merger of acute trusts in the last five years; and what steps were taken to monitor whether the predicted outcomes were achieved. [47851]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 2 February 2006]: In considering proposals for mergers, Ministers need to be satisfied that the lead strategic health authority (SHA) has presented a case that demonstrates the trust's ongoing delivery and development of services, and clinical and financial viability. SHAs are charged with performance managing trusts including ensuring the benefits of any merger are realised.

Older People's National Service Framework

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she expects the National Clinical Director for Older People to publish his report Next Steps for Older People's National Service Framework. [49532]

Mr. Byrne: Professor Ian Philp, the National Clinical Director for Older People, plans to publish his "Next Steps" report by the end of April.

Overseas Nurses

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the qualifications of (a) Russian and (b) Pakistani overseas-trained nurses meet the standards required for admission to the Overseas Nursing Programme. [21224]

Mr. Byrne: The nursing and midwifery council is responsible for the overseas nursing programme and for assessing the training and qualifications of nurses trained outside the United Kingdom and the European economic area.

Pain Relief (Children)

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the drugs licensed for use in the NHS to provide pain relief for children. [48082]

Jane Kennedy: The following medicines are licensed in the United Kingdom and available on the national health service for the treatment of pain in children.

Non-opioid analgesics:

Paracetamol

Co-codamol (codeine phosphate and paracetamol)

Opioid analgesics:

Morphine

Buprenorphine

Codeine Phosphate

Diamorphine Hydrochloride

Dihydrocodeine Tartrate

Hydromorphone Hydrochloride

Papaveretum

Pethidine Hydrochloride

Tramadol Hydrochloride

Non-steroidal anti-inflammatory drugs (NSAIDs):

Ibuprofen

Naproxen

Diclofenac sodium

Indometacin

Mefenamic acid

Meloxicam

Piroxicam

Information about the licensed indications and prescribing advice for doctors for all of these medicines is published in the British National Formulary for Children which is available in the Library.

Parkinson's Disease

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the level of funding for research into treatment for Parkinson's disease has been in each year since 1997; and if she will make a statement. [47348]

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much funding her Department has provided for research into Parkinson's disease in each of the last eight years. [48863]

Jane Kennedy: The information requested is shown in the table.

£ million

	Medical Research Council (MRC)[1,2]	Department of Health national research programmes[3]

[1] The main agency through which the Government support medical and clinical research. The MRC is an independent body funded by the Department of Trade and Industry via the Office of Science and Technology.

[2] The definition used to identify projects eligible for inclusion in this area of expenditure changed with effect from 2002–03.

[3] The Department funds research to support policy and to provide the evidence needed to underpin quality improvement and service development in the NHS.

Over 75 per cent. of the Department's total expenditure on health research is devolved to and managed by national health service organisations. From this funding, the NHS reported spending in support of research related to older people and on neurological conditions as follows:

£ million

	Older people	Neurological conditions
2001–02	37	n/a
2002–03	34	28
2003–04	39	30
2004–05	40	27

This expenditure data was not collected centrally prior to 2002. Details of individual projects, including projects to do with Parkinson's disease, can be found on the national research register at www.dh.gov.uk/research.

Parliamentary Questions

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she expects to answer the question from the hon. Member for Northavon tabled on 31 October for answer on 2 November, reference 24525, on child protection. [47985]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 2 February 2006]: A reply was given to the hon. Member on 1 February 2006, Official Report, column 969W.

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she will reply to the Questions tabled by the hon. Member for Woking, reference (a) 44640, (b) 44641, (c) 44644 and (d) 44117. [48626]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 6 February 2006]: Answers were given to the hon. Member on 6 February, 2 February, 31 January and 7 February respectively.

Partnerships for Older People

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health where partnerships for older people projects are being piloted; when the introduction of these projects was first announced; and if she will make a statement. [49525]

Mr. Byrne: The Secretary of State announced that there would be 19 sites piloting partnerships for older people projects on 8 November 2005. The successful partnerships are in Bradford, Brent, Camden, Dorset, East Sussex, Knowsley, Leeds, Luton, Manchester, Norfolk, North Lincolnshire, Northumberland, North Yorkshire, Poole, Sheffield, Somerset, Southwark, Wigan and Worcestershire. In total, the pilot sites will cover about 150,000 older people. Funding will be made available to the successful applicants during April 2006 and pilots are expected to commence their projects by 1 May 2006 at the latest.

Pesticide Residue

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the (a) incidence and (b) levels of pesticide residue in (i) orange and (ii) lemon peel. [41918]

Caroline Flint [holding answer 16 January 2006]: The results of official surveillance for pesticide residues in food, published by the Pesticide Residues Committee (PRC), show that most orange and lemon samples contain residues and that some of these residues are largely in the peel. PRC surveillance reports can be found on the Pesticides Safety Directorate's website at: www.pesticides.gov.uk/prc.asp?id=959. The Food Standards Agency advises that the residue levels currently found in oranges and lemons do not present a significant concern for consumer health.

Pigeon-transmitted Disease (South Manchester)

Mr. Leech: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many reported cases there have been of (a) avian alveolitis, or pigeon fancier's lung, and (b) psittacosis transmitted from pigeons to humans via droppings in south Manchester in the last five years. [46170]

Mr. Byrne: Avian alveolitis, also known as pigeon fancier's lung is caused by an allergic reaction to birds (pigeons and other species). As it is not an infectious disease, data on the number of cases are not collected centrally.

Psittacosis is an infection, caused by the bacterium Chlamydophila psittaci, that is acquired from birds (pigeons and other species), though not necessarily via droppings.

It is not possible to provide a breakdown of the data for south Manchester. The number of cases in England and Wales in the last five years is as follows:

	Number of cases
2001	103
2002	68
2003	91
2004	59
2005	[1]57

[1] Provisional figures

Source:
Health Protection Agency

In 2005, infection was most frequently reported from the north west health region of England.

Practice-based Commissioning

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what safeguards her Department is putting in place against conflicts of interest in practice-based commissioning; [44922]

(2) whether general practitioners will be able to commission services provided by themselves under practice-based commissioning. [44927]

Mr. Byrne: General practitioners are able to provide services under practice based commissioning. "Making Practice Based Commissioning a Reality—Technical Guidance" (February 2005), makes it clear that where practices or localities are both a provider and a commissioner of services, it is very important that there are no actual or perceived conflicts of interest. Patients should also be given a choice of other providers of that service and should not feel pressured to choose the practice as provider.

The roles and responsibilities of primary care trusts (PCTs) and practices under practice based commissioning was set out in Annexe D of "Health reform in England: update and next steps" (December 2005). This states that PCTs continue to negotiate and hold contracts under practice based commissioning.

In addition, the Department has recently released updated practice based commissioning guidance. "Practice based commissioning: achieving universal coverage" (January 2006) reinforces the need for robust arrangements for agreeing contracts for services provided under practice based commissioning.

Prescriptions

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the cost of adding cystic fibrosis to the list of diseases which give rise to exemption from prescription charges. [49636]

Jane Kennedy: Based on figures of the number of adult cystic fibrosis sufferers, not currently entitled to free prescriptions, provided by the Cystic Fibrosis Trust we estimate the cost of lost prescription revenue would be around £100,000, based on the assumption that all currently have a prescription pre-payment certificate.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will undertake a public consultation on the list of diseases that give rise to exemption from prescription charges. [49647]

Jane Kennedy: We have no plans to undertake a consultation on the list of medical conditions that confer free prescriptions.

Government policy is to help those who may have difficulty paying charges. The current exemption and charge remission arrangements are intended to ensure that no one need to be deterred from obtaining any necessary medication on financial grounds. Consequently 87 per cent. of prescriptions are dispensed free of charge.

Susan Kramer: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many personal prescriptions have been prescribed in each year since 2000, broken down by primary care trusts; how much revenue has been raised from prescription charges in each year since 2000; and if she will make a statement. [41101]

Jane Kennedy: The number of prescription items prescribed in general practitioner practices in England and dispensed in the community at primary care trust level from 2001 to 2004 has been placed in the Library. Earlier data are not available. The Department holds no data on private prescriptions.

Income raised from prescription charges in England for each year since 2000 is contained in the Department's published resource accounts:

	£ million
2004–05	422.4
2003–04	426.0
2002–03	420.8
2001–02	410.9
2000–01	323.2
1999–2000	370.5

Figures represent revenue raised from when a charge is paid at point of dispensing and income raised from pre-payment certificates.

Press Coverage

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on how many occasions since 1 April 2003 she has complained to the Press Complaints Commission about the coverage in the press of (a) Ministers or officials and (b) her Department; and how many of these complaints were upheld. [47089]

Mr. Byrne: There have been no occasions since April 1 2003 that the Secretary of State for Health has complained to the Press Complaints Commission about the coverage in the press of Ministers, officials or the Department.

Primary Care Trusts

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for what reasons the Government introduced primary care trusts; and what the cost of setting them up was. [31718]

Mr. Byrne: Primary care trusts (PCTs) were primarily introduced in order to bring together, primary and community care services for the benefit of patients. Further changes in the configuration of many PCTs are now required and are now the subject of local consultations.

The Department does not hold information on the cost of setting up primary care trusts.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 11 July 2005, Official Report, column 744W, on primary care trusts, what evidence she has received of primary care trusts underspending against their enhanced services expenditure floor in the 2005–06 financial year; and whether underspends by primary care trusts in 2005–06 will be reinvested in 2006–07. [48632]

Mr. Byrne: Quarterly financial monitoring reports from primary care trusts (PCTs) indicate that overall investment in enhanced services by PCTs in 2005–06 could be greater than the national planned investment.

Investment in enhanced services in 2006–07 will be a matter decided upon and managed by PCTs, in a way that makes best use of resources in meeting locally agreed priorities.

Public Information Leaflets

Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what method is used to calculate the number of Department of Health public information leaflets distributed to general practitioner practices and other health service sites. [44038]

Mr. Byrne: The marketing strategy that accompanies the production of any public information leaflet determines how that leaflet is distributed. Typically for campaign literature, between 50 and 200 leaflets will be distributed to individual general practitioner (GP) surgeries complete with an extra copies order form.

A network of national health service health promotion professionals, on a monthly basis, take receipt of public information leaflets that they have ordered on a cyclical delivery from our central distribution outlet.

In addition to these channels, the Department also has a contract with the waiting room information service; who distribute a range of health care leaflets to GP surgeries using demographic information to target surgeries with the highest patient throughput. An analysis of the uptake of leaflets is presented to the Department on a quarterly basis.

Purified Protein Derivative

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the possibility of compensation claims arising from complications in the use of unlicensed Mantoux-strength purified protein derivative. [39284]

Caroline Flint: Mantoux testing is now the internationally recognised standard for determining immunity to tuberculosis, and in line with this and in the absence of any further supplies of Heaf strength tuberculin purified protein derivative (PPD), the Department now recommends that Mantoux testing replace Heaf testing.

Although Statens Serum Institut PPD is unlicensed, the manufacturer still retains the responsibility for safety of the product, subject to it being used and stored correctly. If a patient suffers injury or illness as a result of a defect in the product, the manufacturer may be liable under the Consumer Protection Act 1987. Similarly, individual doctors prescribe or administer unlicensed medicines to their patients on their own direct responsibility. A claim can be brought against a doctor who prescribes or administers any medicine, whether licensed or unlicensed, if the patient can show the doctor acted negligently. Doctors are required to have in place appropriate professional negligence insurance cover in respect of such claims. Should there be claims for negligence, the court is unlikely to find that the doctor acted negligently if use of the product was supported by a responsible body of medical opinion and the patient consented to treatment. Although each case would depend on its own facts, the fact that the product is licensed in other European Union states and that its use is supported by the Department, means that it is unlikely that any claim for damages against an individual doctor would be successful.

Regulatory Reform Orders

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many regulatory reform orders her Department has laid before Parliament in each of the last five calendar years. [46806]

Mr. Byrne: The Department laid before Parliament one regulatory reform order, "The National Health Service Charitable and Non-Charitable Trust Accounts and Audit Order" in 2005.

Rickets

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the expenditure was in each of the last five years on the treatment of rickets. [37134]

Caroline Flint: The drugs used to treat rickets are calcium supplements, Hypercalcaemia and hypercalciuria, phosphate supplements, phosphate binding agents and vitamin D. However, these drugs are also used to treat other diseases. We are unable to provide a breakdown of the expenditure by the disease it was used to treat.

The amounts spent in each of the last five years are shown in the table. These figures exclude prescriptions in hospitals and non-drug costs of treatment such as general practitioner time.

	Costs
2000	17,331
2001	20,559
2002	24,943
2003	31,338
2004	39,756

Rule of Rescue Principle

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence takes into account the rule of rescue when evaluating (a) drug treatments for brain cancer and (b) other drug treatments; and if she will make a statement. [49590]

Jane Kennedy: In December 2005, the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) launched its "Social Value Judgements" document setting out principles for the development of NICE guidance. At this time, NICE anticipated the later inclusion of additional areas.

In order to inform this ongoing work, NICE asked a meeting of its Citizens Council in late January 2006 for its views on the rule of rescue. The Citizens Council heard evidence from a variety of experts and organisations active in this field to inform their discussions. I understand that the Citizens Council will in due course submit a report to the board of NICE setting out its findings.

Scanners

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment her Department has made of the impact on waiting lists of scanners being used on a part-time basis because of staff shortages; and if she will make a statement. [39684]

Jane Kennedy: No specific assessment has been made. However, this Government recognise the immediate need for additional workforce and imaging capacity. This is why additional diagnostic scanning activity is being procured from the independent sector to treat national health service patients and deliver a maximum wait of 18 weeks from referral to hospital treatment by 2008.

However, the Government acknowledge that the NHS needs to recruit more radiographers and has taken action to address this. The latest data shows that there are now 18 per cent. more NHS radiographers than in 1997 and the number of students entering training to become a radiographer has more than doubled since 1996–97.

Sex Change Operations

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many teenagers have undertaken sex change operations on the NHS in each of the last 10 years. [48080]

Mr. Byrne: No operations for sexual transformation were carried out by the national health service on teenaged individuals between 1995–96 to 2004–05.

Sight Problems (Rehabilitation Officers)

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the adequacy of provision of qualified rehabilitation officers for blind and partially-sighted people in London; and if she will make a statement. [47217]

Jane Kennedy: Rehabilitation services for blind and partially sighted people are provided by local health and social care bodies. It is for those organisations to commission appropriate services based on local need. This would include the number and training of teams available to provide rehabilitation for blind and partially sighted people.

Stoma Appliances

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many responses were received to the consultation on the provision of stoma appliances and other services; and if she will make a statement. [49431]

Jane Kennedy: The consultation document on the arrangements for the provision of dressings, incontinence appliances, stoma appliances, chemical reagents and other appliances to primary and secondary care was published on 24 October 2005 and closed on 23 January 2006.

Responses were welcomed from all interested parties, including patients, the national health service and suppliers.

The Department has received nearly 3,000 responses.

Representation has been received from:

patients;

Members of Parliament on behalf of their constituents, including MPs and MLAs from Northern Ireland; the NHS: primary care trusts; acute trusts, general practitioner practices and specialist nurses; community pharmacists;

appliance contractors;

manufacturers;

wholesalers; and trade bodies representing industry.

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she expects to report on the consultation on stoma care and incontinence products; and if she will publish a summary of responses at the end of the consultation period. [45723]

Jane Kennedy: The consultation on the arrangements for the provision of dressings, incontinence appliances, stoma appliances, chemical reagents and other appliances to primary and secondary care closed on Monday, 23 January 2006.

I can confirm that, following Cabinet Office guidelines, a summary of responses to the consultation will be published. This will be done in due course.

Strategic Health Authorities

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the (a) financial, (b) operational and (c) accountability consequences of the abolition of strategic health authorities. [29869]

Mr. Byrne: Strategic health authorities (SHAs) are not being abolished. They are being reconfigured and any changes are still subject to a full three-month consultation. Reconfiguration will reduce the running costs of SHAs but a full assessment of the financial, operational and accountability consequences of reconfiguration will happen after the consultation is completed.

Tarceva

Geraldine Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the cancer drug Tarceva (erlotinib) has been licensed in the UK. [49492]

Jane Kennedy [holding answer 7 February 2006]: Tarceva was granted a marketing authorisation valid throughout the European Union on 19 September 2005.

Tarceva is currently licensed for the treatment of patients with locally advanced or metastatic non-small cell lung cancer after failure of at least one prior chemotherapy regimen.

Tuberculosis

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for what reasons Chapter 33 of the Department of Health Immunisation against Infectious Diseases 2006, published in November 2005, does not include reference to the unlicensed nature of the purified protein derivative used in the Mantoux test for tuberculosis and the need for this product to be issued under a patient specific direction. [43528]

Caroline Flint: Guidance regarding the supply and administration of any unlicensed vaccine, including Tuberculin purified protein derivative by patient specific directions is covered in the draft chapter 6, "Immunisation by nurses and other healthcare professionals", of the Department's "Immunisation against Infectious Diseases 2006", published in November 2005, which is available on the Department's website at: www.dh.gov.uk/assetRoot/04/12/33/48/04123348.pdf.

VAT

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what mechanisms her Department has in place for recovering VAT from the Treasury. [49677]

Mr. Byrne: The Department follows HM Revenue and Customs' value added tax rules for Government Departments. For its non-business work, the Department recovers value added tax paid on inputs that feature in the Treasury (Contracting-out) Direction. If the Department carries out business activities, it recovers input tax under the same rules that apply to the private sector. Value added tax returns are made quarterly to HM Revenue and Customs.

Waiting Lists/Times

Mr. Crabb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent discussions she has had with the Health Minister in the National Assembly for Wales about differences in the ways waiting lists are compiled in England and Wales. [39265]

Jane Kennedy [holding answer 20 December 2005]: Discussions have not taken place at ministerial level although we have worked closely with Welsh Assembly officials to determine the differences in the content and definition of waiting list statistics in each country.

These discussions will continue.

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when data will be made available to measure the total waiting time from a patient's first visit to their GP to an operation being carried out. [44295]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 20 January 2006]: The Department is pioneering total waiting time measurement in chosen national health service sites this spring. The intention is to measure the total pathway, from referral to start of treatment, across England from April 2007 in order to have the data to support delivery of the 18 weeks pathway in 2008.

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the clinical and surgical procedures included in the formula used by the NHS to calculate average waiting list times. [46295]

Jane Kennedy [holding answer 30 January 2006]: In-patient waiting lists statistics include all patients waiting to be admitted to national health service hospitals in England either as a day case or ordinary admission. They do not include the following:

patients admitted as emergency cases;

out-patients;

patients undergoing a planned programme of treatment, for example, a series of admissions for chemotherapy;

expectant mothers booked for confinement; patients already in hospital and patients who are temporarily suspended from waiting lists for social reasons or because they are known to be not medically ready for treatment.

Winter Deaths

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the effects on the NHS of more than 40,000 excess winter deaths in a year taking place. [32861]

Jane Kennedy: The pressure on health services from those needing unscheduled care is greater in the winter months. This is planned for, and other types of care scheduled accordingly throughout the year. This winter, pressure comes largely from an increase in the numbers of elderly people requiring admission to hospital. As winter progresses, the age and length of stay of those admitted tends to increase as a result.

The excess in the number of deaths is only a partial marker for this increase in pressure—for two main reasons. Firstly, many of the deaths are relatively sudden, and may not give rise to a hospital admission. Secondly, hospitals tend to have very high occupancy during winter anyway, irrespective of how many excess deaths there are in the community. For primary care services, there is an undoubted increase in the workload originating from older people living at home during the winter.

Working Party on Respiratory Services

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she expects to publish the report of the Working Party on Respiratory Services in England. [37296]

Mr. Byrne: Following the Chief Medical Officer's annual report published in July 2005, the Department has been considering the evidence relating to respiratory disease. Although there has been no working party, we have sought the advice of a number of stakeholders in a number of ways. Work collating the epidemiological and clinical evidence associated with a wide range of respiratory diseases will then be peer reviewed. We expect that process to be completed shortly in the new year when we will consider how to make it more widely available.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Abu Hamza

Mr. Cash: To ask the Solicitor-General on what date the Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) first decided not to endorse the proposed prosecution of Abu Hamza; whether the CPS consulted the (a) Director of Public Prosecutions and (b) Attorney-General in relation to the case; and if he will make a statement. [51555]

The Solicitor-General: In November 1999 the CPS having consulted Treasury Counsel decided that there was insufficient evidence to prosecute Abu Hamza for offences of kidnap and murder relating to an incident in the Yemen. In 2003 following a submission of further material from the police the CPS again decided that there was insufficient evidence to prosecute Abu Hamza for those offences. The CPS did not consult the Attorney-General about this matter.

In January 2003 police seized tapes connected with Abu Hamza, in April 2003 further tapes were seized. In November 2003 the police submitted a report concerning the tapes to the CPS. CPS advised that further police enquires should be made. In March 2004 the police submitted a further report to the CPS. In May 2004 the police seized further tapes and submitted them to the CPS.

In October 2004 the CPS decided, having taken advice from Treasury Counsel, that there was sufficient evidence to prosecute Abu Hamza for soliciting to murder, incitement to racial hatred and possessing a document containing information likely to be useful to a person committing or preparing an act of terrorism. The evidence came from the tapes seized in May 2004 and one tape from those seized in January 2003. On this occasion the Attorney-General was consulted, agreed with the decision to prosecute and gave his consent to the prosecution of the incitement to racial hatred offence in October 2004.

Audible Fire Alarms

Bob Spink: To ask the Solicitor-General what proportion of the premises occupied by the Law Officers is fitted with audible fire alarms. [42872]

The Solicitor-General: All the offices occupied by the Law Officers' Departments[1] are fitted with audible fire alarms in compliance with current fire safety legislation.

Criminal Justice Act

Mr. Amess: To ask the Solicitor-General what changes were made under the Criminal Justice Act 2003 to the Crown Prosecution Service's power to instigate prosecutions. [51303]

The Solicitor-General: The changes made by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 empower a crown prosecutor, acting under guidance issued by the Director of Public Prosecutions, to determine whether, and if so what, criminal charges should be preferred against alleged offenders who have been arrested or reported for an offence by the police.

The Act considerably enhances the ability of the Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) to influence the efficient progress of casework by ensuring that the right offender is charged with the most appropriate offence.

Previously, the CPS's powers were limited to reviewing and amending police determined charges or in limited circumstances instigating proceedings where the importance or difficulty of the case made it appropriate to do so.

Crown Prosecution Service

Mr. Bone: To ask the Solicitor-General if he will take steps to improve liaison between the Crown Prosecution Service and witnesses in relation to bringing cases to court. [50982]

The Solicitor-General: The Crown Prosecution Service (CPS), in partnership with the police, has established 165 witness care units across England and Wales. The units provide a single point of contact for victims and witnesses from point of charge until the conclusion of the case. Dedicated witness care officers ensure that the needs of individual victims and witnesses are identified and met so that they have all the support and information they need to enable them to attend court and to give their best evidence.

As far as vulnerable and intimidated witnesses are concerned, there is the possibility of the witness meeting the prosecution team to discuss what special measures in court may be appropriate for them at trial. Research has shown that there has not been a high take-up of these meetings and the CPS will use this to encourage areas to hold them where appropriate.

In addition the CPS is currently piloting pre-trial interviews with witnesses in four CPS areas. The purpose of the interview is to assess the reliability of the witness's evidence, assist the prosecutor in understanding complex evidence, and to explain the criminal process and procedures to witnesses.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Francois: To ask the Solicitor-General how much has been spent in each year since 1997 by the Law Officers' Department on salaries paid to civil servants. [41585]

The Solicitor-General: The salaries paid by the Law Officers' Departments[1] to civil servants between 1997–98 and 2004–05 together with the related percentage of total budget are shown in the following table.

[1] The Revenue and Customs Prosecutions Office was set up on 18 April 2005.

Departmental Vehicles

Mrs. Villiers: To ask the Solicitor-General how many cars are (a) owned and (b) leased by his Department; what models the cars are; what type of petrol each model requires; and what the fuel efficiency is of each model. [41354]

The Solicitor-General: None of the Law Officers' Departments owns any cars.

The Crown Prosecution Service leases 18 vehicles from LoydsTSB Autolease whose fleet contains the vehicle models/type petrol consumption shown in the following chart. The fuel efficiency figures for these vehicles are not known.

Car model	Type of petrol
Citroen Berlingo Van 1.4i 600 LX	Liquefied petroleum gas
Ford Transit 260 SWB low-roof 2.3L	Liquefied petroleum gas
Ford Transit 280 SWB low-roof 2.3L	Liquefied petroleum gas

Vauxhall Zafira 1.6i 16v Life	Liquefied petroleum gas
Vauxhall Vectra 2.2 Dti Estate	Diesel

HM Crown Prosecution Service Inspectorate, the Revenue and Customs Prosecutions Office, Serious Fraud Office, Treasury Solicitor's Department and Legal Secretariat to the Law Officers do not lease any cars.

For vehicles provided to Government Departments by the Government Car and Despatch Agency (GCDA), my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State at the Department for Transport has asked the chief executive of the GCDA to write to the hon. member with the information requested.

Iraq

Adam Price: To ask the Solicitor-General whether the Attorney-General was instructed by the Prime Minister that he should not give advice in relation to the war in Iraq until March 2003. [51581]

The Solicitor-General: I refer the hon. Gentleman to paragraphs 366–87 of the Report of the Butler Review of Intelligence on Weapons of Mass Destruction.

Prosecutions (Parents)

Tim Loughton: To ask the Solicitor-General (1) how many cases of parents prosecuted for killing their children have been reviewed following the Sally Clark judgment; and how many of these cases have been re-investigated; [48168]

(2) what procedures were followed in reviewing the cases of parents convicted of killing their own children; [48169]

(3) how many pathologists were involved in the review of cases of parents convicted of killing their own children following the Sally Clark judgment. [48172]

The Solicitor-General: On 29 January 2003 the Court of Appeal overturned Sally Clark's conviction for murdering her two sons. On 19 January 2004 the Court of Appeal issued its judgment allowing the appeal of Angela Cannings against her convictions for murdering two of her children. On the same day the Attorney-General announced he had established a review of all convictions in the previous 10 years (1994—2004), of a parent, foster parent or carer convicted of the unlawful killing of a baby and/or infant under the age of two. A small number of cases which did not fall strictly within the parameters of the review were also included at the request of defendants or their solicitors.

At the same time, January 2004, the Attorney-General asked the Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) to review current cases involving an unexplained infant death, which were still to come to trial.

A Central Review Team (CRT) of experienced legal practitioners was set up within the CPS, answerable only to the Attorney. The CRT purely reviewed case files on legal merits in the light of the Court of Appeal ruling in Cannings. No pathologist was involved in this legal review work.

A total of 297 cases were reviewed by the CRT. The papers reviewed included evidence served on the prosecution by the defence, who were in the best position to know about the circumstances of their clients' convictions. None of the cases were reinvestigated (by the police) in the sense that the original investigation was reopened but all the available papers were thoroughly reviewed. A selection was also sent to independent counsel for review.

The team's work was supervised by an Inter-Departmental Group (IDG). This group considered 34 cases identified by the CRT for possible referral to the defendant. All but six of those cases were accepted for such referral. After careful consideration, the Attorney-General, IDG and counsel decided that the remaining six cases did not give such cause for concern that they needed to be referred to the defendant. Again, no pathologist was involved in this work but the Attorney-General was assisted by an expert in child health and paediatrics.

On 21 December 2004, the Attorney-General published the results of the review of the Infant Death Cases, and together with the then Solicitor-General, made oral statements before Parliament on that day. The report was also placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

As a result of the review a number of cases were referred to the Court of Appeal. It was at this stage that these cases were subject to the re- examination of evidence by medical professionals, including pathologists.

In addition, the review of current cases resulted in three prosecutions being stopped without going to trial. This was set out in the original review.

At the time of publication of the original review in December 2004, the Attorney-General explained that he had deferred final consideration of 89 further cases of so-called Shaken Baby Syndrome. An addendum to the report, dealing with those cases, will be published shortly.

Neither stage of the review has prevented any person from referring their case to the Court of Appeal or Criminal Cases Review Commission if they wish to do so.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Departmental Expenditure

Mrs. Villiers: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much his Department has allocated to (a) total expenditure, (b) grant in aid to private sector partners, (c) capital spending and (d) revenue spending in each year between 2006–07 to 2014–15; and if he will make a statement. [50617]

Hilary Benn: DFID allocates funds within spending review limits, agreed with Her Majesty's Treasury (HMT). The current spending review (SR04) runs to 2007–08.

Annex 1, table 1 of DFID's 2005 Departmental Report (DR) summarises all Government spending that falls within DFID's responsibility. Tables 2 and 3 of the DR provide a detailed breakdown of the resource and capital spending totals. Table 4 outlines our bilateral aid expenditure, which includes all forms of direct assistance; expenditure through multilateral institutions; DFID expenditure in support of the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries (HIPC) initiative and the multilateral debt relief expenditure plans.

Capital expenditure is shown net in the DR (i.e. expenditure minus receipts). Expected gross expenditure in both 2006–07 and 2007–08 is about £46.5 million.

DFID does not hold specific details of grants in aid to private partners centrally and it is not possible to provide a disaggregation without incurring disproportionate cost.

DFID is currently undertaking a resource allocation round, which is the mechanism by which DFID distributes its budget internally. Revisions to the allocations for 2006–07 and 2007–08 have yet to be agreed.

Departmental Offices

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will list the locations in which his Department has had offices in each of the last five years. [50775]

Mr. Thomas: In the UK, staff have been based in the following locations in the last five years:

94 Victoria street, London (up to November 2001)

1 Palace street, London (since November 2001)

20 Victoria street, London

Glen House, Stag Place London (up to October 2002)

Abercrombie House, East Kilbride.

Over the last five years, DFID have had staff based in the countries in the following list.. In some cases, for part or all of the period in question the DFID staff formed part of the British embassy/high commission, or other multilateral organisation, rather than a separate office.

Madagascar (British Embassy)

Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he has made of the impact of the closure of the British embassy in Madagascar on UK aid and development initiatives in (a) Madagascar and (b) South East Africa. [50583]

Hilary Benn: I refer the hon. Member to the response given on 30 January 2006, Official Report, column 13W. We have made no assessment of the impact of the closure of the embassy, as DFID does not have a bilateral development programme with Madagascar. The closure is unlikely to have any effect on South East Africa.

Middle East

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development whether the Government have required the Palestinian Authority to meet certain criteria in order to ensure continued financial aid; and if he will make a statement. [50551]

Hilary Benn: The statement by the European Union, United States, United Nations and Russia (the Quartet) on 30 January concluded that future assistance to any new Palestinian government would be reviewed by donors against that government's commitment to principles of non-violence, recognition of Israel and acceptance of previous agreements and obligations, including the Roadmap. The UK government fully supports this approach.

Pending the formation of a new Palestinian government, a caretaker administration is in place. The Quartet has called for measures to facilitate the work of this caretaker administration to stabilise public finances. DFID is in close contact with the World Bank, International Monetary Fund and other donors about how we can help. For the time being DFID's programmes of advice to key Palestinian institutions and assistance to refugees are continuing.

Pakistan

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what the total amount of aid given to (a) the Pakistan Government and (b) aid agencies has been following the earthquake of 8 October 2005; and if he will make a statement. [50726]

Mr. Thomas: DFID has pledged £58 million for emergency humanitarian relief and £70 million for longer term reconstruction. Of this nearly £53 million has been committed so far, including £43.3 million to aid agencies. The remainder has been in support of interventions undertaken by NATO, MOD and of direct action by DFID. We have not disbursed any money to the Government of Pakistan so far.

Palestinian Authority

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much the Government gave in aid to the Palestinian Authority in each of the last five years. [51546]

Hilary Benn: DFID's support to the Palestinian Authority (PA) over the last five years has been as follows:

	£ million
2001–02	14.4
2002–03	15
2003–04	16.9
2004–05	15.8
2005–06	15

This support has included technical assistance and financial aid, including budgetary support. These figures are in addition to Palestinian projects implemented outside the PA, including contributions to the United Nations Relief and Works Agency (UNRWA) for refugees.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Agricultural Support

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what her estimate is of the total amount to be paid to farmers under the Single Farm Payment in England in 2005–06. [47984]

Jim Knight: The total amount of money that is available for payments to farmers in England under the single payment scheme is £1.63 billion. The amount each farmer will receive depends on the number and value of the entitlements they are allocated, and whether they activate these entitlements. In addition all payments are subject to modulation.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she expects the first single farm payments to be made. [48205]

Jim Knight: As I stated on 31 January 2006, full payments under the Single Payment Scheme will start at the end of February 2006, with the bulk complete in March 2006.

I expect all payments will be made well within the payment window set by EU legislation which runs until 30 June 2006.

Avian Influenza

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what factors she took into account when deciding not to authorise the use of vaccines against avian influenza. [50086]

Mr. Bradshaw: The use of avian influenza vaccines is prohibited by European Union (EU) legislation except in emergency or high risk situations. They would also have to be specifically authorised by the Chief Veterinary Officer.

The vaccines currently available in the EU are able to reduce mortality but it is likely that some vaccinated birds would still be capable of transmitting the avian influenza virus if they become infected. We are continuing to work closely with vaccine manufacturers to assess information on other possible vaccines.

Beacon Towns Initiative

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the status of the Beacon Towns initiative. [51102]

Jim Knight: The Beacon Towns programme was part of the Market Towns initiative announced in the Rural White Paper 2000. Between 2003–04 the Countryside Agency identified 18 Beacon Towns in England; demonstrating the range of different problems and challenges which market towns experience, and other towns can learn from. Details of their experiences are set out in the Countryside Agency's report 'Beacon Towns: The Story Continues', available from the Agency's website at http://mt.net.countryside.gov.uk/cgi-bin/item.cgi?id = 2840

The delivery functions that used to be carried out by the Countryside Agency (including work on Beacon Towns) transferred to regional development agencies and Government Offices from 1 April 2005. Regional development agencies have continued to support the delivery of individual Beacon Town projects during 2005–06.

The not-for-profit organisation Action for Market Towns is also focusing on work with three specific Beacon Towns: Faringdon, Carterton and Wolverton. The aim is to generate an ongoing knowledge and skills exchange between these and other experienced market town partnerships.

Calls to Prayer

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what guidance she gives local authorities on the acceptable volume of amplified calls to prayer; and if she will make a statement. [50247]

Mr. Bradshaw: Complaints about noise from amplified calls to prayer can be addressed by local authorities under the statutory nuisance provisions of the Environmental Protection Act 1990. It is for the appropriate local authority to determine whether a noise amounts to a statutory nuisance. The Department does not produce guidance on acceptable levels of noise, since these will vary. Factors to be taken into account include the character of the locality, the duration of the noise and the frequency of its occurrence.

Canoeists

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs to what percentage of the total length of rivers in the United Kingdom canoeists have full access throughout the year; and if she will make a statement. [48366]

Jim Knight [holding answer 6 February 2006]: The lengths of water for canoeing on canals, rivers with public navigation rights, and rivers with formal access agreements in England total some 5,000 km (34 per cent. of the major river and canal network) but the canoeists right of access may be limited at certain times of year (eg during the angling season).

Responsibility for access to rivers in Scotland and Wales lies with the devolved Administrations rather than with Defra.

Circuses

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make it her policy to ban the use of animals in travelling circuses. [50562]

Mr. Bradshaw: We do not believe there is sufficient evidence to justify an across the board ban on animals performing in travelling circuses.

DEFRA plans to introduce a statutory code of practice for circuses to underpin the new welfare offence set out in the Animal Welfare Bill. The code will establish good practice, and assist with enforcement. Together with the proposed welfare offence it may have the effect of making it uneconomic for certain animal acts to perform in travelling circuses.

Citizens Juries

Mr. Wills: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs on how many occasions her Department consulted citizens' juries on departmental policies in the last five years; in how many of those consultations the recommendations of the citizens' jury differed from existing departmental policy; and on how many occasions departmental policy was changed to reflect the recommendations of the citizens' jury. [46243]

Jim Knight: As part of the 'GM Nation?' public debate on genetically modified crops and food, a number of organisations set up citizens' juries to consider the issues and contribute to the debate. The outcome from such juries and hundreds of public meetings informed the advice from the independent GM debate steering board set up by the Government. This advice was taken into account in determining the Government's GM policy statement published in 2004.

In 1999 there was a national consensus conference organised by UK CEED to discuss a way forward with radwaste management which included expert witnesses, including Defra, giving evidence to a Citizen's Panel of 12. The panel then produced a report called "Final Report of the UK National Consensus Conference on Radioactive Waste".

Climate Change Consultation

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will place in the Library a copy of the consultation responses received by the Department for Environment, Transport and the Regions following the publication of the draft UK Climate Change Programme 2000. [51749]

Mr. Morley: A summary of responses to the consultation on the draft UK Climate Change Programme 2000 can be found on the Defra website at: http://www.defra.gov.uk/environment/climatechange/pubs/ukccp/draft/response/01.htm.

Common Agricultural Policy

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions she has had with her French counterpart to ensure that British and French farmers are treated equally in (a) monetary and (b) commercial terms under the common agricultural policy. [50105]

Jim Knight: The CAP exists in the context of the single market. It functions according to rules fixed for the EU as a whole and negotiated collectively when periodical reviews and reforms occur. Such reforms took place in 2003, 2004 and 2005 and are scheduled for 2006 and 2008–09. We held and will hold discussions with the French Government as part of these reforms.

Departmental Assets

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the items of departmental property worth over £100 that have been reported as (a) lost and (b) broken in the last 12 months. [47683]

Jim Knight: It is the policy of DEFRA its agencies, non-departmental public bodies and, where appropriate, its sponsored organisations to make financial redress in accordance with the guidance set out in Chapter 18.7 and Annexes 18.1 and 18.2 of Government Accounting.

The information you requested is set out in the following table:

Value for the year 1 January to 31 December 2005, DEFRA

Department	£
(a) Lost items:
Catering Equipment	427
Thefts from Departmental vehicles of one digital camera and two laptops	3,285
(b) Broken items:
1,690 cage traps	80,269

For information on thefts of items valued over £100 from DEFRA buildings, for the period 1 January to 31 December 2005, I refer the hon. Member to my earlier response on 1 February 2006, Official Report, column 519W.

Departmental Catering Budget

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much and what proportion of her Department's catering budget was spent on fair trade produce in the last period for which figures are available. [49914]

Jim Knight: From information held centrally, total turnover through Defra's catering facilities was £1,636,300 for the period January 2005 to December 2005 inclusive. Of this amount, £459,000 (28 per cent.) is accounted for by fair trade produce.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what her Department's policy is on the procurement of fair trade produce for consumption on its premises. [49925]

Jim Knight: The department policy on the procurement of fair trade produce is that farm assured produce, organic food and fair trade products should be promoted and all feature on the menu on a daily basis.

Contracts are measured against this requirement. All hospitality beverages (teas, coffees and chocolate) served within Defra premises is fair trade produce.

The hon. Member may wish to refer to the Defra website where further detail can be found in the "Catering Services Food Procurement Toolkit": which is designed for the use of Public Sector organisations. http://www.defra.gov.uk/farm/sustain/procurement/toolkit.htm. Pages: 6, 16, 37, 38, 79, 93, and 129. refer to fairly traded produce.

Departmental Regulations

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many regulations from her Department came into force in each year since 1996–97. [49169]

Jim Knight: The Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (Defra) was formed in June 2001 as a result of the merger of the former Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and the former Department of the Environment, Transport and the Regions. Relevant agencies and non-departmental public bodies were also absorbed into the new organisation.

The following table identifies the number of statutory instruments which fall within scope of Defra's activities and that came into force between 8 June 2001 and 31 December 2005. The figures include new regulations and amending regulations which concern technical or clarifying amendments to existing regulations.

	Number of Defra SIs coming into force
2001[1]	54
2002	128
2003	115
2004	146
2005	153

[1] 8 June to 31 December

From 2006 Departments are required to publish an annual list of forthcoming legislation it expects to introduce in that year. Defra published its 2006 list on 31 January and this can be found at http://www.defra.gov.uk/corporate/regulat/regulat.asp-forthcoming.

Digital Television (Energy Efficiency)

Peter Law: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what guidance she has issued to digital television (a) broadcasters, (b) manufacturers and (c) retailers on the energy efficiency of digital television appliances. [50223]

Mr. Morley: Defra has worked closely with the Department for Trade and Industry and the Department for Culture, Media and Sport—who have lead policy responsibility for digital switchover—through the Digital TV Group to identify the projected increases in energy consumption arising from digital switchover and to identify actions for mitigating these increases.

My Department, via the Market Transformation Programme (MTP), by proactively working with the European Commission and service providers to develop and encourage sign up to the EU Code of Conduct for Digital TV Services which sets energy efficiency standards for digital TV equipment, has been able to help mitigate projected increases from service providers such as BskyB, by around 400,000 TC per annum.

I have also written to all the major digital TV broadcasters, service providers and retailers urging them to sign up to the EU Code of Conduct, including for terrestrial digital TV equipment.

Defra, via MTP, has also been working closely with the Energy Saving Trust to extend it's successful Energy Saving Recommended product labelling scheme to include Integrated Digital Television (IDTVs) sets. To be endorsed, IDTVs have to conform to a challenging set of energy performance criteria in both standby and on-mode functions. In addition, purchase of an IDTV now will negate the necessity to install a set top box, thus achieving additional energy savings. In its first month, three manufacturers have registered a total of 20 products with the scheme.

English Nature

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on English Nature's delivery plan; when the latest plan will be published; and whether this plan imposes (a) targets and (b) statutory requirements on local planning authorities. [51104]

Jim Knight: English Nature is a public service organisation, which provides advice and influences policies at national, regional and local level in order to conserve and enhance our natural environment.

English Nature does not publish formal delivery plans. However, its latest corporate plan, covering the period 2005–08 is available on its website at: www.english-nature.org.uk

Local planning authorities already have a statutory responsibility to consult English Nature over development that would affect Sites of Special Scientific Interest.

Subject to parliamentary approval, English Nature, parts of the Countryside Agency and DEFRA's rural development service, will be brought together from 1 October into a single body, Natural England, to be responsible for conserving, managing and enhancing the natural environment. Natural England will be responsible for publishing its own reports and plans.

Farm Income

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many farming households in England were living below the Government low-income threshold in each year since 1996–97. [49170]

Jim Knight: Pursuant to the answer given to the right hon. Member for Kettering (Mr. Hollobone) on 17 January 2006, Official Report, column 1183W, the low income threshold as defined by the Department for Work and Pensions cannot be compared with any estimate of average farm household income. This is because the low income threshold published by the Department for Work and Pensions has been re-scaled for a standardised household consisting of two adults only.

Data on farm household income was collected for the first time in 2005 and is expected to be published later this year.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the (a) percentage and (b) real terms changes in total income from farming were in each of the last four years. [49981]

Jim Knight: The information requested is presented in the following table.

	£ million	Percentage change
Total income from farming
2002	2,361.8	27.8
2003	3,080.7	30.4
3004	2,766.7	-10.2
2005	2,521.3	-8.9
Total income from farming in real term (2005 prices)
2002	2,573.2	25.8
2003	3,261.8	26.8
3004	2,845.0	-12.8
2005	2,521.3	-11.4

Farm Subsidies

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what proportion of single farm payments she expects to have been paid by the end of February. [47993]

Jim Knight [holding answer 2 February 2006]: We cannot be precise at this stage about how many payments will have been made by the end of February 2006. However, we expect the bulk of payments to be complete by the end of March 2006.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what changes in pillar II funding from earlier estimates are expected in 2007–13 as a result of the recent EU budget reform.[49985]

Jim Knight: The overall budget for the Rural Development Regulation was agreed as part of the Financial Perspective (2007–13) negotiations and has been set at €69.75 billion for the whole EU. This is roughly in line with existing expenditure, although with a greater focus in the new member states. Once the mandatory transfer from CAP subsidies to rural development agreed as part of the 2003 reform are taken into account, (also known as compulsory modulation), EU spending on rural development will be higher—during the 2007–13 period than it is currently.

The European Commission has yet to propose the detailed allocation for each member state. For the UK, a key element of the budget deal was securing the flexibility to make use of voluntary modulation or additional transfers of funds from pillar I to pillar II. This will enable us to meet our manifesto commitments on Environmental Stewardship. We will look at all financing arrangements for the successor Rural Development Programme from 2007 with the Treasury and in light of the forthcoming Comprehensive Spending Review.

Fisheries

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will visit Iceland to see how it is managing its fish stocks. [50107]

Mr. Bradshaw: I have already visited Iceland in August 2004 as part of a series of tours to explore the ways various non-EU countries managed their fisheries. The Icelandic approach to managing fish stocks is, along with examples from other countries, being taken into account in the current programme to change our own quota management arrangements.

Footpath Closure Orders

Andrew Gwynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many applications for footpath closure orders have been made in each metropolitan district in the county of Greater Manchester under the Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000 since the act came into force; and how many were successful in each district. [51145]

Jim Knight: This information is held by local highway authorities and could be gathered only at a disproportionate cost.

Freedom of Information

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what total sum has been received by her Department for the provision of information under the Freedom of Information Act 2000 in its first year of operation. [48470]

Jim Knight: Since the Freedom of Information Act came into force, the Department has not received any payment for the provision of information under the Act, nor for answering requests under the Environmental Information Regulations 2004.

The Freedom of Information Act allows for public authorities to determine when the cost of processing a request will exceed the appropriate limit, which for central Government are set at £600 and for the wider public sector £450. In this instance the public authority may decide to either approach the applicant to help them refine their request and where possible to bring it under the appropriate limit. Alternatively, public authorities may charge the applicant the cost of processing the request. There is, however, no obligation for Departments to provide information if the cost of processing the request exceeds the appropriate limit.

Public authorities may also charge for disbursements when handling requests where it is deemed appropriate. Further information on the FOI fees regime can be found on the DCA website at http://www.foi.gov.uk/feesguide.htm.

GM Crops

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the impact of terminator seed technology on free access to genetic resources. [50046]

Mr. Morley: Terminator technology (genetic use restriction technologies or GURTs) involves a wide range of technically complex, inter-related issues that are evolving rapidly. While the Government keeps abreast of the potential impact of this technology on a range of stakeholders, we have not undertaken a specific study into the impact on free access to genetic resources.

We do however monitor developments in the genetically modified (GM) field overall and seek stakeholder views more generally. In 2003, we initiated the "GM nation" public debate which sought to explore the public's views on GM crops and food. All GM issues were open for debate but we did not seek specifically views on GURTs. We regularly meet with relevant stakeholders to keep abreast of their views on all GM matters and GURTs have been raised on occasion. We also monitor development in the scientific press and the wider media.

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if the Government will support the Convention on Biodiversity Decision V/5 section III on the field testing and commercialisation of genetic use restriction technologies at the forthcoming 2006 Convention on Biodiversity meetings. [50047]

Mr. Morley: The UK Government support the decision that the Convention on Biological Diversity took in 2000 that there should be a precautionary approach to the use of genetic use restriction technologies (GURTs) while research into the possible impacts of these technologies is carried out.

At the meeting of the convention in March, this year, parties will consider recommendations and reports from the convention's subsidiary body and other working groups on this issue. They will be invited to reaffirm the previous decision. Our position at the meeting will take full account of these reports, as well as the EU's own regulatory regime.

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what was the value of genetically modified crops imported to the UK from Spain in (a) 2003 and (b) 2005. [50048]

Mr. Morley: The only GM crop which is approved for cultivation in Spain is maize, and we understand that no GM maize that has been grown in Spain is exported to the UK. Any GM maize grain imported into the UK from Spain would itself have been imported into Spain from outside the EU.

The total value of grain maize (combined figure for both GM and non-GM) exported from Spain to the UK in (a) 2003 and (b) 2005 was:

	Value
2003	1,152,000
2005	17,742,000

Only part of the total export was genetically modified. We do not keep specific records of the total of specifically GM imports, although since April 2004 exporters have been required under new EU legislation to keep for five years records of imports of GM crops. This data is not however collected centrally.

GM maize is only legal in the EU if the product has been approved under stringent EU legislation.

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much genetically modified maize was imported to the United Kingdom in (a) 2004 and (b) 2005. [50049]

Mr. Morley: The total volume of grain maize (combined figure for both GM and non-GM) imported to the United Kingdom in (a) 2004 and (b) 2005 was:

tonnes

	Volume
2004	1,257,921
2005	1,169,953

We do not keep records of the total of specifically GM imports, although since April 2004 exporters have been required under new EU legislation to keep for five years records of imports of GM crops. This data is not however collected centrally.

GM maize can only be imported legally to the United Kingdom if the product has been approved under stringent EU legislation.

Grey Squirrels

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the control of grey squirrels. [50973]

Jim Knight: I refer my hon. Friend to the written ministerial statement I made on 20 January 2006, Official Report, column 37WS, announcing the publication of the Policy and Action Statement for the management of Grey Squirrel in England's woodlands. This policy sets out the rationale and actions for the control of grey squirrels.

Identity Cards

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to the answer of 5 December 2005, Official Report, column 930W, on identity cards, whether her Department has finalised the current best estimates of the cost of using the identity cards scheme to support the services which it oversees. [50324]

Jim Knight: As is the case with other Government Departments, Defra has begun an exercise to establish the benefits and costs arising from the introduction of identity cards. The initial stage underway will perform a broad scan across the range of Defra's services to identify areas of potential costs and benefits. These areas will be investigated in more detail as part of a subsequent stage, with support from the Home Office Identity Cards Programme.

Lyons Inquiry

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether her Department has sent a written submission to the Lyons inquiry on local government finance. [47887]

Jim Knight: The Lyons inquiry is independent of the Government. Sir Michael Lyons will decide what to publish when he makes available his final report.

National Reserve

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she expects the allocation of the National Reserve to be finalised. [49158]

Jim Knight: Eligibility decisions have been taken on 99.8 per cent. of all National Reserve applications and since 3 January the Rural Payments Agency (RPA) has been informing successful applicants of their National Reserve awards.

RPA anticipates that, where possible, all applicants will be advised of the outcome of their application by 22 February.

Organic Entry Level Scheme

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many farmers have been registered under the Organic Entry Level Scheme in (a) Devon, (b) Cornwall, (c) Somerset and (d) Dorset. [48715]

Jim Knight [holding answer 6 February 2006]: As at 3 February 2006, the following numbers of farmers had successfully entered into Organic Entry Level Stewardship agreements:

	Number
Devon	48
Cornwall	27
Somerset	16
Dorset	18

Parliamentary Questions

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) how many parliamentary questions tabled in the last 12 months for answer by her on a named day (a) were transferred and (b) received a substantive answer (i) on the day named and (ii) after the day named; [49890]

(2) how many ordinary written parliamentary questions tabled for answer by her in the last 12 months have been answered (a) within 14 days, (b) between 14 and 28 days, (c) between 28 days and two months and (d) in excess of two months after the date of tabling; and if she will make a statement. [49903]

Jim Knight: The following information is as follows:

Number of Named Day PQs transferred	23
Number transferred on the day named	23
Number transferred after the day named	0
Number of Named Day PQs that received a substantive answer	478
Number answered on the day named	153
Number answered after the day named	325

Note:
All figures are for PQs received between 1 February 2005 to 31 January 2006.

Number of Written PQs answered	2,871
Number answered within 14 days	2,409
Number answered between 14 and 28 days	268
Number answered between 28 days and two months	76
Number answered in excess of two months	118

Note:
All figures are for PQs received between 1 February 2005 to 31 January 2006.

Press Complaints

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs on how many occasions since 1 April 2003 she has complained to the Press Complaints Commission about the coverage in the press of (a) Ministers or officials and (b) her Department; and how many of these complaints were upheld. [47086]

Jim Knight: There have been no complaints to the PCC from this Department in that time.

Rural Payments Agency

Peter Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will examine the reasons for the delay by the Rural Payments Agency in establishing definitive maps in respect of the holdings of John Lumsdon of Mayhouse Farm, Hadley, Droitwich Spa, WR9 OAS, reference numbers 17/510/0048 and 106620345. [49439]

Jim Knight: Due to the size of the Rural Land Register project, and the amount of land the Rural Payments Agency (RPA) is trying to capture, there have been some instances when RPA has been unable to capture edits as quickly as it would like.

However, I am pleased to report that revised maps have now been sent to Mr. Lumsdon.

Set-aside

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much has been allocated to each EU country in set aside payment within the Common Agricultural Policy in 2005–06. [43549]

Jim Knight: Under the Single Payment Scheme, the number of set-aside entitlements allocated in each member state in the first year of application of the scheme is determined, in the main, by the average number of hectares under compulsory set-aside under the Arable Area Payments Scheme (AAPS) during the 2000–02 reference period. Subject to the exemptions that applied at the time, notably for small producers, that equates to 10 per cent. of the total area claimed under AAPS in each member state in the reference period. Total figures for those member states operating the scheme in 2005 are not yet available, but the amount of payment attached to set-aside entitlements in each member state will vary according to whether the 'historical' or 'flat-rate/hybrid' model of the scheme has been adopted. For those member states still operating AAPS in 2005, set-aside payment figures are again unavailable at this point, but will be determined by the number of applicants applying under the scheme, how much land they put into set-aside and the 63 euros/tonne payment rate.

Sheep Dip

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the effects on (a) biodiversity and (b) the environment of synthetic pyrethroid sheep dip. [51032]

Mr. Bradshaw: It is widely known that synthetic pyrethroids can cause environmental problems if they are allowed to come into contact with watercourses. Recent reports from the Environment Agency of pollution incidents caused by the synthetic pyrethroid cypermethrin used in sheep dipping have included the loss of aquatic insects and other invertebrate species and possible resulting decline of the insect-feeding fish populations.

The veterinary medicines directorate and the Environment Agency are currently consulting on a programme to reduce pollution from such incidents.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) for what reasons the veterinary medicines directorate and Environment Agency consultation on the future use of synthetic pyrethroid sheep dip is not a public consultation; [51033]

(2) what assessment she has made of the compliance of the current format of the veterinary medicines directorate and Environment Agency consultation on the future use of synthetic pyrethroid sheep dip with the openness about environmental decision-making required by the Aarhus Convention. [51034]

Mr. Bradshaw: The consultation on the draft Pollution Reduction programme for sheep dip is a public consultation.

Following a number of reports of serious pollution incidents arising from the use of synthetic pyrethroid sheep dips, the veterinary medicines directorate and the Environment Agency called a public stakeholder meeting to consider how the issue could be addressed. The meeting was held in September last year and subsequently from the agreed actions, a draft Pollution Reduction programme for sheep dip was produced.

During December, the draft programme was sent out for consultation to all who attended the meeting.

One of the external stakeholders pointed out that the Pollution Reduction programme was not available on the internet. This error was corrected when the consultation package was put on to the veterinary medicines directorate website on 27 January.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what volume of synthetic pyrethroid sheep dip was licensed for disposal in each of the last five years. [51041]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Environment Agency's database currently holds approximately 9,000 authorisations issued for a period of four years to sheep farmers under the Groundwater Regulations 1998 for disposal of sheep dip. The database records only the maximum amount of sheep dip which may be disposed of, rather than actual volumes, and does not distinguish between specific sheep dips such as synthetic pyrethroids or organophosphorus compounds. Records of specific substances and quantities disposed of are required to be kept by the holders of authorisations, but this information is not held centrally by the EA and would be disproportionately expensive to collate.

VMD records show that 51,700 litres of cypermethrin sheep dip were sold in 2005, indicating the quantities which would require disposal after use.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what quantity of synthetic pyrethroid sheep dip chemical precursors were sold in each of the last five years; and how much sheep dip by volume would be produced when the precursors were prepared for use. [51042]

Mr. Bradshaw: For the control of sheep ectoparasites by plunge dipping, synthetic pyrethroid sheep dips products have to be diluted with water to make the dip. The rates of dilution differ between products and the ectoparasites for which the animals are to be treated. The range of dilutions are 1:400 to 1:1,000 with 1:500 the most common rate. Using this rate:

In 2001: 32,000 litres of cypermethrin sheep dip were sold for dilution to 16 million litres.

In 2002: 57,000 litres of cypermethrin sheep dip were sold for dilution to 28 million litres.

In 2003: 65,000 litres of cypermethrin sheep dip were sold for dilution to 33 million litres.

In 2004: 57,000 litres of cypermethrin sheep dip were sold for dilution to 28 million litres.

In 2005: 52,000 litres of cypermethrin sheep dip were sold for dilution to 26 million litres.

Single Farm Payment

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many applications for Single Farm Payment made in 2004 (a) are still under review and (b) have not been processed by the Rural Payments Agency; and if she will set a date by which a decision on all such applications will be made. [49125]

Jim Knight: The Single Payment Scheme was introduced in the UK on 1 January 2005, the earliest opportunity possible under the regulations. Therefore, there were no applications to this scheme in 2004.

All applications to the 2005 scheme have been assessed, although just over half of the claim population is still in the process of completing validation.

As I stated on 31 January 2006, full payments under the Single Payment Scheme will start at the end of February 2006, with the bulk complete in March 2006.

I expect all payments will be made well within the payment window set by EU legislation which runs until 30 June 2006.

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the cost was of administering the single farm payment scheme in each year since its introduction. [49156]

Jim Knight: The Single Payment Scheme (SPS) was introduced in 2005 and the cost of administering claims for that year under this scheme will largely fall in the financial year 2005–06. The cost of administering all CAP schemes, including SPS, in England during 2005–06 is forecast at £148 million. The allocation of these costs between schemes will not be finalized until after the year end.

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what proportion of single farm payments she expects to have been paid by the end of (a) February and (b) March. [49157]

Jim Knight: We cannot be precise at this stage of the proportions of payments under the single payment scheme to have been paid by the end of February 2006. However, we expect the bulk of payments to be complete by the end of March 2006.

Statutory Instruments

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will list the statutory instruments introduced by her Department since 6 May 2005. [46210]

Jim Knight: The Department introduced 105 Statutory Instruments for the period in question. These are listed as follows.

The Access to the Countryside (Correction of Provisional and Conclusive Maps) (England) (Amendment) Regulations 2005

The Agricultural Holdings (Units of Production) (England) Order 2005

The Animal By-Products Regulations 2005

Timber

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what monitoring her Department carries out to measure the effectiveness of policies to restrict the import of illegal timber. [50945]

Mr. Morley [holding answer 13 February 2006]: All UK Government policy is regularly reviewed and monitored for effectiveness.

The Forest Law Enforcement Governance and Trade (FLEGT) Regulation adopted by the EU in December 2005 is key in tackling the importation of illegally logged timber. Member states will submit annual reports on the implementation of the policy and there will be a formal review from the two years after the entry into force of the first partnership agreement.

We are also committed to taking forward commitments made on illegal logging at last years G8 Environment and Development Ministerial. The Ministers' recommendations were endorsed by Heads at the Summit in Gleneagles in July 2005 and Ministers agreed that officials would meet in 2006 to review progress against these objectives.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the Government's timetable is for negotiating Forest Law Enforcement, Governance and Trade voluntary agreements with partnership countries. [51067]

Mr. Thomas: I have been asked to reply.

The EU Forest Law Enforcement, Governance and Trade (FLEGT) Action Plan identifies a number of potential partner countries. The European Commission and member states began consultations in 2005 with four of these—Cameroon, Ghana, Indonesia and Malaysia, with a view to beginning formal negotiations once a mandate had been given by the European Council. That mandate was given in late 2005 and formal negotiations can begin when these partner countries and the EU agree that the preparatory work has been completed. Consultations will begin with other potential partner countries in 2006 drawing on the experience already gained. The time taken to complete negotiations will vary from partner country to partner country. It is anticipated that the first partnership agreement will be signed in 2007.

Urban Biodiversity

Greg Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what advice her Department has (a) received from statutory advisors and (b) sought from experts on the role of gardens in urban biodiversity. [50708]

Jim Knight [holding answer 13 February 2006]: Defra, English Nature, the Countryside Council for Wales, and the Environment and Heritage Service (Northern Ireland) are funding research by Sheffield University into biodiversity in urban gardens (BUGS).

An initial BUGS project, completed at the end of 2002, involved a three year investigation into the significance of urban gardens in Sheffield as habitats for 'natural' biodiversity, and tested the efficacy of some simple methods for enhancing garden biodiversity. The results confirmed that 'gardens are brilliant for wildlife'. And further details are available on the BUGS website at http://www.bugs.group.shef.ac.uk/BUGS1/bugs1-index.html

A second BUGS project is now building on the methods and findings of the first study. This project, which is also supported by Defra, widens the scope of this work to examine the resource that gardens provide for wildlife, and the diversity of plants, across different parts of the UK, and different urban forms. It will run until 2006–07, and the results will feed into Biodiversity Action Plans for urban areas.

Waste Incineration Directive

Mr. Letwin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether she intends to delay the application of the Waste Incineration Directive to tallow until the Directorate-General Environment has completed its review of the directive's impact on the combustion of tallow. [27328]

Mr. Bradshaw: The Waste Incineration Directive has been transposed into national law and we currently have no grounds on which to change that. I am advised that, as the law currently stands, the burning of waste tallow as fuel remains subject to the requirements of that directive.

In June 2005, the Government wrote to the European Commission expressing its view that the existing requirements of the Waste Framework Directive (WFD) (75/442/EEC as amended) and the Directive on Integrated Pollution Prevention and Control (96/61/EC) are sufficient to ensure that the burning of waste tallow as fuel is carried out in ways which protect the environment and public and animal health. The Government called for the EU Animal By-Products Regulation (ABPR) and the WID to be amended accordingly.

In response, the Commission stated that there did not appear to be sufficient justification at present for it to propose an exclusion of the burning of waste tallow from the WID. However, the Commission also confirmed that the WID is not intended to discourage uses of waste as competitive and efficient alternative energy sources, agreed that it is desirable that it does not have such an effect and has initiated further analysis of the issue in the form of a study. This study should help to clarify the wider environmental and economic impacts of the current legislation.

I recognise that recent announcements by the European Commission have raised the possibility that this legal position might change in the future. My understanding is that the Commission's study of the environmental impacts of burning tallow has now commenced and will report in the second half of 2006. If the outcome of this study were favourable to the burning of waste tallow as fuel without having to meet the requirements of the WID, then this could lead to a change in the relevant legislation although it is suggested that this is unlikely to occur before 2009. I must also stress that such an outcome is by no means a foregone conclusion.

Water Abstraction

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) whether water abstraction charges are planned to be levied on a (a) regional and (b) national basis; [51460]

(2) what representations she has received concerning regional charges for water abstraction licences; [51461]

(3) what proposals she has received from the Environment Agency concerning water abstraction charges. [51469]

Mr. Morley: The Environment Agency has a statutory duty to manage water resources in England and Wales. It recovers the costs of managing water resources from abstraction licence holders through an abstraction charges scheme that is approved by Ministers. The recovery of its day-to-day costs expended in meeting this duty is, and will continue to be, on a regional basis.

The Environment Agency is expected to take action against abstraction licences where the abstraction is adversely impacting on conservation sites, and in particular those designated under European legislation. Where it needs to revoke or modify an abstraction licence then compensation is generally payable. The compensation payments form part of the agency's costs of meeting its duties and therefore are costs to be recovered via abstraction charges.

The Environment Agency has recently consulted on proposals to recover any compensation that may be payable via a national, rather than regional, formula. The Department has received representations, in light of that consultation, from a number of Members of Parliament whose constituencies lie in the north east of England and in particular those served by Northumbrian Water plc. The representations have been made to draw the Department's attention to the concerns of the Consumer Council for Water, the North East Chamber of Commerce and Northumbrian Water about a national approach. Anglian Water has made representations in support of a national approach.

The Environment Agency has made proposals to the Department to raise its regional Standard Unit Charges, which are the basis of the recovery of day-to-day costs of managing water resources in England and Wales, in 2006–07.

The Environment Agency has not proposed to the Department any changes to the abstraction charges scheme in relation to the recovery of any compensation payments it may need to make. Therefore no decision has been made by Ministers on this element of abstraction charges.

Water Supply

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what minimum (a) additional water supply infrastructure, (b) additional works to existing water supply infrastructure and (c) change in per capita consumption of water she expects to be required in order to enable an adequate water supply to be maintained when the Government have achieved its target for additional new dwellings in the Thames Gateway by 2016; and what plans the Government have to take the action necessary to ensure adequate water supply. [50198]

Mr. Morley: The Environment Agency is the statutory body with a duty to manage water resources in England and Wales. As part of the agency's management role it has both national and regional water resource strategies which set out the pressures over the next 25 years.

Water companies have statutory duties to maintain adequate supplies of water. They have 25 year water resource plans which complement the agency strategies and seek to reconcile supply with anticipated demand. This forward planning framework exists to take account of factors such as the water supply and disposal infrastructure required to service significant new housing developments of which the Thames Gateway is an example.

Although produced voluntarily, every five years, at present these plans will become a statutory requirement under the provisions of the Water Act 2003. The Department is currently consulting on the exercise of the new powers in respect of statutory water resource plans.

The Government will introduce regulations to secure improved water efficiency in new housing and will be issuing a consultation paper later this year.

Working Dogs

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate her Department has made of the percentage of working dogs which have had their tails amputated as a consequence of injury. [50981]

Mr. Bradshaw: None. However, these amputations can only be performed by a qualified vet.

World Trade Organisation (Sensitive Products)

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what criteria the EU applied when designating agricultural products as sensitive in the forthcoming World Trade Organisation negotiations. [49172]

Jim Knight: In October, in the run-up to the sixth ministerial meeting in Hong Kong, the EU made an offer on improved market access for agricultural products. Others, such as the US, did so too. An agreed feature of the market access negotiations is that all countries will be permitted to protect sensitive products, by applying less than the agreed reduction rates to the tariffs on these products. The EU suggested that up to 8 per cent. of a country's tariff lines on agricultural products should be deemed sensitive products. The US suggested 1 per cent., so there is a considerable divide here that, because the matter was not discussed or decided at Hong Kong, still needs bridging.

The EU Commission negotiates on behalf of the EU member states in the WTO negotiations. EU member states have not discussed or seen any list of sensitive products or criteria from the Commission. We would not expect to do so before the number of sensitive products has been agreed. The EU may yet decide to offer a figure lower than 8 per cent. in order to secure a Doha deal, which could then effect the choice of sensitive products. In addition, agreeing the treatment of sensitive products is, of course, as important as agreeing the number.

It is difficult for any issue within the Doha Trade Round to be viewed in isolation, as any agreement reached will be part of a package. For this reason, the Commission is unlikely to have any fixed criteria, for the designation of sensitive products, that they would wish to share at this present time.

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans she has to add vulnerable egg lines to the EU list of products designated as sensitive in the forthcoming World Trade Organisation negotiations. [49178]

Jim Knight: In October, in the run-up to the sixth ministerial meeting in Hong Kong, the EU made an offer on improved market access for agricultural products. Others, such as the US, did so too. An agreed feature of the market access negotiations is that all countries will be permitted to protect sensitive products, by applying less than the agreed reduction rates to the tariffs on these products. The EU suggested that up to 8 per cent. of a country's tariff lines on agricultural products should be deemed sensitive products. The US suggested 1 per cent., so there is a considerable divide here that, because the matter was not discussed or decided at Hong Kong, still needs bridging.

The EU Commission negotiates on behalf of the EU member states in the WTO negotiations. EU member states have not discussed or seen any list of sensitive products or criteria from the Commission. We would not expect to do so before the number of sensitive products has been agreed (the choice of products designated will depend upon the number of sensitive lines available). The EU may yet choose to offer a lower figure than 8 per cent. in order to secure a Doha deal. In addition, agreeing the treatment of sensitive products is, of course, as important as agreeing the number.

The UK Government are not endorsing any product as sensitive until the number and treatment of sensitive products is agreed. In general, the hon. Member will be aware that the UK Government wish to see only a minimal number of sensitive products as we believe a large number would undermine the potential benefits of the Doha Round.

We continue to receive representations from the egg industry and representatives for the egg industry are also able to lobby the Commission direct. The UK Government will review their own position when we know the parameters we have to work to.

TREASURY

Amber Communications Management Ltd.

Mr. Gale: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when HM Revenue and Customs expect to be in a position to repay the sums owing to Amber Communications Management Ltd. of Margate. [42932]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 18 January 2006]: Section 18 of the Commissioners for Revenue and Customs Act 2005 does not permit HM Revenue and Customs to disclose information relating to the tax affairs of individual taxpayers.

Banks

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will bring forward legislation under which banks would not be permitted to close branches without demonstrating that the local citizens would not experience any deterioration in credit and banking services. [50558]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: All of the main high street banks and building societies are signatories to the Banking Code. Out of the five recommendations on bank closures made at the time of the last independent review, four were accepted outright. Through the Banking Code there is now an obligation for subscribers to:

give customers extended notice of branch closure if the road distance of the nearest alternative branch is more than one mile in urban areas or more than four miles in rural areas;

explain how they continue to provide services after the branch has been closed in a way that is specific to local provision; and, give notice of a substantial reduction in opening hours.

The Government's approach to improving local services is to work with communities to help them understand and articulate their needs to those who deliver services.

This sort of collaborative working will ensure that communities' benefit from our programmes to modernise, improve and support services and will enable communities to help themselves to meet the needs of local people.

Business Taxation

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many section 660 investigations by HM Revenue and Customs are currently open; and if he will make a statement. [51671]

Dawn Primarolo: The information requested is not currently available.

Car Registrations

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of trends in new car registrations in the United Kingdom in each of the last five years; what changes he forecasts in each of the next two years; on what basis these forecasts are made; and if he will make a statement. [51283]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: According to the Society of Motor Manufacturers and Traders Limited, average annual growth in new car registrations from 2001 to 2005 was 2 per cent. Total new car registrations and annual growth in each of the last five years are presented in the following table. HM Treasury do not publish forecasts of new car registrations.

	Total new car registrations	Annual growth (percentage)
2001	2,458,769	10.7
2002	2,563,631	4.3
2003	2,579,050	0.6
2004	2,567,269	-0.5
2005	2,439,717	-5.0

Census

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he (a) is taking and (b) plans to take to enforce penalties for failing to complete a census form. [51215]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 14 February 2006:

As National Statistician and Registrar General for England and Wales I have been asked to reply to your recent question asking (a) what steps are being taken and (b) what plans there are to enforce penalties for failing to complete a census form. (51215)

For the 2001 Census, as with previous censuses, the Office for National Statistics followed a policy of enforcing legal proceedings against persons who persistently refused to fulfil their statutory obligation to return a completed census form, and where it had obtained clear and sufficient documentary evidence of such a refusal. The objective is to improve response by prosecution and the threat of prosecution, to support census field staff and to deter non-compliance for any future census.

Interviews under Caution were conducted and voluntary witness statements obtained, as required under the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 (PACE) Code of practice which governs the treatment and questioning of persons who refuse to complete a census form. Particular attention was given to those reported cases where refusals were accompanied by acts of intimidation towards field staff.

This policy will also be followed for non-compliance in the 2011 Census although the precise arrangements for enforcing legal action are yet to be developed.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many officials were responsible for compiling the 2001 census in Southend-on-Sea, broken down by grade; and if he will make a statement. [50834]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 14 February 2006:

As National Statistician and Registrar General for England and Wales I have been asked to reply to your recent parliamentary Question asking how many officials were responsible for compiling the 2001 census in Southend-on-Sea, broken down by grade. (50834)

The number and disposition of field staff working in Southend-on-Sea during the 2001 Census is listed as follows:

Job title	Number of staff
Census Area Manager	1
Census District Managers	5
Census Team Leaders	15
Census Enumerators	168
Total	189

Personnel working at the Widnes Processing office and Census HQ in Titchfield carried out tasks across all local authorities and were not specifically responsible for compiling figures for particular areas such as Southend-on-Sea. Over the 10 month life of the Widnes Processing site the number of staff employed to process forms for the UK averaged 1,200. The core number of staff from the Office for National Statistics at Titchfield assigned to 2001 Census activities averaged between 100 and 150. These included statisticians, researchers, information technology specialists and staff providing administrative support.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what mechanisms are available to (a) hon. Members and (b) local authorities to dispute the findings of a national census; and if he will make a statement. [50835]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The information requested fall within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 14 February 2006:

As National Statistician and Registrar General for England and Wales I have been asked to reply to your recent question asking what mechanisms are available to (a) hon. Members and (b) local authorities to dispute the findings of a national census. (50835)

There are a number of mechanisms available by which it is possible to dispute the findings of a national census. As you will know, Members of Parliament can ask questions in the House and receive a response from either the ONS Minister or from myself. Alternatively, they can write directly to me or to the Census Director, outlining their concerns. Local Authorities can also use these routes or may choose to channel their views through the Central and Local Government Information Partnership (CLIP) Census Sub Group. This group is one of a number of Census Advisory Groups which provide a forum for communication between the Office for National Statistics (ONS) and the user community on requirements for information from, and the operational planning of, the Census in England and Wales.

The Census legislation does not provide any specific legal mechanisms for disputing the findings of a national census.

On a more general level, one of the components of our 'Statement of Compliance with the National Statistics Code of Practice I is an additional 'Statement on Customer Service and Complaints' (http://www.statistics.gov.uk/about_ns/cop/compliance.asp). The latter provides guidance to stakeholders on how to make a formal complaint about any aspect of our administration or service, and what they can do if they are unhappy about our response.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the accuracy of census figures for (a) Southend-on-Sea and (b) Essex in each of the last two censuses; and if he will make a statement. [50478]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 14 February 2006:

As National Statistician I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking what assessment has been made of the accuracy of census figures for (a) Southend-on-Sea and (b) Essex in each of the last two censuses. (50478)

Following the 2001 Census for England and Wales, the Office for National Statistics undertook an extensive programme of work to investigate the reasons for the difference between the 2001 Census and the mid-year population estimates (MYEs) at both national and local levels. This research included a series of Local Authority studies carried out in 2004 which were designed to improve the MYEs in the areas that proved hardest to count in the Census. An extensive review was carried out for 32 local authorities, including Southend-on-Sea, to assess whether there was evidence that the population might have been under- or over-estimated. The results of these studies showed that better estimates of the population could be made in 15 areas and an adjustment was made to the MYEs in these areas. For the great majority of areas, including Southend-on-Sea, it was found that the 2001 Census-based population estimate remains the best estimate of the population. A full report on these Local Authority Studies can be found at:

www.statistics.gov.uk/downloads/theme_population/LAStudy_FullReport.pdf

The detailed report for Southend-on-Sea can be found at:

The Census 2001 Quality report for England and Wales provides information about all aspects of quality relating to the 2001 Census. It provides an overview of the quality issues and the studies and analyses that have been carried out to improve the quality of census data. The Quality report is held in the House of Commons Library or can be downloaded from www.statistics.gov.uk/census2001/proj_qr.asp

Additional information pertaining to the quality of results from the 2001 Census for local areas can be found at:

www.statistics.gov.uk/census2001/stat_methods_qual.asp

Official assessments of the quality of the 1991 Census were published in the 1991 Census General Report (ISBN 0-11-691616-8) and User Guide 58 (Undercoverage in Great Britain). These were carried out at national level and no assessment of quality was made for individual Local Authorities. The General Report is held in the House of Commons Library and User Guide 58 may be obtained from Census Customer Services:

The 1991 Census Validation Survey assessed the coverage of the Census and the quality of the Census information recorded about those people who were successfully enumerated. The 1991 Census Validation Survey: Quality Report (ISBN 0-11-691688-5) and 1991 Census Validation Survey: Coverage Report (ISBN 0-11-691591-9) are held in the House of Commons Library.

Climate Change Levy

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much in climate change levy was paid by three-digit industry categories since it was introduced; and on what percentage of industry output the levy was charged. [50932]

John Healey: It is not possible to break down climate change levy receipts by three-digit industry categories or calculate the percentage of industry output covered. This is because HM Revenue and Customs collect the levy from energy suppliers, not individual businesses. However, estimates of climate change levy by industry sector are available in the Cambridge Econometrics report, "Modelling the Initial Effects of the Climate Change Levy" (at Appendix D), published at Budget 2005.

Council Tax

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Meriden of 12 January 2006, Official Report, column 766W, on council tax, when the copies of the external guidance will be placed in the Library. [50961]

Dawn Primarolo: I have been assured by officials that the external guidance was deposited in the Library of the House on 12 January, the day I answered the question from the hon. Member for Meriden, and that further copies of the guidance were deposited on 26 January. The Library has confirmed that they have the guidance and that it is available to Members. I am arranging for copies if the guidance to be sent to the hon. Gentleman and the hon. Member for Meriden.

Credit Unions

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many credit unions have been established in each of the past 10 years; and what the total number of credit unions in England and Wales is. [51409]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The number of credit unions registered under the Credit Unions Act over the past 10 years is shown in the following table. This break down is based on all registrations in Great Britain as a whole (rather than for England and Wales only).

	Number
1996	36
1997	51
1998	47
1999	50
2000	39
2001	23
2002	31
2003	11
2004	16
2005	12
2006	[1]1

[1] to date

There were 561 authorised credit unions in Great Britain as at 10 February 2006.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask Mr Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of credit unions operating in Tamworth constituency. [51410]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Financial Services Authority (FSA) is responsible for registering credit unions under the Credit Unions Act 1979. It monitors and supervises the manner in which credit unions comply with the statutory and regulatory requirements and rules, taking whatever action it considers appropriate in the event of non-compliance.

One area of supervision is to ensure that the activities of a credit union are consistent with the objects laid down in their statute. However it is not a function of the FSA to investigate whether or not a credit union achieves its aims or whether it is effective in addressing the needs it was set up to meet. That is for the credit union and its members to assess.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Heald: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much was spent on entertainment by his Department in 2004–05; and how much of that sum was accounted for by (a) food, (b) alcohol, (c) staff and (d) accommodation. [50897]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Treasury's expenditure on official entertainment for 2004–05 was £213,000. Further analysis could be provided only at disproportionate cost. All expenditure on official entertainment is made in accordance with published departmental guidance on financial procedures and propriety, based on the principles set out in "Government Accounting".

Departmental Staff

Bob Spink: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many staff in his Department are paid on a performance-related basis. [50483]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: All HM Treasury employees are paid on a performance-related basis.

Earnings

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the change in average earnings in the (a) private sector, (b) public sector and (c) United Kingdom as a whole over the last 10 years; what impact this has had on the formulation of policy; and if he will make a statement. [51282]

Mr. Des Browne: The growth in the Public Sector Average Earnings Index (AEI) was 4.2 per cent. in the year to November 2005 (single month figure, for Great Britain, seasonally adjusted and excluding bonuses, Source: Office for National Statistics), compared to 3.7 per cent. in the Private Sector and 3.8 per cent. in the Whole Economy.

In the short-term the public and private sector AEI growth can diverge and they usually do, but in the long-term they tend to be very similar. The average annual growth between March 1997 (the earliest available data) and November 2005 was 4.0 per cent. in the public sector and 4.2 per cent. in the private sector (and 4.1 per cent. in the whole economy).

Government policy on public sector pay is devolved to individual Departments, while the Treasury maintains a monitoring and co-ordinating role. Government policy on public sector pay remains one of ensuring pay awards are justified, affordable and deliver value for money. Given that it accounts for around a quarter of all public spending, controlling pay is essential to delivering value for money and keeping inflationary pressures in check.

With this in mind, the Chancellor of the Exchequer has written to the public sector Pay Review Bodies emphasising the importance of basing its pay settlements on the achievement of the inflation target of 2 per cent. Furthermore, to achieve a more co-ordinated approach to pay across the public sector, the Government have now established a new single gateway to scrutinise all significant public sector pay proposals (as announced in the last pre-Budget report). Reporting to myself, the objective of the gateway (Public Sector Pay Committee) is to establish a common set of objectives for pay across government, extending and strengthening existing arrangements. Its aim is to ensure that all new pay structures are evidence-based, represent value for money and are financially sustainable over the long run, including taking account of the pensions implications of new pay decisions.

Employment Statistics

Mrs. Maria Miller: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many women were in paid (a) full-time and (b) part-time employment in each year since 1980. [50720]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 14 February 2006:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question about women in employment. (50720)

The attached table gives the number of women who were working in full-time or part-time employment, for the three months ending May each year from 1984 to 2005. Information is not available for earlier periods on a comparable basis.

Estimates are taken from the Office for National Statistics's Labour Force Survey (LFS). As with any sample survey, estimates from the LFS are subject to a margin of uncertainty.

Financial Services Authority

Mr. Carswell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what research he has undertaken on the relative cost effectiveness of the Financial Services Authority; [51190]

(2) what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the Financial Services Authority's scrutiny of the financial services industry; and if he will make a statement. [51191]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (FSMA) enables a review to take place of the economy, efficiency and effectiveness with which the Financial Services Authority (FSA) has used its resources in discharging its functions. As announced in the pre-Budget report 2005, the Treasury aims to hold the first such review in the near future.

The effectiveness of some FSA functions was considered as part of the Treasury's Two-Year Review of FSMA, the outcome of which was announced on 2 December 2004. As part of this review the FSA improved its provision of advice and guidance, improved the accessibility of its handbook of rules, improved its cost-benefit analysis, and reduced consultation burdens.

Fuel Smuggling

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the extent of fuel smuggling into Northern Ireland in 2005. [51356]

Dawn Primarolo: The latest estimates of revenue loss in the hydrocarbon oils sector are published in 'Measuring Indirect Tax Loss-2005', which was published alongside the PBR. All estimates for Northern Ireland relate to total non-UK duty paid consumption rather than the illicit market. This is because it is not yet possible to split revenue losses between those resulting from the illicit market and those from legitimate cross-border shopping.

Gold Reserves

Tim Loughton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 2 February 2006, Official Report, column 739W, on gold reserves, what interest has been earned from the funds reinvested from the sale of gold reserves; and if he will list the movement in currencies against sterling since that date. [51763]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The gold sales between July 1999 and March 2002 reflected a prudent decision to reduce over-exposure to a single asset in the net reserves portfolio. The gold sales reduced risk by around 30 percent. (as measured by value-at-risk) and are not expected to deliver a loss in return when measured over the medium to long-term; the appropriate time horizon for such a decision.

Government Accounts

Mrs. Villiers: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer to what independent auditing the Whole of Government Accounts will be subject; and if he will make a statement. [50632]

Mr. Des Browne: Section 11 of the Government Resources and Accounts Act 2000 provides for the Comptroller and Auditor General to audit Whole of Government Accounts.

Gross Domestic Product (Peterborough)

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what level of gross domestic product was recorded in each of the last five years in (a) the Peterborough city council area and (b) Peterborough constituency. [51387]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 14 February 2006:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about Gross Domestic Product (GDP) in each of the last five years for the Peterborough City Council area and Peterborough constituency (51387).

Gross Value Added (GVA)[1] rather than GDP data exists for the Peterborough NUTS3• area, which is currently the lowest geographic level at which GVA is published. The latest published information is for 2003.

The estimates in the table below are based on the regional GVA estimates published in December 2005. These data are available on the National Statistics website at: http://www.statistics.gov.uk/StatBase/Product.asp?vlnk = 7359

[1] Information presented here is Gross Value Added (GVA) which is Gross Domestic Product (GDP) less taxes (plus subsidies) on products.

HM Revenue and Customs

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what criteria HM Revenue and Customs uses to determine whether an appeal against one of its decisions constitutes a test case. [50677]

Dawn Primarolo: All the circumstances of a case are taken into account, including whether there is a question of law in need of clarification which has wider relevance to taxpayers as a whole.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the evidence from HM Revenue and Customs to the Public Administration Committee on 20 October 2005, Question 81, on the tax credits system, when the part manual-part computerised method of suspending the automatic recovery of overpayments in tax credits will be introduced; and how this differs from the manual intervention introduced from November 2005. [45833]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 26 January 2006]: The interim method of suspending disputed overpayments was introduced in November 2005. This interim method, is the part manual and part computerised method, as described in answer to Q81 of the Public Administration Committee on 20 October 2005. From November 2006 a fully computerised system is planned.

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, what criteria he uses to decide whether the HM Revenue and Customs logo may appear on a commercial product; and whether HM Revenue and Customs endorses any tax calculation products which do not include the full UK tax return. [47321]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 31 January 2006]: HMRC authorises suppliers to use its logo only in cases where there is clear benefit to the Department and its relationship with its customers.

PAYE products produced by a third party can carry the following message if they have achieved HMRC's Payroll Standards: "Tested and meets HM Revenue & Customs Payroll Standard". This message does not include the HMRC logo.

In addition, although HMRC does not endorse any of these products, the Self Assessment Filing Partner logo was developed for those software vendors who entered into an agreement with HMRC to jointly promote their SA filing online services.

Income Tax

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the amount of tax which would be raised by introducing a new 49 per cent. tax band for those with incomes over (a) £100,000 per annum, (b) £125,000 per annum, (c) £150,000 per annum and (d) £200,000 per annum; and if he will make a statement. [50450]

Dawn Primarolo: The information is in the following table.

Revenue yields from introducing a new 49 per cent. band in 2005–06

Income level at which the new 49 per cent. is introduced (£)	Yield (£ billion)
100,000	3.1
125,000	2.6
150,000	2.1
200,000	1.7

These estimates assume tax changes to earned income and savings only—the higher rate income tax on dividends remains at 32.5 per cent.

The income tax information is based upon the 2003–04 Survey of Personal Incomes and 2005 pre-Budget assumptions.

The figures exclude any estimate of behavioural response to the tax change, which could be significant given the scale of the changes.

Interpal

Richard Burden: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what representations he has received from the Israeli embassy in relation to the Interpal charity in the last six months; what meetings have been held between embassy officials and Ministers from his Department on the subject; and what was discussed at those meetings; [51308]

(2) what representations he has received from representatives of the Interpal charity in the last six months; what response he has made to those representations; and if Ministers from his Department will meet representatives of Interpal to discuss their concerns. [51344]

Mr. Des Browne: HM Treasury does not comment on the details of ministerial meetings. The Treasury receives numerous representations from a range of organisations in the course of Treasury business. Interpal is one such organisation, but it would be inappropriate to comment on the details of any one particular case.

Lisbon Agenda

Keith Vaz: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will assess British progress in fulfilling the criteria of the Lisbon Agenda; when he expects the UK to have fulfilled those criteria; and if he will make a statement. [50218]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: At the 2005 Spring European Council, European leaders agreed to re-launch the Lisbon Strategy with a renewed emphasis on Growth and Jobs. Since 2001, average GDP growth has been 2.3 per cent. in the UK compared to just 1.4 per cent. in the euro area. The UK is also one of just three member states that meet all three Lisbon employment targets. And as set out in the Chancellor's Pamphlet "Global Europe: Full Employment Europe" (October 2005), the UK has an ongoing economic reform agenda for Europe.

National Insurance

Paul Flynn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much greater the income of the National Insurance Fund would have been (a) in each year from 2003–04 to 2006–07 and (b) in total for that period if the additional National Health Service allocation under the National Insurance Contributions Act 2002 in respect of employers' contributions had been a percentage of earnings over the secondary threshold on which contributions are payable instead of a percentage of total earnings; and if he will take steps to ensure that funds to the total value of the additional income which would have been so raised is remitted to the Fund. [50288]

Dawn Primarolo: The NHS allocation is calculated in accordance with Section 162 of the Social Security Administration Act 1992. The National Insurance Fund provides funds to pay state retirement pensions and other contributory benefits and is currently in surplus.

There is no question of the National Insurance Fund being left in a position where commitments to pensioners and other benefit claimants cannot be met. However, the information requested is provided in the following table:

Extra Income to the National Insurance Fund if Increased NHS Allocation from NICs Act 2002 Applied to Earnings over Secondary Threshold Only

2004–05	970

Notes:

1. The figures provided are for Great Britain accruals and are in cash (i.e. not constant prices) terms.
2. The figures provided are estimates from the model used to forecast National Insurance contributions and are consistent with PBR2005 projections.
3. All figures have been rounded to the nearest £10 million.

Mr. Byers: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many people who are self-employed and working abroad paid the voluntary class 2 national insurance contribution in each of the last 10 years; [51532]

(2) how many people living abroad have changed their national insurance contributions from class 3 to class 2 in each of the last 10 years. [51533]

Dawn Primarolo: The following table shows how many people paid class 2 or 3 contributions whilst abroad from 1997–98 onwards. Similar information is not available for earlier years. Information on the numbers that are paying class 2 and who are in employment abroad or who have changed from paying class 3 to paying class 2 contributions, is not readily available. Such information could only be provided at a disproportionate cost.

Population

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his estimate is of the current population of (a) each Essex borough and (b) each ward in Southend West constituency based on (i) the 2001 Census, (ii) electoral rolls and (iii) health service users; and what projections he has made for the next five years. [50479]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 14 February 2006:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your question regarding the current population of (a) each Essex borough and (b) each ward in Southend West constituency based on (i) the 2001 Census, (ii) electoral rolls, and (iii) health service users; and what projections have been made for the next five years. (50479)

The tables attached provide the information you have requested. Data for Essex local authorities, including the former Essex authorities of Southend-on-Sea and Thurrock, are shown in Table 1 and Table 2. Data for wards in Southend West are shown in table 3.

ONS publishes annual mid-year population estimates. The latest estimates are for mid-2004 and are given in Table 1. These mid-year population estimates are calculated using a robust methodology and are the best estimates of the resident population in an area. They are based on aged-on 2001 Census data adjusted for births, deaths, and net migration. Further information on the methodology can be found at:

www.statistics.gov.uk/StatBase/Product.asp?vlnk = 575.

Population projections for each local authority in Essex, for mid-2005 to mid-2010, are also given in Table 1. These projections are based on the mid-2003 population estimates and are the latest population projections available. They assume that trends in fertility, mortality and migration at the time of the mid-2003 population estimate will continue into the future.

Electoral rolls provide counts of the number of people registered to vote. The latest available data, on the local/European electorate and the Parliamentary electorate, for local authorities in Essex can be found in the Table 2. These data are for 1 December 2004. It should be noted that the number of people eligible to vote is not the same as the resident population aged 18 and over. There are numerous reasons for this. For example not everyone who is usually resident is entitled to vote (foreign citizens from outside of the EU and Commonwealth, prisoners, etc. are not eligible), some people do not register to vote and people who have more than one address may register in more than one place. Further, there is inevitably some double counting of the registered electorate as electoral registration officers vary in how quickly they remove people from the registers after they have moved away from an area or after they have died. These factors have a differential impact from area to area.

The number of people registered with a GP, living in each local authority in Essex, in July 2004, can also be found in the Table 2. It should also be noted that patient register counts differ from estimates of the usually resident population for a number of reasons.

Patient registers include people who are in the country for at least three months, whereas population estimates are based on a usual residence definition requiring a stay of 12 months or more. The patient registers exclude individuals who are ineligible to be registered with a GP. People may be on a patient register after having left the country and not deregistered with their GP; similarly people may have moved to another area and not re-registered. Some patients may have more than one NHS number e.g. they may have been issued a temporary number for a short period. Again, these factors have a differential impact from place to place.

Ward data are shown in Table 3; the points set out above also apply to wards. However, there are some further points to note for wards.

The most recent population estimates for wards are for mid-2002. The closest available geography to current electoral wards, for which population estimates are available, is Census Area Statistics (CAS) wards. This geography was created for outputs from the 2001 Census and is based mainly on 2003 electoral wards. The CAS ward level population estimates have been published with the status of "experimental statistics". Therefore, the estimates, and figures derived from them, should be treated with some care. The margin of confidence for population estimates is proportionately larger at ward level than at local authority level.

The ONS does not produce projections of population at ward level.

Table 3 contains CAS ward electorate counts for December 2002 and 2004 as well as patient register figures for July 2002 and July 2004. The 2002 figures are given for comparison with population estimates and 2004 are the latest available data.

Finally, the local government electorate is definitionally closer to the population estimates, however these data are not available at ward level. Hence, the Parliamentary electorate is shown.

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the accuracy of the most recent population figures provided by the Office for National Statistics for the City of Peterborough. [51394]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 14 February 2006:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your question about what assessment of the accuracy of the population figures provided by the Office for National Statistics has made in relation to Peterborough. (51394)

Population estimates are calculated using an internationally respected methodology. Further information can be found in the detailed methodology guide 'Making a population estimate in England and Wales'. This is published here: http://www.statistics.gov.uk/StatBase/Product.asp?vlnk = 575

It is becoming increasingly difficult to estimate the size of the population because of changes in society, which include increased mobility and different living arrangements. The decennial Census provides a benchmark against which national and sub-national population estimates can be assessed. Substantial work has been done on the difference between mid-year population estimates and the 2001 Census. This work is summarised in the final report of the 2004 Local Authority Population Studies, which can be found here: http://www.statistics.gov.uk/downloads/theme_population/LAStudy_FullReport.pdf

These studies confirmed that the 2001 Census had worked well in most areas, including Peterborough, but there were a few cases where the adjustment for under-enumeration was not able to adjust sufficiently for exceptional circumstances. This work, together with revised international migration estimates, accounted for a large proportion of the initial 1.1 million difference between mid year estimates and the Census; reducing the difference to a little over 0.2 million.

In addition, extensive annual quality assurance is undertaken in order to ensure the accuracy of the annual mid-year estimates. Quality assurance starts with detailed checking of the source data used in the components of change (birth, deaths, etc.). Procedures are then in place to ensure that these data sources are correctly processed when deriving the estimates. The calculated national and sub-national estimates, for all 376 local authorities in England and Wales, are then subject to a further set of quality assurance procedures before they are published. These procedures include reviews of sex ratios and age profiles, comparisons of change over time, and comparisons of fertility and mortality rates. Substantial effort has already been undertaken, in recent years, to improve the quality assurance of population estimates.

ONS is also now investing substantially in a project to Improve Migration and Population Statistics (IMPS). (More information on this project can be found at: www.statistics.gov.uk/IMPS). The key aims of this project are to reduce the size of the difference between the 2011 Census results and the mid-year estimates and to better understand any difference that does remain. As part of this project, we are developing a data comparator tool to enable us to compare the annual mid-year estimates against a range of administrative sources. This work is ongoing and the results will inform our understanding of the accuracy of the mid-year population estimates. The tool was trialled in the mid-2004 population estimates, which were published in August 2005.

Another strand of the IMPS project is a review of the quality assurance procedures that are currently in place for population estimates. One of the aims of this review is to assess what improvements can be made to existing procedures, and determine whether additional quality assurance is required.

ONS also produces population projections for each local authority area. The methodology used in the production of the subnational population projections is an established and recognised methodology. Subnational population projections undergo extensive quality assurance before publication. In addition, local authorities and health authorities are consulted on the first year of migration assumptions used as the baseline trend for migration.

Population estimates and projections are supplied to the ODPM. I understand that ODPM make checks to ensure that the data as provided by the ONS have been correctly entered into their calculations for allocating Formula Grant to local authorities. Otherwise, they do not make any assessment of accuracy of the data supplied, as this responsibility lies with the ONS.

Mr. Burrowes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the accuracy of the population figures provided by the Office for National Statistics in relation to Enfield. [50864]

The decennial Census provides a benchmark against which national and sub-national population estimates can be assessed. Substantial work has been done on the difference between mid-year population estimates and the 2001 Census. This work is summarised in the final report of the 2004 Local Authority Population Studies, which can be found here:

http://www.statistics.gov.uk/downloads/theme_population/LAStudy_FullReport.pdf

These studies confirmed that the 2001 Census had worked well in most areas, including Enfield, but there were a few cases where the adjustment for under-enumeration was not able to adjust sufficiently for exceptional circumstances. This work, together with revised international migration estimates, accounted for a large proportion of the initial 1.1 million difference between mid year estimates and the Census; reducing the difference to a little over 0.2 million.

In addition, extensive annual quality assurance is undertaken in order to ensure the accuracy of the annual mid-year estimates. Quality assurance starts with detailed checking of the source data used in the components of change (birth, deaths, etc.). Procedures are then in place to ensure that these data sources are correctly processed when deriving the estimates. The calculated national and sub-national estimates, for all 376 local authorities in England and Wales, are then subject to a further set of quality assurance procedures before they are published. These procedures include reviews of sex ratios and age profiles, comparisons of change over time, and comparisons of fertility and mortality rates. Substantial effort has already been undertaken, in recent years, to improve the quality assurance of population estimates.

ONS is also now investing substantially in a project to Improve Migration and Population Statistics (IMPS). (More information on this project can be found at: www.statistics.gov.uk/IMPS.) The key aims of this project are to reduce the size of the difference between the 2011 Census results and the mid-year estimates and to better understand any difference that does remain. As part of this project, we are developing a data comparator tool to enable us to compare the annual mid-year estimates against a range of administrative sources. This work is ongoing and the results will inform our understanding of the accuracy of the mid-year population estimates. The tool was trialled in the mid-2004 population estimates, which were published in August 2005.

Another strand of the IMPS project is a review of the quality assurance procedures that are currently in place for population estimates. One of the aims of this review is to assess what improvements can be made to existing procedures, and determine whether additional quality assurance is required.

ONS also produces population projections for each local authority area. The methodology used in the production of the subnational population projections is an established and recognised methodology. Subnational population projections undergo extensive quality assurance before publication. In addition, local authorities and health authorities are consulted on the first year of migration assumptions used as the baseline trend for migration.

Population estimates and projections are supplied to the ODPM. I understand that ODPM make checks to ensure that the data as provided by the ONS have been correctly entered into their calculations for allocating Formula Grant to local authorities. Otherwise, they do not make any assessment of accuracy of the data supplied, as this responsibility lies with the ONS.

Post Office Card Account (West Lancashire)

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people in West Lancashire use a Post Office Card Account to access child benefit. [51123]

Dawn Primarolo: Approximately 950 recipients in the parliamentary constituency of West Lancashire used a Post Office Card Account to access child benefit in November 2005.

Press Coverage

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on how many occasions since 1 April 2003 he has complained to the Press Complaints Commission about the coverage in the press of (a) Ministers or officials and (b) his Department; and how many of these complaints were upheld. [47083]

Mr. Des Browne: None.

Public Contracts

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will introduce regulations to ensure that no Government department or public body will be able to award public contracts to any organisation or firm without checking that it has paid the taxes due to HM Treasury. [50570]

John Healey: Decisions on awarding public contracts are for contracting authorities to make consistent with their legal obligations and responsibility for achieving value for money.

The Public Contracts Regulations 2006, which implement the EU Public Procurement Directive, permit contracting authorities to exclude from a public procurement, any candidate who has not fulfilled obligations relating to the payment of taxes in any part of the United Kingdom. The Regulations also include a new provision requiring the mandatory exclusion of companies who have been convicted of fraud and corruption offences including offences relating to cheating the Revenue, defrauding the Customs and taxation in the European Community.

Public Information

Mr. Gale: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much was spent on the Department's public relations and information services in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [48952]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The Treasury's only spending on public relations and information services in the financial years 2002–03, 2003–04 and 2004–05 has been the costs of its Press Office and the costs of its main external website. The totals for the three years are 2002–03 £1,234,000; 2003–04 £1,268,000; and 2004–05 £1,167,000. Information in respect of earlier years could be provided only at disproportionate cost due to a change in accounting system in 2002–03.

Self-assessment Awareness Campaign

Anne Milton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 17 January 2006, Official Report, column 1208W, on the self-assessment awareness campaign, what the results of the value for money audit carried out by Billetts have been to date. [50603]

Dawn Primarolo: The conclusion of the Billetts value for money audit is that costs were better than their industry standard measure—and on a par with industry standard in terms of the quality of airtime bought. In conjunction with a cheaper channel mix this represents very good value for money.

Student Loans

Tim Farron: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what mechanisms are in place for HM Revenue and Customs to inform the Student Loans Company when graduates' income exceeds the threshold above which loans must be repaid. [50838]

Dawn Primarolo: The Student Loan Company is sent details of student loan deductions taken from the annual return that the employer makes to HM Revenue and Customs (HMRC) for each employee. HMRC notifies the employer that they should start making student loan deductions where the employee's earnings exceed the annual threshold.

Syngenta

Mr. Crabb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when (a) he and (b) his officials last met representatives of Syngenta. [50554]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: To the best of my knowledge, no meetings have taken place between the Chancellor or Treasury officials and representatives of Syngenta for at least the last three years.

Tax Credits

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many letters the Office of the Paymaster General has received from hon. Members concerning problems with tax credits since 2003; and how many were replied to within (a) one, (b) two, (c) three, (d) four, (e) five and (f) six months or over. [23684]

Dawn Primarolo: I very much regret the delay in replying to the right hon. Member, the more so since it is not possible to provide a breakdown of correspondence by subject matter except at disproportionate cost. TCO aims to deal with 80 per cent. of tax credits correspondence within 15 working days and 95 per cent. of correspondence within 40 working days.

Lady Hermon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what estimate has been made of the extent of involvement of organised crime in the tax credit system in Northern Ireland since its introduction; [44586]

(2) how many applications for tax credits have been halted in Northern Ireland in each month since their introduction due to suspicion that organised criminals have tried to obtain tax credits; [44587]

(3) how many staff within HM Revenue and Customs in Northern Ireland have been tasked with investigating (a) fraud and (b) other criminal activity by organised gangs in each of the last three years, broken down by grade; and if he will make a statement; [44588]

(4) how many staff within HM Revenue and Customs in Northern Ireland have been tasked with investigating (a) fraud and (b) other criminal activity by organised gangs in each of the last three years, broken down by grade; and if he will make a statement. [48712]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 20 January 2006]: I refer the hon. Lady to the statements made in the House on 18 January 2006, Official Report, column 1358W and 23 January 2006, Official Report, column 1736W.

To disclose detailed information about the deployment of staff investigating fraud and other criminal activity would prejudice the prevention, investigation and detection of crime or the prosecution of offenders.

Tax Credits

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the cost of changing the tax credits income increase disregard from £2,500 to £25,000. [46043]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer the hon. Member to my response to the hon. Member for Ludlow (Mr. Dunne) on 26 January 2006, Official Report, column 2246W.

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will establish a fully staffed tax credits office in Belfast. [47644]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 2 February 2006]: The Tax Credit Office is located in three cities; Belfast, Liverpool and Preston. These offices deal with aspects of tax credit claims made by claimants from across the UK.

Mr. Gale: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many appeals against repayments of tax credits were outstanding at 1 February 2006. [50216]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 13 February 2006]: At 31 January 2006, around 44,000 disputed overpayments were awaiting a decision.

Mr. Gale: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the total value was of outstanding repayments of tax credits at 1st February 2006. [50217]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 13 February 2006]: The information is not available in the format requested.

Information on the value of 2003–04 overpayments, the amount of 2003–04 overpayments that was recovered in 2004–05 and the expected recovery of 2003–04 overpayments in 2005–06, 2006–07, 2007–08 and 2008–09 were published in part two of the 'Comptroller and Auditor General's Standard Report on the Accounts of the Inland Revenue 2004–05'.

This can be found on the HMRC website at:
http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/about/ir-report2005.pdf

Information on the levels of overpayments incurred by 2004–05 awards will be published in May 2006.

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the technical issues affecting the tax credit system; on what date each was (a) identified and (b) resolved; and what the cost of rectification of each was. [50600]

Dawn Primarolo: This information is not available in the format requested.

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many tax credit payments were made to bank accounts outside the UK in each of the last 12 months. [51457]

Dawn Primarolo: I refer to the reply given to the hon. Member for Yeovil (Mr. Laws)on 10 January 2006, Official Report, column 556W.

Tax Credits

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the proposal announced in the pre-Budget report 2005 to double the number of security checks in the tax credit system will be implemented; and at what stages of a tax credit claim (a) security checks will be increased and (b) new security checks will be introduced. [45700]

Dawn Primarolo: HMRC have already increased the number of checks carried out on the highest risk claims including those involving suspect payments and those where an undeclared partner is suspected to be living with the claimant. They have also been investigating links between claimants' failure to confirm their entitlement and suspected fraud.

In addition, from April the number of checks being carried out before a claim goes into payment will be more than doubled.

Valuation Office Agency

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what changes there have been in the requirements for (a) homes and (b) businesses to provide information to the Valuation Office Agency since May 1997; and what changes there have been to the penalties for non-compliance with these requirements in each category in this period. [49777]

Dawn Primarolo: The information is as follows:

(a) For council tax purposes there has been no change to the requirements to provide information to the VOA since May 1997. Neither have there been changes to the penalties for non-compliance.

(b) There have been no changes in the requirements for businesses to provide information to the Valuation Office Agency. However, the penalties for non-compliance changed when the Local Government Act 2003 came into effect on 18 September 2003. This Act introduced liability to a civil penalty where information is not supplied within 56 days, allowing a series of escalating financial penalties for continued non-compliance up to a maximum of the rateable value of the property concerned or £500, whichever is the greater. Prior to 18 September 2003, a person who failed to supply information required by a valuation officer within 21 days was liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding level 2 on the standard scale.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent meetings (a) he and (b) his Ministers have had with Ministers from the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister about (i) the operation of and (ii) departmental responsibility for the Valuation Office Agency. [50423]

Dawn Primarolo: Treasury Ministers and officials discuss a wide range of issues with their colleagues in ODPM and other departments. As was the case with previous Administrations, it is not the Government's practice to provide details of all such meetings.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Meriden of 30 November 2005, Official Report, column 529W, on the Valuation Office Agency, whether the Valuation Office Agency (a) is permitted and (b) has access to data held by HM Revenue and Customs to facilitate or assist in the levying, assessment and valuation of properties for council tax or business rates. [50909]

Dawn Primarolo: The Commissioners for Revenue and Customs Act 2005 provides that information acquired by Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs (HMRC) in connection with a function may be used by them in connection with any other function. As the Valuation Office is an executive Agency of HMRC, and has been since 30 September 1991, it is permitted to access data held by HMRC.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Meriden of 30 November 2005, Official Report, column 529W, on the Valuation Office Agency, whether HM Revenues and Customs has access to data held by the Valuation Office Agency for the purposes of charging taxes to individuals. [50959]

Dawn Primarolo: The Commissioners for Revenue and Customs Act 2005 provides for information acquired by Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs (HMRC) in connection with one function to be used in connection with any other function of HMRC.

As the Valuation Office is an executive agency of HMRC, and has been since 30 September 1991, the use of information and data collected for council tax valuation purposes can be used in connection with any other function of HMRC including the charging of taxes on individuals.

Working Tax Credit

Danny Alexander: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, if he will estimate the cost of amending the qualifying conditions for working tax credit to include hours spent as a carer in the same category as hours spent in employment. [47485]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 31 January 2006]: The information is not available.

HOUSE OF COMMONS COMMISSION

Parliamentary Information Management System

Mr. Pickles: To ask the hon. Member for North Devon, representing the House of Commons Commission pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Meriden (Mrs. Spelman) of 31 October 2005, Official Report, column 738W, on the Parliamentary Information Management System (PIMS), whether (a) the business case has been completed and (b) a decision has been taken on making the PIMS search engine available to the public on the parliamentary internet site. [50953]

Nick Harvey: The business case for the redesign of the parliamentary internet has been written. It was considered by the Finance and Services Committee on 9 February, and will receive further consideration when the Committee next meets on 9 March. The redesign is not dependent on and does not replace the PIMS implementation. It does seek to build on the knowledge and systems generated by that project where these will provide the best value for money for Parliament. Subject to the necessary approvals, detailed plans will be drawn up for the search facilities that will be available to the public on the parliamentary internet site.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Air Ambulance Service

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether there are plans to introduce an air ambulance service in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement. [51048]

Mr. Woodward: There are no plans to introduce an air ambulance in Northern Ireland. A helicopter emergency medical service (HEMS) feasibility study published in 2004, which was commissioned by the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety and the Republic of Ireland's Department of Health and Children, concluded that, other than for inter-hospital transfers, there was no clear advantage in helicopter emergency medical services.

The priority for DHSSPS is to ensure that the Northern Ireland ambulance service uses its resources to achieve improved response times to life threatening calls, both in urban and in more remote and isolated rural communities. In this context, the available evidence suggests that an air ambulance would not constitute the most effective use of resources, compared with other approaches. DHSSPS is working closely with the Northern Ireland ambulance service and the four Health and Social Services Boards to improve ambulance services in terms of speed and appropriateness of response and clinical quality.

Ambulance Service

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many emergency calls were received by the Northern Ireland Ambulance Service in each service district in each year since 2000; how many of these have later been categorised as hoax calls; and what estimate has been made of the cost to the Northern Ireland Ambulance Service of hoax calls during this period. [51052]

Mr. Woodward: The following data for emergency and hoax calls was provided by the Northern Ireland Ambulance Service (NIAS):

NIAS service district	1999–2000	2000–01	2001–02	2002–03	2003–04	2004–05
Eastern Division
Emergency Calls	34,489	37,093	40,212	40,530	41,741	42,950
Hoaxes	643	1,304	1,433	1,264	1,392	1,423
Northern Division
Emergency Calls	15,765	15,441	17,104	17,964	18,647	19,723
Hoaxes	270	582	736	729	712	586
Southern Division
Emergency Calls	8,993	8,903	10,065	10,551	11,695	12,948
Hoaxes	332	550	670	527	604	512
Western Division
Emergency Calls	8,826	9,114	10,118	10,352	10,741	11,753
Hoaxes	309	642	563	656	728	470

NIAS estimates that the cost of despatching an A&E ambulance to a hoax call is around £150 at current prices.

Benefit Claimants

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what change there has been in the numbers of unemployed benefit claimants in the past 12 months in each of Northern Ireland's constituencies. [51358]

Angela E. Smith: Unemployment levels from the claimant count in each of the Northern Ireland parliamentary constituencies at December 2004 and December 2005, and the change in levels, are provided in the following table.

Parliamentary constituency	December 2004	December 2005	Change in levels December 2004-December 2005
Belfast East	1,040	993	-47
Belfast North	1,952	2,108	156
Belfast South	1,387	1,355	-32
Belfast West	3,066	2,900	-166
East Antrim	1,502	1,362	-140
East Londonderry	1,983	1,685	-298
Fermanagh and South Tyrone	1,459	1,329	-130

South Antrim	908	1,044	136
South Down	1,382	1,312	-70
Strangford	1,203	1,143	-60
Upper Bann	1,096	1,193	97
West Tyrone	1,828	1,914	86

Decommissioning

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what amount of arms has been decommissioned by Loyalist paramilitaries in each of the last five years. [50499]

Mr. Woodward: In December 1998, the LVF decommissioned what the IICD described as a "small but significant" quantity of arms. Since then, the IICD has not reported any decommissioning by Loyalist groups.

Employment (East Londonderry)

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the change in numbers of (a) males and (b) females in part-time employment in East Londonderry constituency has been in each of the last five years. [51327]

Angela E. Smith: Estimates of the number of employee jobs below Northern Ireland level are only available from the Census of Employment on a biennial basis and the most up to date figures relate to September 2003. Estimates of the number of part-time e in the East Londonderry parliamentary constituency area for September 1999, September 2001 and September 2003 can be so presents the change in the number of male and female part-time employee jobs between each census.

Number of part-time employee jobs split by male and female in the East Londonderry parliamentary constituency area for September 1999, September 2001 and September 2003 and the change between censuses

	(a) Male part-time employee jobs	(b) Female part-time employee jobs
September 1999	2,118	7,008
September 2001	2,263	7,494
September 2003	2,501	8,002

Food Safety Standards

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many prosecutions there were in 2005 of establishments in Northern Ireland serving hot food in contravention of food safety standards. [51355]

Mr. Woodward: The information requested for the calendar year of 2005 is not yet available.

The Food Standards Agency collects data on district council enforcement activities in relation to food hygiene on a financial yearly basis. The most recent available data relates to the period 1 April 2004–31 March 2005.

During this period there were 10 restaurants and other catering premises in Northern Ireland prosecuted by district councils for food hygiene offences.

District council returns for the period 1 April 2005–31 March 2006 are required to be submitted to the Food Standards Agency by 31 May 2006. Collated data on this period will be available after this date.

Olympic Games

Dr. Alasdair McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much financial support the Government will be providing for the special Olympics Ireland games taking place in Belfast in 2006. [46546]

Mr. Hanson: Government are considering financial support to the special Olympic Ireland games taking place in Belfast in 2006 and discussions with the organisers about the details are continuing. A formal announcement will be issued on completion.

School Crossing Patrol Services

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) primary schools in Northern Ireland and (b) children attending them were affected by the decisions of education and library boards to withdraw school crossing patrol services within the past 12 months. [51325]

Angela E. Smith: Education and Library Boards have withdrawn school crossing patrols at 80 primary schools across Northern Ireland in the last 12 months. The decision to withdraw patrols is one that is taken very carefully, and only in cases where a review using the agreed local authority road safety officers' association guidelines has determined that underlying hazards have either declined significantly, or disappeared completely.

It is not possible to provide information regarding the number of pupils affected by the withdrawal of the crossing patrols as not every pupil attending the schools will have been affected by the change. Some schools have more than one crossing patrol point, or indeed more than one entrance; in other cases, the crossing patrol was not located at the school gates. 44 of the patrols removed were lunchtime patrols which few pupils used.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Asylum Appeals

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what steps the Government are taking to reduce the time appellants wait for a hearing in the Asylum and Immigration Tribunal. [51384]

Bridget Prentice: The commencement of the Asylum and Immigration Tribunal (AIT) on 4 April 2005, together with changes to the lodging arrangements for asylum appeals, has had a significant impact on the time between the lodging of an asylum appeal and the service of the Immigration Judge's decision.

Information for the period April to September 2005, indicates that asylum appeals, arising from a decision served on or after 4 April 2005, took on average 6 weeks from receipt of the appeal by the AIT to a decision by an Immigration Judge. This does not include the 28 days provided for the Home Office to serve the decision on the appellant and their representative in accordance with procedure rules.

Additionally, the AIT is currently working closely with UKvisas and the Home Office to introduce further improvements to the entry clearance appeals process aiming to reduce the overall time an appellant waits from first application to their appeal being heard by an average of seven weeks.

Departmental Recruitment

Mrs. Villiers: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many job advertisements were placed by her Department (a) in total, (b) in print newspapers and magazines and (c) on a recruitment website in each year since 1997; and at what (i) total and (ii) average cost in each case. [50748]

Ms Harman: My Department does not hold this information centrally and it is, therefore, not possible to collate this without incurring disproportionate costs.

The Department ensures that job vacancies are advertised in a wide range of publications, including those targeted at minority communities where it is appropriate. Details of vacancies are placed on the Civil Service Recruitment Website, which was launched in December 2002 as the site of first choice for central Government recruitment. There is no advertising cost associated with this facility.

Electoral Registration

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what assessment her Department has made of the accuracy of the electoral register. [43094]

Ms Harman: The joint Office of the Deputy Prime Minister and Constitutional Affairs Select Committee's March 2005 report "Electoral Registration" included evidence on the accuracy of the electoral register.

In December 2005, my Department made an assessment of electoral registration rates in London which estimated that some 550,000 eligible adults in London were not registered to vote.

This assessment followed Electoral Commission's report "Understanding Electoral Registration", published in September 2005, which estimated that around 3.5 million people in England and Wales were eligible to be on the register at their main residence but were missing from it in 2000.

My Department is currently working with a number of partners to promote awareness of electoral registration in London where the issue of under-registration is most acute. The Department also considers the issue of the accuracy of electoral registers in relation to the development of policies to prevent and detect electoral fraud.

Inquests (Oxfordshire)

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many inquests on military fatalities are outstanding at Oxfordshire's coroner's court. [50572]

Ms Harman: The Oxfordshire coroner has informed me that of the 103 military and other fatalities where bodies have been returned from Iraq since 2003, 30 inquests have been concluded, two cases have been transferred to other coroners, 11 inquests are due to be concluded within the next few weeks and in 60 cases a date for the inquest is yet to be fixed.

Magistrates Courts

Mr. David: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what account is taken of a tenderer's previous performance in the evaluation of tenders for provision of enforcement services to magistrates' courts. [51656]

Ms Harman: Previous performance within similar contracts was taken account of at appropriate stages of the procurement exercise for enforcement services for HMCS. In particular it was a factor in the "pre-qualification stage" in the evaluation process. At this stage those wishing to tender were evaluated against a number of factors to assess that they were a suitable and viable company, which could meet the needs of the specified requirement, and could therefore be invited to tender.

Parliamentary Questions

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many parliamentary questions tabled by in the last 12 months for answer by her on a named day (a) were transferred and (b) received a substantive answer (i) on the day named and (ii) after the day named. [49886]

Bridget Prentice: My Department aims to ensure that Members receive a substantive response to their named day question on the named day. From January 2005 to December 2005, my Department received 256 named day parliamentary questions of which 15 were transferred, 177 received a substantive answer on the day named and 64 were answered after the day named.

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many ordinary written parliamentary questions tabled for answer by her in the last 12 months have been answered (a) within 14 days, (b) between 14 and 28 days, (c) between 28 days and two months and (d) in excess of two months after the date of tabling; and if she will make a statement. [49907]

Bridget Prentice: My Department endeavours to answer ordinary written questions within a working week of being tabled. From January 2005 to December 2005, my Department received 1,141 parliamentary questions of which (a) 1,104 were answered within 14 days (b) 37 were answered between 14 and 28 days (c) none between 28 days and two months and (d) none in excess of two months after the date of tabling.

Vandalism

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will list the acts of vandalism which have been perpetrated (a) inside and (b) on the outside of her Department's buildings in the last 12 months. [49508]

Ms Harman: For DCA Headquarters buildings:

(a) one internal incident, when a vending machine was dislodged from a wall; and

(b) one external incident, when an individual threw paint against the entrance.

For the courts estate, DCA's courts and tribunals reported a total of 18 incidents of damage to property in the period from 1 January to 31 March 2005:

(a) internal incidents at: Llanelli county court (damage to furniture); Southwark Crown court (twice flooded toilets); Blackfriars Crown (damage to internal door); Birkenhead county court (sign ripped down); Swindon combined court (cell door damaged); and

(b) external damage at Carmarthen county court (windows broken twice); Romford county court (crest removed from front); Chelmsford county court (car park barrier arm damaged); and eight incidents involving graffiti and minor damage at Loughborough Immigration Appellate Authority.

Since April 2005, when Her Majesty's Courts Service was formed, it has had 85 reported acts of damage to property in the period to 31 December 2005. Detail is held locally, including the nature of the damage or cause, and whether incidents were internal or external. Obtaining such an analysis would involve disproportionate cost.

SCOTLAND

Departmental Assets

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the items valued at over £100 that have been reported as stolen from Scotland Office buildings in the past 12 months. [43440]

David Cairns: From 1 January to 31 December 2005, only one item was reported as stolen from any Scotland Office building.

Item description	Value at date of loss (£)
Multi-media projector	766 approximately

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the items of departmental property worth over £100 that have been reported as (a) lost and (b) broken in the last 12 months. [47676]

David Cairns: From 1 January to 31 December 2005, the Scotland Office had one item of property reported as lost with a value over £100.

Item	Value at date of loss (£)
BlackBerry	249

There have been no reports of broken items, with a value over £100.

Departmental Expenditure

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what the annual expenditure on vehicles by his Department was in each of the last three financial years; and what the planned expenditure is for 2005–06. [40127]

David Cairns: For details of expenditure on ministerial vehicles provided to the Office by the Government Car and Despatch Agency I refer the hon. Member to the letter of 20 December 2005 from the chief executive of the Government Car and Despatch Agency to the hon. Member for Lewes (Norman Baker). Copies of this letter are available in the Library.

Departmental Staff

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans his Department has to change the London allowance of its staff; and if he will make a statement. [50009]

David Cairns: The London pay allowance is automatically increased in line with the all-items retail price index each July.

Freedom of Information Act

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what total sum has been received by his Department for the provision of information under the Freedom of Information Act 2000 in its first year of operation. [48491]

David Cairns: The Scotland Office has not received any monies in relation to the provision of information under the Freedom of Information Act in its first year of operation.

The Freedom of Information Act allows for public authorities to determine when the cost of processing a request will exceed the appropriate limit, which for central Government is set at £600 and for the wider public sector £450. In this instance the public authority may decide to either approach the applicant to help them refine their request and where possible to bring it under the appropriate limit. Alternatively, public authorities may charge the applicant the cost of processing the request. There is, however, no obligation for Departments to provide information if the cost of processing the request exceeds the appropriate limit.

Public authorities may also charge for disbursements when handling requests where it is deemed appropriate. Further information on the FOI fees regime can be found on the DCA website at http://www.foi.gov.uk/feesguide.htm

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Administrative Costs

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the administrative costs were of each non-departmental public body for which he has responsibility in the last year for which figures are available; what the total of such costs was in that year; and whether the costs are regarded for the purposes of public expenditure statistical analyses as (a) identifiable and (b) non-identifiable. [40064]

Alan Johnson: The DTI is currently responsible for 31 executive non-departmental public bodies (NDPBs), including eight regional development agencies and 8 research councils, 22 advisory NDPBs and eight tribunal NDPBs. Apart from the Advisory, Conciliation and Arbitration Service (Acas), an executive NDPB, these NDPBs are not covered by the Treasury's administration budgets regime.

For the year 2004–05 the administration costs of Acas were £49,048k. This expenditure is regarded as non-identifiable for the purposes of the public expenditure statistical analyses. Expenditure by the other NDPBs does not distinguish between administration costs and other costs in a comparable manner. Expenditure by such bodies is a mixture of identifiable and non-identifiable, depending on the nature and purpose of the particular body.

Further information on the DTIs NDPBs, including details of Government funding and expenditure by the Department, can be found in Public Bodies 2005, a copy of which is in the Libraries of the House, and which is available online at:

http://www.civilservice.gov.uk/the_future_of_the_civil_service/agencies_and_public_bodies/publications/pdf/public-bodies/publicbodies2005.pdf.

Centre for Ecology and Hydrology

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on his plans for the Centre for Ecology and Hydrology. [48171]

Barry Gardiner: NERC's science budget allocation has doubled since 1997 to £334 million for this year, demonstrating our commitment to maintaining the quality of environmental research in the UK. NERC is currently consulting widely with stakeholders and staff on a proposed restructuring of the Centre for Ecology and Hydrology (CEH). The aim of the proposal is to ensure the long-term sustainability of CEH and its continued capacity to contribute to environmental research in the UK into the future. These consultations close on 15 February 2006. I am sure that NERC Council will consider carefully all evidence and views on the potential impact of the proposals.

If, following consultation, NERC decides to proceed with the restructuring, the costs would be met from NERC's science budget allocation, and the Department has indicated that it would be willing to increase NERC's allocation by up to £14.2 million over 2006–08 so as to support the delivery of its core programmes in these circumstances.

Civil Servants

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the cost of the enhanced early retirement scheme for civil servants in his Department and its agencies was in each year from 1997–98 to 2004–05; what the estimated cost is for each year from 2005–06 to 2007–08; and if he will make a statement. [44769]

Alan Johnson: The Department records total annual liabilities for all early departure schemes, including continuing costs of compensation payments and early severance payments that are not retirements. It does not keep separate records of the costs that relate specifically to enhanced early retirement schemes. This information for eight financial years could only be obtained at disproportionate cost. The estimated cost of enhanced early retirement schemes in 2005–06 including flexible and compulsory early retirements and approved early retirement schemes (including the Insolvency Service) is £8.1 million. It is expected that the reduction of DTI staff by 1,010 civil servants will lead to cumulative savings of £37.20 million by 2007–08. This should offset the initial expenditure on the enhanced early retirement schemes.

My Department may run early retirement schemes during future years to deal with areas where staff cannot be re-deployed by alternative means but currently has no firm plans to do so.

DTPs agencies will be replying to the hon. Member directly.

Letter from Dr. Jeff Llewellyn, dated 14 February 2006:

The Secretary of State for Trade and Industry has asked me to reply on behalf of the National Weights and Measures Laboratory (NWML) to your question regarding what the cost of the enhanced early retirement scheme for civil servants in his Department and its agencies was in each year from 1997–98 to 2004–05; and what the estimated cost is for each year from 2005–06 to 2007–08.

NWML has not run any enhanced early retirement schemes for the period 1997–98 to 2004–05, and is not currently considering such a scheme for the period 2005–06 to 2007–08.

Letter from Claire Clancy, dated 14 February 2006:

I am responding to your recently tabled Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on behalf of Companies House, which is an Executive Agency of the DTI.

Companies House did not have an enhanced early retirement scheme from 1997 to 2005 therefore the cost is nil. We have budgeted for spend of £1.5m on voluntary early retirement in 2006-7. This is an estimated maximum figure and will depend on take-up, so is not the actual cost. We are not currently planning for any early retirement schemes in 2007/8.

Letter from Ron Marchant, dated 14 February 2006:

I am responding to this parliamentary question, tabled on 19 January 2006, regarding what the cost of the enhanced early retirement scheme for civil servants in the Patent Office was in each year from 1997–98 to 2004–05 and what the estimated cost is for each year from 2005–06 to 2007–08.

The total cost, on an accruals basis, of early retirements with enhanced terms (added years) for the Patent Office is:

	Amount (£)
2007–08	est 0
2006–07	est 0
2005–06	est 39,000
2004–05	0
2003–04	0
2002–03	267,000
2001–02	0
2000–01	0
1999–2000	101,000

Letter from Jeanne Spinks, dated 14 February 2006:

You asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, what the cost of the enhanced early retirement scheme for civil servants in his Department and its agencies was in each year from 1997–98 to 2004–05; and what the estimated cost is for each year from 2005–06 to 2007–08.

The cost of the enhanced early retirement scheme for civil servants in the Employment Tribunals Service for the year 1999–2000 was £28,000. The estimated cost of this scheme for the year 2005–2006 is £26,000. However we are unable to provide an estimated cost for this scheme for future years because the Agency has no plans at present for any schemes.

Civil Service

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what progress his Department has made towards achieving targets to reduce the number of civil service posts set by the Independent Review of Public Sector Efficiency; and if he will make a statement. [51618]

Alan Johnson: As set out in the 2004 Independent Review of Public Sector Efficiency, DTI plans, by 2007–08, to achieve a total reduction of 1010 posts in core DTI and Regional Government Offices.

Since 1 April 2004 core DTI numbers have decreased from 4179.7 'full-time equivalent' people to 3401.9 'full-time equivalent' people, a reduction of 777.8 as of 1 February 2006. The regional Government Offices have also reduced by 80 posts giving a total reduction of 857.8 against our target of 1010.

DTI is confident that the 1010 target will be met early.

Companies House Register

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment the Government have made of the cost of removing home addresses from the Companies House register. [51174]

Barry Gardiner [holding answer 13 February 2006]: The estimated cost of removing each instance of an individual home address from the register of companies by Companies House is £40.00.

Information held by Companies House is already in the public domain. For example, it is held by the large business information providing companies who take daily downloads of the information held by Companies House. This means that even if the records at Companies House could be expunged the information would still be available from other sources.

Company Law

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will seek to introduce legislation to require companies to publish details of their transfer pricing policies. [50021]

Alun Michael: Transfer pricing describes the charge or cost that is made when one company transfers or "sells" a product to another company within the same group of companies (often in different countries). There are no Companies Act disclosure requirements; there are tax implications that are governed by guidelines and requirements.

We have no plans to introduce legislation to require companies to publish details of their transfer pricing policies.

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the value was of (a) public opinion research and (b) public relations contracts awarded by his Department in 2004–05 in (i) each (A) nation and (B) region of the UK and (ii) London. [35960]

Alan Johnson: (a) The Department does not centrally collect the information sought at the required level of detail and to provide it would entail disproportionate cost.

(b) A comprehensive list of all projects is not held centrally. Information from the Central Office of Information shows that the following amounts were spent in 2004-05. These relate to contracts where the major element of work was for public relations.

	Amount (£)
Dispute resolution	68,405.05
Renewable energy	516,490.60
Best business practice	338,443.29
Best practice	151,827.51

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. MacNeil: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the total value is of (a) catering and (b) entertainment contracts let by his Department; and what value of such contracts has been let in each nation and region of the United Kingdom, including London. [37465]

Alan Johnson: Expenditure on catering services in financial year 2004-2005 for DTI's London Headquarters estate was approximately £1.1 million. Expenditure on entertaining and hospitality (excluding expenditure overseas) was a further £468,000.

A breakdown of expenditure on a regional basis is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Deregulation

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the impact of deregulation on productivity; and if he will make a statement. [43106]

Alan Johnson [holding answer 19 January 2006]: A recent study by the OECD shows that lower levels of regulation have contributed to accelerated growth in the UK by stimulating business investment and promoting innovation and technological catch up. OECD data also shows that the UK is the second least restrictive OECD country, only marginally behind Australia, in terms of economic and administrative regulation.

The Government have launched one of the most radical reform programmes in the world to ensure administrative and other burdens arising from regulations are minimised.

Directors (Minimum Age)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will bring forward legislation under which the minimum age of directors for public limited companies will be at least 18 years. [51511]

Mr. Sutcliffe: At present, under company law, there is no minimum age for directors. The Company Law Reform Bill introduces a minimum age, 16, for a natural person to be a director of any company.

Energy Review 2000

Sir Robert Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many stakeholder meetings he is holding for the Energy Review 2006; and to how many of these meetings he is inviting representatives of the energy efficiency industry. [51454]

Malcolm Wicks: During the course of the consultation, eight seminars are taking place across England, Wales and Scotland. The Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment will host a seminar on the Energy Review in Belfast. The seminar that took place in Birmingham on 31 January 2006 concentrated on Energy Efficiency.

All the seminars involve a broad range of organisation. Invitees include representatives from unions; energy providers; energy generators; industry associations; network operators; non-governmental organisations with an interest in energy, environment, or fuel poverty issues; regulatory bodies; official advisory bodies to the Government; national, devolved, regional and local Government and Government Agencies; think tanks and academia. Clearly, energy efficiency cuts across many issues to do with energy, so organisations with an interest in energy efficiency are being invited to all the seminars.

In addition to these seminars, my officials and I will be meeting a number of stakeholders individually or in small groups.

Equality Bill

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will introduce proposals to extend the provisions of the Equality Bill to Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement. [49034]

Meg Munn: Northern Ireland has its own body of discrimination law, and its own Equality Commission and Human Rights Commission. The Equality Bill has already been extended to Northern Ireland to the extent necessary to ensure that there are no significant gaps in protection.

Gas Supplies

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of whether speculation is distorting the market for gas prices. [49786]

Malcolm Wicks: In spring 2005, the DTI commissioned a detailed report by Global Insight, an energy consultancy, on the operation of the UK gas forward markets. This is available at http://www.dti.gov.uk/energy/publications/policy/forward_gas_markets.pdf. The report concluded, among other things, that the UK gas forward market was "a functional hedging and trading market, free from major distortions and market abuse, with efficient price-formation outside of short spike periods". However, the report also said that, whilst the market was functionally liquid, more could be done to boost confidence in it and encourage participation by banks, traders etc. The DTI and Ofgem have therefore been discussing with the Futures and Options Association (FOA) why there is not more participation in the forward market and whether there are any barriers to entry. Following a roundtable with some of its members on 6 December, the FOA has developed a programme of actions to try to improve liquidity.

Heating Oil

John Thurso: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he is taking to tackle the increase in the cost of heating oil; and if he will make a statement. [51531]

Malcolm Wicks: The Government takes the problem of rising fuel prices and its targets on the eradication of fuel poverty very seriously. The provision of affordable warmth is a keystone of our energy policy, and one of the four goals set out in the Energy White Paper.

Tackling fuel poverty is devolved. In Scotland the overall objective for fuel poverty is to ensure that, so far as reasonably practicable, people are not living in fuel poverty by November 2016. The central heating and warm deal programmes improve the energy efficiency of the housing stock for vulnerable people. So far the Scottish Executive has invested over £240 million in these programmes, putting in over 63,000 central heating systems and insulating over 223,000 homes.

Increases in the cost of heating oil over the past year primarily reflect rises in the international price of crude oil. Through its presidencies of the G8, G7 and EU, the UK promoted international efforts to improve the functioning of the global oil market and tackle market inefficiencies that contribute to oil price volatility.

Domestically, the Government's policy is not to intervene in commercial price setting because it believes that the consumer is best served by the operation of open competition between companies. The supply of domestic bulk liquefied petroleum gas (LPG) is, however, subject to UK competition law under the Competition Act 1998 and is currently under investigation by the Competition Commission. Provisional findings are available at http://www.competition-commission.org.uk/inquiries/current/gas/, with the final report to be published in March.

Indian Financial Services Companies

Ms Dari Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which five Indian companies in the UK with a presence in the financial services sector have the largest number of employees; and how many employees each has. [51453]

Ian Pearson: The Table below shows the latest available UK employee information from publicly available data from Companies House for Indian companies with a known UK subsidiary or a UK branch in the financial services sector.

Indian companies with known UK presence in financial services sector

	Status	Number of UK employees
ICICI Bank UK Limited	UK subsidiary	51

Migrant Workers from Poland

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what measures he is taking to ensure that migrant workers from Poland are protected under UK employment laws. [51614]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Legal migrant workers in the UK have the same employment rights and recourses as their indigenous equivalents.

We are aware that migrant workers may face difficulties in understanding and asserting their rights. We have offered to work with the Governments of all the new member states, to prepare bi-lingual "know before you go" leaflets giving advice on questions to ask before leaving the country and on legal protections offered to workers including agency workers.

To date we have produced leaflets in partnership with the Polish and Lithuanian Governments, and are in discussions with other Governments. The two existing leaflets followed a similar leaflet we produced in partnership with the Portuguese Government, and benefited from input from the TUC, the CBI and other stakeholders. These leaflets have been distributed widely in both the workers' home country and the UK. In Poland, for example, they have been publicised on television and our embassy and the Polish authorities have worked hard to distribute them via job centres, recruitment fairs and other channels. The text of the leaflets is also available on the DTI website—http://www.dti.gov.uk/er/agency/migrant_workers.htm.

Post Offices

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the number of post offices that could be expected to close as a result of the possible loss of income arising from the ending of the contract for the Post Office card account in 2010. [50872]

Barry Gardiner: [holding answer 13 February 2006]: The future size of the network will depend on many factors including the outcome of ongoing discussions between Post Office Ltd. and Department for Work and Pensions on what accounts, other than the Post Office card account, will be available after 2010.

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he plans to take to prevent the closure of post offices following the ending of the contract for the Post Office card account. [51483]

Barry Gardiner: The future of the network will depend on many factors including the outcome of ongoing discussions between Post Office Ltd. and Department for Work and Pensions on what accounts, other than the Post Office card account, will be available after 2010.

Regional Development Agencies

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether regional development agencies have a role in the regeneration of market towns. [51057]

Alun Michael: Yes. In April 2005, England's Regional Development Agencies (RDAs) took over responsibility from the Countryside Agency for delivery of rural economic and social regeneration policies, including responsibility for the regeneration of market towns. The RDAs work with local communities and businesses to deliver long term strategic investment plans that will sustain market towns as important rural service centres, geared to the particular needs and characteristics of each region.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what responsibilities the regional development agencies have taken over from the Countryside Agency in the last two years. [51058]

Jim Knight: I have been asked to reply.

As announced in Rural Strategy 2004, from 1 April 2005, Defra has devolved decision-making on delivery of economic and social regeneration policies to the Regional Development Agencies. This includes areas of activity such as those formerly covered by the Countryside Agency's Vital Villages and Market Towns programmes. The transfer of Countryside Agency funding aims to create an integrated rural funding programme and allow RDAs the flexibility to manage their own resources to meet their regional and Defra priorities. Additional resources from the Countryside Agency will also increase the RDAs expertise in innovation, countryside issues, research and rural development.

This move to devolve funding to the regions through RDAs is part of Central Government's devolving decision-making agenda. RDAs, working in partnership, will decide how to spend their resources to meet national targets and address regional needs. However, Defra is confident that by devolving these responsibilities to the RDAs and increasing their resources, rural delivery will become more responsive to local priorities and better focused on areas and people that need it most.

Sunday Trading

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many organisations his Department considered to carry out the cost-benefit report into extending Sunday trading hours; which organisation was selected; what estimate he has made of the cost to his Department of compiling the report; and what measures are in place to ensure that the report will be independent. [51418]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Department of Trade and Industry (DTI) invited several organisations to submit a proposal for the study. Indepen Consulting Ltd. was selected to carry out the study. The project fee is currently commercially sensitive information and the DTI is unable to release this figure. The contractor has declared no potential conflicts of interest and the DTI is satisfied that the study will be independent.

TRANSPORT

Bus Services

11. Hugh Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what obligations bus companies have to consult local authorities on changes in their timetables and fares. [51251]

Ms Buck: Bus companies outside London are not required by law to consult on fare or timetable changes, but must give the traffic commissioner and all relevant local authorities at least 56 days notice of variations to timetables of registered local bus services. Timetables and fares for the London bus network are set by Transport for London.

Public Transport

12. Mr. Simon: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he is taking to improve access to public transport for pensioners. [51252]

Ms Buck: From 1 April 2006 people 60 or over will be entitled to free off-peak bus travel within their local authority boundary or passenger Transport Executive area.

We have also introduced regulations for trains and buses and coaches which require new vehicles to be accessible and so easier to use for older people.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps his Department has taken to ensure greater access to public transport for people with disabilities and visual impairments. [51259]

Ms Buck: We are committed to providing an accessible public transport system. We have regulated to ensure that all new trains, buses and coaches are accessible to disabled people. We made provision in the Disability Discrimination Act 2005 to extend the "right of access" disabled people already have to other services to transport and to introduce other measures to improve accessibility.

Gatwick Express

13. Mr. David Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the future of the Gatwick Express. [51253]

Derek Twigg: The concept of a fast frequent service between Gatwick and Victoria will remain. The Brighton main line route utilisation strategy, however, made clear the need to improve punctuality and to reduce overcrowding on this busy route. Detailed proposals about how we resolve this are now being evaluated by the Department in discussion with Network Rail.

Road Safety

14. Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what guidance has been issued on the use of variable message signs on motorways. [51254]

Dr. Ladyman: Variable message signs can be set by the Highways Agency's national traffic control centre and regional control centres and currently by police control offices.

The messages which can be set on the signs and guidance on their use, are contained in operational documents.

The Highways Agency has also produced a brochure to explain the background to, and use of variable message signs.

Road Network

15. Lynda Waltho: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what progress the Government have made on improving management of the road network. [51255]

Dr. Ladyman: Highways Agency traffic officers have begun patrolling motorways across the country to clear incidents and keep traffic flowing, and local highway authorities have now appointed traffic managers with new duties under the Traffic Management Act 2004. Trials of innovative new traffic management systems are in progress.

Road Building Programme

16. Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the Government's road building programme. [51256]

Dr. Ladyman: We are making good progress in delivering our programme of major improvements to the strategic road network. Since 2001 we have completed 35 major trunk road and motorway schemes. 15 schemes are currently under construction and we plan to start construction work on a further 27 schemes by April 2008. In the three years to 2007–08 we plan to spend £1.9 billionn on major improvement schemes on the trunk road and motorway network.

20. Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the Government's road building programme. [51260]

Dr. Ladyman: We are making good progress in delivering our programme of major improvements to the strategic road network. Since 2001 we have completed 35 major trunk road and motorway schemes 15 schemes are currently under construction and we plan to start construction work on a further 27 schemes by April 2008. In the three years to 2007–08 we plan to spend £1.9 billion on major improvement schemes on the trunk road and motorway network.

Great Western Franchise

17. Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent discussions he has had with First Group on the future of the Great Western franchise. [51257]

Derek Twigg: I met First Group on 30 January 2006, together with Network Rail, to discuss future plans to improve performance.

Road Pricing

18. Mr. Hurd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the Government's plans for road pricing. [51258]

Dr. Ladyman: We are working with local authorities and areas to develop road pricing schemes that tackle congestion. This will allow us to pilot technology for a national scheme in the longer term, and we would like to see the first pilot schemes up and running within the next five years.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the potential use of satellite navigation systems in charging for road use. [51390]

Dr. Ladyman: Satellite based road charging systems are already being used in other countries with some success. The potential for use here is being considered as part of our work in moving towards a national road pricing system.

Air Travel Fund

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what funds are held within the Air Travel Organisers Licensing Air Travel Trust Fund; and whether he plans to increase the fund. [50783]

Ms Buck: The Air Travel Trust Fund (ATTF) is currently in deficit, with borrowings of £13.7 million.

For some years the Government have been guaranteeing the overdraft that enables the fund to operate. We are taking the legislative opportunity of the Civil Aviation Bill, currently before Parliament, to transfer responsibility for the fund back to the market. The Civil Aviation Bill will give the Secretary of State the necessary powers to enable the Civil Aviation Authority (CAA) to make regulations requiring air travel organisers to contribute to the Air Travel Trust Fund (ATTF), thereby ensuring the continued financial protection of consumers purchasing package holidays in the event of the failure of a tour operator.

Aircraft Movements (Heathrow)

Susan Kramer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the average number of aircraft movements at Heathrow airport was during each hour between 7a.m. and 11p.m. in the most recent year for which figures are available. [50542]

Ms Buck: The following table shows the 2005 mean number of air transport movements at Heathrow airport each hour.

Time band	Annual average number of air transport movements
0700 to 0759	75
0800 to 0859	75
0900 to 0959	79
1000 to 1059	80
1100 to 1159	80
1200 to 1259	80
1300 to 1359	78

Aircraft Noise

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what definition of excessive noise his Department uses in documents relating to (a) the noise from aircraft and (b) other civil aviation matters; [50289]

(2) pursuant to his Department's consultation on night flying restrictions, how he plans to measure the effectiveness of the proposals to bear down on noise. [50831]

Ms Buck: We have stated in consulting on our proposals for night flying restrictions at Heathrow, Gatwick and Stansted that one of our broad aims is

"to strike a fair balance between the protection of local communities from excessive aircraft noise levels at night and the provision of air services at night where they are of benefit to the national, regional or local economy".

The expression 'excessive noise' does not apply to a specific level of aircraft noise: what is excessive will vary according to locations and individuals.

Based on research, the Government use various measurements of aircraft noise as indicators of disturbance or of potential annoyance, or as criteria for mitigation measures, including advice for land use planning purposes.

'Bearing down' on night noise from aircraft arriving at or departing from Heathrow, Gatwick and Stansted is expressed by the new proposed environmental and night noise abatement objectives for the airport on which we invited comments as part of the consultation on night flying restrictions.

The final objectives will be announced as part of the decision on future night flying restrictions. The way in which their effect in practice will be assessed will depend on what the objectives are.

Buses

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what definition his Department uses of a (a) coach and (b) bus service; and what provisions relating to access for the disabled apply to each type of service. [50102]

Ms Buck: For the purposes of defining accessibility requirements, The Public Service Vehicles Accessibility Regulations 2000 define a 'bus' as a public service vehicle which is designed to carry both seated and standing passengers with a carrying capacity exceeding 22 passengers, in addition to the driver. A 'coach' has a similar definition, but is designed for the carriage of seated passengers only. These regulations have applied to new buses and coaches since 31 December 2000, used to operate local or scheduled services only.

The Regulations are intended to enable passengers with a broad range of disabilities, including wheelchair users to board, alight and travel in safety and in reasonable comfort. They include requirements for a designated wheelchair position, appropriate wheelchair boarding device, low first step height, provision of suitable handrails, seat dimensions, visual contrasts marking specific features, and route and destination displays.

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the impact of free bus travel on the existing arrangements for bus travel between (a) Northumberland and Tyne and Wear, (b) Durham and Tyne and Wear and (c) Northumberland and Durham. [51462]

Ms Buck: None. Cross-boundary concessionary travel is offered is at the discretion of the local authority based on their judgement of local needs and their overall financial priorities.

Condover Parish Council

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received from Condover parish council; and if he will make a statement. [51548]

Dr. Ladyman: The Highways Agency has received a number of communications from Condover parish council concerning the provision of a pedestrian crossing facility on the A49 Trunk Road in the village of Dorrington. Unfortunately, to date it has not been possible to find a solution that would satisfy relevant design and financial requirements but discussions are continuing with Shrewsbury and Atcham borough council in their capacity as local planning authority. The parish council will be kept informed of any developments.

Departmental Assets

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the items of departmental property worth over £100 that have been reported as (a) lost and (b) broken in the last 12 months. [47674]

Ms Buck: The requested information, where available, is as follows:

	Description	Quantity	Average value per item	DfT Organisational unit
(a)	Laptop	1	925	Vehicle Certification Agency
	Pager	2	117	Air Accident Investigation Branch
(b)	Camera	1	250	Marine Accident Investigation Branch

For the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency and our HQ buildings (in respect of broken maintenance items) the data is not available in the required format and can be extracted only at disproportionate costs. The Highways Agency have also advised that no data is held on broken items.

Departmental Staff

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans his Department has to change the London allowance of its staff; and if he will make a statement. [50004]

Ms Buck: Within the Department, the Driving Standards Agency retains a separate London Working Allowance based on those workplaces located within the M25. This will increase by £100 as at 1 April 2006. However, this will not apply to those staff working within the equivalent of the old Inner London weighting area (DSA Charles House Area Office)

There are no further planned changes to the London Allowance, where paid.

Disabled Parking

Mr. Rob Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will introduce legislation to make it a fineable offence for a non-blue badge holder to park in designated disabled parking bays. [51539]

Ms Buck: It is already an offence under section 47 of the Road Traffic Regulation Act 1984 to park a vehicle which is not displaying a blue badge in a designated disabled person's parking bay. The maximum fine on conviction is £1,000 and this applies in addition to whatever penalty may be imposed for the associated parking offence.

East Coast Main Line

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent assessment he has made of capacity on the East Coast main line. [51647]

Derek Twigg: Capacity assessments for the national rail network are the responsibility of Network Rail. They have recently started work on a route utilisation strategy for the East Coast main line, and draft conclusions are expected later this year.

Emissions

John Hemming: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proportion of total UK emissions he estimates will be provided by aviation in (a) 2030 and (b) 2050 (i) with and (ii) without allowance for radiative forcing calculated at 2.7. [35573]

Ms Buck: Emissions from international flights do not currently count in the national inventories of greenhouse gas emissions, there being no international agreement yet on ways of allocating such emissions. There is, therefore, no agreed definition for UK aviation. In order to provide illustrative figures we have previously provided data based on a number of assumptions—that the UK takes responsibility for emissions from all departing flights, that all other sectors of the economy reduce their CO_2 emissions in line with the Energy White Paper goal. These figures do not take into account the impact of economic instruments like emissions trading.

The Department for Transport provided an illustrative table showing the relative contribution of aviation to UK emissions to the Environmental Audit Committee (published on 7 June 2004 in "Aviation: Sustainability and the Government Response", HC 623). On this basis, aviation would be responsible for 15.2 per cent. of UK CO_2 emissions in 2030 and 21.3 per cent. in 2050. Using a radiative forcing factor of 2.7, aviation would be responsible for 27.6 per cent. in 2030 and 34.3 per cent. in 2050 of the UK's contribution to global warming.

The Air Transport White Paper sets out the Government's belief that the best way of ensuring aviation contributes towards the goal of climate stabilisation would be through a well-designed emissions trading regime, for which we are pressing at international and European level. We are working through the International Civil Aviation Organisation towards an international emissions trading scheme for aviation—this is consistent with the request to ICAO from the UN Climate Change Convention for action on aviation emissions. We are also pursuing the inclusion of aviation in the EU emissions trading scheme. The details of how a scheme would work in practice, like the overall cap and the distribution of allowances between member states will be subject to discussion with other member states' governments.

Fair Trade

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what his Department's policy is on the procurement of fair trade produce for consumption on its premises. [49962]

Ms Buck: I can confirm that our policy on catering is to source items from fair trade producers wherever possible within the boundaries set by the public procurement rules and value for money policies. In addition, as part of any tendering process for the supply of catering services to the Department, we specify that the contractor should take account and support the Department in our response to the relevant parts of the Government's "Strategy for Sustainable Farming and Food—Facing the Future". This sets out the Government's aims and objectives for sustainability within the farming and food sectors, contributing to a better environment and healthy and prosperous communities.

Products that are consistently purchased which typically relate to this ethos are fair trade bulk brew filter coffee and down to earth fair trade enveloped tea as part of our hospitality arrangements. These products are also made available in staff restaurants as well as fair trade sweets and chocolate, free range eggs and organic pasta.

Free Travel (Greater Manchester)

Andrew Gwynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions his Department has had with (a) bus operators in Greater Manchester and (b) Greater Manchester Passenger Transport Executive to ensure that any increase in demand caused by the introduction of free off-peak travel for pensioners is met. [51740]

Ms Buck: The Department set up a working group consisting of representatives from local authorities, the Passenger Transport Executives and the Confederation of Passenger Transport to advise on the overall implementation of the free local off-peak travel for those 60 and over and disabled people. There have been no specific discussions on Manchester.

Highways Agency (Litter)

Andrew Gwynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what obligations the Highways Agency is under to remove litter from motorway embankments and verges; and how often the agency has undertaken to remove litter from the (a) M60 and (b) M67 motorways in Denton and Reddish constituency in its cleansing programme. [51141]

Dr. Ladyman: The Highways Agency is obliged, by the Environmental Protection Act 1990, to remove litter from motorways, including the central reservations, verges, and embankments. This arrangement has regard to the nature and use of the highway, and the need to limit disruption to traffic. To comply with the Act, which specifies, through a supplementary Code of Practice, standards of cleanliness and response times, the Agency undertakes a regime of sweeping and litter picking on the M60 and M67 Motorways.

Litter picking on the verges and embankments is undertaken at regular three-monthly intervals on both the M60 and M67. The offside lane and central reserve is routinely swept and litter picked every three months on the M60 and every two months oh the M67.

The hard shoulders are swept every two months on the M60, and every three months on the M67. Where the Agency's daily routine inspections identify a particular problem, additional litter picking and sweeping is undertaken.

Identity Cards

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to the answer of 7 December 2005, Official Report, column 1313W, on identity cards, whether he has finalised current best estimates of the cost of using the identity cards scheme to support the services which he oversees. [50321]

Ms Buck: The Department for Transport contributed to the Benefits Overview Document which was published by the Identity Cards Programme in June 2005. The Department has not yet finalised its estimates of the benefits or costs of using the ID Cards Scheme to support the services which it oversees. Officials from across the department are working with the Home Office ID Cards Programme to identify and quantify benefits and develop a realisation plan in line with the recommendation of the ministerial committee on ID Cards.

Motor Cycling (Disabled Badges)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what measures he plans to introduce to ensure that disabled motorcyclists can display disabled badges without risking theft; and if he will make a statement. [50251]

Ms Buck: There are no plans to introduce specific measures.

For motorcycles we advise that the badge should be exhibited in a conspicuous position on the vehicle so that the relevant details on the front are visible. The precise method of attaching and securing the badge is a matter for the badge holder to determine.

Motor Vehicles (Air Conditioning Emissions)

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the impact in the United Kingdom of the current draft regulations on emissions from air conditioning systems in motor vehicles; and if he will make a statement. [51284]

Dr. Ladyman: The European Commission's proposal controlling greenhouse gas emissions from Mobile Air Conditioning systems has been analysed by an inter-departmental project team. The costs and benefits of the proposed legislation has been estimated and compared with other options. The proposal is estimated to save 14–17 Megatonnes CO_2 equivalent of greenhouse gas emissions in 2005–25. Estimated costs are in the range £18–67 million per annum.

The proposal was adopted by the European Parliament and Council on 31 January 2006 and has not yet been published in the Official Journal. Work has therefore not yet begun on drafting Regulations to implement this Directive in UK law. However the Directive is in essence a type approval standard applying to new vehicles only. It does not apply retrospectively, nor does the Department have any intention of adopting retrospective provisions in implementing UK Regulations. Further to DEFRA's consultation on the Commission's proposal, DfT will conduct a formal consultation exercise on implementing Regulations in due course.

Article 6 of the Directive does prohibit retrofitting of air conditioning systems with high Global Warming Potential (GWP) refrigerants to vehicles type approved on or after 1 January 2011. Such air conditioning systems may not be retrofitted to any vehicle from 1 January 2017. However the Directive does allow continued use of high GWP refrigerants for refilling air conditioning systems which originally used such gases. This ensures that air conditioning systems on existing vehicles may be maintained in working order without necessitating their replacement with systems designed to use lower GWP refrigerants.

Parking Fines

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what changes the Government have made to guidance to highways authorities on parking (a) spaces, (b) charges and (c) fines, since May 1997. [50955]

Ms Buck: Since May 1997 the Secretary of State has amended paragraphs 4.9 to 4.29 of Local Authority Circular 1/95 "Guidance on Decriminalised Parking Enforcement Outside London" which deals with the parking charges and penalty charges set by local authorities. The Mayor for London is responsible for guidance to local authorities in London.

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many appeals against parking penalty charge notices there were in each local authority in England in the last five years for which figures are available; and how many were successful. [51685]

Ms Buck: I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 11 July 2005, Official Report, column 671W.

Parliamentary Questions

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many parliamentary questions tabled in the last 12 months for answer by him on a named day (a) were transferred and (b) received a substantive answer (i) on the day named and (ii) after the day named. [49881]

Ms Buck: My ministerial colleagues and I aim to ensure that hon. Members receive a substantive response to their named day question on the named day and to endeavour to answer ordinary written questions within a working week of being tabled.

During the period 31 January 2005 to 31 January 2006, 657 named day parliamentary questions were tabled to the Department for Transport. Of those, 485 (74 per cent.) received a substantive answer on the day named and 172 (26 per cent.) received a substantive answer after the day named. A further 11 named day questions were transferred to another Government Department. The Department for Transport does not hold information on when those questions were answered.

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many ordinary written parliamentary questions tabled for answer by him in the last 12 months have been answered (a) within 14 days, (b) between 14 and 28 days, (c) between 28 days and two months and (d) in excess of two months after the date of tabling; and if he will make a statement. [49895]

Ms Buck: The information is not available in the format requested.

As at 8 February, the Department for Transport had received 2,937 ordinary written parliamentary questions between the 31 January 2005 and the 31 January 2006. Of these, 2,370 (82 per cent.) were answered within five sitting days, 125 (4 per cent.) were answered one day late, 256 (9 per cent.) were answered between two and five days late, 85 (3 per cent.) were answered between six and 10 days late and 63 (2 per cent.) were answered 11 + days late. 38 (1 per cent.) are awaiting an answer.

Public Information

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much was spent on the Department's public relations and information services in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [48967]

Ms Buck: The Department spent the following amounts in each year since it was established on public relations, primarily to support our marketing activities for example the THINK! road safety campaign.

	DFT (central)	DFT (agencies)
2002-03	496,004	302,250
2003-04	357,146	503,788
2004-05	438,210	373,328

Figures for all information services which range from call centres, websites, customer service centres to campaign hotlines can only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Railways

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many (a) regional train services, (b) long distance train services and (c) train services in London and the South East have been cancelled due to non-driver availability in each of the past five years; and how many passenger journeys have been affected. [48225]

Derek Twigg: The number of trains cancelled for reasons associated with train crew in the current financial year up to December 2005 is given as follows:

	Number
(a) Regional services	6,042
(b) Long distance services	183
(c) London and South East services	5,279

As a percentage of services due to have operated in each sector, this equates to:

	Percentage
(a) Regional services	0.30
(b) Long distance services	0.08
(c) London and South East services	0.21

The equivalent information for previous years, and information relating to the number of passengers affected by such cancellations is not held centrally.

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent representations he has received from train operating companies on industrial disputes. [49841]

Derek Twigg: Although train operating companies (TOCs) have not made representations to the Secretary of State, the nature of the franchise agreement means that TOCs do talk to the franchise managers about potential industrial disputes. Currently the only TOC which is in discussion with their franchise manager in this way is Virgin Cross Country.

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make provision for additional capacity on the rail line linking Wellingborough to London. [51525]

Derek Twigg: The Department for Transport has recently begun detailed assessment and development work on the service definition for the new East Midlands franchise. The work will take account of the growth expected in the Wellingborough area as part of the Milton Keynes South Midlands growth area proposals. We expect to consult on the franchise specification this summer.

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what progress has been made with the extension of the East London line; and if he will make a statement. [51722]

Derek Twigg: Enabling works for Phase 1 of the extension, which will take the line to Dalston Junction in the North and Crystal Palace and East Croydon in the South, are currently under way. This includes work on 21 bridges along the Kingsland Viaduct in Hackney. The main works tender went out in December 2005 and a contract will be awarded in summer 2006, after which the main works on Phase 1 can begin.

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) reviewed that benchmarks the costs of rail services provision in the UK against other developed countries. [48504]

Derek Twigg: The Department has not commissioned specific work on benchmarking of costs of rail services provision against other developed countries. However other UK and international bodies, for example the Office of Rail Regulation, and the European Commission, have done so from time to time. The Department reviews the available material to inform policy development.

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had in the last 12 months with the Association of Train Operating Companies on the regulation of rail fares; when he expects to have further discussions on this matter; and if he will make a statement. [50512]

Derek Twigg: Fares regulation is a contractual matter set out in the franchise agreement between the Department for Transport and each individual train operator. Discussions have been held with the Association of Train Operating Companies, in relation to simplified zonal fares for rail services in London, where co-operation between train companies will be necessary.

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to extend the Community Rail Strategy; and if he will make a statement. [50514]

Derek Twigg: The Community Rail Development Strategy was published by the Strategic Rail Authority in November 2004. Six lines have so far been designated as community rail lines: St. Erth to St. Ives, Liskeard to Looe, St. Budeaux Junction to Gunnislake, Watford Junction to St Albans, Guisborough Junction to Whitby and Barnsley to Huddersfield. Consultation has taken place to designate the lines from Grantham to Skegness and from Ryde Pier Head to Shanklin, and we hope to consult shortly about a number of other lines. It remains our intention progressively to designate the lines listed in the Strategy and to continue to implement other elements of the Strategy.

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with rail operators concerning the impact on (a) rail freight services and (b) rail congestion on lines into and out of London Paddington of the Crossrail project; and if he will make a statement. [51217]

Derek Twigg: I recently consulted the rail industry on a policy paper describing the development of an access option for Crossrail services. This sets out the principles by which Crossrail will share the capacity with other traffic on the existing rail network.

In parallel with work on the access option, a cross-industry timetabling working group oversees timetable testing that looks ahead to the start of Crossrail services.

Additionally, a number of freight and other rail interests attend the Crossrail High Level Forum. There is also a forum just for railway stakeholders to discuss Crossrail issues. I chair both meetings. There are also regular and ad hoc official level meetings with the rail industry about Crossrail.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the public subsidy paid to each constituent part of the railway in each year since 1992. [49030]

Derek Twigg: Details of public subsidy to the railway are set out in the Department's Annual Reports, copies of which are available in the House Library.

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what financial penalties are available when Network Rail fails to complete renewals on time. [49804]

Derek Twigg: Network Rail pays compensation to train operators where changes to train timetables are made as a result of Network Rail requiring access to the network to undertake renewals and other work. These provisions are contained within train operators' track access contracts. The amount of compensation payable relates in part to the duration of the period of disruption.

If the renewals work overruns, further compensation is provided by Network Rail to train operators for unforeseen delays and cancellations to services.

More generally, Network Rail must manage the network in accordance with its network licence. This is enforceable by the Office of Rail Regulation, which may impose a financial penalty in the event of a breach of a licence condition.

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether it is his policy to retain all operating rural railway lines. [43613]

Derek Twigg: There are no current proposals for closure of rural lines. The White Paper on The Future of Rail announced that the Government supported the better use of lightly used rural rail services. This is being taken forward through the Community Rail Development Strategy which aims to improve the usage and reduce costs of rural rail services.

There are now a number of local community rail partnerships and early indications are they are having a positive impact.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what guidance his Department has issued to members of the public wishing to complain about (a) increases in fares and (b) the services provided by train operators; and if he will make a statement. [50459]

Derek Twigg: Each train operator's passenger licence and station licence requires them to have an approved complaints handling procedure (CHP). Each operator's CHP commits them to displaying both their own contact details for comments and complaints, and the address for the Rail Passengers Council, recently renamed Passenger Focus, in each carriage on board every train, on posters at every station, and in their timetables and publications.

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what measures he can take to ensure that the 20:03 Crewe to North Wales train leaves Crewe after the Euston to Liverpool train arrives at Crewe at 20:05. [45670]

Derek Twigg: Timetabling and connections are matters between Train Operating Companies and Network Rail who work together to optimise connections, taking into consideration the interests of passengers and the available capacity and pathing.

Roads

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will ask the Highways Agency to carry out dry scrim testing on stone mastic asphalt. [51368]

Dr. Ladyman: As stone mastic asphalt is not used on motorways and trunk roads, it would be inappropriate for the Highways Agency to carry out dry SCRIM tests.

For the thin surfaces used by the Highways Agency, the testing of dry skid resistance is undertaken by a pavement friction tester (PFT).

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment has been made of whether stone mastic asphalt surfaces have the same skid co-efficient as hot rolled asphalt. [51369]

Dr. Ladyman: Extensive research on the skid resistance of road surfacings over the last ten years has included measurements of both stone mastic asphalt and hot rolled asphalt. This has shown that provided the appropriate aggregate is used and the surface texture is adequate, the skid resistance of stone mastic asphalt falls within the expected range for typical hot rolled asphalt surfacing.

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment has been made of whether there has been a change in the incidence of accidents involving pedestrians on crossings where shellgrip is no longer used. [51370]

Dr. Ladyman: There have been no studies of accidents involving pedestrians in situations where shellgrip was once used and either not been replaced or where it has been replaced with a high friction surfacing of a different type.

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether the Highways Agency has tested chemical washing on new thin surface material road surfaces. [51440]

Dr. Ladyman: The Highways Agency has not tested chemical washing on new thin surface material road surfaces.

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with the Highways Agency on a bypass for Dorrington near Shrewsbury on the A49. [51231]

Dr. Ladyman: The Secretary of State has had no discussions with the Highways Agency on the A49 Dorrington bypass (near Shrewsbury) since the scheme was withdrawn from the Trunk Roads Programme in 1994.

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will meet the Highways Agency to discuss the merits of a pedestrian crossing in the village of Westbury near Shrewsbury; [51232]

(2) if he will visit the village of Westbury near Shrewsbury to address the safety of the road through the village. [51236]

Dr. Ladyman: As Westbury is not situated on the trunk road network, responsibility for the management of the road through the village rests with Shropshire county council as local highway authority, rather than the Highways Agency. The hon. Member should approach the county council about these issues.

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much was spent on road (a) improvements and (b) modernisation in Shrewsbury and Atcham constituency in (i) 1997, (ii) 1999 and (iii) 2005. [51233]

Dr. Ladyman: The information summarised in the following table has been supplied from Shropshire county council. It summarises the county council's expenditure on highways and transport infrastructure in the Shrewsbury and Atcham district in the three financial years most closely corresponding to 1997, 1999 and 2005.

Expenditure £000

	1997-98 (actual)	1999-2000 (actual)	2005-06 (budget)
Integrated Transport improvements and Local Safety Schemes	909	932	1,329
Battlefield Link Road	584	0	0
Sub total (Improvements)	1,493	932	1,329
Structural Maintenance of Roads	1,422	1,812	2,710
Routine Maintenance of Roads	434	502	642
Total	3,349	3,246	4,681

It is not possible to provide a breakdown of spending on trunk roads as this is neither allocated nor recorded on a county or parliamentary constituency basis.

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will meet representatives of Shrewsbury Friends of the Earth to discuss the proposal to build a north west relief road on the outskirts of Shrewsbury. [51234]

Dr. Ladyman: We have not received any detailed proposal from Shropshire county council for a relief road to the North West of Shrewsbury. I will consider written representations from stakeholders should I receive such a proposal.

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will direct the Highways Agency to install a sign for Shrewsbury on the M6 junction with the M54. [51235]

Dr. Ladyman: I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 16 January 2006, Official Report, columns 932–3W.

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will visit Shrewsbury to address the safety of the Dobbies roundabout at the junction of the A5 and A49. [51237]

Dr. Ladyman: The Highways Agency, which has responsibility for the A5 and A49 Trunk Roads, is fully aware of the difficulties at the Dobbies roundabout. An investigation currently being carried out is designed to identify measures to improve the operation of the roundabout, including any that would reduce traffic speeds. The results are due within the next two to three months.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what powers exist to place a permanent stopping order on a road where the use of the road has changed; and if he will make a statement. [50701]

Ms Buck [holding answer 13 February 2006]: The Secretary of State has powers under the Town and Country Planning Act 1990 to authorise the permanent stopping up of a highway in England outside London to enable development to take place or to improve safety and/or traffic flow if it crosses or enters the route of a new or improved highway. In London, these powers are exercised by the London boroughs.

The Secretary of State also has power under the Highways Act 1980 to permanently stop up a highway if he considers it necessary as part of the construction or improvement of a trunk road or a classified road.

A magistrate has power under the Highways Act 1980 to stop up a highway that is unnecessary or can be diverted to improve for the public its capacity or convenience.

These Acts provide all the powers necessary to carry out stopping up but the procedures involved are under review.

Speed Limits

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to issue draft guidance on rural speed limits. [51846]

Dr. Ladyman: Guidance on setting local speed limits, including those on rural roads, is currently contained in Circular Roads 1/93. The Department has consulted on draft updated guidance and this will be published shortly.

Toll Roads

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much income from toll roads his Department has received in each of the last five years. [51391]

Dr. Ladyman: The Department only receives income from one undertaking — the Dartford-Thurrock river crossing. Income from tolls at other statutory tolled undertakings is retained by the operator.

Prior to 1 April 2002 the concessionaire operating the Dartford-Thurrock river crossing retained all income.

Gross toll income received at the crossing for the year to 31 March 2003 amounted to £69.34 million.

Since the 1 April 2003 a road user charging scheme under the Transport Act 2000 has been in operation at the crossing. The gross income received is as follows:

2003–04 —£68.12 million (includes rental income and/or interest received)

2004–05 —£69.02 million (Includes rental income and/or interest received)

2005–06 —£58.32 million (un-audited figure for the period from 1 April 2005 to the 31 January 2006)

Travel Subsidies

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much has been spent on subsidies for (a) rail and (b) bus travel in the Peterborough city council area in each of the last five years. [50430]

Ms Buck: Subsidies for the rail network are paid to Network Rail and to the various franchises which operate in a number of regions and cities. The Department does not collect figures showing rail subsidy to individual cities.

Individual local authorities are responsible for their own decisions on spending on support for local bus services in their area. The majority of this expenditure is provided by local authorities from their revenue support grant allocations. Expenditure by Peterborough city council on support of bus services in each of the last five years is shown in the following table:

	Bus subsidy (£000)
2000–01	373
2001–02	384
2002–03	528
2003–04	635
2004–05	592

Note:
Figures from administrative returns from the local authority. They include expenditure met from the Department's rural bus subsidy grant and bus challenge schemes.

Vehicle Air Conditioning Systems

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had, and with whom, on the draft regulations on emissions from air conditioning systems in motor vehicles; if he will ensure that changes to such regulations are not retrospective; and if he will make a statement. [51218]

Dr. Ladyman: I refer the right hon. Member to my answer given today [UIN 51284].

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Business Rates (Gloucestershire)

Steve Webb: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much was paid in business rates in South Gloucestershire in each year since 1996–97; and how much was received by South Gloucestershire council from the central rate pool. [51854]

Mr. Woolas: The amounts South Gloucestershire collected in business rates and the amounts they received back from the central pool from 1997–98 to 2004–05 are tabled as follows. Unfortunately this information is not readily available for 1996–97.

National non-domestic business rates (NNDR), South Gloucestershire

Carbon Monoxide Alarms

Mr. Crabb: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what steps he is taking to enable low-income households to purchase carbon monoxide alarms. [51451]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Home Fire Risk Check Initiative established in October 2004, enables all English fire and rescue services to work up a dedicated programme of home fire risk checks combined with the installation of free 10-year battery operated smoke alarms in vulnerable homes. The funding may be used to install other protective devices such as specialist deaf smoke alarms, community link fire alarms and carbon monoxide detectors.

Carbon monoxide detectors are a useful back-up precaution, but they must not be regarded as a substitute for proper installation and maintenance of gas equipment. All householders are encouraged to install at least one smoke alarm and regularly maintain existing devices.

Mr. Crabb: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what estimate he has made of the percentage of households equipped with (a) carbon monoxide alarms and (b) fire alarms. [51450]

Jim Fitzpatrick: Information on the percentage of households equipped with carbon monoxide detectors is not held centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Latest figures released on 31 January 2006, show that an estimated 80 per cent. of households in England are equipped with at least one working smoke alarm.

Departmental Information

Mr. Gale: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much was spent on his Department's public relations and information services in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [48954]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Office of the Deputy Prime minister was created on 29 May 2002 The spend on public relations and information services is tabled as follows:

	Public relations	Information services
2002–03	247,000	30,000
2003–04	99,000	30,000
2004–05	160,000	55,000
2005–06	112,000	41,000

The majority of this spend has been through the Central Office of Information to help promote fire safety in the home.

Firefighters

Keith Vaz: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many firefighters have been employed in (a) Leicester and (b) England in each year between 1997 and 2005. [51502]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The number of firefighters that have been employed in Leicester is not held centrally. However, the number of firefighters employed in Leicestershire fire and rescue service and England in each year between 1997 and 2005 is tabled as follows:

	Leicestershire			England
	Wholetime firefighter	Retained duty system firefighter	Total	Wholetime firefighter	Retained duty system firefighter	Total
1997	484	228	712	32,033	13,016	45,049

Leisure Facilities

Keith Vaz: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the provision of leisure facilities by local authorities in (a) Leicester and (b) England. [50446]

Mr. Caborn: I have been asked to reply.

Specific information on the delivery of leisure services by local authorities is not centrally collated. However, information from the Leisure Data Base Company suggests that some 60 per cent. of public leisure facilities in England are managed in-house, 22 per cent. are provided through trusts and 18 per cent. by private contractors.

The Audit Commission is currently undertaking a study into the different types of management arrangements available to local authorities for running their leisure services and how they approach the task of choosing the option best suited to local needs. This is expected to include a consideration of the potential implications of each of the options available.

I will ensure a copy of the study is placed in the House Libraries once it is published.

University Students (Council Tax)

Mr. McGovern: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) what estimate he has made of the effect on revenue in each of the last three years of allowing students an exemption from council tax; [51667]

(2) what estimate he has made of the number of university students who lived in households that were not their family home and who paid council tax in 2004–05. [51666]

Mr. Woolas: The information requested is not held centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Vandalism

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the acts of vandalism which have been perpetrated (a) inside and (b) on the outside of his Office's buildings in the last 12 months. [49496]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has had no recorded incidents of vandalism in the last 12 months.

This answer does not include buildings occupied by Government offices, who carry out functions on behalf of 10 Government Departments.

LEADER OF THE HOUSE

Departmental Staff

Bob Spink: To ask the Leader of the House how many staff in his Office are paid on a performance-related basis. [50490]

Mr. Hoon: All staff in the Office of the Leader of the House of Commons are paid on a performance-related basis that includes a mixture of consolidated base pay awards and non-consolidated bonuses both of which are linked to individual performance and delivery.

DEFENCE

Afghanistan

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress has been made with mine clearing in Afghanistan; and whether the UK troops being deployed to Afghanistan in the coming months will be involved in mine clearing. [49308]

Mr. Ingram: DfID has provided support to mine clearance in Afghanistan over a number of years and takes the lead on larger-scale humanitarian decontamination operations. The following table shows the contributions covering the last three years.

	HALO Trust	Mines Advisory Group (MAG)	United Nations Mine Action Service (UNMAS)
2003–04	—	—	2,000,000
2004–05	879,668	583,708	—
2005–06	2,189,428	—	[1]175,000

[1] For coordination

Information obtained from the 2005 Landmine Monitor report estimates that the area of landmine contamination has been reduced from 1,350 square kilometres to 715 square kilometres. In 2004, over 33 square kilometres of mined areas and nearly 70 square kilometres of battle areas were cleared, destroying over 5,000 antipersonnel mines, 500 antivehicle mines and 1 million other explosives. Significant decreases in new casualties from landmines, Unexploded Ordinance (UXO) and cluster munitions compared with 2003 were also reported.

Teams from the UK Explosive Ordinance Disposal group will react to newly discovered minefields and UXO where there is a threat to coalition forces or their mission. In emergencies, civilian groups can request support from the UK EOD. UK forces co-ordinate with the UN, DfID and civilian contractors to ensure that the threat to local populations from minefields is minimised. This approach will continue as the UK presence increases, though the situation will be kept under review.

Mr. Arbuthnot: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer of 24 January 2006, Official Report, columns 28–29W, on Afghanistan, whether the breakdowns by severity of injuries sustained by service personnel in Afghanistan and Iraq are based on the same definitions; and if he will provide equivalent figures for each theatre of conflict where British troops are deployed. [49634]

John Reid: Standard definitions are used to describe the severity of injuries sustained in military service and these are applied consistently in all circumstances. I stated in my answer of 2 February 2006, Official Report, column 704–05W, that the Ministry of Defence has pledged to provide regularly updated injury statistics for operations in both Iraq and Afghanistan and to publish these on the MOD website. Similar arrangements will apply in future to all major operational deployments overseas, once the system has been successfully introduced.

Ammunition Supplies

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) when he last met representatives of BAE Land Systems at the former Royal Ordnance site at Chorley to discuss ammunition supply; [50986]

(2) when he last met representatives of (a) BAE Systems and (b) trades unions to discuss the future of Chorley Royal Ordnance; and if he will make a statement. [51526]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 13 February 2006]: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has not met with representatives of BAE Systems Land Systems at Chorley to discuss ammunition supply.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the value of the contract for ammunition produced at Royal Ordnance Chorley was in each of the last five years. [51528]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 13 February 2006]: The Ministry of Defence contracts for the supply of general munitions with BAE Systems Land Systems under the terms of the Munitions Framework Partnering Agreement.

Division of production between the company's various sites is a matter for BAE Systems Land Systems.

Ascension Island

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions his Department has had with (a) the US Defense Department and (b) the US Air Force in the last 12 months on the use of the airfield on Ascension Island. [50947]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 13 February 2006]: There have been no discussions with the US Defense Department or the US Air Force in the last 12 months on the use of the airfield on Ascension Island. However, representatives from the Permanent Joint Headquarters met with the US Air Force Space Command at Peterson AFB Colorado Springs on 5 January 2006 to identify options for efficiencies through burden sharing of facilities on the Island, including those on the airfield.

Defence Vetting Agency

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the Defence Vetting Agency carries out overseas checks when processing (a) security checks and (b) developed vetting. [49754]

Mr. Ingram: The DVA carries out a range of checks appropriate to the level of clearance required and the circumstances and background of the subject to be vetted and this includes overseas checks where appropriate.

Departmental Staff

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many staff in his Department are paid on a performance-related basis. [50080]

Mr. Touhig: Based on the numbers of staff as at the end of January 2006, around 82,000 staff receive an annual consolidated pay rise based on satisfactory performance. This includes civilian staff covered by the main departmental pay deal, those working in trading funds and the senior civil service. These staff also have performance management arrangements in place from which they are eligible for non-consolidated awards. There are also civilian staff including police, fire, teachers and medical staff whose pay is linked to counterparts outside the Department which means their pay is determined by whatever system is in place for their analogous link.

The armed forces also receive consolidated pay rise based on satisfactory performance but have not been included in the above figures.

Gulf War-related Illnesses

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his latest assessment of the (a) scale, (b) nature and (c) causes of Gulf War-related illnesses. [50300]

Mr. Touhig: Over 53,000 United Kingdom Servicemen and women deployed to the Gulf in 1990–91. We do not know how many UK Gulf veterans are ill or what illnesses they have reported because there is no single database, not least with respect to those who have left the armed forces whose current records the Department does not hold. However, at the end of September 2005, some 2,960 Gulf veterans were in receipt of a war disablement pension and 2,445 veterans had received a gratuity for disablements assessed at under 20 per cent. There will be some overlap between those figures, as some individuals will have received first a gratuity and then, if this disablement has become more severe, a pension. The awards will not necessarily relate to the individual's service in the Gulf and we would expect a substantial proportion to relate to non-Gulf service.

In some cases veterans' illnesses are due to disorders which are unrelated to service. The majority will be musculo-skeletal conditions relating most commonly to injuries sustained in training, operations or fitness activities. Others are recognised medical conditions such as PTSD, where service links may again be accepted. A third group relates to multi-system, multi-organ, non-specific, medically unexplained symptoms and illnesses which epidemiological evidence shows are not specific to, but are more common among those who served in 1990–91.

The pattern of ill health is not unique to UK Gulf veterans, and is repeated among 1990–91 Gulf veterans from the other coalition countries. Evidence so far suggests that this is unaffected by the specific experiences and exposures of the personnel concerned. Similar symptoms and illness are also reported among personnel who did not deploy. There is no consensus either in the US or the UK as to the causes of the non-specific conditions commonly covered by the umbrella term "Gulf War Syndrome".

HELEN Laser

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer of 6 February 2006, Official Report, column 825W, on the HELEN laser, whether AWE has supplied (a) the Environment Agency and (b) the local planning authority with the required method statement detailing remediation requirements to minimise the impact on ground and surface waters as a result of the construction of the new ORION laser at Aldermaston. [50858]

John Reid: A site investigation undertaken as part of the planning process revealed that there is no requirement for any remediation and therefore no requirement for a method statement. The local planning authority agree with this analysis. The results of the site investigation have been provided to the Environment Agency.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer of 6 February 2006, Official Report, column 825W, on the HELEN laser, what (a) construction work has already taken place and (b) has begun on the new ORION laser at Aldermaston. [50859]

John Reid: Construction work on the allocated site for the ORION laser facility has not commenced. The work currently ongoing is site clearance and enabling work only.

Iraq

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has held with (a) Ministers in his Department and (b) defence staff regarding proposals to withdraw troops from Iraq in the next 12 months. [50363]

John Reid: I meet regularly with Ministers and defence officials to discuss our commitments in Iraq and other operational theatres. As I have made clear to the House, any withdrawal of UK troops from Iraq will be conditions based and will not be driven by arbitrary timetables.

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on which dates (a) he and (b) Ministers in his Department have visited British soldiers injured in Iraq; and what locations were visited. [50366]

John Reid: I have visited British Service personnel who were wounded in Iraq on four occasions since May 2005. My predecessor visited on three occasions since the start of Operation Telic. Other Defence Ministers have made 13 visits between them. The detail of the visits is as follows:

Secretary of State for Defence

Date	Location of visit
April 2003	Royal Centre for Defence Medicine (RCDM), Birmingham
December 2003	Shaibah Field Hospital, Iraq
June 2004	Shaibah

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he has discussed with his counterparts in Arab nations the partial replacement of coalition troops in Iraq with their forces following the beginning of a reduction in British troop presence. [51579]

John Reid: Our aim is to put the Iraqis in charge of their own security, when the appropriate conditions have been met. We continue to encourage Arab nations to support the emerging democracy in Iraq, but not specifically for troop contributions.

Senior Officers

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) commodores and (b) admirals were on the active list in the Royal Navy in each year since 1997; and what the total strength of the Royal Navy was in each year. [50180]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 13 February 2006]: The numbers of Commodores/Brigadiers and Admirals/Generals on the Active List in the Royal Navy/Royal Marines each year since 1997 was:

	Royal Navy		Royal Marines
As at April each year	Admirals	Commodores	Generals	Brigadiers
1997	40	[1]	1	[1]
1998	40	[1]	1	[1]
1999	40	[1]	2	[1]
2000	40	[1]	3	10
2001	40	[1]	4	4
2002	40	7	4	7
2003	40	10	4	8
2004	40	40	4	7
2005	50	50	4	7

[1] Brigadier/Commodores were not included as substantive ranks in the RN/RM Active list at these times.

The total strength of the Royal Naval Services (RN/RM) each year since 1997, showing the Admirals/Commodores and equivalents included on the strength, was:

	Adm/Gen	Cdre/Brig	Trained Strength	Untrained Strength	Total Strength
April 1997	40	80	41,680	3,470	45,150
April 1998	40	90	40,360	4,110	44,470
April 1999	40	100	39,070	4,630	43,700
April 2000	40	90	38,540	4,310	42,850
April 2001	40	90	38,020	4,400	42,420
April 2002	40	90	36,770	4,860	41,630
April 2003	40	90	36,590	4,960	41,550
April 2004	40	90	36,380	4,500	40,880
April 2005	50	80	35,420	4,520	39,940
December 2005	50	80	34,860	4,560	39,430

Notes

1. The Admiral/Commodore strengths above include Medical Officers and the Chaplain of the Fleet, who are not included on the Active List.
2. The Active List figures includes some 4-star Admirals (between 7–11 over the period) who have retired and are not included in the regular strengths.
3. Commodore/Brigadiers strengths include those who were classed as Commodores even before this was considered a separate substantive rank.
4. Regular Strengths exclude Full Time Reserve Service and Mobilised Reservist.
5. "Admirals" includes Rear Admirals and Vice Admirals, "Generals" includes Major Generals and Lieutenant Generals.
6. All figures have been rounded to the nearest 10 except for figures under 10. Figures ending in 5 have been rounded to the nearest multiple of 20.

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what trends he has identified in the numbers of senior officers appointed to each of the services since 1997, as a proportion of the overall size of each service. [50183]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 13 February 2006]: The number of personnel promoted to ranks equivalent to NATO rank OF-7 and above (which equates to rear admirals, major generals and air vice marshals), the average strength of each service and the promotions as a proportion of average strength, in each financial year 1996–97 to 2004–05, are shown in the following table:

Number of promotions to	1996–97	1997–98	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01	2001–02	2002–03	2003–04	2004–05

[1] For the purpose of this question, senior officers are considered to be those equivalent to NATO rank OF-7 and above. This is consistent with the coverage of the Senior Salaries Review Body.

[2] Average strength is calculated as a 13 month centred average of the strength in the individual months.

Notes

1. Figures are for UK regular forces (including both trained and untrained personnel) and therefore exclude Gurkhas, Full Time Reserve Service personnel, the Home Service battalions of the Royal Irish Regiment, Mobilised Reservists and Naval Activated Reservists.
2. Figures less than 100 have been left unrounded so as not to obscure the data.
3. Percentages are calculated from unrounded figures.
4. When rounding to the nearest 10, numbers ending in 5 have been rounded to the nearest multiple of 20 to prevent systematic bias.
5. The table shows the number of promotions in a given financial year.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Departmental Staff

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what plans her Department has to change the London allowance of its staff; and if she will make a statement. [50013]

Mr. Lammy: The Department for Culture, Media and Sport does not pay a London allowance and has no plans to introduce one. All of the Department's staff are based in central London.

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many of her Department's staff are paid on a performance-related basis. [50081]

Mr. Lammy: All permanent staff employed by the Department for Culture, Media and Sport are paid on a performance-related basis.

Engagements

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will visit Shrewsbury to open the new caravan centre there. [51270]

James Purnell: Neither my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State nor I have any plans to visit Shrewsbury to open the new caravan centre. I will be pleased to consider an invitation to do so in the future, should circumstances permit.

Football Foundation

Mr. Andy Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what schemes have been financed by the Football Foundation in (a) Leicestershire and (b) Loughborough constituency area since it was established. [51127]

Mr. Caborn: The Loughborough constituency has received 13 junior kit vouchers worth £5,200 as well as a Barclays Spaces for Sport Coaching pack worth £750. Further applications to the foundation's capital projects, small grants scheme, junior kit and stand up speak up scheme are currently under consideration with a total project cost of £333,930.

Leicestershire itself has received £3,119,834 of foundation funds towards 96 projects with a total value of £9,026,748. A further £1,311,944 worth of projects are now under consideration.

Licensing

Mr. Moss: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many appeals under the Licensing Act 2003 (a) have been lodged with local authorities since 24 November 2005, (b) have been determined and (c) are outstanding; and what the estimated cost is to the courts system of determining such appeals. [50469]

James Purnell: The Government are monitoring the pattern of appeals, in particular with the 10 Scrutiny Councils, but we do not currently hold information on the number and cost of appeals across all licensing authorities.

Mr. Moss: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what discussions she has had with (a) the Department of Health on the possible effects of the implementation of the Licensing Act 2003 on requirements for (i) staffing and (ii) funding for accident and emergency departments and (b) the Home Office regarding the implications of that Act for the cost of policing late night drinking in town and city centres. [50470]

James Purnell: The Licensing Act 2003 was subject to consultation and agreement across Government, including the Department of Health and the Home Office. Licensing reform is part of the Government's Alcohol Harm Reduction Strategy which considered the cost of alcohol harm to public services, including health and the police.

On the specific impact of the implementation of Licensing Act 2003, the Government believes that the removal of artificially fixed closing times will encourage a more orderly and gradual dispersal of customers which, together with the tough new powers for the police, should help reduce the level of violent crime which the police and accident and emergency departments are required to deal with.

Local Authority Leisure Facilities

Andrew Gwynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what assessment she has made of the effect of the transfer of leisure facilities from local authority control to sports trusts on their ability to access capital for the improvement of their facilities. [51547]

Mr. Caborn: Specific information on the transfer of ownership of leisure centres from local authorities to newly-formed charitable trusts is not centrally collated. However, information from the Leisure Data Base Company suggests that approximately one-fifth of public leisure facilities in England are provided through trusts.

My Department recognises the importance of this issue in ensuring the continued sustainability of publicly provided sports facilities. The Audit Commission is currently undertaking a study into the different types of management arrangements available to local authorities for running these services and how they approach the task of choosing the option best suited to local needs. This is expected to include a consideration of the potential implications of each of these options, including for charitable trusts.

I will ensure a copy of the study is placed in the House Libraries once it is published.

National Sports Foundation

Mr. Andy Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport where the National Sports Foundation will be based. [51128]

Mr. Caborn: The National Sports Foundation (NSF) will be based at Sport England's offices and will use their existing administrative systems for the processing of applications. The NSF will however have a distinct identity and its own website.

Sport (Drug Testing)

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many drug tests have been carried out by UK Sport on members of the British 2006 Winter Olympics team in the 12 months prior to the Turin games. [51786]

Mr. Caborn: There were 52 tests carried out on the 40 members of the British Winter Olympic squad in the 12 months leading up to the 2006 Turin Winter Olympic Games.

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many drug tests were undertaken by UK Sport in 2004–05; how many prime facie adverse findings there were for (a) male and (b) female sports people in 2004–05; and how many findings were of performance-enhancing drugs. [51812]

Mr. Caborn: The UK's national anti-doping organisation, UK Sport, undertook a total of 6,520 anti-doping tests in 2004–05. Of these, 60 male athletes and one female athlete were found to have committed anti-doping infringements. In the same period there were a total of 57 findings for performance-enhancing drugs and four infringements for missed tests.

Television Licences

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many people over 75 are in receipt of free television licences in each Northern Ireland constituency; and what percentage of viewing households in each constituency the figure represents. [51324]

James Purnell: TV Licensing, who administer free television licences for people aged 75 or over as agents for the BBC, are not able to provide geographical breakdowns of the number of free licences issued. However, the estimated number of benefit units claiming the retirement pension in each parliamentary constituency in Northern Ireland, where at least one person is aged 75 years or over, and the percentage this represents of all households in the constituency, is:

Constituency	Retirement pension benefit units with at least one person aged 75 or over[1]	Percentage of total households in constituency[2]
Belfast East	5,802	16.7
Belfast North	5,227	14.4
Belfast South	5,004	12.6
Belfast West	3,610	11.6
East Antrim	4,016	12.2
East Londonderry	3,956	12.3
Fermanagh and South Tyrone	4,046	12.6
Foyle	3,476	9.7
Lagan Valley	4,796	12.5
Mid Ulster	3,541	12.5
Newry and Armagh	4,370	12.7
North Antrim	5,265	14.0
North Down	5,503	15.8
South Antrim	4,038	11.0
South Down	4,772	13.4
Strangford	4,713	12.4
Upper Bann	4,468	11.6
West Tyrone	3,523	12.1
Missing postcode*	1,199	–

* In producing this analysis, individual records were attributed to parliamentary constituencies (PC's) on the basis of their postcode. Not all records can be correctly allocated to a PC using this method, and some cannot be allocated at all. Past investigation has demonstrated that mis-allocations and non-allocations do not necessarily occur randomly between areas, and at ward level the proportion of records mis-allocated or unallocated can be substantial. At present, it seems likely that a higher than average proportion of the records that cannot be attributed to a ward are in the following areas: Fermanagh district council, Deny district council and parts of Belfast city council.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many pensioners over 75 years of age in Tamworth constituency are in receipt of a free television licence. [51411]

James Purnell: TV Licensing, who administer free television licences for people aged 75 or over as agents for the BBC, are not able to provide geographical breakdowns of the number of free licences issued. However, the number of households with at least one person aged 75 or over claiming the winter fuel payment in the Tamworth constituency in 2004–05 was 4,005, according to Department for Work and Pensions records.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Afghanistan

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions have taken place with each of Afghanistan's neighbouring countries on (a) blocking of supply routes for and (b) confiscation of opium; and what the results were of those discussions. [48932]

Dr. Howells: Regular discussions on counter narcotics (CN) issues take place between the UK and Afghanistan's neighbouring countries. The aim of these meetings is to work towards improving the capacity of the latter to interdict drugs entering their countries from Afghanistan. These discussions take place in bilateral, multilateral and regional frameworks. There are also a series of inter-regional meetings between Afghanistan and her neighbours to foster CN information and intelligence exchange.

Results of these discussions are encouraging. The United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC) report that seizure rates of opiates in the countries surrounding Afghanistan has increased reflecting improved enforcement activities in the region. Much of this can be attributed to the regular dialogue to improve information/intelligence sharing and donor assistance to strengthen Afghanistan's neighbours borders. The UNODC World Drug Report 2005 reports the countries with the largest total opiates seizures for 2003 (latest available published figures) were Pakistan (34.7 mt) and Iran (26.1 mt)-equivalent to 31 per cent. and 24 per cent. of global opiate seizures respectively.

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what his estimate is of the (a) farm gate value and (b) export value of opium production in (i) Nimrooz, (ii) Farah, (iii) Ghor, (iv) Oruzgan, (v) Kandahar and (vi) Helmand provinces in each of the last five years; [50347]

(2) what his estimate is of (a) the area of poppy fields and (b) the level of opium production in (i) Nimrooz, (ii) Farah, (iii) Ghor, (iv) Oruzgan, (v) Kandahar and (vi) Helmand provinces in each of the last five years. [50348]

Dr. Howells: We have made no such assessment. However, the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC) publishes information relating to the global illicit cultivation of opium poppy and the production of opium and heroin in its annual Afghanistan Opium Survey. Full details can be found on their website at:

http://www.unodc.org/unodc/en/crop_monitoring.html#afg.

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what measures he is taking to prevent (a) corruption and (b) infiltration by militants among (i) police and (ii) provincial politicians in Helmand. [50352]

Dr. Howells: Tackling corruption across Afghanistan was recognised as a major challenge by delegations attending the London Conference on Afghanistan from 31 January–1 February. It features prominently in the Afghanistan Compact, the framework document setting out the agreed priorities for Afghanistan's long-term reconstruction. The Afghan Government is committed to ratifying the UN Convention against Corruption by end 2006, and to put in place the necessary supporting legislation by end 2007. This will benefit all of Afghanistan.

In this context, the focus of our effort in Helmand will be to build institutional capacity in governance and to reduce the corrosive influence of the drugs trade. We will provide support to the Governor of Helmand training and mentoring for the police and judicial authorities and advice and mentoring for the counter-narcotics police. The task of securing against infiltration by militants will be achieved both by the training and support provided to the Afghan National Army and Afghan National Police, and by the presence of the NATO-led International Security Assistance Force. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence's statement of 26 January 2006, Official Report, column 1529, announced the UK's contribution.

Ascension Island

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the UK's estimated contingent liabilities attributable to Ascension Island are; what the liabilities were estimated to be in 1999; and if he will make a statement. [50935]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: We do not seek to place a precise monetary value on the contingent liabilities that the UK faces due to its relationship with the Overseas Territories. We recognise, however, that liabilities exist in a wide variety of areas including maritime safety and security, aviation safety and security, natural disasters, judicial matters, international financial services and domestic financial issues.

We do not consider that the UK's contingent liabilities due to its relationship with Ascension Island have changed materially since 1999 as the relationship has not changed.

Cuba

Colin Burgon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list meetings in (a) the UK, (b) USA and (c) elsewhere that have taken place between (i) Ministers and (ii) officials of his Department with (A) Caleb McCarry and (B) officials of the Cuba Transition programme within the last 12 months; and if he will make a statement. [50778]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: Caleb McCarry was appointed as the Cuba Transition Co-ordinator in July 2005 following the recommendations of the Commission for Assistance to a Free Cuba. The Commission for Assistance to a Free Cuba consists of senior US politicians, not officials. Ministers have met with many of these politicians over the past 12 months, but not in their capacity as members of the Commission for Assistance to a Free Cuba. In the last 12 months, Ministers have not met with Caleb McCarry and officials have met with him only once in London on 7 November 2005.

Cyprus

Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his recent visit to Cyprus. [50679]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: I refer the hon. Member to my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary's answer to the House on 7 February 2006, Official Report, columns 733–36.

Departmental Staff

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans his Department has to change the London allowance of its staff; and if he will make a statement. [50012]

Mr. Straw: None.

EU Sugar Regime

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received on the effects of reform of the EU sugar regime on African, Caribbean and Pacific sugar producers. [49630]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The Governments of sugar producing countries have made their concerns about the effect of the EU sugar reform clear. Specific representations were made to my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary during his visit to Jamaica in October 2005 and to my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister at the Commonwealth Heads of Government Meeting in November 2005.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with other Government Departments on help to African, Caribbean and Pacific countries to mitigate the effect on jobs of reform of the EU sugar regime. [49664]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: Officials from the relevant Government Departments, including the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO), the Department for the Environment, Farming and Rural Affairs, the Department for International Development (DFID) and Her Majesty's Treasury, have met frequently under Cabinet Office coordination in recent months to discuss ways of helping African, Caribbean and Pacific sugar producers adjust to the reform of the EU sugar regime, and to secure the support of the European Commission and other member states for an adequate level of assistance. The subject has also been discussed in meetings between the Parliamentary Under-Secretaries at the FCO and DFID.

Falkland Islands

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the total oil production in the Falkland Islands was in (a) 2001, (b) 2002 and (c) 2005. [50762]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: No oil was produced in the Falkland Islands in 2001, 2002 and 2005.

Foreign Travel (Health and Safety)

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many UK citizens have (a) died and (b) been seriously injured as a result of crowd action or stampedes surrounding the annual Hajj to Saudi Arabia in each of the last 20 years. [51542]

Dr. Howells: We are unable to provide definitive figures for the number of British Nationals killed as a result of crowd action or stampedes at the Hajj in the last 20 years as our consular records do not list deaths by this category. Generally, we also only have records of those cases in which consular assistance has been sought and only keep these for three years after our last action on the case. We are aware, however, of three British Nationals who died as a result of the stampede at Mina on 11 January 2006. Consular staff in Jeddah and in London provided the families of the three with assistance, and were also aware of a further two British Nationals who suffered minor injuries.

Gibraltar

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the precise location is of the wreck of HMS Sussex off the coast of Gibraltar; and whether this site is in international waters. [50540]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The wreck, which we believe could be The Sussex, lies in the Straits of Gibraltar. We cannot give exact details of its location due to concerns about the security of the wreck, but it lies outside British Gibraltar territorial waters in international waters.

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs why the British Government have not claimed the 12 nautical miles on the eastern shoreline of Gibraltar to which it is entitled under the UN law of the sea convention. [50541]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: Under international law, States are entitled, but not required, to extend their territorial sea up to a maximum breadth of 12 nautical miles. Where the coasts of two States are opposite or adjacent, the general rule is that neither is entitled, unless they agree otherwise, to extend its territorial sea beyond the median line. The UK Government considers that a limit of three nautical miles is sufficient in the case of Gibraltar.

Gulf of Aden (Trafficking)

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of (a) illegal trafficking of (i) arms, (ii) people and (iii) cigarettes across the Gulf of Aden and (b) the implications of trafficking on the funding of terrorism; and if he will make a statement. [51423]

Dr. Howells: The Gulf of Aden is used for illegal trafficking, but because of its clandestine nature it is impossible to make an accurate assessment of the scale of trafficking. The UK provides substantial support and training to the Yemeni coastguard to boost interdiction efforts.

We do not have any evidence of a systematic link between illegal trafficking of arms, people and cigarettes across the Gulf of Aden and the funding of terrorism.

India

Mr. Andy Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what support the Government provides to religious freedom organisations in (a) Madhya Pradesh and (b) elsewhere in India. [51131]

Dr. Howells: None. However, through our High Commission in Delhi we provide support to some human rights groups whose activities include support for freedom of religion.

Mr. Andy Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans his Department has to meet representatives of the Indian government to discuss religious militant groups threatening Christian minorities. [51132]

Dr. Howells: None. However, the Deputy High Commissioner plans to meet the Minorities Commission in New Delhi, when he will raise concerns about freedom of worship for all minorities. Through our High Commission we regularly raise such concerns with non-governmental organisations and the relevant Indian authorities.

Mr. Andy Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the (a) Indian government and (b) Madhya Pradesh State government on the attacks against minority Christians on 25 to 28 January in Madhya Pradesh. [51133]

Dr. Howells: None. However, through our High Commission in New Delhi we have regular contact with the Indian authorities in New Delhi and with non-governmental organisations and raise our general concerns about problems experienced by religious minorities in India.

International Arrest Warrants

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations the Government have received from officials from other countries on changes in the law on seeking international warrants for the arrest of people suspected of serious human rights abuses; and if he will list the countries which have made such representations. [50425]

Ian Pearson: The Government are currently considering a range of issues relating to the issuing of arrest warrants in international cases, but has not yet concluded what changes, if any, are required to current legislation. Any proposals for amending the current legislation would be a matter for Parliament. The Government have received representations from the Government of Israel. All views expressed, by both Governments and non-governmental organisations, will be considered during the Government's analysis of this issue.

Iran

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what estimate he has made of the number of sites in Iran that the Iranian Government are using in the research, development and production of nuclear technologies. [51385]

Dr. Howells: In its report of November 2004, the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) identified 22 facilities at nine locations as being "relevant to the implementation of Agency Safeguards". Under its voluntary implementation of the provisions of the additional protocol, Iran also declared a further four facilities at three additional locations.

In connection with its voluntary suspension of enrichment-related activities, Iran also notified the IAEA of a number of engineering facilities involved in domestic manufacture of uranium enrichment centrifuge components. The IAEA has in addition sought access to sites at Lavisan-Shian and Parchin to establish whether any nuclear-related activities have taken place there.

Further details can be found on the IAEA's website: www.iaea.org.

Iraq

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what evidence he has received of Iranian infiltration into southern Iraq. [51448]

Dr. Howells: As my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister has said, the nature of some explosive devices used in Iraq, including against British troops, leads us to suspect either Iranian elements or Lebanese Hezbollah. We are unable to provide further details as to do so could prejudice the capability, effectiveness, and security of the armed forces.

Kosovo

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will place in the Library copies of the recent statements made by senior British officials in Serbia on Kosovo's independence. [51578]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: A copy of the Contact Group Ministerial statement of 31 January has already been placed in the Library of the House. John Sawers, Political Director in the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, made a number of comments to the press during his recent visit to the region. I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him today (UIN 51514). We do not hold formal transcripts of these.

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what conclusions the Contact Group has reached on the question of Kosovan independence. [51580]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: On 31 January, in the margins of the Afghanistan Conference, the Contact Group met in London to discuss Kosovo. Following this meeting, Contact Group Ministers issued a statement, which has been placed in the Library of the House.

The Contact Group in its 'Guiding Principles' ruled out options that would not contribute to long-term security and stability in Kosovo and the wider region. These included no partition of Kosovo and no union of Kosovo with any country or part of any country. These 'Guiding Principles' have also been placed in the Library of the House.

Middle East

Mr. Keith Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the impact of the closure of the Karni crossing in the Gaza Strip on the Palestinian economy; and if he will make a statement. [50473]

Dr. Howells: The Karni crossing point between Israel and Gaza reopened on 5 February. The United Nations Office for Humanitarian Affairs estimates Palestinian losses at US$500,000 a day during the closure. It is essential for the Palestinian economy that crossing points in and out of Gaza remain open. We condemn recent attacks by Palestinian militants on the Karni and Erez checkpoints which can only hinder efforts to improve access to Gaza and the economic prospects of the area. We will continue to support the work of Quartet Special Envoy James Wolfensohn in helping to implement this agreement and urge both parties to fulfil their obligations under the Movement and Access Agreement.

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what discussions the Government have had with (a) Israel and (b) the Palestinian Authority on ensuring that it fulfils its obligations under the Road Map; [50684]

(2) what the (a) current status and (b) future direction are of the Israeli-Palestinian Road Map. [50688]

Dr. Howells: Neither side has met its full Phase One commitments. As my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary told the House on 7 February 2006, Official Report, column 735,

> "we, along with our EU partners, will continue to work with the Palestinians, the Israelis and the international community to make progress on the road map, to which both the Palestinian President Mahmoud Abbas and the Israeli Government remain committed".

Official Residences

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the official residences for which his Department is responsible; who occupies each one; what the annual cost is of running each property; what contribution the occupants of each make towards running costs; what the total capital and refurbishment expenditure was on those properties in 2004-05; how much was spent in each property on (a) flowers and plants, (b) wine and entertaining, (c) food, (d) telephone bills and (e) electricity and gas in 2004-05; how many (i) domestic and (ii) maintenance staff are employed at each property, broken down by post; and what the total cost of staff employment was in 2004-05. [50877]

Mr. Straw: In the UK, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) maintains official residential accommodation and conference facilities at 1 Carlton Gardens, London. The running costs in 2004-05 for the residential accommodation, on the second and third floors and currently unoccupied, are as follows:

	2004-05 (£)
Maintenance	1,109
Renovation (Capital and refurbishment)	Nil
Council Tax	1,089
Running costs
Rent	54,772
Utilities	735
Total	57,705

No maintenance or domestic staff are employed. There are no separate records available for expenditure on (a) flowers and plants, (b) wine and entertaining, (c) food, (d) telephone bills at this property but as the premises are currently unoccupied no expenditure on these items will have arisen apart from the phone rental.

The separate conference facilities on the ground and first floor are used frequently for official meetings and entertainment.

The FCO is also responsible for running Head of Missions' Residences overseas. The budgets for this are held at Posts; the information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Overseas Territories

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with British overseas territories to establish how much support they gave to international development in 2005. [50248]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: My right. hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has had no discussions with the Governments of the British overseas territories regarding how much support they gave to international development in 2005.

Palestine

Mr. Burrowes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to his answer of 7 February 2006, Official Report, column 736, on Palestinian elections, whether it is Government policy that a Hamas-led Palestinian Authority which commits itself to the principle for non-violence will not receive financial assistance unless Hamas renounces its commitment to destroy the State of Israel. [51180]

Dr. Howells: As my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister said at the Liaison Committee on 7 February

> 'We have said we will not be able to have contact with an Hamas-led government unless it is clear that they are prepared to forswear that part of their constitution that says they want rid of the State of Israel and that they are prepared to embrace democratic and non violent means of achieving an independent, viable Palestinian state. If they do not make those changes that will stand in the way of us being able to help.'

Serbia and Montenegro

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether his Political Director discussed with representatives of the Serbian government acceptance of Kosovo's independence during his recent visit to Serbia. [51514]

Mr. Douglas Alexander [holding answer 13 February 2006]: John Sawers, Political Director at the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, met Prime Minister Kostunica of Serbia and other Serbian representatives on his trip to Belgrade. He also visited Kosovo. The purpose of these visits was to follow up the 31 January 2006 Contact Group Ministerial meeting.

Mr. Sawers gave a number of messages to his interlocutors in line with the recommendations Martti Ahtisaari, the UN status envoy, gave to Ministers at the 31 January meeting. The messages Mr. Sawers gave in his private meetings in both Belgrade and Pristina were fully consistent with the Contact Group statement and the Guiding Principles, both of which have been placed in the Library of the House.

The 31 January statement makes clear that the outcome of the final status should be acceptable to the people of Kosovo. In response to questions from the media, Mr. Sawers noted that independence for Kosovo was an option, and that some might say it was the only sustainable option. The legacy of the Milosevic era in Kosovo—violence, ethnic cleansing and the conflict in 1999—had led to the present UN mandate, and the future status process would need to reflect this background. It was incumbent on the Kosovo Albanians to create the conditions under which their aspirations could be met. That meant arrangements in Kosovo that guaranteed minority rights, protected Serb historic and cultural monuments and allowed those displaced from Kosovo to return.

Trade Boycotts

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he is taking to try to end boycotts of Western goods in Islamic countries. [50527]

Dr. Howells: Where there is evidence of an official boycott of goods and discrimination against an EU member state, we support action by the European Commission to resolve the issue. For example, at the 7 November 2005 General Affairs and External Relations Council, the European Union called on Iran to lift all discriminatory restrictions against individual member states, which could impact negatively on Iran's stated desire to pursue greater co-operation with the EU.

Uganda

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with (a) the UN, (b) the African Union and (c) the Governments of African countries where the Lord's Resistance Army (LRA) operates on how to take forward the aims of the International Criminal Court in relation to the LRA. [49957]

Ian Pearson: The aim of the International Criminal Court (ICC) in relation to the Lord's Resistance Army (LRA) is to ensure that the five commanders with arrest warrants issued for them are detained and brought to The Hague to face trial. The UK supports the ICC's efforts to bring to justice the perpetrators of war crimes and crimes against humanity.

We have stressed to the Governments of Uganda, Sudan and the Democratic Republic of Congo (DRC) their obligations to detain the LRA commanders facing arrest warrants. We, and the ICC, are in close contact with the African Union and the UN. On 23 January 2006, the UN force in DRC (MONUC) demonstrated in its operation in Garamba National Park, that it is committed to tackling the LRA contingent based in DRC.

UK Overseas Territories

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the value was of the agricultural products imported by UK overseas territories in (a) 2000 and (b) 2005. [50764]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: The Government of the territory is responsible for the compilation of statistics of this kind and several of them have been unable to provide the information requested. The most up-to-date information available on the value of agricultural products imported by the UK overseas territories is as follows:

Anguilla	7,649,470	—	—	12,572,036
Bermuda	60,749,079	—	—	79,008,740

[1] Detailed figures for the import of agricultural products are not available.

Note:
Beverages and spirits are included in the total amount for agricultural imports.

United Nations

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made towards a UN rapid reaction capability for traditional peace-keeping operations. [50163]

Dr. Howells: The UN world summit in September 2005 supported and encouraged the development of rapid deployment arrangements in support of UN peacekeeping. In particular, it welcomed efforts by regional organisations such as the European Union and African Union to develop relevant capabilities.

The UN Department of peacekeeping operations is currently considering three options to provide timely additional support to UN missions at times of crisis: provision of a rapid deployment capability by regional organisations; provision of a short-term capability by one or more individual countries; and providing co-operation arrangements between UN missions in the same region. The report recommends that all these options be considered in parallel.

Progress has already been made on two of these recommendations. In the area of regional rapid reaction, the EU and UN are discussing how the EU battle groups could be used in appropriate circumstances in support of UN missions. The EU is currently considering a request from the UN to provide additional support to the UN mission in the Democratic Republic of Congo during elections later this year. The African Union is also taking steps towards the establishment of an African stand-by force, supported by the UK and other international partners.

Progress is also being made on arrangements between UN missions. The Security Council has recently authorised the deployment of a force from the UN mission in Liberia (UNMIL) to support UN forces in Cote d' Ivoire in view of recent events there. Similarly UNMIL is providing a contingency force to support the UN forces providing security for the Sierra Leone special court, should the need arise.

The UK is playing an active role in both the UN and EU in developing appropriate rapid reaction capabilities in support of UN peacekeeping operations.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made in developing the UN standby arrangements system. [50164]

Mr. Straw: The United Nations stand-by arrangements system (UNSAS) has been introduced by the UN to increase the availability of forces for peacekeeping operations, and to reduce the time taken for their deployment. The system is based on conditional commitments made by UN member states to make available specified military and other resources within agreed response times. The system has taken some time to bed down, but is now proving increasingly useful for the generation of force units and the provision of individuals, including military observers and staff officers, to peacekeeping operations.

The UN Secretary-General recently reported that force generation for complex peacekeeping missions in Liberia, Cote d'Ivoire, Burundi and Haiti have shown that resources pledged are now more adequate to mission needs and that the declarations made by member states under the UNSAS arrangements are more realistic and up to date. However, getting member states to commit forces to rapid deployment as part of the UNSAS process has shown limited success. The UN's Department of peacekeeping operations is examining ways of making it more attractive for member states to commit to rapid deployments as part of UNSAS.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made in developing the Multinational Stand-by Forces High Readiness Brigade for UN operations. [50165]

Mr. Straw: The establishment of the multinational Stand-by Forces High Readiness Brigade in 1996 (SHIRBRIG) followed a recommendation from the UN Secretary General that UN member states should consider establishing a rapid deployment force to support UN peacekeeping operations. SHIRBRIG was established by Austria, Canada, Denmark, The Netherlands, Norway, Poland and Sweden. Fifteen countries now participate in the brigade, with a number of others taking part as observers.

SHIRBRIG is available to take part in Security Council-mandated operations for a period of up to six months. It is able to provide an initial headquarters and planning capability as part of the start-up of an operation, or to deploy as a whole brigade as part of a UN peacekeeping operation.

SHIRBRIG is made up of three elements: a Steering Committee which makes policy and oversees force generation and deployment; a Planning Element which serves as the nucleus for the force headquarters and plans for individual deployments; and a Brigade Pool of Forces consisting of the troops made available to SHIRBRIG by the participating countries. The Brigade aims to be able to deploy 4,000–5,000 troops.

Since its inception, SHIRBRIG has made the following deployments:

In 2000, SHIRBRIG deployed a headquarters, an infantry battalion and a headquarters company to the UN Mission in Ethiopia and Eritrea.

In March 2003, SHIRBRIG provided a planning team to assist the Economic Community of West African States in the planning of a peacekeeping mission in Côte d'Ivoire.

In September 2003, SHIRBRIG deployed 20 members to assist the UN to form the core of the Interim UN headquarters in Liberia.

In 2005, SHIRBRIG's Planning Element provided the core for the Headquarters of the new UN Mission in Sudan.

Uranium Enrichment

Peter Law: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what the Government's policy is on which countries may legitimately operate uranium enrichment facilities. [50211]

Dr. Howells: The nuclear non-proliferation treaty (NPT) affirms the right of all parties, including non-nuclear weapon states (NNWS), to the peaceful use of nuclear energy. Pursuit of peaceful nuclear technology by these states, including the more sensitive aspects of the fuel cycle such as enrichment of uranium, may be undertaken provided the state does so in conformity with articles I, II and III of the treaty. Article III of the treaty requires all NNWS states party to have International Atomic Energy Agency safeguards on such facilities in order to verify the fulfilment of the state's obligations under the NPT. The safeguards required under article III are to be applied to all nuclear material under the state's control.

The three states not party to the NPT (India, Pakistan and Israel) are not bound by the provisions of the treaty.

Yemen

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the security situation in Yemen. [51425]

Dr. Howells: We are concerned about the security situation in Yemen, in particular because of the recent escape of 23 al-Qaeda prisoners and also the spate of kidnappings of Western tourists in December 2005 and January. We judge that there is a continuing high threat from terrorism.

I visited Yemen in January and emphasised to Government Ministers that determined action against terrorist threats was vital. The UK is providing practical Counter Terrorism support to Yemen.

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the activities of (a) al-Qaeda and (b) Islamic fundamentalists in Yemen. [51426]

Dr. Howells: We are aware that members of al-Qaeda and other similar groups continue to exist in Yemen and we monitor reports on their activities there. We maintain a wide-ranging dialogue with the Government of Yemen which includes security issues, in particular counter-terrorism (CT). We have an extensive programme of CT capacity-building with the Yemeni authorities; this includes training of the coastguard, as well as training in investigative techniques, forensic science and crime scene management. During my recent visit to Yemen, I expressed the hope that our CT relationship would continue to develop, with an enhanced two-way flow of co-operation.

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of whether the Jawf and Mareb tribes in Yemen have contact with (a) al-Qaeda and (b) other Islamic fundamentalist groups; and if he will make a statement. [51437]

Dr. Howells: Al-Jawf and Marib are regions of Yemen where members of al-Qaeda and related groups are known to have been present. It is possible that tribes living in these areas have offered funding and/or logistical assistance to members of such groups; this support may have been with or without tribal knowledge of the al-Qaeda background of the individuals concerned.

CABINET OFFICE

Government Information Technology

24. David Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on progress with development of the Government's IT strategy. [51264]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The Transformational Government strategy was published in November 2005 and was followed by a three-month (public) consultation period. Responses are being incorporated into an implementation plan that will be published by the end of this financial year.

Civil Service

25. Sarah McCarthy-Fry: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what steps he is taking to increase the number of women in the senior civil service. [51265]

Mr. Jim Murphy: There have been significant increases in the proportion of women in senior posts since 1998: the civil service has met its target to double the proportion of women in top management posts, from 12.7 per cent. in 1998 to 25.5 per cent. in 2005.

But there is still more work to do: we have set challenging new targets for 2008, underpinned by a Diversity 10 Point Plan.

26. Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he expects to be in a position to bring forward a Civil Service Bill. [51266]

Mr. Jim Murphy: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I provided to the hon. Member for North East Hertfordshire (Mr. Heald) on 9 January 2006, Official Report, column 199W.

28. Harry Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what recent discussions he has had with other Departments on the pay of civil servants. [51268]

Mr. Jim Murphy: There has been no need for me to have discussions with Departments. They have delegated authority to determine their own pay arrangements, outside of the senior civil service, that are tailored to meet their business needs. However, my officials have regular discussions with Departments regarding pay issues.

Public Appointments

27. Keith Vaz: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what further steps he has taken to increase diversity in public appointments. [51267]

Mr. Jim Murphy: This Government are committed to achieving greater diversity in public appointments. All Department's including my own, will in due course publish an Annual Appointments Plan. These will provide more detail and clarity than before, on the overall policy, approach, and diversity objectives set by individual Department's to public appointments.

Departmental Energy Costs

Mrs. Villiers: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how much was spent by his Department on (a) gas and (b) electricity in 2004–05. [51781]

Mr. Jim Murphy: Spending on gas and electricity by the Cabinet Office in 2004–05 is shown in the table.

Electricity	588,248

Departmental Entertainment

Mr. Heald: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how much was spent on entertainment by his Department in 2004–05, broken down by (a) food, (b) alcohol, (c) staff and (d) accommodation. [50883]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The Cabinet Office spent £571,940 on entertainment in 2004–05. Expenditure broken down into the four categories requested is not separately identifiable on the department's accounting system and is therefore only available at disproportionate cost.

Entertainment expenditure includes working breakfasts or lunches, refreshments at meetings and all similar types of entertainment expenditure.

All Cabinet Office expenditure on official entertainment is made in accordance with published departmental guidance on financial procedures and propriety, based on principles set out in "Government Accounting".

Departmental Recruitment

Mrs. Villiers: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many job advertisements were placed by his Department (a) in total, (b) in print newspapers and magazines and (c) on a recruitment website in each year since 1997; and at what cost in each case. [50756]

Mr. Jim Murphy: Cabinet Office expenditure on recruitment advertising for 2004–05 and 2005–06 is shown in the table.

Information prior to 1 April 2004 could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Staff

Kate Hoey: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what plans his Department has to change the London allowance of its staff; and if he will make a statement. [50005]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The Cabinet Office does not pay a specific allowance to employees located in London. There are, however, two pay scales: one covering employees located in London, Sunningdale and Basingstoke and a national pay scale for employees in other locations.

E-government

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many Government IT projects processed as part of the e-government programmes have gone (a) over budget and (b) over time since 1997. [51791]

Mr. Jim Murphy: This information is not held centrally and could only be collected at disproportionate cost.

Energy Review

Sir Robert Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what assumptions regarding energy intensity improvements the strategy unit made in its preparation of background papers for the current energy review. [51396]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The strategy unit has not made any assumptions about future energy intensity improvements.

Public Services

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on progress with the reform of delivery of public services. [51262]

Mr. Jim Murphy: This Government have made considerable progress on the reform of our public services.

We are committed to investment and reform in our public services.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Academies

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list donations received by each city academy from (a) commercial and business organisations and (b) private individuals. [48031]

Jacqui Smith: Information on sponsors' donations received to date towards open academies' capital costs—rather than total sponsorship committed—is given in the following table.

Sponsors' donations are normally made over the lifetime of the building costs of the project, so in some cases a number of payments towards capital costs remain to be made. In other cases, sponsors' payments have been made, but are not recorded in the table as auditors have not yet completed their checks on whether these were spent on capital or recurrent costs.

We do not keep a record of sponsors' non-capital donations to academies.

Adoption

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many children were adopted in each local authority area in 2005. [48066]

Maria Eagle: I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 11 November 2005, Official Report, column 801W. The publication "Children Looked After by Local Authorities Year Ending 31 March 2005" will be published by the Department in March 2006.

Bullying

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what steps her Department is taking (a) to prevent (i) bullying and (ii) the causes of bullying and (b) to help those who are victims of bullying; [49599]

(2) how many children have changed schools as a result of being victims of bullying since 1997; and how many children have been (a) suspended and (b) expelled from school for bullying in that period; [49601]

(3) how much funding her Department made available for schools to tackle the problem of bullying in each academic year between 1997 and 2005; [49602]

(4) if she will make a statement on Government plans to tackle bullying; [49637]

(5) what support her Department provides to (a) ChildLine, (b) the NSPCC and (c) other charitable organisations to help them support victims of bullying; [49639]

(6) what research her Department has (a) commissioned and (b) published on bullying in schools since 1997; [49640]

(7) what training teachers receive to deal with bullying in schools; and how much funding her Department allocated for training teachers to deal with bullying in schools in (a) Leicester and (b) England in the last five years. [50146]

Jacqui Smith: This Government have given an unprecedented high profile to preventing bullying and supporting those who have been bullied. Our anti-bullying work, including the anti-bullying Charter for Action, takes an integrated approach to preventing bullying, to addressing causes of bullying—for example prejudice—and to helping those who are bullied.

Since 1999 it has been compulsory for every school to have an anti-bullying policy in place which details how the school will tackle bullying.

We have secured a very broad consensus, with all the teaching professional associations and the Anti Bullying Alliance signing up to our Anti-Bullying Charter for Action. The Charter is a voluntary commitment to creating a school community where bullying is not tolerated. In line with commitments outlined in the White Paper we re-issued the Charter during Anti-Bullying Week 2005 and therefore expect an increase in the number being returned to us via the ABA over the coming months. In 2006 we plan to share examples of where the Charter has been particularly well implemented with other schools, which can learn from this best practice.

Through our work with the Anti-Bullying Alliance (ABA), an organisation comprising over 65 leading anti-bullying charities and experts, we provide schools and local authorities with expert help to tackle bullying.

We have put more adults than ever in our schools—teachers, classroom assistants, learning mentors, Connexions personal advisers, Behaviour and Education Support Teams and police officers—so that a wide range of people are available to help prevent and tackle bullying.

Further to the White Paper, in 2006 we shall issue guidance on prejudice driven bullying, including racist and homophobic bullying, providing school staff with valuable support in an area they often find challenging. We plan to launch our advice on countering racist bullying online at the end of February.

Anti-bullying week continues to be a successful event with a large number of schools taking part in November 2005's activities through a wide variety of national and local events. There was a considerable amount of positive press coverage and this year over 325,000 wristbands were distributed.

Our anti-bullying resource pack for schools "Bullying: Don't Suffer in Silence", updated in 2000 and September 2002 will be revised and re-issued in 2006 to ensure schools have the most up-to-date information available on tackling bullying.

In addition the Department has recently launched the Social and Emotional Aspects of Learning (SEAL) curriculum resource—an intervention to develop children's social, emotional and behavioural skills from Foundation Stage to Year 6. It is available to all primary schools and the evidence from the pilot suggests that it helps reduce bullying and promotes positive behaviour generally. It is an important arm of the Department's longer term policy to promote positive behaviour and attendance. The Department is hoping to build on the work carried out in primary schools by providing a similar whole school curriculum based resource for secondary schools (SEBS). At present the programme is in a very early pilot stage.

Data on bullying is not collected centrally and thus there is no reliable basis for an estimate of how many children have changed schools as a result of being bullied.

The first time the reason for exclusion was collected was in the academic year 2003/04. In that year 150 pupils were permanently excluded and 6,750 were given fixed period exclusions for bullying. This information comes from the Statistical First Release on "Permanent and Fixed Period Exclusion from Schools and Exclusion Appeals in England, 2003/04".

Funds for schools to devote to anti-bullying work form part of their overall budgets; they are not ring fenced so we have no information on how much they have devoted to this.

The figures for the anti-bullying strand of the Improving Behaviour and Attendance strategy, which is used centrally to support schools and local authorities in their anti bullying work, are given as follows:

	Amount (£)
2002/03	184,000
2003/04	1,054,000
2004/05	1,613,000
2005/06	1,145,000

Figures for earlier years are not available because the anti-bullying strand of behaviour work was not disaggregated.

In 2005/06 the Department has contributed a further £200,000 of funding to CHIPS (ChildLine in Partnership with Schools). The CHIPS scheme encourages young people to set up programmes, with the help of ChildLine and their teachers, to support their peers and to create safe environments in which to learn.

We note that ChildLine and the NSPCC have recently joined forces and we hope to continue working with both in their joint efforts to protect and support those who have been bullied.

We have provided the ABA, with £600,000 of funding for the 2005/06 period.

The Department has committed £200,000 for 2005/06 to Parent Line Plus, a telephone advice line for parents offering guidance on a range of subjects. Between April 2003 and March 2004 21 per cent. of all calls received related to bullying. In conjunction with the DFES and the ABA, the line can also refer parents who have not received satisfactory help at a local level to a one to one advice line.

The Diana Memorial Award for anti-bullying was launched in 2004 and highlights the achievements of young people trying to tackle bullying in their school or community. The Department has shown its continuing support for this initiative by contributing £50,000 of funding for 2005/06.

Our guidance to schools on tackling bullying, "Don't Suffer in Silence", has been externally evaluated by researchers at Goldsmith's College, University of London. The results, though based on a fairly low response rate from schools, show that the schools found that the pack met their expectations and helped in drawing up their anti-bullying policies.

This evaluation included research into the perceived success of the anti bullying strategies and interventions recommended in the guidance. Schools generally reported a high level of satisfaction with the interventions they had used.

The Department commissioned the Thomas Coram Research Unit at the Institute of Education, University of London, to review the research evidence relating to homophobia in schools and to talk to groups with an interest in this area. The Department published their work in its Research Report series in late 2004, number 594, entitled "Homophobia, Sexual Orientation and Schools: A Review and Implications for Action".

Training has been provided in each Government Office region through the Make The Difference conferences and through ABA training events and direct ABA work with individual schools. Training is also being provided through dissemination events linked to forthcoming advice on countering prejudice driven bullying.

Through the National Strategies the Department makes high-quality staff training materials on managing behaviour, including bullying, available to all schools. In addition each local authority is also supported by at least one expert Behaviour and Attendance consultant in each local authority.

Through the National Programme for Specialist Leaders of Behaviour and Attendance (NPSL-BA), the Department has developed a programme for training specialist staff who have leadership roles in relation to behaviour and attendance, including anti-bullying.

In addition our resources such as the Charter and "Don't Suffer in Silence" offer further support and advice to teachers in this area.

As anti-bullying training funding is not disaggregated or devolved directly, it is not possible to identify national funds or funds for Leicester.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what statistics her Department (a) collects and (b) publishes on bullying in schools in England. [49638]

Jacqui Smith: The Department does not collect national data on instances of bullying in England and schools. However, there are surveys run by, or supported by, the Department which do give an indication of the extent of bullying in schools in England.

The Department contributes funds to the Department for Work and Pensions' 'Families and Children Study'. This is an annual survey of a representative sample of families with dependent children in Britain. The study includes questions to parents and children on bullying (either in or out of schools). Reports from this study are published by DWP and are available from http://www.dwp.gov.uk/asd/asd5/facs/facs_publication.asp

The Department also runs the Longitudinal Study of Young People in Education (LSYPE) which is following a sample of young people in schools in England from Year 9 onwards. This survey covers pupils in both maintained and independent sectors and includes questions to parents and children on bullying. Although data from the first wave of this study are not yet available there are plans to make the data publicly available from the UK Data Archive.

Community Schools

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate she has made of the total value of public assets which would be transferred from local authorities to independent trusts if (a) all community secondary schools and (b) all community primary and secondary schools chose to become trust schools. [47237]

Jacqui Smith: No estimate has been made of the value of those public assets that would transfer to and vest in the trustees of a new trust school. Measures similar to those already in place to protect publicly funded assets that have transferred to existing foundation schools will be introduced. These will require the trustees to obtain the appropriate consent before disposing of any assets transferred to them from the local authority.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps her Department are taking to promote community schools. [50507]

Jacqui Smith: The Government expects all schools to sit at the heart of their communities and to work with other schools and services to meet the needs of those communities, regardless of their category.

The Government wishes to promote a diverse range of schools, reflecting the diversity of the communities that they serve. We have accordingly introduced legislation to require a competition to be held wherever a new secondary school is required so that a variety of providers can bring forward proposals and local people have the opportunity to make their views known about a number of options. The White Paper envisages extending this requirement to apply to new primary schools. The Secretary of State has recently made clear that where a local authority believe a community school is the right option for a particular area they will be able to seek the Secretary of State's consent to publish proposals for such a school. The final decision on proposals made by a local authority will be for the independent schools adjudicator.

Departmental Assets

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list the items of departmental property worth over £100 that have been reported as (a) lost and (b) broken in the last 12 months. [47684]

Maria Eagle: My Department has no record of any items worth over £100 being reported as lost in the last 12 months. The following chart shows items of IT equipment that have been replaced in the last 12 months due to their being broken, either accidentally or due to normal wear and tear.

Item	Number	Total value (£)
Laptop computers	186	148,800
Personal computers	117	46,800
Laserjet printers	33	28,050

Departmental Catering Budget

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much and what proportion of her Department's catering budget was spent on fair trade produce in the last period for which figures are available. [49915]

Maria Eagle: The information could be supplied only at disproportionate cost.

Education Maintenance Allowance

Kerry McCarthy: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many students in Bristol were in receipt of education maintenance allowance at the rate of (a) £30, (b) £20 and (c) £10 per week in the last year for which figures are available. [44130]

Maria Eagle: This is a matter for the Learning and Skills Council, who operate Education Maintenance Allowances for the DfES and hold the information about take-up of the scheme. Mark Haysom, the Council's Chief Executive, has written to my hon. Friend with the information requested and a copy of his reply has been placed in the House Library.

Letter from Mark Haysom, dated 30 January 2006:

I am writing in response to your Parliamentary Question that asked "how many students in Bristol were in receipt of education maintenance allowance at the rate of (a) £30, (b) £20 and (c) £10 per week in the last year for which figures are available."

During the academic year 2004/05 the number of young people who had received one or more EMA payments in City of Bristol Local Education Authority area was 1,484.

EMA is awarded in three defined payment bands of £30, £20 and £10, depending on household income. In Bristol Local Education Authority area the take-up of EMA by payment band is split as follows: 1,138 on £30 per week, 168 on £20 per week and 178 on £10 per week.

I hope this information is helpful and addresses your question. If you would like further details please contact Chris Bradley at the LSC National Office on 0114 207 4512 or Christopher.Bradley@lsc.gov.uk

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate she has made of the number of students in receipt of education maintenance allowance who have continued into further education who otherwise would not have continued in education. [48936]

Maria Eagle: Education maintenance allowance (EMA) was subject to a very comprehensive evaluation. It was piloted by following two cohorts of 16-year-olds in 10 areas for four years from 1999/2000. It was rolled out to a further 36 areas in 2000/01, meaning that it was operating in around one third of the country. The evaluation showed an increase in participation of 16-year-olds in full-time education of 3.8 percent pts. This remains our most robust estimate of the impact of EMA on participation.

EMA was rolled out for 16-year-olds across the remaining two thirds of the country in September 2004. Administrative figures indicate that there was a 1.9 percent. pts increase in 16-year-old participation between 2003/04 and 2004/05, which is almost in line with the increase that would have been expected from the further roll out of EMA. Therefore, while it is not possible to attribute all of the increase to the roll out of EMA we remain confident in the evaluation estimate of 3.8 percent. pts. 3.8 percent. pts of the 16-year-old cohort in 2004/05 represents just over 25,000 young people.

Examinations

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many 15-year-olds took Level 2 Key Skills and Basic Skills qualifications regarded as functional equivalents to a GCSE in mathematics or English in the last year for which figures are available. [36025]

Jacqui Smith: The figures requested are included in the following table:

Key skill/basic skill qualification[1]	Number of 15-year-old pupils[2] achieving[3] level 2 in 2005
Application of number/Adult Numeracy	3,186
Communication skills/Adult Literacy	3,754

[1] These qualifications are included in the definitions for 5 A*-C including functional English and mathematics.
[2] The figures shown relate to pupils aged 15 at the start of the academic year (i.e. 31 August 2004).
[3] The Department only holds information on the number of pupils achieving-not attempting-key skills and basic skills.

Failing Schools

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many failing schools there were in each local education authority area in each year since 1997. [48130]

Jacqui Smith: The information requested has been placed in the House Libraries.

Former Teachers

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many teachers have left the profession in each of the last five years, broken down by (a) subject and (b) length of service. [48131]

Jacqui Smith: The following table provides the number of full and part-time regular qualified teachers who left maintained sector service in England, including retirements, by length of service in each year between 1999–2000 and 2003–04, the latest year available.

A subject breakdown is not available.

Some of these teachers may have subsequently re-entered service or gone to teach outside of the English maintained sector.

Although the numbers of teachers leaving service has risen over the period, the number of new entrants has shown a greater increase. As a result the number of teachers in service has risen continually since 1998 and the full-time equivalent number of teachers in service is now 32,700 higher than in 1997. Between 2004 and 2005 the increase was 4,200. Teacher numbers are now at their highest level since 1981.

Full and part-time regular teachers leaving service in the maintained sector by length of service in England, 1999–2000 to 2003–04

Further Education Funding

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 19 December 2005, Official Report, column 2414W, on further education funding, how many 16 to 19-year-olds were unfunded as a consequence of further education colleges exceeding their recruitment targets agreed with the relevant local learning and skills council in (a) 2002/03 and (b) 2003/04 in (i) each local learning and skills council area and (ii) each college. [50829]

Bill Rammell [holding answer 13 February 2006]: No 16 to 19-year-olds were unfunded in 2002/03 or 2003/04. Further education colleges delivering learning for young people above the planned volumes agreed with the Learning and Skills Council were provided with extra funding for these additional learners.

GCSEs

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many GCSEs on average were taken by a year 10 pupil in 2005; and what the range in the number of GCSEs taken was. [36045]

Jacqui Smith: Year 10 pupils can be defined in two ways; those who are one year away from completing Key Stage 4 and those who are aged 14 at the start of the academic year. Figures for 2005 have been presented on both bases (there are no pupils included in both groups).

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the average number of GCSE passes obtained per pupil was in (a) comprehensive schools and (b) selective schools in 2004–05. [43923]

Jacqui Smith: The figures requested for 2004/05 are included in the following table:

Maintained mainstream schools

School type (admissions basis)	Number of 15-year-old pupils[2] in 2004/05[3]	Average number of full GCSEs[1] achieved at grades A*-C per 15-year-old pupil[2]
Comprehensive	526,319	5
Selective	22,334	9

[1] The average number of full GCSEs has been calculated by summing the number of GCSE qualifications achieved and dividing by the number of 15 year old pupils.
[2] The figures shown relate to pupils aged 15 at the start of the academic year (i.e. 31 August 2004).
[3] Figures for 2004/05 are revised.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills in how many schools less than (a) 90, (b) 85, (c) 80 and (d) 70 per cent. of pupils achieved five or more GCSEs or equivalent at (i) grades A* to C and (ii) A* to G including English and mathematics in 2004–05. [47049]

Jacqui Smith: The information requested on the number of schools with particular proportions of pupils achieving 5+ A*-C grades and 5+ A*-G including English and mathematics can be founding the following table.

Number of maintained mainstream schools, by percentage of 15-year-old pupils achieving 5+ A-C and 5+ A*-G including English and mathematics 2004/05*

Higher Education (16 to 19-year-old Parents)

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many 16 to 19-year-old parents have returned to higher education in Tamworth constituency in each year since 1997. [48654]

Bill Rammell: The information is not held centrally.

Independent Schools

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what research she has commissioned into the possible involvement of religious cults in schools in the independent sector; and if she will make a statement. [47797]

Maria Eagle: My Department has not commissioned any research on this subject.

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 30 January 2006, Official Report, column 80W, to the hon. Member for Altrincham and Sale, West (Mr. Brady), on independent schools, how many and what percentage of children of (a) primary and (b) secondary school age in each London borough attended independent schools in each year since 1999–2000. [49307]

Learning Difficulties

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what support and services are available in (a) Staffordshire and (b) Tamworth constituency for new parents whose children have been diagnosed at birth as suffering from learning difficulties; and whether she plans to increase this assistance. [48653]

Maria Eagle: The Government are committed to improving services for all children and their families, including those with learning disabilities. The Every Child Matters programme, alongside the implementation of the National Service Framework for Children, Young People and Maternity Services and the Government's SEN strategy "Removing Barriers to Achievement", supports and promotes early intervention to help families of very young disabled children and special educational needs. In particular, the Government's Early Support Programme has been funded to improve support to parents of disabled children aged 0–3 and to provide timely interventions at the very earliest stages of disabilities being identified. All local authorities have now been asked to begin using the Early Support approaches and can access the resource materials to help improve services for families with young disabled children. The roll out of Sure Start Children's Centres across the country will also improve the integrated support provided to families with children under five who are disabled or who have special educational needs.

In the Staffordshire area there are currently three designated Children's Centres. Although none of these are in the Tamworth constituency, the Tamworth Sure Start Local Programme and another early years centre in the constituency are planning to become children's centres in 2006–07. Across the county, child development centres (which provide specialist health support services to children with disabilities and SEN) are being co-located with children's centres.

As well as mainstream services, families of children with learning disabilities are entitled to access a range of specialist local authority and health support services, such as the Parent Partnership service and portage services providing home based support to parents. Details about these local services are not collected centrally and to do so would incur disproportionate cost.

Looked-after Children

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many looked-after children there were on the latest date for which figures are available; and how they are cared for. [48067]

Maria Eagle: At 31 March 2005, the latest date for which information is available, there were 60,900 children who were looked after. Information on the numbers of children in the various types of care placement can be found in Table 1 of the Department's statistical first release on children looked after in England (including adoptions and care leavers), 2004–05. This can be downloaded from the internet at:

http://www.dfes.gov.uk/rsgateway/DB/SFR/s000615/index.shtml.

Post-16 Education (Funding)

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what discussions she has had in the last three years about equalising funding per student in sixth-form schools and further education colleges; and if she will make a statement. [48939]

Bill Rammell: Ministers have had a number of discussions with a range of organisations in recent years about the different levels of funding for school 6th forms and further education (FE) colleges. The organisations we have met include the Association of Colleges, Sixth Form Colleges' Forum, Trade Unions and a very large number of individual colleges. The funding gap between school sixth forms and further education colleges for like-for-like 16–19 provision is longstanding. The removal of the FE sector from local authority control, efficiency cuts during mid 1990s and increases in schools funding have all contributed to it. When the Learning and Skills Council (LSC) took over responsibility for funding schools sixth forms in April 2002 it became easier to compare the relative funding.

The LSC as part of their 'agenda for change' proposals commissioned the Learning and Skills Development Agency (LSDA) to review the funding gap between school sixth forms and colleges. The LSDA report was the first attempt to consider all the elements that contribute to the funding gap and while the report showed a convergence in funding rates it estimated the overall size of the gap to be in the region of 13 per cent.

On 16 November 2005 the Secretary of State announced our plans for narrowing the funding gap. We recognise that the funding gap will not be easy to close but we have taken some important steps in the funding package we announced on 21 October 2005. We have confirmed that for young people in FE in 2006/07 we will match the Schools' Minimum Funding Guarantee of 3.4 per cent. We estimate that this, together with other measures to correct technical anomalies, will reduce the gap from 13 per cent. to 8 per cent. by 2006/07. From 2008 we will look to bring consistency to the treatment of student retention and achievement across school sixth forms and colleges which we expect to narrow the gap by a further 3 per cent. Beyond that we will work to establish a common funding approach across the two sectors as part of the Learning and Skills Council's 'agenda for change'.

Primary Schools (Results)

Edward Miliband: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the Key Stage 2 results in (a) each primary school in Doncaster North and (b) the constituency as a whole were in each year since 1995. [36389]

Jacqui Smith: The 1996 to 2005 Key Stage 2 results for each primary school are published in the Achievement and Attainment Tables (formally Performance Tables) and are available on the Department's website at:

http://www.dfes.gov.uk/performancetables/index_archived.shtml

They are also available in the House Library.

The 1997 to 2004 results for the constituency have been placed in the in the Library and are also available within the Department's 'In Your Area' website available at:

http://www.dfes.gov.uk/inyourarea.

Results for 1996 are not available at constituency level. Results for 2005 will be placed in the Library and made available on the 'In Your Area' website shortly.

Qualifications

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many (a) GCSE passes at grade A-C and (b) GNVQ full intermediate passes there were in (i) media studies and (ii) child care in each of the last 20 years. [44702]

Jacqui Smith: The information requested (where available) can be found in the following tables.

Number of A-C passes in GCSE media, film and TV studies, by 15-year-old pupils*[1]

	Number
2000	—
2001	—
2002	15,300
2003	17,600

[1] Age at the start of the academic year.

Figures for GCSE Media Studies are not available pre 2002 and GNVQ Media pre 2000. Courses in Child Care are not available at GCSE or GNVQ level.

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of pupils have obtained a GCSE pass at grade A-C in (a) mathematics and English and (b) mathematics, English, a science subject and a modern foreign language in each of the last 20 years. [44703]

Jacqui Smith: The information requested (where available) can be found in the following table.

Percentage of 15-year-olds[1] *achieving A-C grades in the following GCSEs

	English and mathematics	English, mathematics, science and a modern language
1995	34	24

2004	44	28
2005	46	28

[1] Age at the start of the academic year.

Figures on these combinations of GCSE subjects are not available before 1995.

Ed Balls: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many staff in (a) day nurseries and (b) schools in (i) Wakefield District and (ii) Normanton constituency are qualified to (A) Level 2, (B) Level 3 and (C) Level 4 standards. [48388]

Jacqui Smith: The information requested is not collected centrally.

School Finance

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how the introduction of the proposals in the White Paper Higher Standards: Better Schools for All will affect the (a) capital programmes and (b) grants for schools whose education authorities have no plans to introduce independent trust schools and academies; and if she will make a statement. [50721]

Jacqui Smith: Decisions to acquire a trust will be for individual schools' governing bodies. Local authorities will be able to object to such proposals, and the schools adjudicator will determine in certain circumstances. Plans for a school to become an academy are agreed between the department, the authority, the academy sponsor, and the predecessor school. Local plans for foundation or trust schools do not impact on capital or revenue allocations to authorities.

School revenue funding for foundation, trust, voluntary aided, voluntary controlled and local authority schools is allocated on the same basis, irrespective of category of school. Academies are funded at the same level as an equivalent school in their area would be.

Strategic capital programmes including Building Schools for the Future are allocated according to need and regardless of category of school. Formulaic capital funding for authorities is allocated on the needs of all their schools, including foundation and trust schools, with a separate allocation on the same basis for voluntary aided schools from the overall voluntary aided fair share of funding. These allocations do not contain amounts in respect of academies, where funding is delivered directly from the department.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what definition of a dedicated capital pot was used in compiling the White Paper Higher Standards: Better Schools for All. [50722]

Jacqui Smith: In our White Paper, local authorities will have a duty to respond positively to parental desire for an entirely new school or for additional provision in an existing school. They will be expected to provide dedicated consultancy support to help parents develop concrete proposals. The local authority will decide whether proposals to establish a new school should be taken forward, or whether the demands could be met in other ways. Parents will have a right of appeal to the schools adjudicator if their proposals are rejected.

Any capital funding needed for new schools will usually be provided by existing capital programmes, including Building Schools for the Future, the Targeted Capital Fund and the formulaic funding which all authorities receive. However, where these or other local resources such as disposal proceeds are not available or are insufficient for the need, we will establish dedicated capital funding arrangements to support strong and innovative proposals that come from parents.

Initially, my Department are holding funds from our overall capital resources from the 2004 spending review settlement to meet any calls until 2007–08. We will, of course, reallocate this funding to other priorities should it not be fully required. For the longer term, from 2008–09, these needs will be reflected in allocation of funding to programme, following the settlement of the comprehensive spending review which will be announced by the Chancellor in mid-2007.

School Food

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether the recommendations of the school food trust sub-committee on standards for school food other than lunch will be subject to a full regulatory impact assessment. [49857]

Jacqui Smith: The School Food Trust has been commissioned to develop standards for food and drink provided in schools at times of the day other than lunchtime, for example in vending machines and tuck shops. In the near future we will carry out a consultation with key stakeholders in education, health and the food industry on the Trust's recommendations. A Regulatory Impact Assessment will accompany the consultation.

School Music

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much funding her Department has made available for school music facilities in (a) Leicester and (b) England in each academic year since 1997. [49641]

Jacqui Smith: Capital allocations made to Leicester local authority and its schools are set out in the following table:

	£ million
1997–98	0.9
1998–99	4.9
1999–2000	10.8
2000–01	11.0
2001–02	11.2
2002–03	9.3
2003–04	12.3
2004–05	18.3
2005–06	25.5

Note:
2004–05 and 2005–06 figures include targeted capital funds of £4.7 million and £15.2 million respectively.

Capital allocations to local authorities and schools are higher than ever before. In 2005–06 they are £5.5 billion and they are planned to rise to £6.3 billion in 2007–08, an increase from £683 million in 1996–97.

Capital allocations made to local authorities and schools in England since 1997–98 are set out in the following table:

	£ billion
1997–98	0.6
1998–99	1.3
1999–2000	1.6
2000–01	2.5
2001–02	2.5
2002–03	3.3
2003–04	4.2
2004–05	4.9
2005–06	5.5

Allocations are made on a financial year basis, not the academic year. It is the responsibility of schools and local authorities to determine how they allocate these funds to different projects, including enhancing school music facilities, taking account of local needs and priorities.

Records are not held centrally that show how much of this funding is spent on school music facilities.

School Sport

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much funding her Department has made available for improvements to school sports facilities in (a) Leicester and (b) England in each year between 1997 and 2005. [49600]

Jacqui Smith: Significant funding is being provided specifically to enhance PE and school sport facilities between 2001 and 2009. In total, £686 million of lottery funding is providing a step change in school sport facilities through the Space for Sport and Arts and Big Lottery's New Opportunities for PE and Sport programmes.

Local authorities and schools may supplement this with the formula capital funding that we provide to them. However, it is the responsibility of the schools and local authorities to determine how they allocate these funds to different projects, including enhancing school sports facilities, taking account of local needs and priorities.

Records are not held centrally that show how much of this funding is spent on school sports facilities, neither am I able to provide a breakdown for Leicester.

Schools

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what changes to the funding formula for schools have been made since 1997; and what effect each change has had on funds per pupil for (a) primary and (b) secondary schools in Cambridgeshire at constant prices. [51517]

Jacqui Smith [holding answer 13 February 2006]: For 1998–99, nursery vouchers were abolished and the grant was added to the total distributed through the Standard Spending Assessment (SSA) methodology. The formula used to distribute funding for under 5s was also changed: prior to 1998–99, funding had been distributed on the basis of population of under 5s living within an authority; for 1998–99, 65 per cent. of under 5s funding was distributed on the basis of 4-year-old pupil numbers educated in an authority, with the remainder distributed on the basis of population of under 5s living within an authority. An allowance for sparsity was also introduced into the under 5s formula that year.

For 2001–02, Nursery Education Grant for 4-year-olds ceased to be paid as a separate grant: this funding was included in the total distributed through the SSA methodology, and distributed at a flat rate according to the numbers of four year olds in Private Voluntary and Independent Providers.

For 2002–03, funding for school sixth forms was transferred to the Learning and Skills Council. There were no changes made to the SSA formula that year.

For 2003–04, SSAs were replaced by Formula Spending Shares. Funding for schools provision and LEA central functions was separately identified, and new formulae were introduced to distribute funding for under 5s, primary, secondary and high cost pupils and funding for the Youth Service and LEA central functions. New indicators were introduced to reflect deprivation.

For 2006–07 and 2007–08, the Dedicated Schools Grant was introduced, with the following distribution criteria: every authority receives an initial basic increase of 5 per cent. per pupil in both 2006–07 and 2007–08; beyond this basic increase, the available increase in funding in 2006–07 and 2007–08 reflects the priority which the government attaches to meeting the costs of greater personalisation of learning, more practical learning options for 14–16 pupils, workforce reform and the increased entitlement to early years provision from 33 to 38 weeks. In relation to each of these priorities, the sums allocated in 2006–07 will be consolidated into the authority's baseline for 2007–08, and any further sums identified for 2007–08 will be on top of that amount. Full details are available on the Teachernet website at: www.teachernet.gov.uk/management/schoolfunding/2006-07_funding_arrangements/DSG200608/

Identification of the effect on primary and secondary funding per pupil caused by these formula changes—as opposed to changes in data or spending totals—would only be possible at disproportionate cost. The following table shows the adjusted percentage increase in SSA, FSS or Dedicated Schools Grant as applicable for each year since 1997–98 for Cambridgeshire.

Increase in SSA/EFSS cash, on adjusted baselines

	Cambridgeshire	England
1997–98 to 1998–99	5.5	5.5
1998–99 to 1999–2000	6.3	5.7
1999–2000 to 2000–01	5.6	5.4
2000–01 to 2001–02	4.7	4.8
2001–02 to 2002–03	5.7	6.0
2002–03 to 2003–04	10.0	6.5
2003–04 to 2004–05	6.8	5.4
2004–05 to 2005–06	6.7	5.6

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much public funding was spent on (a) repairing and (b) rebuilding schools in Tamworth constituency in each year since 1992. [48655]

Jacqui Smith: Allocation and expenditure records are maintained on a local authority rather than on a constituency basis. Accordingly, figures are supplied relating to Staffordshire county council. The figures in the following tables relate to the periods in which information is held centrally.

Public funding spent on (a) repairs since 1996–97 is set out in the table.

	£ million
1996–97	3.3
1997–98	3.9
1998–99	6.8
1999–2000	6.4
2000–01	6.9
2001–02	8.3
2002–03	6.3
2003–04	5.7
2004–05	6.6

Note

2002–03 figures exclude figures nursery schools

The table above sets out the available revenue figures received from Staffordshire county council, unaudited by the Department, on maintenance and improvement of schools.

Capital allocations to Staffordshire county council are set out in the following table.

	£ million
1996–97	3.7
1997–98	7.4
1998–99	28.4
1999–2000	18.5
2000–01	34.1
2001–02	27.4
2002–03	32.9
2003–04	35.5
2004–05	41.1
2005–06	29.2

Note

1998–99 figures include Private Finance Initiative credits of £13.7 million. 2004–05 figures include a Targeted Capital Fund allocation of £3.6 million, and a relatively large Basic Need allocation.

We expect local authorities and schools to take decisions locally on allocating funds between new buildings and improvements in accordance with priorities set out in their local asset management plans. Records of these categories of expenditures are not held centrally.

Capital allocations to local authorities and schools are higher than ever before. In 2005–06 they are £5.5 billion and they are planned to increase to £6.3 billion in 2007–08, an increase from £683 million in 1996–97.

Secondary Schools

Mr. Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many (a) community, (b) voluntary-aided, (c) voluntary-controlled and (d) foundation secondary schools there are; and what proportion has a sixth form. [49749]

Jacqui Smith: The requested information is given in the table.

Maintained secondary schools: number of schools by status, as at January 2005

Specialist Schools/Colleges

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 14 November 2005 to the hon. Member for Bognor Regis and Littlehampton, Official Report, column 952W, on selection, what method is used to (a) identify pupils as being able to benefit from targeted teaching in a particular subject and (b) assess the pupils who demonstrate a special capacity to succeed in a particular subject; and what guidance is given on this to specialist schools that select on aptitude in the relevant subject. [49784]

Jacqui Smith: Admission authorities are responsible for determining how to assess aptitude. Legislation requires them to ensure that tests do not assess general academic ability or aptitude for any subject other than the subject in question, and are free of racial or gender bias. The School Admissions Code of Practice gives further guidance on what the law permits. And the Schools Adjudicator has upheld objections to admission arrangements where he has found that there is no established test for, or objective assessment against, published criteria.

The Specialist Schools Trust also provides advice on admissions, which emphasises that tests should not "drift into assessing ability or general aptitude, by checking that the ability profile of those selected by aptitude is representative of all applicants, [and] adjusting testing if it is not."

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) which specialist colleges and schools which are not specialist science colleges and schools offer (a) separate science and (b) dual award science at GCSE; [28587]

(2) what percentage of pupils in (a) specialist colleges and (b) schools which are not specialist science colleges took (i) separate science and (ii) dual award science in the last period for which figures are available; [28581]

(3) what percentage of pupils studying in specialist colleges and schools, which are not specialist science colleges and schools, have gained (a) dual award science, (b) biology, (c) chemistry and (d) physics GCSEs, in each of the last five years broken down by grade. [28762]

Jacqui Smith: The information requested is shown in the following tables for the years 2002 to 2005. Information is not presented for 2001 as there were no schools designated as specialist science colleges in that year.

Table 1: List of schools that are not specialist science colleges and schools where 15-year-old pupils have attempted (a) separate science and (b) dual award sciences at GCSE in 2004/05.

The information has been placed in the House of Commons Library.

Only schools whose results are published in the achievement and attainment tables are included in this list.

St. James' Independent Schools

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what recent representations she has received on the mistreatment of pupils at St. James' Independent Schools in London, with particular reference to the School of Economic Science. [47911]

Maria Eagle: The Department has been made aware of allegations of abuse by teachers at St. James Independent Schools for Boys between 1975 and 1985. The matter is currently under investigation by Richmond-upon-Thames social services department and the Metropolitan police. We are liaising with them and will consider what, if any, action is required once their investigation has been completed.

Teachers and Lecturers

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many teachers entered into (a) full-time and (b) part-time service in maintained schools in the East Riding of Yorkshire in each year since 2001. [49103]

Jacqui Smith: Information on the number of teachers entering service is not available by local authority.

The information requested is available at a national level and this was published in the Statistics of Education, School Workforce in England Volume, 2005 edition, on 26 January 2006. Table C1c refers. This publication is available on the department's website at the following URL:

http://www.dfes.gov.uk/rsgateway/DBA/OL/v000633/index.shtml

A copy of the relevant tables has been placed in the House of Common's Library.

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the average (a) teacher's and (b) lecturer's pay is; and what it was in 1997. [39922]

Jacqui Smith: The latest available figures are shown in the tables. Significant changes were made to the content, structure, coverage and definitions of the source data for HE staff in 2003/04 which means that the figures for 2004/05 are not directly comparable with those for earlier years.

2004/05	59,100	41,500	33,000

[1] The HESA staff record changed markedly in structure, coverage and content in 2003/04. In addition, the definition of salary changed. This means that average salaries for 2003/04 and later years cannot be compared directly with those for earlier years. For the years up to 2002/03, salary represented the monies received in respect of institutional duties actually being paid on the date of the HESA staff count (31 July) or for those Who have left during the year, the salary on leaving, including any regular payments for additional duties, responsibility allowances or honoraria regardless of their source. In 2003/04, the salary represented the gross basic salary per annum, in pounds sterling as stated in the contract at the reference date of HESA's staff count or at the end date of the contract if earlier, excluding any regular payments for additional duties, responsibility allowances or honoraria, regardless of their source. Figures have been rounded to the nearest 100.

Thomas Telford School

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what level of financial sponsorship is provided to Thomas Telford School by (a) the Mercers' Company and (b) Tarmac plc. [47765]

Jacqui Smith: Thomas Telford School, as a City Technology College, is legally an independent school, and so my Department does not hold details of the financial sponsorship provided to it. However, such information can be obtained from the school's annual accounts, which they are required to publish annually, available from Companies House for a nominal fee.

Vandalism

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list the acts of vandalism which have been perpetrated (a) inside and (b) on the outside of her Department's buildings in the last 12 months. [49507]

Maria Eagle: The following table details the acts of vandalism which have been perpetrated (a) inside and (b) on the outside of the Department's buildings in the last 12 months.

Site	Inside	Outside
Darlington	None	None
London	Four blocked toilets. Lift door scratched.	None
Runcorn	None	Two external windows broken. Perimeter fence damaged
Sheffield	None	None

Youth Services

Mr. Hurd: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much public funding was available for youth services in (a) the constituency of Ruislip-Northwood, (b) the London borough of Hillingdon, (c) Greater London and (d) England in each of the last 10 years. [47662]

Maria Eagle: Youth services are funded through the local authority and information about the level of funding is collected by local education authority (LEA) area. This information has only been available separately since 2000. It is not possible to provide information about Youth Service funding below LEA level in order to show the funding for Ruislip-Northwood.

Youth Service funding levels are as follows:

Financial year	England	Greater London	Hillingdon LEA
2000–01	288,026,510	57,569,841	1,446,973
2001–02	306,761,605	64,770,072	1,473,203
2002–03	316,288,138	65,838,535	1,777,011
2003–04	343,364,777	67,393,083	2,132,885
2004–05	364,015,547	65,839,152	2,284,148
2005–06	383,662,949	69,415,404	3,072,659

Notes:
1. The data are drawn from section 52 Budget statements submitted to the Department by all 150 local education authorities.
2. The 2001–02 and 2002–03 figures also include any Local Authority Youth Service provision that contributed to the delivery of the Connexions Service plus any Connexions Service specific funding.
3. 2005–06 data are subject to change by LEAs.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Administration Costs

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the total administration costs for his core Department are; and whether these are regarded as (a) identifiable and (b) non-identifiable for the purposes of public expenditure statistical analyses. [39844]

Mrs. McGuire: The departmental report for 2005 (Cm 6539) contains administration costs for the years 1999–2000 to 2007–08 along with a breakdown by client group. In addition the most recent Public Expenditure Out-turn White Paper (Cm 6639) contains the provisional 2004–05 departmental administration costs out-turn.

These costs include both identifiable and non-identifiable items for the purposes of public expenditure statistical analyses.

Attendance Allowance

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many care home residents in Scotland lost their entitlement to attendance allowance in each year since 2002 because their personal care costs were met under the free personal care arrangements; and what the financial effect on his Department was of this loss of entitlement. [46146]

Mrs. McGuire: The administration of attendance allowance is a matter for the chief executive of the Disability and Carers Service, Mr. Terry Moran. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Terry Moran:

In response to your recent Parliamentary Question, the Minister for Disabled People, Anne McGuire MP, promised you a substantive reply from the Chief Executive of the Disabled and Carers Service.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, how many care home residents in Scotland lost their entitlement to attendance allowance in each year since 2002 because their personal care costs were met under the free personal care arrangements; and what the financial effect on his Department was of this loss of entitlement.

The requested information is not available and could only be obtained at a disproportionate cost. I can however provide some general information about the position.

The rules governing the payment of attendance allowance and the care component of disability living allowance preclude the payment of these benefits to people in care homes who have been receiving help with their care home costs from public funds for more than four weeks. Such help includes the £145 per week payments that local authorities in Scotland make to people aged 65 or over in care homes under the free personal care arrangements introduced by the Scottish Executive in July 2002.

We estimate that since that date, receipt of those payments has resulted in the withdrawal of attendance allowance or the care component of disability living allowance from some 6,400 care home residents in Scotland. At current benefit rates, we estimate that maximum annual cost of continuing to pay the benefits to those residents would be about £20 million.

I hope you find this information of use and I am sorry I cannot be more helpful.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the average time taken (a) to process a claim for attendance allowance and (b) to begin payments once a claim has been approved was in each of the last five years. [48348]

Mrs. McGuire [holding answer 2 February 2006]: The administration of attendance allowance is a matter for the chief executive of the Disability and Carers Service, Mr. Terry Moran. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Terry Moran:

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, what the average time taken (a) to process a claim for attendance allowance and (b) to begin payments once a claim has been approved was in each of the last five years.

The Minister for Disabled People, Anne McGuire MP, promised you a substantive reply from the Chief Executive of the Disability and Carers Service.

The information requested at part (a) of your question is in the following table:

Average length of time in days to clear attendance allowance normal rules claims in each of the last five years

	Actual average clearance time (in days)
April 2000-March 2001	30.5
April 2001-March 2002	27.1

The information requested at part (b) of your question is not available.

I hope you find this information of use and I am sorry I cannot be more helpful.

Benefit Claimants

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people claimed (a) incapacity benefit and (b) disability living allowance in Stroud constituency in each year since 1997. [50455]

Mrs. McGuire: The information is in the table.

Incapacity benefit (IB) and disability living allowance (DLA) claimants, and disability living allowance (DLA) claimants, in the Stroud parliamentary constituency.

As at August each year:	IB/SDA	DLA
1997	2,600	1,800
1998	2,600	1,900
1999	2,700	1,900
2000	2,800	2,100
2001	2,900	2,200
2002	2,900	2,600
2003	2,900	2,800
2004	3,000	2,900
2005	3,000	3,000

Notes:
1. For incapacity benefit the parliamentary constituency figures for the years 1997 to 1998 have been produced using the five per cent data and have been rated up proportionally using the Great Britain WPLS 100 per cent. IB/SDA back-cast totals.
2. For disability living allowance benefit the parliamentary constituency figures for the years 1997 to 2001 have been produced using the five percent. data and have been rated up proportionally using the Great Britain WPLS 100 per cent. DLA back-cast totals.
3. Figures are rounded to the nearest hundred.
4. IB/SDA 'Claimant' figures include all incapacity benefit (IB) and severe disablement allowance, including IB credits only cases.
5. There will be an overlap between each years figures as claimants can receive both IB/SDA and DLA.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many full-time equivalent staff were employed by the Child Support Agency in March (a) 2002, (b) 2003, (c) 2004 and (d) 2005. [19337]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Mr. Stephen Geraghty. He will write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Stephen Geraghty:

In reply to your Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Chief Executive.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many full-time equivalent staff were employed by the Child Support Agency in (a) March 2002 (b) March 2003 (c) March 2004 and (d) March 2005.

The table below contains the number of full/whole time equivalent staff in post in the months requested. The figures include fixed-term appointments and casual staff, but not Northern Ireland staff (who are part of the Northern Ireland Civil Service).

Child Support Agency Staffing Figures at the 31st March year-end and at November 2005 are shown in the Table below.

All of the increase between March and November 2005 is in frontline staff.

	Full-time equivalent staff (Number)
March 2002	10,690.59
March 2003	11,256.42
March 2004	10,819.53
March 2005	9,784.26
November 2005	10,480.01

I hope you find this answer useful.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many staff were employed by the Child Support Agency at (a) 31 December 2004, (b) 31 March 2005, (c) 30 June 2005, (d) 30 September 2005 and (e) 31 December 2005; and if he will make a statement. [41399]

Community Languages

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether a staff survey has been conducted (a) in London and (b) in the UK on the number of community languages staff speak at work to assist customers. [48982]

Mrs. McGuire: No such survey has been conducted.

Departmental Assets

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list the 10 most valuable (a) movable and (b) immovable assets owned by his Department. [27376]

Mrs. McGuire: The highest value assets on the fixed asset register for Departmental owned assets are leasehold improvements, which are pooled costs relating to the refurbishment of the Job Centre Plus offices. By the nature of pools, these assets will actually comprise of numerous classes of assets, such as building work, internal decoration and furniture and fittings.

We have listed the 10 most valuable (a) movable and (b) immovable assets owned by the Department.

Departmental Finance

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the real terms percentage increase in allocated resources for his Department (a) was for the period 1997–98 to 2004–05 and (b) is estimated to be between 2005–06 and 2007–08 (i) for each period and (ii) for each year. [31033]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department for Work and Pensions was formed in June 2001 from the Department of Social Security and parts of the former Department for Education and Employment including the Employment Service and has since undergone significant reorganisation of the Department and Machinery of Government changes. In 1998–99 there was also a change from cash to resource accounting.

Comparable information is only available from 1999–2000 through to 2007–08 from the Public Expenditure Statistical Analysis 2005 (Cm 6521) available in the Library. The percentage increase for each year and for the periods quoted is detailed in the tables as follows. Allocated resources include both Departmental Expenditure Limits (DEL) and Annually Managed Expenditure (AME). Please note figures in brackets denote a percentage decrease.

[1] These figures relate to the period before the Department for Work and Pensions was created in June 2001. When the Department was created an exercise was carried out to put historical data from predecessor bodies onto the DWP Treasury Database in an amalgamated form.

Departmental Staff

Justine Greening: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the average number of staff employed at the Department was in each year from 1997–98 to 2005–06, including equivalent figures for the period before the Department was re-organised into its current form, broken down by (a) full-time equivalents and (b) overtime and temporary staff; and if he will make a statement. [32431]

Mrs. McGuire [holding answer 28 November 2005]: The Department for Work and Pensions was formed in June 2001 from the Department of Social Security and parts of the former Department for Education and Employment, including the Employment Service. Information on the average number of staff and overtime and temporary staff in the Department in each year from 2000–01 to 2005–06 can be found in Table 6 of the Department for Work and Pensions Departmental Report 2005.

Information on the average number of staff and overtime and temporary staff in the former Department of Social Security in each year from 1997–98 can be found in Table 10 of the Social Security Departmental Report 2001.

Information on the average number of staff and overtime and temporary staff in the former Employment Service in each year from 1997–98 can be found in annex J of the Department for Education and Skills Departmental Report 2001.

Each of the reports referred to is available in the Library.

Disability Discrimination Act

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the number of (a) public bodies and (b) private companies which are compliant with the provisions (i) of the Disability Discrimination Act 2005 and (ii) the provisions of the Act relating to disabled parking facilities. [44124]

Mrs. McGuire: It is too soon to make any estimates of the number of public bodies and private companies which are meeting their duties under the Disability Discrimination Act 2005 (DDA 2005), since the first duties under the Act were only recently introduced on 5 December 2005, and others do not come into force until at least 4 December 2006.

As part of the Department for Work and Pensions research programme, the Department expects to undertake research in due course to ascertain how those with duties under the DDA 2005 respond to those duties.

Estimates of the impact of the DDA 2005 and Regulations made under it on public bodies and private organisations have been published as regulatory impact assessments[1] and placed in the Library of this House.

The DDA 2005 makes no provision in respect of disabled parking facilities.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many fines have been imposed on (a) public and (b) private bodies found to be non-compliant with the provisions of the Disability Discrimination Act 2005. [44126]

Mrs. McGuire: In general, any individual act of disability discrimination committed by a public or private body contrary to the provisions of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 (DDA), as amended by the Disability Discrimination Act 2005 (DDA 2005), is a civil wrong which will give rise to a remedy which usually includes damages, rather than the imposition of a fine. The DDA 2005 did introduce one new criminal offence from 5 December 2005 relating to the publication of discriminatory advertisements for which a fine can be imposed. We have no knowledge of any such cases arising where the relevant offence has been committed and a fine imposed.

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what measures are undertaken to determine compliance with the Disability Discrimination Act 2005; and by whom. [44127]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department for Work and Pensions regularly undertakes research into the responses of those with duties under the Disability Discrimination Act (DDA) and expects to carry out further research in relation to duties under the Disability Discrimination Act 2005 (DDA 2005), which amended the DDA, in due course.

However, whether those with duties under the DDA meet the requirements of the Act not to discriminate against an individual disabled person for a reason related to their disability is a matter to be determined on a case-by-case basis by courts or tribunals, as appropriate.

The Disability Rights Commission has a role in supporting those with duties to meet those duties and also in assisting with enforcement of the Act. It may: support legal cases in certain circumstances; issue non-discrimination notices; enter into agreements in lieu of enforcement action; and conduct Formal Investigations. Later this year it will publish, subject to the approval of Parliament, a revised Code of Practice largely for those provisions of the DDA 2005 which will come into force on 4 December 2006 relating to the duties of service providers in both the public and private sectors.

From 4 December 2006 most executive public bodies will be required to publish a Disability Equality Scheme which sets out how they intend to fulfil the various requirements of the Disability Equality Duty introduced by the DDA 2005. The Duty requires that the Scheme includes monitoring and assessment arrangements to measure the impact of a public body's policies, and that the Scheme is reviewed and revised at least every three years.

Disability Living Allowance

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the cost of lowering the entitlement age for the higher rate of the mobility component of disability living allowance to two years old. [50995]

Mrs. McGuire: In April 2001 we changed the entitlement age limit from five to three years of age because medical advice is that age three is the earliest point at which it can be reasonably determined whether a child's inability, or virtual inability, to walk is the result of physical disability rather than late development. We have no plans to make further changes to the lower age limit for entitlement to the higher rate of the disability living allowance mobility component, therefore no estimate has been made of the costs.

Disabled Parents

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what his estimate is of the number of disabled parents in each region of the UK; [44591]

(2) what organisations that assist disabled parents are funded by his Department; and how much financial support was provided to each in the (a) 2004–05 and (b) 2005–06 financial year; [44593]

(3) what advice is offered by his Department to disabled parents concerning the benefits and support that is available to them. [44592]

Mrs. McGuire [holding answer 24 January 2006]: The Department for Work and Pensions is committed to providing accurate information on our benefits, programmes and services.

The Directgov website for disabled people (www.direct.gov.uk/disability) is the central point for all information from Government, providing a single source of information on the full range of services for disabled people, including benefits and other financial support. All Departments contribute to the information and services for disabled people, which is now written and co-ordinated within the new Office for Disability Issues (ODI). The Directgov website also features sections on Parenting and Education, through which information on benefits and services can also be accessed.

The Disability and Carers Service (DCS) does not specifically target information at disabled parents; however, they have an outreach programme of local, regional and national events involving dedicated officers visiting representatives from external customer organisations and groups.

The purpose of the programme is to ensure that a consistent corporate message is communicated to all customer representative groups and organisations, and to provide accurate information on our benefits and services.

There is no current provision for this Department to provide core funding to external organisations. However, work is under way on a project to research information and advice required by disabled people and review existing cross-Government provision. The ODI will work across Government to develop proposals to improve the provision of information and advice about services to disabled people.

The information is in the following table.

Number of disabled parents, including those with limiting longstanding illnesses, in the UK by region

	Million	Percentage
North East	0.07	5
North West and Merseyside	0.19	14
Yorkshire and Number	0.13	9

Early Retirement

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many departmental employees have taken early retirement due to ill-health in each of the past five years for which figures are available. [46770]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department for Work and Pensions takes seriously its responsibilities for managing attendance. We have an attendance management policy in place which was commended by the NAO as meeting best practice. The policy includes guidance for line managers on when ill-health retirement should be considered. Ill-health retirement (IHR) is considered when a member of staff has a recognised health condition which is likely to be permanent and which prevents them from carrying out their normal duties. The criteria for IHR are set by the Principle Civil Service Pension Scheme and were considerably tightened when the pension scheme arrangements were last reviewed. Although applications for IHR are made by managers or staff, decisions are made by the PCSPS medical adviser.

The Department was created in 2001 and figures on the numbers of employees taking ill-health retirement since then are shown in the following table.

Period (year ending)	Number of IHR's	FTE[1]
March 2002	276	247.58
March 2003	236	207.45
March 2004	193	172.36
March 2005	210	185.92

Freedom of Information Act

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what total sum has been received by his Department for the provision of information under the Freedom of Information Act 2000 in its first year of operation. [48485]

Mrs. McGuire: Nil.

The Freedom of Information Act allows for public authorities to determine when the cost of processing a request will exceed the appropriate limit, which for central Government is set at £600 and for the wider public sector £450. In this instance the public authority may decide to approach the applicant to help them refine their request and where possible to bring it under the appropriate limit. Alternatively, public authorities may charge the applicant the cost of processing the request. There is, however, no obligation for departments to provide information if the cost of processing the request exceeds the appropriate limit.

Public authorities may also charge for disbursements when handling requests where it is deemed appropriate. Further information on the FOI fees regime can be found on the DCA website at http://www.foi.gov.uk/feesguide.htm.

Fuel Costs (Pensioners)

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans his Department has to increase the £200 winter heating allowance for pensioners. [50438]

Mr. Timms: We have no plans to do so. The winter fuel payment has risen from £20 in winter 1997–98 to £200 from winter 2000–01 and to £300 for those aged 80 or over from winter 2003–04. It is a significant contribution towards fuel costs.

Gas Prices

Mr. Leech: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if the Government will increase (a) state pensions and (b) the winter fuel allowance to take account of increases in gas prices. [50372]

Mr. Timms: The state pension is increased annually to take account of price inflation, including gas and electricity. The winter fuel payment has risen from £20 in winter 1997–98 to £200 from winter 2000–01 and to £300 for those aged 80 or over from winter 2003–04. We are therefore already providing a significant contribution towards fuel costs. The Chancellor announced in the pre-Budget report that the winter fuel payment will continue at the current rate for the remainder of this Parliament.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people were claiming incapacity benefit in each ward in Hartlepool in the last period for which data was available. [42454]

Mrs. McGuire: The information is in the table.

Jeremy Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many employees of the ambulance service on long-term sick leave are claiming incapacity benefit. [49987]

Mrs. McGuire: The information is not available.

Jobseekers

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what action he is taking in conjunction with Jobcentre Plus to tackle recent increases in the claimant count of jobseekers. [45195]

Margaret Hodge: Despite the recent increases, claimant unemployment remains at historically low levels. Jobcentre Plus will continue to ensure that all jobseekers fulfil their responsibilities to seek and be available for work, are offered the assistance they need to find work and receive the benefits to which they are entitled. The Department will continue to monitor movements in the claimant count and identify whether further action is required.

Means-tested Benefits

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps his Department is taking to increase awareness among entitled people of the means-tested benefits for which they are eligible. [49611]

Mr. Timms: We want everybody to claim the benefits to which they are entitled. Information on the range of benefits we administer is widely available.

The Department is currently, with local authorities support, running publicity and marketing take up campaigns this winter, aimed at encouraging people who are entitled to council tax benefit to make a claim.

In addition, the Pension Service has written to every pensioner household informing them about pension credit and there have been a number of campaign initiatives such as the "You're Missing Out" direct mailings and adverts in national newspapers. The Pension Service's local service are also visiting around 23,000 pensioners households each week to offer a full benefit entitlement check.

Since September 2005, existing pension credit customers were contacted and invited to claim council tax benefit and/or housing benefit. From December 2005 customers who contact the pension credit application line to make an application for pension credit have been invited to claim these benefits as well.

Media Monitoring

Philip Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much his Department has spent on media monitoring activities in each of the last eight financial years. [35640]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department for Work and Pensions was formed on 8 June 2001 from parts of the former Department of Social Security, the former Department for Education and Employment and the Employment Service. Information prior to 2001 is not held centrally and can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The Department paid for its Media Monitoring Unit service by annual subscription.

	Amount (£)
2003–04	54,317
2004–05	57,575

The Department paid Government News Network for regional cuttings by annual subscription:

	Amount (£)
2003–04	150,000
2004–05	150,000

The Department uses Durrants (formerly Xtreme) to provide national cuttings. The costs for this vary depending on the number and size of the cuttings. The amounts paid for the last two financial years are:

	Amount (£)
2003–04	95,890
2004–05	82,679

The Department's rules only allow for financial records to be kept for three years. (The current year and the last two tax years.) Information for periods before the 2003–04 tax year can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Post Office Card Account

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list the options available to benefit recipients and pensioners who wish to continue to have their money paid over the counter in cash at a post office branch when the contract to provide the Post Office Card Account ends in 2010. [48731]

Mr. Plaskitt: Customers will still be able to use the Post Office to collect their benefit or pension if they wish by using a bank or building society account there are some 25 different accounts can be accessed at post office branches now, and we hope there could be more in the future.

The table sets out those accounts which can currently be used at post office branches.

The very small minority of people unable to operate any account will be paid by cheque, which may be cashed at the Post Office.

Bank/building society	Current account	Basic account

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to the answers to the hon. Members for Yeovil (Mr. Laws) and for Inverness, Nairn, Badenoch and Strathspey (Danny Alexander) of 31 January 2006, Official Report, columns 443–5W, on the Post Office card account, what provision will be made to accommodate the needs of pensioners and other benefit claimants holding Post Office card accounts when the current contract expires; and if he will make a statement. [50351]

Mr. Plaskitt: Government funding for the Post Office card account will end in March 2010 as always planned. By then we expect most card account customers will have moved to having their benefit or pension paid into a bank account.

Customers will still be able to use the Post Office to collect their benefit or pension if they wish by using a bank account, some 25 different bank accounts can be accessed at post office branches now, and we hope there could be more in the future.

We will aim to develop a joint strategy with the Post Office to move customers from the Post Office card account between now and 2010. Our priority will be to ensure that this is a straightforward process for the customers. I understand the Post Office is developing new banking and savings products which may be suitable for some existing Post Office card account customers.

We would like every DWP customer who currently has a Post Office card account to do their banking at the Post Office if that is what they want. There is no reason why the viability of the post offices should be threatened if customers continue to draw cash at the Post Office after moving on from the Post Office card account.

Mr. Alan Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to the answer of 6 February 2006, Official Report, columns 597–8W, if he will list the 25 different bank accounts referred to; and whether each allows customers to make at least 52 withdrawals each year at post offices without incurring bank charges. [51035]

Mr. Plaskitt [holding answer 13 February 2006]: Customers who hold basic bank accounts with one of a wide range of high street banks can use any post office branch to make an unlimited number of cash withdrawals free of charge. Such banks are: Abbey; Alliance and Leicester; Bank of Ireland; Bank of Scotland; Barclays; Clydesdale Bank; Co-operative Bank; First Trust; Halifax; HSBC; Lloyds TSB; Nationwide; NatWest; Northern Bank; Royal Bank of Scotland; Ulster Bank and Yorkshire Bank. These accounts and their features are listed in the FSA leaflet "Basic Bank Accounts—your questions answered".

Some banks enable their current account customers to withdraw cash over the counter at post office branches, free of charge and without restriction on the number of withdrawals. Banks which offer this service include: Alliance and Leicester; Bank of Ireland; Barclays; Clydesdale Bank; Co-operative Bank; First Direct (Scotland only), Lloyds TSB, Nationwide Building Society and the internet banks smile and cahoot.

Private Members' Bills

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list those Private Members' Bills introduced under (a) Standing Order No. 14(6), (b) Standing Order No.23 and (c) Standing Order No.57 which were (i) supported and (ii) opposed by his Department in each session since 1997–98. [35984]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department for Work and Pensions was formed at the start of the 2001–02 parliamentary session. Information from that period to the end of the 2004–05 session is provided.

It is not possible to state whether or not the Department supported Bills that did not complete a Second Reading. Only one of the Bills listed as follows completed its Second Reading. The Department's position in relation to the one Bill that did complete its Second Reading is included next to its entry in the list.

Bills introduced under Standing Order No. 14(6)

Disabled people (Duties of public authorities)—Bridget Prentice;

Older people's commissioners—Ian Lucas;

Council Tax benefit (Entitlement information)—Tony Baldry;

Rights of savers—Sir Malcolm Rifkind—Opposed by the department.

Bills Introduced under Standing Order No.23

Needle stick injury—Laura Moffat;

Older people's rights commissioner—David Taylor;

Pensioner trustees and final payments—Mr. Jim Cunningham;

Health and safety at work (Offences)—Mr. Andrew Love;

Health and safety at work (Amendment)—Lawrie Quinn

Pensions (Clawbacks)—Mr. Kerry Pollard;

Universal funded pensions—Mr. Peter Lilley.

Bills introduced under Standing Order No.57

Health and safety at work (Offences)—Lawrie Quinn;

Pensions (Winding up)—Mr. Frank Field.

Statutory Sick Pay

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many personal capability assessments were conducted pursuant to the Social Security (Incapacity for Work) Miscellaneous Amendments Regulations 1999 in relation to those claiming statutory sick pay in each of the last three years. [49976]

Mrs. McGuire: The personal capability assessment is relevant to people claiming or receiving incapacity benefit, severe disablement allowance, or income support on the basis of incapacity. The personal capability assessment does not apply to statutory sick pay because, in that instance, incapacity for work is judged in relation to the job that the person has been doing under their contract of employment.

Sunset Clauses

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his policy is in respect of the use of sunset clauses in legislation. [33658]

Mr. Timms: The appropriateness of a sunset clause for the whole or part of any proposed legislation is considered on a case by case basis. It is also addressed when a regulatory impact assessment relating to legislation is being prepared.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Airguns

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to reduce the incidence of attacks on animals by use of airguns. [47848]

Hazel Blears [holding answer 2 February 2006]: We are determined to tackle all aspects of misuse of air weapons and are further tightening controls through provisions in the Violent Crime Reduction Bill which will increase the age limit for owning an air weapon to 18 and introduce a new offence of firing beyond the boundaries of premises. We believe it is important to control the easy availability of air weapons and there are also provisions in the Bill to restrict the sale of air weapons by way of trade or business to registered firearms dealers approved by the police and to require the transfer of the weapon to be on a face to face basis.

Animal Cruelty

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, how many people were convicted of cruelty towards animals (a) in Westmorland and Lonsdale and (b) England in each year since 1997. [47056]

Fiona Mactaggart: Persons found guilty for various offences connected with animal cruelty are shown in the table for South Lakeland petty sessional area and England, 1997 to 2004. It is not possible to separately identify Westmorland as the data is not collected at this level of detail.

Statistics on court proceedings for 2005 will be available in the autumn.

Antisocial Behaviour Orders

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many anti-social behaviour orders have been issued to citizens living in Tamworth constituency in each month since their introduction; and how many of them were breached in each month. [37834]

Hazel Blears: Data on antisocial behaviour orders (ASBOs) are not available below local authority area (LAA) level. A table is available on the Crime Reduction website at www.crimereduction.gov.uk giving the number of ASBOs issued in England and Wales where restrictions have been imposed in LAAs.

The Home Office Court Proceedings Database holds breach proceedings only where there has been a conviction. These data are available at Criminal Justice System area level only.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many recipients of an antisocial behaviour order have been reconvicted of a criminal offence within two years. [48578]

Hazel Blears: The information requested is not available.

The Home Office's public service agreement (PSA) five specifies re-offending targets in terms of a reduction in the re-offending rate, the start point of which is an offender being discharged from a custodial sentence or starting a community sentence.

Antisocial behaviour orders, which are civil orders not criminal penalties, are not routinely measured. National re-offending rates are published annually to monitor the Home Office's progress against PSA five.

The most recent data are published in 'Adult re-offending: results from the 2002 cohort'. "Home Office Statistical Bulletin 25/05". This is available on the Home Office's website: http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/hosbpubs1.html.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many anti-social behaviour orders have been issued; [48579]

(2) how many people were jailed for a breach of their anti-social behaviour order in each year since 1999; [48580]

(3) how many anti-social behaviour orders have been breached in each year since 1999; [48581]

Hazel Blears: The number of antisocial behaviour orders (ASBOs) issued, as reported to the Home Office, up to 30 June 2005 (latest available) is 6,497.

ASBO breach data are currently available from one June 2000 to 31 December 2003 for ASBOs issued since one June 2000. The available information is given in the table.

The number of antisocial behaviour orders breached, as reported to the Home Office, by period and custodial sentence resulting, from 1 June 2000 to 31 December 2003[1]—England and Wales

	Total breached	Custodial sentence given
Jun 2000 to December 2000	14	4
2001	118	60
2002	240	101
2003	609	297
Jun 2000 to December 2003	793	437

[1] Breaches and custodial sentences are counted In this table on a persons basis, i.e. where the order has been breached or custodial sentence given on more than one occasion within the same period, a person is counted once only within that period.

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many antisocial behaviour orders were (a) issued and (b) breached in 2004 by each London borough; [48973]

(2) how many antisocial behaviour orders made during (a) 2004 and (b) 2005 an individual support order was attached. [48975]

Hazel Blears: A table giving a breakdown by the local government authority area in which prohibitions are imposed within antisocial behaviour orders (ASBOs) is available on the Crime Reduction website at www.crimereduction.gov.uk. This table gives data by year since ASBOs were introduced up to 30 June 2005 (latest available).

ASBO breach data are currently available from 1 June 2000 to 31 December 2003 for ASBOs issued since 1 June 2000. However, the data are available at Criminal Justice System area level only.

The number of Individual Support Orders (ISOs) issued, as reported to the Home Office, in 2004 is seven. From January to June 2005 16 had been issued.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the reasons for the differences in the number of antisocial behaviour orders issued in each police force; and if he will make a statement. [36398]

Hazel Blears: There are differences in the number of antisocial behaviour orders issued in each criminal justice area (coterminous with police force areas). This is because it is up to local agencies to decide on the most appropriate intervention to tackle antisocial behaviour in their area based on their knowledge of what works best locally. The key issue is whether antisocial behaviour is being reduced on the ground, not which measure is used to achieve this.

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he plans to collect data on the number of antisocial behaviour orders that are issued to individuals with (a) disabilities and (b) mental illnesses. [48974]

Hazel Blears: We have no such plans at present. Information is not collected centrally about the characteristics or circumstances of persons issued with an antisocial behaviour order.

Charity Commission

Mr. Andrew Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much was spent by the Charity Commission on interim (a) managers and (b) receivers of charities in each of the last five years; and what the (i) average, (ii) upper and (iii) lower decile spending per charity was in each year. [51711]

Paul Goggins: This is a matter for the Charity Commission as the Government Department responsible for the regulation of charities in England and Wales. The Executive Director of Legal and Charity Services at the Charity Commission will write to the hon. Member and a copy of his reply will be placed in the Library.

Child Curfew Orders

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many child curfew orders have been issued in each local authority area in England and Wales. [49045]

Fiona Mactaggart: The information requested is shown in the following table.

Child Protection

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will issue guidance to (a) the police and (b) the Crown Prosecution Service, on how long an individual may be formally investigated under child protection legislation, before being (i) informed of the issues in question and (ii) charged or the investigation closed; [49570]

(2) what assessment he has made of the safeguards for individuals under investigation under child protection legislation; and if he will make a statement. [49620]

Hazel Blears [holding answer 9 February 2006]: The Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 (PACE) and the accompanying codes of practice, provide that an arrested person may be detained without charge for the purposes of investigating an offence for up to 24-hours initially, extended up to 36-hours by an officer of superintendent rank or above. The police may apply to a magistrate to authorise detention without charge for up to a maximum period of 96-hours.

The detained person may be issued bail at any time during this process to enable the investigation to continue. There is no limit to the number of times the person may be released subject to bail or be detained for further questioning provided that the total period in custody does not exceed the relevant authorised period of detention. When the officer in charge of the investigation considers that there is sufficient evidence to provide a realistic prospect of conviction, he must inform the custody officer without delay and a decision taken on whether the detained person should be charged or referred to the prosecutor for charge.

In November 2005 the Department for Education Skills published guidance on dealing with allegations of abuse against teachers and other staff, which was developed in co-operation with the Home Office and Crown Prosecution Service. The guidance is intended to provide effective protection for children, but at the same time to support school staff by ensuring that cases are dealt with as fairly and quickly as possible. It includes indicative target timescales for different parts of the process.

The Government plans to extend this approach to cover people who work with children in other settings. Implementation will be overseen by the Local Safeguarding Children Boards, to be set up in all local authority areas by April 2006. The guidance can be found at:

www.dfes.gov.uk/teachernet/childprotection.

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) men and (b) women under investigation by the West Yorkshire police force under child protection legislation have not been (i) informed of the issues in question and (ii) charged. [49571]

Hazel Blears [holding answer 9 February 2006]: The chief constable is responsible for the day-to-day operational management of the force. You may therefore wish to redirect your query to him.

Clive Hayes

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will investigate the circumstances which led to (a) the late Clive Hayes being risk-assessed as being suitable for placement in open conditions at Leyhill Prison and (b) the decision to release Mr. Hayes while he was serving a life sentence; and if he will make a statement. [51760]

Fiona Mactaggart: There are no plans at this stage to conduct an investigation into the decisions taken in relation to Mr. Hayes' release or his transfer to open conditions. However, I can say that his case is being reviewed by the probation service in line with the processes in place for addressing those cases where an offender has been charged with a serious further offence. This review will take place despite the fact that Mr. Hayes was not charged with a further offence prior to committing suicide.

It would be inappropriate to address the circumstances leading to Mr. Hayes' transfer to open conditions and his release in 1995. However, it is the case that most lifers normally spend some time in open conditions in preparation for possible release. The process for transferring a lifer to open conditions involves the independent Parole Board considering a comprehensive range risk assessments from a range of prison and other staff covering the lifer's offence, risk factors and progress during sentence. The panel's advice is then considered by the Secretary of State who will take the final decision on the matter. That process was followed in 1993 in relation to Mr. Hayes' transfer to Leyhill open prison.

The responsibility for Mr. Hayes' release in 1995 was a matter for the independent Parole Board, not the Secretary of State. The main criterion governing the Parole Board's consideration of his case was whether it was necessary for the protection of the public that he should continue to be confined. The panel that considered his case in 1995 clearly took the view that the level of risk of harm was acceptable and directed his release on life licence.

Closing the Gap Report

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 17 January 2006, Official Report, column 1266W, on the "Closing the Gap" report, whether (a) ministers and (b) officials provided comment to Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary as a result of the briefing on "Closing the Gap" prior to 13 September 2005. [44292]

Hazel Blears [holding answer 20 January 2006]: Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary sought and received comments from various sources as they finalised the "Closing the Gap" report. These were taken into account as appropriate prior to publication on 13 September 2005.

Cocaine

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to reduce imports of cocaine (a) from Jamaica by air and (b) from South America by ship; and what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of such steps. [44118]

Dawn Primarolo: I have been asked to reply.

The UK Government initiated Operation Airbridge in June 2002 with the aim of achieving a significant reduction in cocaine smuggling by couriers by measures such as outward passenger screening. HMRC worked closely with the Jamaican Constabulary Force and the measures taken, together with the introduction of a visa regime have contributed to a substantial reduction in the number of couriers from Jamaica targeting the UK.

The UK Government have supported efforts to improve drug detection in South American states by providing equipment and training—for example in the identification of shipping containers that may be used to conceal cocaine. I cannot give further details as to do so would prejudice law enforcement objectives and international relations. The government's approach has produced some good results, including in the first 10 months of 2005 working with international partners to take out almost 30 tonnes of cocaine destined for the European market.

Community Supervision and Support Centres

Dr. Blackman-Woods: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will announce his decision on the locations of the two proposed new women's Community Supervision and Support Centres announced in 2005. [49216]

Fiona Mactaggart: My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary announced in March 2005 that £9.15 million would be devoted over a four year period to establish new initiatives to tackle women's offending in the community. In December 2005, Ministers subsequently approved the Together Women Programme being run via two demonstration projects within the two Regional Offender Manager regions of Yorkshire and Humberside and the North West.

The Regional Offender Managers for the regions have been informed of the decision and a formal announcement will be made once proposals for the two projects have further been developed.

Community Support Officers

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police community support officers have been introduced in (a) Uxbridge and (b) the London borough of Hillingdon; and what assessment he has made of their impact on crime and antisocial behaviour. [48520]

Hazel Blears: At the end of September 2005 the London borough of Hillingdon Operational Command Unit (OCU) had 49 Police Community Support Officers (PCSOs). Information is only collected at OCU level and is not available for Uxbridge. The deployment of PCSOs within Hillingdon is an operational matter for the Borough Commander (Chief Supt. Mark Toland). Their deployment across London is a matter for the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis.

"A National Evaluation of Community Support Officers" (Home Office Research Study 297) was published on 25 January. A copy of the report has been placed in the Library. PCSOs have been well received by the public. They are helping to restore respect in local communities by providing reassurance and tackling antisocial behaviour and low level crime.

Convictions

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many convictions were secured by (a) the Metropolitan Police Force, (b) Greater Manchester Police, (c) West Midlands Police, (d) Merseyside Police and (e) West Yorkshire Police for (i) commercial robbery and (ii) cash in transit crimes in (A) 2003, (B) 2004 and (C) 2005; and how many incidents of each type of crime were recorded by each force in each year. [40969]

Hazel Blears: Information on convictions is not available as the court proceedings database does not break down data for different types of robbery offence.

Data on incidents is not available. The available information relates to the number of recorded offences of robbery of business property and is given in the table. It is not possible to identify cash in transit robberies from the recorded crime data series.

Correspondence

Clare Short: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the Immigration and Nationality Directorate will reply to the letter from the right hon. Member for Birmingham, Ladywood, of 4 October 2005 on behalf of Mohamed Ali Sharif (DoB 20/1/1965), husband of Mariam Mahamoud (Home Office Reference MO598z or M1172937). [49852]

Dr. Howells: I have been asked to reply.

UKvisas, the department in the Foreign and Commonwealth Office with responsibility for entry clearance matters arising overseas, replied to my right hon. Friend on 9 February.

Crime

Anne Snelgrove: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to allow local authorities to close telephone boxes at night if they are being used by drug dealers. [50921]

Paul Goggins: There are currently no plans to give local authorities powers to close telephone boxes that may be used by drug dealers. The major telephone companies employ police liaison officers who work closely with individual police forces to deal with problems of criminality associated with the use of public telephone boxes.

Crime Detection Rates

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what crime detection rate for offences of (a) violence against the person, (b) sexual offences, (c) robberies, (d) burglaries and (e) theft of a vehicle was recorded in (i) Greater London and (ii) Uxbridge constituency in each year since 1995. [48521]

Hazel Blears: The available information relates to the Metropolitan police force area and the basic command unit (BCU) of Hillingdon. Smaller area data are not collected centrally.

Data collection at BCU level began in the financial year 1999–2000 when figures for six key offence groups were collected. Initially total burglary was not included and only became available from 2000–01. Information is given in the following table.

Metropolitan police detection rates (percentage)

Crime Statistics

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the (a) number of burglaries and (b) percentage annual change in the number of burglaries in (i) England and (ii) each English police force in each year from 1990–91 to 2005–06; and if he will make a statement. [45601]

Hazel Blears: The information requested is given in the tables.

Crimes against Young People

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what were the most common forms of crime committed against young people of school age in (a) Uxbridge, (b) the London borough of Hillingdon, (c) Greater London and (d) England in the last five years for which figures are available. [48513]

Hazel Blears: The information requested is not collected centrally. Apart from specific sexual offences, it is not possible to identify the age of the victim in the recorded crime statistics.

Criminal Cases Review Commission

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the occasions when the Criminal Cases Review Commission have referred (a) convictions and (b) sentences imposed by the Crown court to the Court of Appeal in each year since 1996. [47385]

Fiona Mactaggart: The following table shows how many cases in total the Commission has referred each year to the appeal courts. The majority of the 308 cases relate to convictions and sentences imposed by the Crown court and referred to the Court of Appeal. However, the figures also include 13 convictions which have been referred to the Court of Appeal in Northern Ireland and 12 convictions and two sentences imposed by the magistrates courts which have been referred to the Crown court.

Crown Prosecution Service

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what changes are proposed to the Crown Prosecution Service consequent upon the amalgamation of police forces. [50992]

Mr Mike O'Brien: I have been asked to reply.

The Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) is working closely with Home Office and police colleagues in identifying the implications for the CPS of police restructuring.

The CPS is examining various options on how best to respond to the proposed police restructure. The Law Officers and the Director of Public Prosecutions recognise the benefits of co-terminosity of CPS Areas with police forces.

DNA Samples

Grant Shapps: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to request DNA samples from serving police officers on a (a) voluntary and (b) compulsory basis. [47816]

Hazel Blears: The provision of a DMA sample by police personnel for inclusion on the Police Elimination Database (FED) is voluntary for those who were in employment by the police when the Database was set up in 2000. It is a condition of service for personnel who have joined the police since 1 August 2002. There are no plans to change this.

Dog Theft

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will make a statement on dog theft and the actions being taken to combat it; [33670]

(2) if he will meet relevant associations to discuss the problem of animal theft and the creation of a British pet register. [33870]

Hazel Blears: Theft of property, including dogs, is a crime under the Theft Act 1968 and is punishable by up to seven years in prison.

Where this problem emerges as a pressing local crime issue, it would be for the police, in consultation with the Crime and Disorder Reduction Partnership, to take any necessary action. I do not therefore have any plans to meet with the relevant organisations to discuss this issue.

There are already voluntary databases for missing and found pets and owners can voluntarily undertake to have their pets permanently identified (through micro-chipping and tattooing) and registered.

A compulsory dog licence system has already been tried but was repealed by the Local Government Act 1988 on the grounds that it cost more to administer than the revenue it raised, due in part to irresponsible owners who did not pay for a licence.

Drug Classification

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the evidence base was for determining the original classification system for controlled drugs. [47809]

Paul Goggins: The evidence for establishing the classification system under the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971 was the system of controls placed on drugs under the United Nations Single Convention on Narcotic Substances 1961 together with the recommendations of the Advisory Committee on Drug Dependence.

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the standard criteria used by the Advisory Council on the Misuse of Drugs are when considering a drug for classification. [47811]

Paul Goggins: The ACMD cover three domains of harmfulness when considering the classification of drugs, namely:

Physical and mental health

Dependence-producing potential

Social

Consideration of the harmfulness of a substance to physical and mental health includes: the acute harmfulness of a substance (i.e. its potential to cause harm during the immediate period after administration); the chronic harms (those which persist after short-term exposure or which develop as a consequence of repeated use), and the harms posed by those substances administered by intravenous injection.

Drug dependence is different for each substance. It can be related to the duration and amount used, as well as to characteristics of the user.

Social harms include the potential damage to others when individuals are under the influence of the substance.

Drug Treatment Orders

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent assessment he has made of the effectiveness of drug treatment orders. [43589]

Fiona Mactaggart: The National Probation Directorate routinely monitors Drug Treatment and Testing Order (DTTO) effectiveness through analysis of key performance data. This indicates that 89 per cent. of offenders on DTTOs are being retained in treatment for at least 12 weeks, which is the minimum treatment period reported by the National Treatment Agency as having some impact on drug use and offending.

Completion rates for DTTOs have also improved from 28 per cent. in 2003, as reported by the Public Accounts Committee, to 36 per cent. in 2004–05. An evaluation of DTTO pilots (Hough et al, 2003) found statistically significant reductions in reconviction rates between DTTO completers and non-completers, as well as between all those starting DTTOs and a comparison group. However, it is not known to what extent these results were due to the programme.

The DTTO has gradually been replaced by the Drug Rehabilitation Requirement (DRR) of the community order from April 2005 for offenders aged 18 or over. The DRR is a more flexible order, aimed at a wider target group and treatment is more tailored to individual need.

Emergency Services (Criminal Convictions)

Justine Greening: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many of those convicted of a criminal offence in the last year for which figures are available were employed by the emergency services at the time of their offence. [49186]

Fiona Mactaggart [holding answer 6 February 2006]: Data is not held centrally by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform or by the Department of Health on the number of offenders who have been found guilty and who were employed by the emergency services at the time of their offence.

EU Migrants

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many migrants have entered the UK from each accession country since May 2004. [50655]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 14 February 2006:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question about how many migrants have entered the UK from each accession country since May 2004. (50655)

The latest available estimates of migrant inflows of residents from each EU accession country are for 2004. They are shown in the attached table 1. The estimates are produced annually from the International Passenger Survey (IPS) where a migrant is defined as a person who, on entry to the UK, states an intention to stay for a year or more. Such intentions may not be realised. On average, just over 70 per cent. of the annual inflows from the accession countries in 2004 occurred in the second half of the year. The estimates are subject to error because they are calculated from a sample survey. For this reason, estimates for some of the smaller migrant inflows from some accession countries have been grouped together.

A special monthly analysis of the number of visitors to the UK from overseas, by nationality, is available from the IPS for the EU accession countries. It is available at the following web address:

http://www.statistics.gov.uk/STATBASE/Productasp?vlnk=12222.

Note that these data cover visits for all purposes, such as holidays and visits by migrants.

European Commission (Anti-crime Measures)

Mr. Gauke: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what his policy is on the European Commission's proposals for harmonisation of the methodology used in the compilation of crime statistics. [36322]

Hazel Blears [holding answer 12 December 2005]: My officials are members of the taskforce set up by EUROSTAT to take forward these proposals which were included as part of the five-year Hague Programme agreed by the European Council in November 2004. So far, no proposals have been put forward by EUROSTAT.

Forensic Science

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the training for scene of crime officers, with particular reference to the involvement of the (a) Forensic Science Service and (b) Metropolitan Police Forensic Science Laboratory. [49167]

Hazel Blears: The training of scenes of crime officers (SOCOs) is controlled by the Central Police Training and Development Authority (Centrex) at the National Training Centre for Scientific Support to Crime Investigation's (NTC). Initial SOCO training is carried out through two routes. The first is a nine-week residential initial crime-scene investigator training course which covers photography, combined trace evidence theory and practice. The second is a three-week volume crime-scene investigator (VCSI) course covering disciplines required to examine burglary and vehicle crime with the principal focus being on DNA and fingerprint evidence. This course is then followed by the conversion VCSI course which will enhance the existing skills of the VCSI to bring them up to the level of a substantive SOCO. SOCO trainees may then join the development crime-scene investigator course which enhances skills used in specialised areas including the investigation of suspicious fires and also firearms and/or explosives incidents.

On successful completion of this training, SOCOs are usually posted to a police force on a one to two year development programme. Following this on-the-job training period SOCOs may then attend a further two week course, which covers more detailed skills and techniques. The NIC also offer specialist short courses for SOCOs, including fire investigation, forensic archaeology, facial identification techniques and management training. Once fully qualified, SOCOs are usually required to attend a two week NIC refresher course every five years. This aims to review and refresh knowledge and skills, and keep up to date with new developments in scene of crime analysis.

The Forensic Science Service (FSS), which incorporated the Metropolitan Police Forensic Science Laboratory from 1 April 1996, is the main supplier of forensic science services to police forces in England and Wales. The FSS employ SOCOs, but it is expected that all SOCOs will be fully qualified before joining the organisation.

Home Detention Curfew Scheme

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much has been spent on the home detention curfew schemes in each of the past five years, broken down by (a) equipment development and maintenance and (b) personnel. [45869]

Fiona Mactaggart: Since the start of the scheme in 1999 over 120,000 prisoners have been released on home detention curfew (HDC). At any one time there are around 3,200 prisoners on HDC, which represents the capacity of around five or six medium-sized prisons.

Expenditure on the home detention curfew scheme under the electronic monitoring contracts in the last five completed financial years is shown in the table. The amount payable under the contracts for delivering the service is not broken down by equipment and staff costs.

Financial year	Expenditure on HOC (£)
2000–01	24,470,992.04
2001–02	24,095,179.86
2002–03	28,407,664.92
2003–04	31,768,270.94
2004–05	31,690,034.23

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many electronic tags used in the Home Detention Curfew Scheme have been (a) found to be faulty and (b) vandalised and had to be replaced in each of the last five years. [45870]

Fiona Mactaggart: Since new electronic monitoring contracts began on 1 April 2005, the contractors have reported nearly 700 cases of offenders on Home Detention Curfew who had damaged their electronic monitoring equipment. Any offender who is found to have deliberately caused such damage will be in breach of his or her licence conditions and recalled to prison.

Information is not available broken down in the way requested, or for the period before 1 April 2005, and cannot be provided except at a disproportionate cost.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps his Department is taking to ensure that those agencies contracted to monitor tagged criminals are properly scrutinised and held to account for their performance. [48686]

Fiona Mactaggart: The two contractors must comply with Home Office requirements for delivering the electronic monitoring service and must meet a range of specified performance levels. The Home Office audits their performance every month. Any under-performance results in financial deductions from the amount paid to them for delivering the service. In the current financial year, a total of £100,000 has been deducted.

Homosexuality

Philip Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) under what powers police may question individuals about their stated views on homosexuality; and what guidance he provides to police forces on this issue; [45044]

(2) what assessment he has made of the effect on free speech of police questioning of individuals about their stated views on homosexuality. [45045]

Hazel Blears: The Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 and accompanying codes of practice sets out police powers in respect of the questioning of a person suspected of involvement in an offence. The Home Office and the Association of Chief Police Officers jointly produced good practice and tactical guidance in March 2005 entitled: "Hate Crime: Delivering a Quality Service". The guidance is available on the ACPO website.

Hunting Act

Julie Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what (a) guidance and (b) training has been provided to police forces in England and Wales with regard to the Hunting Act 2004. [49456]

Hazel Blears: I understand that the Association of Chief Police Officers has issued guidance and a training package to police forces in England and Wales on the practical aspects of enforcing the Hunting Act.

Immigration Control Staff

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many whole-time equivalent immigration control staff were employed in control and surveillance of ports and airports in each year since 1999–2000. [49752]

Mr. McNulty: Overall, numbers of border control staff have risen. In 2001 the figure for full-time equivalent immigration control staff was 1,830.2, in 2002 the figure was 2,194, in 2003 the figure was 2,322.7, in 2004 the figure was 2,474.7, in 2005 the figure was 2,501.4 and in 2006 the figure is 3,453.6.

IMPACT System

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the total budget for the introduction of the IMPACT system is. [48166]

Hazel Blears: A total of £52 million was made available to the IMPACT programme for the financial year 2005–06.

Menezes Report

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects the report of the Independent Police Complaints Commission into (a) the death of Mr. Menezes and (b) the conduct of the Metropolitan police to be published. [47946]

Hazel Blears: The Independent Police Complaints Commission (IPCC) report on the death of Mr. de Menezes, including the conduct of the Metropolitan police, will be published when any relevant legal or disciplinary proceedings have concluded. It is too soon to say when this will be.

Munchausen Syndrome by Proxy

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent guidance has been issued to (a) health staff, (b) social services staff and (c) court personnel on dealing with cases of Munchausen Syndrome by Proxy. [48070]

Maria Eagle: I have been asked to reply.

In 2002, the Department of Health, Home Office, Department for Education and Skills and the Welsh Assembly published "Safeguarding Children in whom Illness is Fabricated or Induced", as supplementary guidance to the Government's child protection guidance "Working Together to Safeguard Children" (1999). It is intended to provide a national framework within which agencies and professionals at local level—individually and jointly—draw up and agree upon their own more detailed ways of working together in cases of fabricated or induced illness. It is addressed to those who work in the health and education services, the police, social services departments, the probation service, and others whose work brings them into contact with children and families.

National Offender Management Service

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 12 October 2005, Official Report, columns 488–89W, on the National Offender Management Service, if he will publish the business case for the National Offender Management Service. [24328]

Fiona Mactaggart [holding answer 3 November 2005]: A response to this question was given on the 12 December 2005, Official Report, column 1713W.

National Youth and Community Service

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the setting up of the National Youth and Community Service; and when he expects the first young people to participate in this scheme. [36154]

Hazel Blears: The Government are committed to creating the new national framework for youth action and engagement set out in the March 2005 Russell Commission report. Progress in implementing the report's recommendations has been encouraging.

In response to the report's headline recommendation, an independent charitable company has been created to drive forward implementation. This will bring together young people, the voluntary and community sector, Government and the private sector in a shared purpose to make volunteering a valued part of young people's lives and to engage one million more young people in voluntary activities. Rod Aldridge, executive chairman of Capita Group has been recruited through an open process as the chair and the recruitment of the chief executive officer and board is in the final stages. A key part of creating the framework is securing private sector support and so far £3.5 million has been secured from seven founding partners, T- Mobile, BskyB, Tesco, ITV, MTV, the Hunter Foundation and KPMG.

We expect that the independent charitable company will be publicly launched in April 2006, with the first young people undertaking voluntary and community activities in that month.

Neighbourhood Policing

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in what ways neighbourhood policing requires the engagement of non-police partners, with particular reference to (a) Government offices, (b) regional resilience fora, (c) local authorities, (d) health authorities, (e) fire services and (f) ambulance services. [49621]

Hazel Blears [holding answer 9 February 2006]: We are committed to ensuring that, by 2008, every area in England and Wales will benefit from dedicated, visible, accessible and responsive neighbourhood policing teams.

Neighbourhood policing cannot be delivered in isolation, and teams will work closely with a wide range of non-police partners to tackle shared community safety issues. How neighbourhood policing teams will engage with particular partners will vary form area to area, depending on local issues and priorities.

Neighbourhood Watch

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the leadership offered by the chairman of the National Neighbourhood Watch Association; and what representations he has received on this subject. [50213]

Hazel Blears: The association is an independent charity, which is not currently funded by the Home Office. The appointment of the trustees and office-holders of the NNWA is a matter for the association's membership. The Home Office has received a number of representations from activists within the neighbourhood watch movement concerning the governance of the association. These are matters for the NNWA's trustees to consider and resolve. I understand that the NNWA board of trustees have put in hand a consultation process with a view to reviewing and updating the association's governance arrangements later this year. No assessment has been made by the Home Office of the effectiveness of the chair of the National Neighbourhood Watch Association (NNWA).

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what funding the Department has allocated to the National Neighbourhood Watch Association in each of the last three years; and what assessment he has made of the use made of the funding. [50214]

Hazel Blears: During the financial year 2003–04 the Home Office provided the National Neighbourhood Watch Association (NNWA) with emergency funding totalling £350,000—paid in two tranches of £150,000 and £200,000—to support the association during the period following the withdrawal of third-party commercial sponsorship. The funding covered the running costs of the association, including staff salaries, while the NNWA sought alternative commercial sponsorship. In 2004–05 the Home Office provided a further £25,000 to the NNWA to support the association pending the start of a new commercial sponsorship deal in April 2005. No further funding was offered to the NNWA during 2005–06.

Offending Crime and Justice Survey

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what definition of assault and other thefts is used in the Offending Crime and Justice Survey. [34146]

Fiona Mactaggart: The definitions of assault and other thefts used in the Offending, Crime and Justice Survey are as follows:

Assault includes assault with injury (had used force or violence on anyone on purpose for example, by scratching, hitting, kicking, or throwing things, which had injured the person in someway) and assault without injury (had used force or violence on anyone on purpose which did not injure them in anyway).

Other thefts include theft from place of work, from school, shoplifting, theft from the person and other thefts. This last category includes any other thefts they have not already mentioned.

Police

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the average period has been in each of the last five years between police recruits applying to and starting training in (a) Staffordshire police force, (b) West Midlands police force, (c) Shropshire police force, (d) West Mercia police force and (e) Warwickshire police force, broken down by (i) sex and (ii) ethnic origin. [42101]

Hazel Blears: This information is not held centrally.

Staffordshire, West Midlands, West Mercia and Warwickshire police forces have informed me that neither the sex nor ethnic origin of candidates have any bearing on the length of time from application to appointment. The West Mercia constabulary includes Shropshire.

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the cost of training a new police officer was in the latest period for which figures are available. [47829]

Hazel Blears: There are no centrally collated data available for the cost of training a new police officer. The various stages of initial police training were, until recently, split between the officer's force and the Central Police Training and Development Authority (Centrex).

The Initial Police Learning and Development Programme (IPLDP) moves the whole of initial police training into forces. The rollout of the IPLDP will coincide with the implementation offer training costing plans using the national training cost model (NTCM) which will enable forces to assess their training costs on a consistent basis.

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on (a) the recruitment of police officers, (b) the recruitment of graduates to work as police officers and (c) the accelerated promotion scheme for graduate police officers. [49047]

Hazel Blears: Police officers are recruited through an assessment process which is based on nationally agreed competencies for the role and designed to select candidates who best match the requirements of the job.

Of the 5,801 applicants who were successful at the assessment centre between 1 November 2004 and 30 September 2005,1969 (34 per cent.) were graduates.

The accelerated promotion scheme for graduates was replaced by the police High Potential Development Scheme in 2002. The scheme is also open to non graduates. It provides development opportunities tailored to individual needs for those who successfully pass the selection process, to combine real work experience, practical training and academic study in order to move through the ranks to senior leadership positions in the police service.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many and what percentage of police officers have received training in basic interviewing skills. [49128]

Hazel Blears: All police officers in England and Wales currently receive training in relation to the interviewing of victims, witnesses and suspects as part of their initial training. Officers are educated to PEACE (planning and preparation, engage and explain, account, closure, evaluation) tier one. This is a training programme specifically designed to equip officers with the requisite skills to conduct well planned, professional interviews in an ethical and efficient manner. This has been implemented by all police forces in England and Wales, although certain elements of the course can be tailored to meet specific needs within an individual force. PEACE has now been incorporated as a core module of the Initial Police Learning and Development Programme (IPLDP) under which new police officers' competence against national occupational standards is assessed.

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on how police performance is assessed. [49130]

Hazel Blears: The performance of each police force in England and Wales is assessed in seven key areas: Reducing Crime, Investigating Crime, Promoting Safety, Providing Assistance, Citizen Focus, Resource Use and Local Policing.

Two assessments are made in each of these seven areas, based on a combination of data from Statutory Performance Indicators and judgement from Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary (the latter including an assessment with respect to 'tackling level two criminality').

The first assessment is made, typically, by comparing the performance achieved by a force to that achieved by a group of its peers. The second assessment is made by comparing the performance achieved by a force in one year to that achieved by the same force in the previous year. Special rules are used which take account of national policing priorities and data quality.

Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the impact of fuel and energy price increases on police service budgets. [49576]

Hazel Blears: The Association of Police Authorities provided estimates of additional cost pressures for next year, including the impact of fuel and energy costs, to inform decisions on the police grant settlement 2006–07. The estimates were taken fully into account in reaching final decisions.

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers have been employed in the Vale of Glamorgan division in each of the last five years. [49808]

Hazel Blears: Information on police officer numbers in the Vale of Glamorgan basic command unit is only available from March 2002. The data is shown in the table. Deployment of officers to each of the Basic Command Units in South Wales Police is an operational matter for the Chief Constable (Barbara Wilding). We have been informed by the force that Vale of Glamorgan currently has 220 police officers—the same as in March 2005.

South Wales Police—Vale of Glamorgan Basic Command Unit

As at 31 March:	Police numbers	Community Support Officers [1]
2002	195	—
2003	220	—
2004	228	—
2005	220	12

[1] Community Support Officer BCD strength collected for first time and is the position on 30 June 2005.

Mr. Vaizey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers there are per head of population in (a) the Metropolitan Police Service and (b) the Thames Valley Police Force. [47639]

Hazel Blears: In March 2005 (the latest available figures) the Metropolitan Police Service (MPS) had 433 police officers per 100,000 of the population. Thames Valley Police had 198 police officers per 100,000 of the population. The Metropolitan Police Service's unique capital city functions, such as anti-terrorist, security and protection work and the policing major national events, contribute to the MPS having a higher ratio than other forces.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the 50 fastest improving basic command units in the English police forces, based upon performance against key targets over the last 12 months; and if he will make a statement. [45594]

Hazel Blears: The Home Office does not currently collect or track targets at Basic Command Unit level as this is an operational matter at the discretion of the local Chief Constable. It is not therefore possible to list the performance of the 50 fastest improving Basic Command Units against these targets.

The Home Office publishes an annual Police Performance Assessment at force level which shows the comparative performance and direction of travel across a number of areas. The publication and all underlying data are available at http://www.police.homeoffice.gov.uk/performance-and-measurement/performance-assessment/assessments-2004–2005/

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will ensure that each (a) county council and (b) unitary council will continue to be represented by a minimum of one councillor on any new police authority after the merging of forces and authorities; and if he will make a statement; [39599]

(2) how he intends to ensure that local authority representation on new police authorities after force mergers reflects the political composition of the relevant councils; and if he will make a statement. [39605]

Hazel Blears: In order to discharge their functions effectively I believe strategic authorities should in most cases have a maximum of 23 members (in line with that of the Metropolitan Police Authority). I accept, however, that in some parts of the country, police authorities will need to be larger in order to ensure that all upper tier local authorities are represented. This is particularly important given that police authorities will continue to set a policing precept.

Where there are more councillor seats on a strategic police authority than the number of upper tier local authorities, we would expect the additional councillor appointments to reflect, as far as practicable, the political balance of the relevant councils when taken as a whole.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received about the proposed restructuring of police forces in (a) Sussex, (b) Kent and (c) Surrey; and if he will make a statement. [36901]

Hazel Blears [holding answer 23 December 2005]: My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary received business cases relating to police restructuring from the Sussex, Kent and Surrey police forces and authorities by 23 December 2005. Each business case was submitted jointly by the relevant force and its authority.

In addition to these representations the Home Secretary has received correspondence relating to police restructuring in Sussex, Kent and Surrey from a wide range of stakeholders including MPs representing constituencies within those police force areas, members of the public, and local councillors.

We are now in the process of assessing the submissions for their operational robustness and financial viability. The Home Secretary will be in a position to make an announcement on the options that are operationally viable in February and following this we will work with areas to decide how best to move forward.

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the Police National Computer is compatible with the Scottish Police Computer. [49750]

Hazel Blears: The data on Police National Computer (PNC) and Scottish Criminal Record Office (SCRO) is compatible. Data is exchanged between the two systems to allow forces in England, Wales and Scotland to access relevant data for their business needs.

As part of current arrangements Scottish conviction records are uploaded automatically to the PNC in England and Wales through the Scottish Criminal History System run by SCRO. Scottish forces use PNC in the same way as English and Welsh forces as there is access to PNC in all Scottish forces.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what assessment his Department has made of the financial impact on UK police forces of the new police pension scheme for future entrants;[32176]

(2) what the estimated cost to each police force is of the new pension arrangements for the police. [32177]

Hazel Blears: Two major changes are being made to police officer pensions from April 2006: a new pension scheme will apply to new entrants after that date; and the method of financing pension payments to former officers will be changed. The new Police Pension Scheme will still provide high-quality pensions for officers but at reduced cost for forces. The value of the pension benefits accruing to a typical member of the new scheme is estimated to be 7 per cent. of pay less than if they were a member of the old scheme.

Under the new pensions financing arrangements announced on 29 November 2005 forces will from April 2006 no longer pay the pensions of their retired officers out of their operating account but from a separate pensions account funded by employer and employee contributions and topped-up as necessary by central Government. The main pensions costs falling to forces' operating budgets will henceforth be in the form of new employer contributions to meet the cost of the accruing future pension liabilities of serving officers. Forces will pay employer contributions at a single national rate to cover the costs of pensions accruing to serving officers in both the current and the new Police Pension Schemes. The rate of employer contributions will be revised every three years following an actuarial assessment. As the proportion of officers who are members of the new scheme grows over the years, it is expected that the level of the employer contributions can be reduced.

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the capital costs of a merger of the Cheshire and Merseyside police forces. [47794]

Hazel Blears [holding answer 2 February 2006]: No final decisions have been made about the future structure of policing in the North West.

We are currently working to determine the viability of the options for reorganisation. This includes detailed analysis of the financial implications for set up costs and for future costs and benefits. We will use the results to assess the financial implications of mergers.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) when (a) he and (b) his Ministers last visited HMP Wandsworth; what the purpose of their visit was; for how long it lasted; and if he will make a statement; [40049]

(2) when he will reply to correspondence of 10 October from the hon. Member for North West Norfolk about the junior governor at HMP Wandsworth; and what the cause is of the delay in response. [40050]

Fiona Mactaggart: Ministers have made the following visits to Wandsworth prison as part of their programme of such visits: Fiona Mactaggart on 13 September 2005 and Baroness Scotland on1 November 2005.

The hon. Member's office sent me a copy of the letter on 19 December 2005. There is no record of the original letter having been received. I replied to the hon. Member on 5 January 2006.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) on what date (a) the Governor at HMP Wandsworth, (b) the Prison Service's Director of Operations, (c) the Director-General of the Prison Service and (d) Ministers became aware of the possession of drugs by a junior governor at HMP Wandsworth in June 2005; and if he will make a statement; [47133]

(2) who decided not to refer the case of the junior governor found in possession of drugs at HMP Wandsworth in June 2005 to the police; on what basis this decision was taken; who was consulted in making that decision; when that decision was taken; and if he will make a statement; [47135]

(3) who conducted the inquiry into the junior governor at HMP Wandsworth found in possession of drugs in June 2005; and if he will make a statement; [47136]

(4) what time elapsed between the junior governor found in possession of drugs in June 2005 being handed the drugs and handing the drugs over prior to being searched; and if he will make a statement; [47137]

(5) for how long the (a) investigation into and (b) suspension of the junior governor found in possession of drugs at HMP Wandsworth in June 2005 lasted; and if he will make a statement; [47138]

(6) whether the investigation into a junior governor found in possession of drugs at HMP Wandsworth in June 2005 was (a) formal and (b) informal; what factors were taken into account when deciding the nature of the investigation; who determined the nature of the investigation; and if he will make a statement. [47139]

Fiona Mactaggart: The Governor of Wandsworth was made aware of the incident on 29 June 2005, as was the Area Manager for London. The Director of Operations and Director General became aware in October 2005. Ministers were informed in October 2005.

The investigation was carried out by the Deputy Governor.

The Governor of Wandsworth took the decision not to refer the case to the police after an investigation revealed that the junior governor had been passed the small amount of drugs by a prisoner during the course of his duties and had later handed them in; there were staff and prisoner witnesses. After making his decision the Governor consulted the Area Manager who confirmed his actions.

The drugs were given to the junior governor by a prisoner on 25 June 2005, he handed them in on 29 June 2005.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners in (a) Coldingley prison and (b) England and Wales had their application for home detention curfew rejected because the victim objected to it being granted, in each of the last 10-years for which figures are available. [47405]

Fiona Mactaggart: In determining whether a prisoner will be granted Home Detention Curfew (HDC) prison governors consider the risk the prisoner poses to the victim or to members of the public, whether the prisoner's pattern of offending behaviour indicates a likelihood of re-offending during the HDC period, whether the prisoner is likely to comply with the conditions of the curfew and whether the proposed released address is suitable. Consideration of victims' concerns is an important part of the HDC suitability assessment process but Governors will not refuse to grant release to a prisoner purely on the basis that the victim objects to the release.

Where a prisoner is otherwise suitable for release on HDC and is subject to supervision, licence conditions can be set which prevent the offender making any contact with the victim or entering the victim's local area.

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the (a) highest, (b) lowest and (c) average inmate population of Woodhill prison in Milton Keynes (i) for each of the last five years and (ii) over the whole five-year period. [47420]

Fiona Mactaggart: The information requested, as recorded on the Prison Service IT system, is provided in the table.

Woodhill prison population totals over five years

	Average	Highest	Lowest
2001	655	676	638
2002	743	774	705
2003	767	791	754
2004	770	792	743
2005	762	772	748
Whole period, 2001–05	740	792	638

Note:
That these figures relate to the population at end month.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the impact of mandatory drug testing on the supply of controlled drugs into the prison estate at each prison establishment; and if he will make a statement. [48418]

Fiona Mactaggart: A comprehensive range of measures is in place to reduce the supply of drugs in each prison of which the mandatory drug testing (MDT) programme is one element. It is not possible to assess precisely the impact of anyone component in isolation. Overall, the positive MDT rate nationally has halved since 1997.

Research has shown that mandatory drug testing does exert a deterrent effect on drug misuse particularly on cannabis misuse.

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the average number of hours of time out of cell was on (a) weekdays and (b) weekends in each prison establishment in each of the last five years. [48689]

Fiona Mactaggart: The tables show the average time out of cell hours for each establishment over the last five years on (a) weekdays and (b) weekends. The 2005–06 figures show time unlocked up to the third quarter of the financial year 2005–06.

[1] Up to December 2005

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners in (a) England and (b) London who had completed education training and employment upon release (i) gained employment for over 12 months, (ii) experienced long-term unemployment and (iii) returned to prison in the last five years. [48704]

Fiona Mactaggart: The Home Office does not routinely record the post-release outcomes of prisoners.

While the Home Office does record the numbers of prisoners returning to prison within two years of release (39 per cent. of adult males and 32 per cent. of adult females released in 2001), this is not broken down by whether they completed an Education Training and Employment (ETE) programme in prison.

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of prisoners was in each category on 31 March in each of the last five years. [48792]

Fiona Mactaggart: The percentage of prisoners by category (A, B, C, D, "Other") on 31 March 2005 and the previous two years is shown in the following table. The information is not held prior to 2003.

Category of prisoners

Probation Service

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he plans to introduce legislation to abolish probation boards and replace them with trusts. [48192]

Fiona Mactaggart: We intend to bring forward legislation to restructure probation services as soon as the parliamentary timetable allows.

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many staff were employed in information technology by the National Probation Service in England and Wales at the end of the past five financial years. [48450]

Fiona Mactaggart: Information is not available for the full period requested. Data collected prior to 1 April 2003 is unreliable, and is not directly comparable with the more accurate figures collected since that time. The figures presented show staff in post, expressed in full time equivalent value, at the close of each quarter from 1 April 2003 to 30 September 2005.

Work force information is not collected in sufficient detail to allow reporting of only those staff working specifically in information technology. The following table shows the number of staff in post in the closest equivalent grouping which includes research, information, and information technology staff.

Prostitution

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the number of illegal brothels operating in (a) Romford and (b) England and Wales. [50029]

Fiona Mactaggart: No estimate is made centrally of the numbers of brothels in particular localities. As part of the recently published prostitution strategy this will be a first task for local partnerships in areas where prostitution is a problem.

Rape Crisis Organisations

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many rape crisis organisations received funding from his Department in each of the last five years; and how much each organisation received. [51346]

Paul Goggins: The Home Office funded the Rape Crisis Federation, an umbrella body for local rape crisis groups, from April 2001 until its closure in November 2003.

Funding in the financial years between 2001 and 2004 was as follows:

		Amount (£)
(a)	2001–02	406,000
(b)	2002–03	432,000
(c)	2003–04	209,800

In 2004, £4 million was placed in the victims fund to support the development of services for victims of sexual offending, over two financial years. The following table sets out the grant awards for the rape crisis organisations that have been successful in securing funding from the victims fund.

Regulatory Reform Orders

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many regulatory reform orders his Department has laid before Parliament in each of the last five calendar years. [46805]

Fiona Mactaggart: The Home Office laid one regulatory reform order before Parliament in 2004, which was the Regulatory Reform (Prison Officers) (Industrial Action) Order 2005. It was first laid in draft on 18 October 2004, made on 21 March 2005 and came into force on 22 March 2005. No other regulatory reform order has been laid during the specified period.

Reoffending

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people who had been placed in custody have re-offended in (a) Uxbridge constituency, (b) the London borough of Hillingdon, (c) Greater London and (d) England in each year since 1997. [48522]

Fiona Mactaggart: Re-offending rates are not currently available on a sub-national basis.

The most recent re-offending data for adults were published in 'Re- offending of adults: results from the 2002 cohort' which is available through the Home Office's website (http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/index.htm). The report shows the proportion of offenders who re-offended within two years and were subsequently convicted, and separately identifies offenders given custodial and community sentences. The report shows the re-offending rate of offenders released from prison for 2002 and 2000.

Reconviction data for 1997 through 2000 were published in 'Prison statistics England and Wales 2002' and data for 2001 were published in 'Offender Management Caseload Statistics 2003'. Both of these are publications are available on the Home Office website.

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the recidivism rate was among prisoners in the Cambridgeshire Probation Service area within two years of release in each year since 1997. [48666]

Fiona Mactaggart: Re-offending rates are not currently available on a sub-national basis.

National re-offending rates are published annually. The most recent data are published in 'Adult re-offending: results from the 2002 cohort'. "Home Office Statistical Bulletin 25/05". This is available on the Home Office's website: http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/hosbpubs1.html. The report shows the re-offending rate of offenders released from prison for 2002 and 2000.

Reconviction data for 1997 through 2000 were published in 'Prison statistics England and Wales 2002' and data for 2001 were published in 'Offender Management Caseload Statistics 2003'. Both of these are publications are available on the Home Office website.

Respect

Mrs. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to announce the pilot local authorities for the intensive family support projects outlined in the Respect action plan. [49952]

Hazel Blears [holding answer 9 February 2006]: The Respect Action Plan sets out the Government's plans to establish a national network of family support projects in the areas where they are needed. The Respect Task Force is currently discussing this with local authorities. A further announcement on the projects will be made shortly.

Safer Neighbourhood Teams

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many hours a week on average the Safer Neighbourhood Teams in the borough of Hammersmith and Fulham worked in the last period for which figures are available, broken down by ward. [44293]

Hazel Blears: The following table shows the number of hours per week, on average, that the Safer Neighbourhood Teams worked in the borough of Hammersmith and Fulham in November and December 2005. The figures for December are affected by public holidays and annual leave.

Scottish Intelligence Database

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the potential for the Scottish Intelligence Database to satisfy the recommendations of the Bichard Report. [49205]

Hazel Blears: The police service requirement, as articulated in the first progress report on the implementation of the Bichard Inquiry Recommendations, is for an information sharing, as well as intelligence sharing, capability. In developing the business case for the programme, we are looking at a number of options including whether an intelligence database might contribute to the requirement. In that context we have been taking into account the functionality offered by the Scottish Intelligence Database.

Secure Training Centres

Ms Keeble: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he will take following the Commission for Social Care Inspection report on Oakhill Secure Training Centre; and if he will make a statement. [40416]

Fiona Mactaggart: Following the Commission's annual inspection of Oakhill in May 2005, the centre's operator drew up an action plan to achieve improvements, which it agreed with the Youth Justice Board. Progress against the plan is reviewed regularly. At the board's request, the Commission's inspectors made a further, unannounced, visit to Oakhill at the end of November, during which they assessed progress against the action plan as well as the overall effectiveness of the centre. Following the visit, the Commission wrote to the board confirming that Oakhill is a safe and secure environment for the children placed there. The operator is reviewing the action plan, in consultation with the board, in order to achieve further improvements; and the board is continuing to monitor the centre's performance closely.

Service Personnel (Criminal Convictions)

Jeremy Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many of those convicted of a criminal offence in the last year for which figures are available were serving in the armed forces at the time of their offence. [49472]

Hazel Blears [holding answer 7 February 2006]: It is not possible to identify cases where those convicted of a criminal offence were serving in the armed forces, as this information is not held centrally by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform or by the Defence Analytical Services Agency (DASA).

Sex Offenders

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will introduce proposals to increase the obligations on convicted sex offenders relating to their ongoing contact with the police. [51793]

Paul Goggins: The notification requirements—which are commonly known as the sex offenders register—originally came into force on 1 September 1997. The Sexual Offences Act 2003 repealed and re-enacted those requirements with considerable amendments.

An offender who becomes subject to the notification requirements must, within three days of conviction or caution, notify the police, in person and at a prescribed police station: of his name, address, date of birth and national insurance number; of any change to their name or their address; if they spend seven days or more (whether consecutively or within a 12 month period) at an address they have not already notified to the police; and of any overseas travel for a period of three days or more.

All offenders must ensure that they re-confirm their notified details at least once every 12 months. If an offender fails to comply with these notification requirements then he commits a criminal offence with a maximum penalty of five years imprisonment.

We continue to monitor closely the effectiveness of the notification requirements and we will act if further obligations are shown to be necessary and proportionate.

Sex Shops

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what powers local authorities have to refuse to license new sex shops in their areas. [51079]

Paul Goggins: The main powers for local authorities to control sex shops are contained in the Local Government Miscellaneous Provisions Act 1982. It is adoptive legislation and it is for a local authority to decide whether to apply it to their area. Schedule three provides for the control and licensing of sex establishments. The powers to refuse to grant or renew licences are contained in paragraph 12. The grounds for refusal include: consideration of the suitability of the applicant and of the locality of the premises to be licensed. It is for local authorities to determine how many licences to grant in a locality and they may decide that nil is an appropriate number.

Stronger Safer Communities Fund

Mr. Wills: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much was allocated to Swindon from the stronger safer communities fund in (a) 2004–05 and (b) 2005–06; and how much is planned to be allocated in 2006–07. [49412]

Hazel Blears: The Safer and Stronger Communities Fund (SSCF), which merges some central Government funding streams, is to be rolled out to all areas in England on 1 April 2006. The Home Office contribution to SSCF includes the building safer communities fund. The Swindon Crime and Disorder Reduction Partnership (CDRP) was allocated a total of £217,179 from the building safer communities fund in 2004–05. This included a £25,000 grant towards the cost of an antisocial behaviour co-ordinator. The same amount was allocated in 2005–06.

No SSCF funding has been given to Swindon from the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister in either of those financial years.

Details of funding for 2006–07 have yet to be announced.

Under-age Drinking

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prosecutions have taken place for underage drinking in Uxbridge in each year since 1990. [48519]

Hazel Blears: There is no specific offence of under-age drinking.

However, the available information from the Court Proceedings database held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform, gives the number of defendants aged 10–17 years who were proceeded against in Uxbridge PSA, for offences of being drunk, drunk at a designated sports event and drunk and disorderly together with defendants proceeded against for the offence of: "Selling etc., intoxicating liquor to persons under 18 for consumption on the premises", 1990–2004. Please see following table.

Statistics for 2005 will be available in the autumn.

Visas

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications made in the United Kingdom for a visa submitted prior to the introduction of the new charging policy on 1 August 2003 remain to be dealt with; and when he expects that all such applicants will have heard the result of their applications. [43334]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The date of the introduction of the new charging policy, 1 August 2003, precedes accurate data from the current casework database, and statistics are therefore not entirely reliable. Provisional management information suggests around 500 general group leave to remain cases submitted prior to 1 August 2003 are undecided. Consideration of these cases is ongoing and applicants will be notified as soon as a decision in their case has been made.

Work Permits

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many teachers working in the United Kingdom have been issued (a) visas and (b) work permits to work in the UK. [48605]

Dr. Howells: I have been asked to reply

UKvisas does not hold statistics on the numbers of applicants who apply for and are granted visas at our overseas missions to work as teachers in the UK.

In terms of work permit applications, the figures for permissions to teach in schools and colleges in the UK that were granted to foreign nationals in the last four years is as follows:

	Permissions
2002	8,353
2003	6,463
2004	5,084
2005	4,349

Young Offenders

Mr. Hurd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people of school age have been placed in custody in (a) Ruislip-Northwood constituency, (b) the London borough of Hillingdon, (c) Greater London and (d) England in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [40715]

Fiona Mactaggart: The information requested for Greater London and England is provided in the table. No people of school age were received into custody in the Ruislip-Northwood constituency or the London borough of Hillingdon.

Information for prison establishments is as recorded on the Prison Service IT system.

Information for Secure Training Centres and Local Authority Secure Children's Homes has been supplied by the Youth Justice Board.

HEALTH

Alcohol Consumption

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent estimate she has made of the proportion of (a) men and (b) women who drink more than the recommended weekly amounts of alcohol; and what assessment she has made of trends in alcohol consumption since 1979. [49533]

Caroline Flint: The Department can provide estimates of the percentage of men and women exceeding the recommended weekly alcohol consumption limit in England from 1992 to 2002 which is shown in table 1. Earlier data are not readily available for England only. We are also able to give estimates of the percentage of men and women exceeding the recommended daily alcohol limit in England from 1998 to 2004 which is shown in table 2. The assessment of alcohol consumption is that the figures have remained constant during the periods covered.

Ambulance Service

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the likely effect on the performance of combined emergency services control rooms of mergers of ambulance services. [47798]

Mr. Byrne: The Department is currently consulting on proposals for reconfiguration of ambulance trusts within England, and if established, it would be a matter for the proposed ambulance trusts to decide, following consultation, whether be appropriate locally.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will issue guidance to ambulance trusts to ensure that first responders are not used as a substitute for fully equipped ambulances in life-threatening situations. [47837]

Mr. Byrne: Guidance is set out in the statistical bulletin, "Ambulance services, England: 2004–05" which states that an emergency response may be by:

an emergency ambulance: or a rapid response vehicle equipped with a defibrillator to provide treatment at the scene; or an approved first responder equipped with a defibrillator, despatched by and accountable to the ambulance service.

Although the initial emergency response may be to send a rapid response vehicle or approved first responder, a fully equipped Ambulance vehicle able to transport the patient in a clinically safe manner is still required to attend the incident within 14 minutes of the initial call in urban areas and within 19 minutes in rural areas.

Both these standards are exceeded nationally, with in 2004–05, 76.2 percent, of category A calls receiving an initial response within eight minutes and 96 percent, of category A calls attended by a fully equipped ambulance within the 14 and 19 minute standards.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the use by ambulance trusts of first responders; and what effect the use of first responders has had on ambulance response figures since they were introduced. [47838]

Mr. Byrne: Clinical evidence proves conclusively that early defibrillation and resuscitation saves more lives. The use of first responders, particularly in rural areas, can help to ensure that patients receive advanced life support as soon as possible and therefore improve outcomes.

The national defibrillation programme has funded community defibrillation officer posts in ambulance trusts. One of the roles of the community defibrillation officers is to monitor the impact of first responder schemes and this work is currently underway.

No national assessment has been made of the effect of the use of first responders on ambulance trust response times.

Asbestosis

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what procedures are in place to enable claims for compensation by those who have contracted asbestosis in the course of their work in the NHS. [50162]

Jane Kennedy: The ownership of buildings, previously used or currently used by the national health service may relate to strategic health authorities, NHS trusts, foundation trusts and primary care trusts. These are independent bodies and hence there is no standard procedure regarding the handling of claims for compensation by those who have contracted asbestosis in the course of their work in the NHS.

Assisted Suicide

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she will make a statement on the Government's policy on assisted suicide; [34290]

(2) if she will make it her policy to oppose the Assisted Dying for the Terminally Ill Bill [Lords]; and if she will make a statement. [34572]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Assisted suicide is an offence under the Suicide Act. We have no plans to change the legislation in this area. The issues raised by Lord Joffe's Bill have always been dealt with as a matter of conscience and it is appropriate that Parliament should lead on debates of this nature and provide the forum where all shades of opinion can be heard.

Audiology Services

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average pay for (a) qualified audiologists and (b) audiology assistants in London hospitals was in the last year for which figures are available. [49207]

Jane Kennedy: The Department does not hold the information in the format requested. However, the table shows the estimated average annual salary and earnings of consultant specialists in audiology and qualified and unqualified non-medical staff working in audiology employed by the national health service in the London Government office region as at August 2004.

Estimated average annual salary and earnings of consultant specialists in audiology and qualified and unqualified non medical staff working in audiology employed by the NHS in the London Government office region as at August 2004

London Government office region as at August 2004	Estimated average annual salary (£)	Estimated average annual earnings (£)
Medical
Consultant Specialists in Audiological Medicine	75,500	82,700
Non-medical
Qualified Clinical Scientist (Grade A and B) Audiology	30,000	33,600
Qualified MTO/ Technician Audiology	24,800	27,500
Assistant Audiologists (unqualified)	13,900	16,500

Notes:
1. The Earnings Survey is based on a sample of approximately 50 per cent. of NHS trusts. Figures are from SPS payroll data from all trusts in the survey for the month of August 2004.
2. Earnings figures are based on monthly payments in August, multiplied by 12 to give annual equivalent amounts.
3. Earnings figures are rounded to the nearest hundred pounds.
4. The sample used in the survey is not necessarily geographically or structurally representative of all trusts in London Government office region.
5. The sample size of both staff groups is small and hence estimated average annual salary and earnings of individuals within these groups maybe subject to some variability.

Avian Influenza

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 10 November 2005, Official Report, columns 664W, on avian influenza, what representations she has received about the adequacy of the escalation plans. [35412]

Ms Rosie Winterton: It is important to be clear about the differences between seasonal influenza, avian influenza and pandemic influenza. Avian influenza is a disease which mainly affects birds, Seasonal influenza refers to the virus that circulates in the human population and causes widespread illness each winter. Pandemic influenza will only occur after an avian virus has mutated into a novel strain which can spread easily between humans and to which they do not have immunity.

We are working with the Intensive Care Society and other operational organisations in order to develop revised guidance against which local national health service emergency planners can assess their critical care plans for any outbreak of pandemic influenza.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans are in place in the UK to tackle an H5N1 influenza pandemic; and if she will make a statement. [43156]

Ms Rosie Winterton: It is important to be clear about the differences between seasonal influenza, avian influenza and pandemic influenza. Avian influenza is a disease which mainly affects birds. Seasonal influenza refers to the virus that circulates in the human population and causes widespread illness each winter. Pandemic influenza will only occur after an avian virus has mutated into a novel strain which can spread easily between humans and to which they do not have immunity.

The United Kingdom has had a national influenza pandemic plan since 1997 and was one of the first countries to publish a pandemic plan. This plan has been updated and the Government published the revised, "UK Influenza Pandemic Contingency Plan" on 19 October 2005. The revised plan outlines the actions that Government and other authorities are taking to prepare for a possible pandemic, and the actions that different organisations would take in the event of a pandemic to slow down the spread of infection and minimise disruption. The plan can be accessed on the Department's website at: www.dh.gov.uk/pandemicflu.

Bexley Primary Healthcare Trust

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent representations she has received on the funding of Bexley Primary Healthcare Trust. [48899]

Jane Kennedy: There has been one letter received by the Department on the subject of general practitioner funding in Bexley care trust.

Capsticks Solicitors

Mr. Djanogly: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the charge per hour is for legal advice provided by Capsticks solicitors to the NHS in connection with defending clinical negligence claims. [51179]

Jane Kennedy [holding answer 13 February 2006]: The agreed charge per hour for legal advice provided by all NHS Litigation Authority panel solicitors to the national health service in connection with defending clinical negligence claims is shown in the table. This rate is also the agreed rate for all panel firms who have approved offices in London.

Community Hospitals

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many community hospitals there are in England. [46818]

Mr. Byrne: The newly published White Paper "Our health, our care, our say: a new direction for community services" is available in the Library and on the Department's website at: www.dh.gov.uk/assetRoot/04/12/74/59/04127459.pdf.

Paragraph 6.41 of this publication states that:

> 'It is estimated that there are 350 community hospitals in England, if we use the definition of a community hospital as 'a service which offers integrated health and social care and is supported by community-based professionals'.

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the number of community hospitals which may close as a result of primary care trust deficits. [46819]

Mr. Byrne: The Department has carried out no such assessment.

However, the newly published White Paper, "Our health, our care, our say: a new direction for community services" makes clear that community facilities should not be closed in response to short-term budgetary pressures that are not related to the viability of the community facility itself.

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps the Government has taken to support the continued operation of community hospitals before the publication of the White Paper on Health and Social Care in the Community. [46820]

Mr. Byrne: The Department has been working with the Community Hospitals Association, which led to the launch of an online toolkit in October 2005. The toolkit is available on the Care Services Improvement Partnership's website at www.developingcommunityhospitals.org.uk and provides support to those people involved with the development of community hospitals.

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to her oral statement of 30 January 2006, Official Report, columns 21–38W, (1) on health and social care services, whether Bicester will be the location of one of the new generation of community hospitals with intermediate beds; [48886]

(2) how many new community hospitals she expects will be built as part of the new generation of community hospitals; how many of these she expects will have intermediate beds; and what new money will be provided for the (a) construction and (b) running of new community hospitals. [48887]

Mr. Byrne: As confirmed in the recent White Paper 'Our health, our care, our say: a new direction for community services', the Government fully intends to fulfil their manifesto commitment to develop a new generation of modern national health service community hospitals over the next five years. To make this possible an initial capital investment of £100 million to build, rebuild, or refurbish at least 50 community hospitals has been identified.

However, configuration of local service provision facilities remains a matter for primary care trusts. Paragraph 6.44 of the white paper explains that the Department will be inviting:

> "interested primary care trusts, where appropriate working with local authority partners, to bid for capital support for reinvestment in the new generation of community hospitals and smaller facilities offering local, integrated health and social care services. This will provide the opportunity to create many new community hospitals, as we have done with LIFT projects, and to expand services on existing community hospital sites if more appropriate. The details of the timing and the tender process will be published in a separate document in mid-2006."

Dentistry

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 10 November 2005, Official Report, column 665W, on dentistry, if she will give details of the recommendations made by the Joint Implementation Group to the board of Higher Education Funding Council for England. [43057]

Ms Rosie Winterton: On 26 January, my hon. Friend, the Minister of State for Higher Education and Lifelong Learning (Bill Rammell) made a Ministerial Statement to Parliament, Official Report, column 65WS, to announce that the board of the Higher Education Funding Council for England had accepted bids from the Universities of Exeter and Plymouth for a new Peninsula Dental school with places for 62 students; the Universities of Liverpool and Central Lancashire for the development of 32 outreach training places for dental students in Lancashire and Cumbria; and the University of Leeds for six new places to develop outreach training for dental students in Hull.

These decisions were made in accordance with the recommendations of the joint implementation group.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate her Department has made of the number of people not registered with an NHS dentist; and of those how many are estimated to be using emergency dental facilities. [45413]

Ms Rosie Winterton: As at 30 September 2005, the number of people registered with a national health service dentist, with a general dental services (GDS) and personal dental services (PDS) contract, in England was 24,203,150. We estimate this figure to be 48 percent., of the total population in England.

The number of patients treated in the emergency dental services in the year ending March 2005 was 235,506.

Notes:

Registrations data includes GDS and PDS registrations/PDS patients seen (counts patients seen in the past 15 months for some PDS schemes).

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS dental practices there are in each strategic health authority; and how many of them are (a) not registering new NHS patients, (b) not registering new charge paying adult NHS patients and (c) accepting all new patient registrations. [45422]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information on the number of national health service dental practices that are registering new patients is not collected centrally.

The number of general dental services and personal dental services dental surgery addresses in England, as at 31 December 2005, broken down by strategic health authority (SHA) is shown in the table.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether she intends the new contracts negotiated between dentists and primary care trusts under the new General Dental Services contract to be of one year's length. [45515]

Ms Rosie Winterton: A new general dental services contract will not have any fixed duration.

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many self-employed dentists have been contracted to the NHS in each of the past 30 years. [45571]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Most general dental practitioners are self-employed contractors working in general dental services (GDS) and personal dental services (PDS). The number of GDS and PDS dentists in England and Wales as at 30 September-each year is shown in the table.

Mr. Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she will make a statement on the provision of children's NHS dental services in Gloucestershire; [48372]

(2) what assessment she has made of the provision of NHS dentistry in each of the six constituencies in Gloucestershire; and if she will make a statement. [48373]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 6 February 2006]: It is for primary care trusts to make decisions about the provision of local dental services.

However, according to figures held by the Department, between November 2004 and November 2005 there has been an increase in the Gloucestershire area, of 1.2 per cent. in the total number of general dental services (GDS) and personal dental services (PDS) registrations, and 1.5 per cent. increase in child GDS and PDS registrations.

John Hemming: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS dentists there are in each primary care trust area; and what net change in the number of dentists in each primary care trust area the Government expects as a result of the implementation of the new NHS dental contract. [44813]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Information on the number of dentists in each primary care trust(PCT) has been placed in the Library.

The Department has not made a specific assessment of any changes arising from the new dental contract. From April 2006, PCTs will have devolved responsibility for the commissioning of primary dental services. This means that they will be responsible for commissioning dental services to reflect the needs of their local areas. All dentists currently practising in the general dental services and personal dental services are legally entitled to new contracts. If any dentists choose not to take up the new contract, PCTs will use the funding in their devolved budgets to re-commission services from other dentists.

Finished Consultant Episodes (Costs)

Mr. Maude: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will give the average cost per finished consultant episode, broken down by specialty, for each health authority in England in the last year for which records are available. [47391]

Mr. Byrne: The table shows the reference cost index score for health authorities (HA) in 2002–03, the latest year for which data is available. The reference cost index score compares the cost incurred by national health service providers with the expected cost for the providers level of activity, were they providers to be operating at national average costs. A score of 100 indicates operational at national average costs, above 100 indicates operational at above national average costs and below 100 below national average costs.

Freedom of Information Act

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what total sum has been received by her Department for the provision of information under the Freedom of Information Act 2000 in its first year of operation.[48468]

Mr. Byrne: The Department has not received any money for provision of information under the Freedom of Information Act 2000, either in the form of fees where the cost of processing a request would have exceeded the appropriate limit or in payment for disbursements.

The Freedom of Information Act allows for public authorities to determine when the cost of processing a request will exceed the appropriate limit, which for central Government are set at £600 and for the wider public sector £450. In this instance the public authority may decide to either approach the applicant to help them refine their request and where possible to bring it under the appropriate limit. Alternatively, public authorities may charge the applicant the cost of processing the request. There is, however, no obligation for Departments to provide information if the cost of processing the request exceeds the appropriate limit.

Public authorities may also charge for disbursements when handling requests where it is deemed appropriate. Further information on the FOI fees regime can be found on the Department for Constitutional Affairs' website at www.foi.gov.uk/feesguide.htm.

Health Service Finance

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many acute trusts which are in deficit have an operational private finance initiative (PFI) scheme; and in how many such trusts the annual PFI charge is more than a quarter of the deficit. [50836]

Jane Kennedy: I refer the hon. Member for Great Grimsby to the reply I gave on 3 November 2005, Official Report, column 1347W. All nine national health service trusts reported as having an operational private finance initiative (PFI) scheme have annual unitary charges that are more than a quarter of the deficit.

Unitary payments on a PFI scheme—paid for from a trust's general revenue allocations—include elements for hard and soft facilities management services, financing costs as well as ensuring the availability of the facility.

Health White Paper

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she plans to initiate the review of personal medical services funding described in paragraph 3.31, of the White Paper, "Our Health, Our Care, Our Say"; in which financial year she expects the findings of the review to be implemented; and if she will make a statement. [49519]

Mr. Byrne: We plan to commence initial work on the review in the spring. Findings of the review, including any proposals for implementation, are due to be completed by early 2007.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she plans to publish the review of General Medical Services funding described in paragraph 3.30, of the "White Paper, Our Health, Our Care, Our Say"; who is conducting the review; and if she will make a statement. [49520]

Mr. Byrne: The group undertaking this review is chaired by NHS Employers and includes membership drawn from each of the four United Kingdom health departments, the general practitioner committee of the British Medical Association, the national health service as well as commissioned academic and technical support.

It is anticipated that the group will report on its findings and recommendations during 2006–07.

Hip Replacements

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to her opinion piece in The Independent on 19 January, what the evidential basis is for her statement that hip replacements are 20 percent. lower among lower social groups despite a 30 percent. higher need. [45478]

Mr. Byrne: The evidential basis was from a study published in the British Journal of General Practice, 1995 Mar;45(392); 127–31. "From the surgery to the surgeon: does deprivation influence consultation and operation rates?"

Hospital Beds (Coventry)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many beds were available in (a) general and (b) acute wards in each hospital in Coventry South on the latest date for which figures are available. [44554]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 24 January 2006]: The information requested is shown in the table.

University Hospitals Coventry and Warwickshire National Health Service Trust

	Average daily number of available general and acute beds, 2004–05
Acute	1,205
General	—

Notes:
1. General beds are defined as geriatric beds.
2. The Department does not collect data at hospital level. The data shown is on a provider rather than commissioner basis.

Hospital Trusts (South-east London)

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent representations she has received on the funding of hospital trusts in South East London. [48900]

Jane Kennedy: There have been three parliamentary questions asked by Members of Parliament. There has been one letter from a Member of Parliament and there has been one meeting with a group of Members of Parliament from Lewisham.

Hospitals (Coventry)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many meetings have taken place in the last 12 months between the Coventry strategic health authority and (a) chief executives of trusts and (b) non-executive directors of trusts to discuss possible changes to hospital services in Coventry; and what the date was of each meeting. [44556]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 24 January 2006]: The information requested is not held centrally. It can be obtained direct from the West Midlands South strategic health authority.

Independent Sector Elective Treatment

Frank Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health why locally procured independent sector elective treatment is not separately identified in the annual financial returns of NHS (a) trusts, (b) primary care trusts and (c) health authorities. [46087]

Jane Kennedy [holding answer 30 January 2006]: As a result of changes to the collection of data from the national health service to reduce bureaucracy we no longer collect such data.

Jewish Festivals

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what her Department did to (a) celebrate Hanukkah and (b) mark Yom Kippur in 2005. [46759]

Mr. Byrne: The Department did not hold specific events in 2005 to celebrate either of these festivals.

Kettering General Hospital Trust

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what recent discussions she has had with Kettering general hospital trust about its capacity to meet the six-month maximum waiting time for in-patient treatment; [49653]

(2) if she will allocate dedicated funds to Kettering general hospital trust to ensure it meets the six-month maximum waiting time for in-patient treatment. [49654]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 7 February 2006]: There have been no recent discussions between the ministerial team at the Department and the Kettering general hospital national health service trust about this issue.

Funds are not allocated directly to NHS trusts. Funds are allocated directly to primary care trusts (PCTs) who are responsible for commissioning services to meet the needs of their respective communities. £267.3 million was allocated to the Northamptonshire Heartlands PCT in 2005–06, a cash increase of 9.5 per cent. on the previous year.

At the end of December 2005, there were no patients waiting for six months for in-patient treatment at the Kettering general hospital NHS trust.

Late Payment

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice she has issued to hospital trusts and primary care trusts about late payment of bills. [48083]

Mr. Byrne: Over a number of years, The Department have issued guidance to the national health service that emphasises the importance placed on prompt payment of bills, and the need to comply with the Confederation of British Industry's better payment practice code.

All NHS trusts, primary care trusts and strategic health authorities are required to meet a better payment practice code target of paying 95 per cent. of bills within contract terms or 30 days where no terms were agreed.

Litigation (Devon)

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases of litigation against (a) Torbay hospital, (b) Royal Devon and Exeter and (c) Derriford hospital there have been in each of the past five years; and how many cases for each hospital remain outstanding. [50134]

Caroline Flint: The number of clinical negligence claims made against Torbay hospital, Royal Devon and Exeter and Derriford hospital in each of the past five years; and the number of outstanding cases for each hospital are in the table. Information on the number of non-clinical litigation cases by each hospital is not collected centrally. This information was supplied by the NHS Litigation Authority.

Management Consultancy Services

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much has been spent on management consultancy services in the NHS in each year since 1997. [48836]

Mr. Byrne: Information relating to expenditure on management consultancy services by national health service bodies is not held centrally.

Medical Provision (Aylesbury Vale)

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions she has had with the Deputy Prime Minister about the number of extra (a) hospital beds and (b) GP surgeries that will be required in Aylesbury Vale as a result of the planned expansion of housing. [44164]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Responsibility for the provision of local services rests with local national health service organisations in conjunction with other key stakeholders. However it must be stressed that different models of care may mean that services are delivered differently in line with improving NHS services.

Medicinal Products

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what role her Department plays in promoting innovation in and development of new medicinal products; and what support it gives to small and medium sized enterprises for such purposes. [49845]

Jane Kennedy: Through the pharmaceutical price regulation scheme (PPRS), the Department seeks to achieve a balance between reasonable prices for the national health service and a fair return for the industry to enable it to research, develop and market new and improved medicines. The 2005 scheme provides significant support for research and development (R and D) and innovation through improved allowances to a maximum of 28 percent., of NHS sales including greater incentives for innovative medicines and those for children. The scheme allows for flexibility with regard to the circumstances of individual small companies. The scheme also allows freedom of pricing for new innovative medicines at their United Kingdom launch and allows a return on capital of almost 30 percent., before profits have to be repaid or prices reduced.

The Department provides the NHS with the support and infrastructure it needs to conduct research for the benefit of patients and the wider public, including clinical trials to evaluate the safety and efficacy of potential new medicinal products. This infrastructure is open to our partners, including industry. Implementation of the Department's new strategy for research in the NHS published last month, "Best Research for Best Health", will establish the UK as a world class environment for medical research, development and innovation, through a programme of investment and reforms to enable medicines to be developed more quickly and more cheaply.

The Department has asked the UK Clinical Research Collaboration, which brings together the public, private and voluntary sector, to hold a futures forum to advise Ministers on priority areas for innovation in healthcare. The aim of this is to foster a better common understanding between policy makers and those developing new therapies on the priority areas for future innovation.

Mental Health

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was spent on average per mental health patient by each local health authority area for the past 30 years in real terms in descending order. [45566]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information is not available in the requested format. However, information on mental health expenditure per head of mental health weighted population in each primary care trust is available from the national programme budget project for 2003–04 and 2004–05. This information has been placed in the Library.

Mesothelioma Research Group

Paul Rowen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will ensure the continued operation of the Mesothelioma Research Group based at St Bartholomew's and the London hospitals; and if she will make a statement. [48364]

Jane Kennedy [holding answer 6 February 2006]: The improving cancer care programme led by the Barts and the London national health service trust, in collaboration with a range of NHS and academic partners, has received £8 million of NHS research and development support funding in 2005–06.

The trust is free to use this funding to achieve the best return on its investment in the broad spectrum of cancer research covered by the programme, and is not obliged to support work on specific types of the disease. The priority given to mesothelioma research within the trust has therefore been a matter for local decision and will remain so next year. In the future, in line with our new research strategy, Best Research for Best Health, these researchers will be able to apply for National Institute for Health Research project or programme grants.

Morning-after Pill

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the reasons for the divergence in the prescription cost and the over-the-counter price of the morning-after pill; and if she will make a statement. [49040]

Jane Kennedy: None. The national health service prescription charge is a flat-rate charge and is not directly related to the cost of the item prescribed. All NHS prescribed contraception, including emergency contraception, is dispensed free-of-charge.

Medication purchased direct from a pharmacy, is a private transaction and is not controlled by the Government. Prices are set competitively by retailers and include value added tax and a margin for the pharmacist.

NHS Financial Management

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 10 January 2006, Official Report, column 594W, on NHS financial management, if she will set out examples from case studies presented by the foundation trust network demonstrating new ways of working; and how she has evaluated whether the freedoms conferred by foundation status have allowed NHS foundation trusts to introduce new approaches to patient care more quickly and efficiently than NHS trusts. [49248]

Mr. Byrne: As a membership organisation, the Foundation Trust Network (FTN) is open to authorised and aspirant national health service foundation trust (NHSFTs). Case studies presented by the FTN are available at www.foundationtrustnetwork.org.

These and other independent case studies are demonstrating how the freedoms available to NHSFTs are allowing them to improve services for their communities, and in some cases innovate new approaches to patient care more quickly than as a national health service trust.

Nurse Advisers

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to introduce new regulations on the status and influence of nurse advisers. [50815]

Jane Kennedy: In the national health service, the nomenclature 'nurse adviser' covers a range of nursing roles and titles, including nurse specialists. What such nurses have in common is that they are employed to address specific issues identified by their employers. There is no national definition or job description of the role, therefore no regulations governing them. The Nursing and Midwifery Council are responsible for the professional regulation of nurses.

Nurses

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) neonatal and (b) paediatric nurses there have been in England in each year since 1997; how many are nearing retirement; and what steps are being taken to tackle possible shortages. [49862]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 8 February 2006]: The table shows qualified paediatric nurses and maternity services nurses in England as at 30 September 2004. We cannot specify neo-natal nursing staff, however we have included maternity services nursing staff for your information.

	1997	1998	1999	2000	2001	2002	2003	2004
Paediatric Nursing	15,341	16,266	16,689	16,922	17,640	18,014	18,437	18,917
Maternity Services Nurses	28,409	29,174	29,258	29,304	29,177	29,524	30,776	32,056
of which:
Midwives	22,385	22,841	22,799	22,572	23,075	23,249	23,941	24,844

There are 2,216 paediatric nurses over the age of 50 and 6,162 maternity services nurses over the age of 50. However, human resource policies are in place to make it an attractive option for staff to work full time or part time up to and past retirement age, including: flexible national health service pensions scheme, flexible working hours and change of roles to include mentoring, coaching and clinical research.

We have increased substantially the number of nurse training places, held national and international recruitment campaigns and developed return to practice schemes. We have also improved retention by increasing pay and continuing to make the NHS a better employer.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she will answer question 31790 tabled by the hon. Member for Portsmouth, South on 24 November 2005. [47526]

Ms Rosie Winterton: A reply was given on 6 February 2006, Official Report, column 970W.

Prescription Charges

Mr. Stephen O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether her Department has issued guidance to trusts on advising patients on whether to obtain their prescriptions outside hospital pharmacies. [49676]

Jane Kennedy: The Department has not issued specific guidance to trusts on patients obtaining prescriptions outside hospital pharmacies. However, guidance has been issued on the responsibility for prescribing between hospitals and general practitioners (GPs), in the form of an Executive Letter in 1991, EL (91)127. This advised that hospital consultants have responsibility for all medicines prescribed for in-patients, as well as for ensuring that patients are discharged with sufficient medication to allow their GP, to whose care they are transferred, to be advised of the diagnosis and therapy so that continuity of care can be maintained.

For out-patients the guidance says that only patients in immediate need of treatment should be prescribed medication as a result of the out-patient consultation. All other patients should be referred to their GP, with the results and recommendations from the consultation, to receive appropriate treatment.

A copy of EL (91)127 will be placed in the Library.

Private Finance Initiative Scheme

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, what progress has been made in signing the contract for the private finance initiative scheme at Broomfield hospital, Chelmsford; and if she will make a statement. [47176]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 31 January 2006]: The full business case (FBC) for this scheme has been prepared and submitted to Essex strategic health authority (SHA) for approval. Following publication of "The NHS in England: the operating framework for 2006–07" on 26 January, the SHA will now need to revalidate the approval parameters for the scheme by responding to a range of questions from the Department concerning factors such as long-term affordability, assumptions on efficiency gains and income growth, liquidity, activity shift and reference cost. The SHA will then need to have its conclusions ratified by the Department before proceeding.

Private Healthcare Sector (NHS Funded Operations)

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS-funded operations have been commissioned from the private healthcare sector for patients in (a) Burntwood, Lichfield and Tamworth primary care trust and (b) Staffordshire strategic health authority in each of the last five-years, broken down by specialty. [48644]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information is not available in the format requested. However, during 2004–05, 530 procedures were commissioned in the Shropshire and Staffordshire strategic health authority from a one-year national procurement for additional general surgery and orthopaedic procedures.

Rule of Rescue Principle

Mr. Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the acceptable incremental level of cost per quality years of life above the norm which the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence considers a drug treatment value for money when administered under the rule of rescue; and if she will make a statement. [49592]

Jane Kennedy: I have made no such estimate.

Smoking

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people her Department estimates died from smoking-related illnesses in the last year for which figures are available. [51002]

Caroline Flint: "The smoking epidemic in England", published by the Health Development Agency in November 2004, estimated that, in England, 86,500 deaths a year were attributed to smoking.

A copy is available in the Library.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research into the effects of second-hand smoke from tobacco products her Department has (a) evaluated and (b) commissioned. [51003]

Caroline Flint: The Governments 1998 White Paper "Smoking Kills" sets out in Chapter 1 some of the major fatal diseases and conditions caused by smoking and passive smoking. For each disease and cause of death quoted there is a reference to relevant studies and/or source documents.

The 1998 Report of the Scientific Committee on Tobacco and Health (SCOTH) provided fuller information on fatal and other disease caused by smoking and second hand smoke. The 2004 Report by SCOTH, "Secondhand Smoke: Review of Evidence since 1998", states that new evidence reinforces and strengthens the conclusion in the 1998 report that second hand smoke is a substantial public health hazard.

Copies of these documents are available in the Library.

Staff Contracts

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of the relevant staff group has not yet agreed a contract of employment under (a) the new consultants' contract, (b) the new General Medical Services contract and (c) Agenda for Change. [48840]

Mr. Byrne: There are around 86 per cent. of all consultants now working to the new contract. The new contract is still available to all and new appointees, after October 2003, are automatically made to the new contract. Therefore, this percentage will continue to increase.

The new general medical services (GMS) contract is not a contract of employment but a contract for primary medical care services based on a collective provider model of responsibility. General practitioners traditionally fill the role of contractors for provision, however, increasingly non-general practitioners are taking up such roles. Around 60 per cent. of all practitioners operate under GMS contract.

There are about 5 per cent. of staff who have not been assimilated and therefore are not yet in receipt of agenda for change payment. We cannot ascertain, however, how many of these have not yet agreed a contract of appointment. This figure excludes national health service foundation trusts and special health authorities.

Statutory Instruments

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the statutory instruments introduced by her Department since 6 May 2005. [46209]

Mr. Byrne: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

Tuberculosis

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research she has evaluated on the relative (a) clinical and (b) cost-effectiveness of (i) the Heaf skin test, (ii) the Mantoux skin test and (iii) interferon-gamma blood test for the identification of (A) latent and (B) active TB infection. [33297]

Jane Kennedy: The sole supplier of United Kingdom licensed purified protein derivative (PPD) has ceased production of tuberculin PPD for heaf testing. Mantoux testing has now replaced the heaf test as the standard method of tuberculin skin testing.

The National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) extensively reviewed this area as part of the development of new guidelines on the clinical management of tuberculosis, including interferon gamma blood test for the identification of latent and active tuberculosis infection. This work has been published in draft form as part of an open public consultation. NICE clinical guidelines on the diagnosis, treatment and prevention of tuberculosis are due out in March.

Waiting Lists/Times

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) which hospital trusts have indicated to her that they will not be able to meet the six-month maximum waiting time for in-patient treatment during 2006; [49656]

(2) what assessment she has made of the changes in waiting times for operations since the Government stated that no patient would have to wait more than six months for an NHS in-patient operation. [51037]

Jane Kennedy [holding answer 7 February 2006]: No trusts have indicated they will not be able to meet the maximum wait standard.

The six month standard came into place as at 31 December 2005. The first statistics measuring performance against this target show that 48 patients were waiting longer than six months for inpatient admission at the end of December 2005. Detailed figures by trust are available on the Department's website at: www.performance.doh.gov.uk/waitingtimes/2005/q3/qf01_y00.html.

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the average waiting time was for an NHS in-patient operation in (a) 2001, (b) 2002, (c) 2003, (d) 2004 and (e) 2005 in (i) England and (ii) each NHS hospital trust; and what the figures are to date in 2006. [51036]

Jane Kennedy [holding answer 13 February 2006]: Data on average waiting times for the number of patients waiting for in-patient admission as at 31 December in each year has been placed in the Library.

Wynne Lieberthal

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether Wynne Lieberthal has been employed as a doctor within the NHS; and if she will make a statement. [49702]

Mr. Byrne [holding answer 8 February 2006]: Information about individual doctors working in the national health service is not held centrally.

Written Answers to Questions

Wednesday 15 February 2006

PRIME MINISTER

Departmental Staff

Bob Spink: To ask the Prime Minister how many staff in his Office are paid on a performance-related basis. [50488]

The Prime Minister: For these purposes my office forms part of the Cabinet Office. I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by my hon. Friend the parliamentary Secretary for the Cabinet Office (Mr. Murphy) on Monday 13 February 2006, Official Report, column 1543W.

Engagements

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Prime Minister if he will visit Shrewsbury to meet leading charity organisations, councillors and the mayor. [50091]

The Prime Minister: I have no current plans to do so.

Peter Law: To ask the Prime Minister if he will place in the Library a copy of the memorandum prepared by Sir David Manning on matters discussed and decisions taken at his meeting with President Bush at the White House on 31 January 2003. [50241]

Adam Price: To ask the Prime Minister whether an official minute was made of his meeting with President Bush and his advisers on 31 January 2003. [51447]

The Prime Minister: Information relating to internal meetings, discussion and advice is not disclosed as to do so could harm the frankness and candour of internal discussion.

Fair Trade

Andrew George: To ask the Prime Minister (1) what his policy is on the procurement of fair trade produce for consumption in his Office; [49978]

(2) how much and what proportion of his Office's catering budget was spent on fair trade produce in the last period for which figures are available. [49979]

The Prime Minister: For these purposes my Office forms part of the Cabinet Office and I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by the then Minister for the Cabinet Office (Douglas Alexander) to the hon. Member for Buckingham (Mr. Bercow) on 11 December 2003, Official Report, column 574W.

Governmental Structure (Parliamentary Approval)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make it his policy to seek parliamentary approval for major changes to the structure and responsibilities of Government departments; and if he will make a statement. [50138]

The Prime Minister: I continue to discharge my responsibilities as set out in the ministerial code.

Iraq

Mr. Harper: To ask the Prime Minister on which dates he has visited British soldiers injured in Iraq; and what locations were visited. [50367]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the afternoon press briefing given by my official spokesman on 1 February 2006, a copy of which is available on the No. 10 website.

Parliamentary Questions

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Prime Minister how many parliamentary questions tabled in the last 12 months for answer by him on a named day (a) were transferred and (b) received a substantive answer (i) on the day named and (ii) after the day named. [49878]

The Prime Minister: My office aims to answer all ordinary written parliamentary questions within five working days, and named day written parliamentary questions on the day named.

In the period from January 2005 to January 2006, 181 named day parliamentary questions were tabled to my office. Of these, 135 received a substantive answer on the day named, five received a substantive answer after the day named, and 41 were transferred to another Government Department for reply.

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Prime Minister how many ordinary written parliamentary questions tabled for answer by him in the last 12 months have been answered (a) within 14 days, (b) between 14 and 28 days, (c) between 28 days and two months and (d) in excess of two months after the date of tabling; and if he will make a statement. [49898]

The Prime Minister: My office aims to answer all ordinary written parliamentary questions within five working days, and named day written parliamentary questions on the day named.

In the period from January 2005 to January 2006, 331 ordinary written parliamentary questions received an answer within five working days. 41 questions were answered after five working days.

Prerogative Powers

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Prime Minister how many decisions were taken by Ministers using prerogative powers in the last year for which figures are available. [50856]

The Prime Minister: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Orkney and Shetland (Mr. Carmichael) on 25 June 2002, Official Report, column 802W.

Telephone Interceptions

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Prime Minister when he expects to make an announcement on whether the ban on intercepting hon. and right hon. Members' telephone communications is to be lifted. [51834]

The Prime Minister: I have nothing further to add to my written ministerial statement, 15 December 2005, Official Report, column 173WS and my answers at Prime Minister's Questions on 18 and 25 January.

Torture

David Howarth: To ask the Prime Minister pursuant to his answer of 6 February 2006, Official Report, column 852W, on torture, whether he understood the US Secretary of State's statement to represent a change in US policy. [50552]

The Prime Minister: I have nothing further to add to the answer I gave the hon. Member on 6 February 2006, Official Report, column 852W.

David Howarth: To ask the Prime Minister pursuant to his answer of 6 February 2006, Official Report, column 852W, on torture, what assessment he has made of whether the US's interpretations of its obligations under the convention against torture differ from internationally accepted interpretations of those obligations. [50553]

The Prime Minister: Secretary of State Rice confirmed in her statement on 5 December 2005 that it is US policy to comply with the UN convention against torture. On ratifying the convention, the US entered a reservation stating that it

> "considers itself bound by the obligation under Article 16 to prevent" cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment" only insofar as the term "cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment" means the "cruel, unusual and inhumane treatment or punishment prohibited by the Fifth, Eighth, and/or Fourteenth Amendments to the constitution of the United States".

The US also entered a number of formal understandings of its convention obligations. Other states have also made reservations and interpretative declarations in respect of their obligations under the convention.

Wars (Parliamentary Approval)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make it his policy to seek parliamentary approval, whenever practicable, before the UK goes to war; and if he will make a statement. [50137]

The Prime Minister: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Ilford South (Mike Gapes) during my evidence to the Liaison Committee on Tuesday 7 February.

WALES

Crime Figures

8. Mrs. Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on recent crime figures in Wales. [50383]

Mr. Hain: I am very pleased that during 2004–05 recorded crime in Wales fell by 7 per cent.

Police Reorganisation

10. Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many representations he has received from Gwent (a) in favour and (b) against the proposed police reorganisation. [50385]

Mr. Hain: In addition to meeting a wide range of stakeholders from across Wales, I have received seven letters from correspondents in Gwent—including from my hon. Friend. They are not easy to catalogue in the way requested. I can, however, inform the hon. Member that on 6 February the chief constable of Gwent said

> "We have more chance to give the public a policing service it desires by looking at the efficiencies of merging the four forces than we have as four forces standing alone."

Wind Farms

11. Mr. David Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what recent discussions he has had with the National Assembly for Wales Government on the development of onshore wind farms in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [50386]

Mr. Hain: I have regular discussions. In particular my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry is considering the application for Gwynt y Mor under the set procedures.

I personally recognise the benefit to Wales of the project, which is capable of powering 500,000 homes.

Rail Links

12. Peter Law: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with the National Assembly for Wales Government Minister for Economic Development and Transport on improving rail links from the South Wales Valleys to Cardiff. [50387]

Nick Ainger: My right hon. Friend and I regularly discuss transport matters with Welsh Assembly Government colleagues.

The Assembly Government are providing almost £28 million for the Ebbw Valley railway project to accommodate passenger services between Ebbw Vale, Cardiff and Newport.

Disability Discrimination Act

13. Mrs. Betty Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions on the likely impact of the Disability Discrimination Act 2005 in Wales. [50388]

Nick Ainger: My right hon. Friend and I have regular discussions with ministerial colleagues on a variety of topics. My hon. Friend the Minister for Disabled People (Mrs. McGuire) recently met Jane Hutt, the Assembly Equalities Minister, to discuss specific disability matters.

From 4 December 2006 there will be a general duty on public sector bodies to promote equality of opportunity for disabled people.

Young Offenders

14. Mrs. James: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on Government support to voluntary groups who help rehabilitate young offenders in Wales. [50389]

Nick Ainger: The Welsh Assembly Government currently provides assistance to the Nacro Cymru to support their work in rehabilitating young offenders in Wales.

Pathways to Work Pilot

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions on the Pathways to Work pilot in Wales. [50384]

Nick Ainger: My right hon. Friend and I have regular discussions with ministerial colleagues on a range of issues, including measures aimed at tackling economic inactivity, such as Pathways to Work.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

ACP Sugar Production

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what percentage of African, Caribbean and Pacific country sugar production was produced by Mauritius in the last period for which figures are available. [49631]

Mr. Bradshaw: Total production in the ACP Sugar Protocol countries in 2004 was 4,391,190 tonnes. Production in Mauritius accounted for 13.8 per cent. of the total[1].

Preferential imports from ACP countries into the EU are planned to total 1,297,264 tonnes in the 2005–06 marketing year. Imports from Mauritius are planned to be 37.9 per cent. of that total.

Biofuels

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many gallons of biofuel she estimates will have been sold in Shropshire by (a) 2009 and (b) 2015. [50104]

Mr. Morley: In November 2005, the Government announced that a Renewable Transport Fuels Obligation will be introduced. This will require 5 per cent. of all UK fuel to come from a renewable source by 2010. Target levels for 2008–09 and 2009–10 will be announced in Budget 2006.

Information on fuel sales is not collected on a regional basis so it is not possible to give estimates for Shropshire. Provisional figures for 2005 for the whole of the UK give annual biodiesel and bioethanol sales of nearly 26 million gallons. To meet a 5 per cent. target at current usage would require around 540 million gallons.

Biomass Crop

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what EU funding is available for farmers to grow biomass crop. [50972]

Mr. Morley: DEFRA's energy crops scheme provides grants to establish short rotation coppice and miscanthus for use in heat and electricity generation, and to set up short rotation coppice producer groups. Part of the funding for this scheme comes from the European agricultural guidance and guarantee fund. Under the Common Agricultural Policy, farmers can also receive the single payment when these energy crops are grown on set-aside land. They can be grown on single payment land if the EU's €45 per hectare energy aid payment is also claimed. Oilseed rape and wheat can be grown on set-aside land under contract for processing into transport biofuels. These crops can also be grown on single payment land and are then eligible for the energy aid payment.

Bovine Tuberculosis

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what compensation was paid by her Department to farmers in Shrewsbury and Atcham constituency for cattle affected by bovine tuberculosis in (a) 2002 and (b) 2005; [50761]

(2) how many cases of bovine tuberculosis were registered in Shrewsbury and Atcham constituency in (a) 2002, (b) 2003 and (c) 2005. [50766]

Mr. Bradshaw: Disaggregated data on compensation paid to farmers for cattle affected by bovine tuberculosis (TB) are not held centrally.

Data on cases of bovine TB are not available at the level requested. Figures for the county of Shropshire are tabulated as follows.

	Total new herd incidents	Confirmed new herd incidents
2002[1]	69	42
2005	116	80

[1] in 2001, the TB testing and control programme was largely suspended due to the foot and mouth disease (FMD) outbreak. When testing resumed in 2002, resources were concentrated on herds with overdue TB tests which would have had a longer period in which to contract the disease. Also the proportion of high risk herds tested immediately after the FMD outbreak was greater than that prior to the outbreak. As a result, data for 2002 is not comparable with other years.

Note:
2005 data downloaded from the State Veterinary Service database on 16 January 2006. 2002 and 2003 data downloaded on 19 May 2005. All data are provisional and subject to change as more data become available.

British Summertime

Mr. Horam: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the merits of introducing Double British Summertime as a means of improving the UK's record on climate change; and if she will make a statement. [51201]

Mr. Morley: A study by the Building Research Establishment commissioned by Defra for the purposes of the current review of the UK Climate Change Programme has concluded that, while a switch to Double British Summertime would reduce energy use for domestic lighting and non-domestic cooling, these savings would be more than offset by increased demand for non-domestic heating and lighting. The study therefore concluded that a switch to Double British Summertime was unlikely to lead to a reduction in the UK's carbon dioxide emissions.

Carbon Capture

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions she has had with other Departments on (a) the regulatory framework for carbon capture and storage in the UK and (b) tax incentives for large scale capture and storage demonstration projects; and if she will make a statement. [50602]

Mr. Morley: The UK is working with other parties to clarify the legal basis for carbon dioxide capture and storage (CCS) under the marine treaties, as the treaties were not drafted to take CCS into account. A meeting of the contracting parties to the London convention in October 2006 will consider how best to facilitate and/or regulate carbon sequestration in the sub-seabed.

Following interdepartmental consultation, which included with DEFRA, the Crown Estates and the Department of Trade and Industry, the DTI is setting up a task force to consider and develop if necessary the appropriate regulation to enable CCS activities in the UK. In addition, DEFRA is considering how marine planning aspects of CCS should be included in the Marine Bill.

Tax issues are a matter for the Treasury and will be considered by the Chancellor as part of the Budget process. The 2005 Pre-Budget Report announced that the Government will consult further on the barriers to wide-scale commercial deployment of CCS in the UK, and the potential for economic incentives in addressing those barriers.

Carbon Trust Grants

Charles Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what proportion of Carbon Trust grants have been allocated to small and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs); and what guidance she has issued to the Trust on making grants to SMEs. [50285]

Mr. Morley: The Carbon Trust is a private company grant funded by DEFRA and the devolved administrations to lead on energy efficiency support for the business and public sector in the UK, and support the development of low carbon technology. Since the Trust is a private company DEFRA does not provide detailed guidance on its approach to its own work, however we are content that the Trust takes account of the needs of SMEs in developing its activities.

The Carbon Trust inform me that in 2004–05 they provided over £18.1 million of direct support for SME's which accounts for just under a third of DEFRA Grant funding received.

Centre for Ecology and Hydrology

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what funding has been given by her Department to the Centre for Ecology and Hydrology in each of the last five years. [48176]

Mr. Morley: DEFRA has given the Centre for Ecology and Hydrology the following funding in each of the last five years.

	£ million
2000–01	4.11
2001–02	3.23
2002–03	4.18
2003–04	4.11
2004–05	3.32

Commercial Developments (Energy Efficiency Standards)

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate she has made of the change in the amount of carbon dioxide emissions from commercial buildings in England in each year since 1997; and if she will make a statement. [49538]

Mr. Morley: Estimates of carbon emissions from commercial buildings in England since 1997 are presented in the table.

	Carbon emissions in million tonnes of carbon (MtC)	Change in carbon emission compared to previous year (MtC)
1997	10.5
1998	10.6	0.1
1999	10.0	-0.5
2000	10.9	0.9
2001	11.8	0.9
2002	10.9	-0.9
2003	11.5	0.6
2004	11.7	0.3

These estimates are based on energy consumption data from the Digest of UK Statistics (DUKES) for the commercial and miscellaneous sectors. The data take account of emissions incurred by providing electricity and other forms of delivered energy for use in the buildings. Emissions for England have been estimated by scaling on the basis of the ratio of total carbon emissions from England for 2003 to that of the UK. The DUKES allocation between commercial and public sector may mean that this data underestimates emissions from the commercial sector. Much of the variation observed is attributable to annual changes in the emissions from electricity generation.

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what percentage of UK carbon dioxide emissions come from buildings other than household dwellings; and if she will make a statement. [49540]

Mr. Morley: In 2003, 13 per cent. of total UK carbon emissions arise from energy use in buildings in the service sector. This is based on delivered energy consumption data for the public, commercial and miscellaneous sectors published in DUKES 2005 (the service sector) and delivered energy emission factors for fuels used in buildings.

In addition to energy used in the service sector a proportion of energy used by industry will be used to provide building services. Assuming 20 per cent. of carbon emissions for industry is for building services, non-domestic buildings would account for 18 per cent. of the UK carbon emissions in 2003.

Departmental Staff

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans her Department has to change the London allowance of its staff; and if she will make a statement. [50002]

Jim Knight: The Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs does not pay an allowance to staff working in London.

Instead it operates and maintains two separate sets of pay ranges for staff working in the London and national pay areas. The effect of this, is that for staff employed in the London pay area, they receive a pay lead over those staff employed in the national pay area.

There are no immediate plans to consider changes to the existing differential pay arrangements that exist between the London and national pay areas. However, the Department will continue to monitor and evaluate the relative pay position of staff employed in the London pay area, with a particular focus on recruitment and retention issues.

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the potential impact on the environment if each household (a) had one energy-efficient lightbulb fitted and (b) ceased to leave televisions on standby overnight. [51323]

Mr. Morley: Studies carried out by the Energy Saving Trust and Defra via the Market Transformation Programme estimate that:

(a) if each UK household replaced a traditional light bulb with an equivalent compact fluorescent light they would save on average 33KWh of electricity per annum—around 840GWh per annum across the UK;

(b) if all of the 63 million televisions in use in the UK were not left on standby the UK would save around 1,000 GWh per annum.

English Nature

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what role English Nature plays in (a) advising on and (b) approving regional spatial strategies of regional chambers. [51105]

Jim Knight: English Nature plays an important role in the planning process, as a statutory consultee, and in providing proactive guidance to regional and local authority planners on their regional spatial strategies (RSS). The agency contributes by responding to formal consultations, having strong involvement with RSS working groups, and advising on sustainability appraisal and strategic environmental assessment. The advice given by English Nature makes sure that biodiversity and geological conservation interests are taken fully into account during the decision making process.

In particular, the Government's Planning Policy Statement 9 (published in August 2005) sets out policies on protection of biodiversity and geological conservation through the planning system. These policies need to be taken into account by regional planning bodies in the preparation of regional spatial strategies, and regional planning bodies should liaise closely with regional biodiversity fora or equivalent bodies, English Nature or its successors.

Environmental Policy

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the environmental implications of replacing glass bottles and glasses with plastic versions in pubs, clubs and bars. [50819]

Mr. Morley: The Department has not carried out such an assessment.

Farm Subsidies

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent assessment her Department has made of the impact on hill farming of the timescale for implementing a replacement scheme for the hill farming allowance in (a) Westmorland and Lonsdale and (b) England. [50789]

Jim Knight [holding answer 13 February 2006]: The Hill Farm Allowance will end this year, when the current rural development programming period finishes. We are looking at the best ways to support upland communities using rural development funding from 2007 onwards. We will consult on the options shortly.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much in EU subsidies farmers in the UK received in each year between 1997 and 2005. [50978]

Mr. Bradshaw: Farmers in the United Kingdom receive a variety of payments which are recorded in the income account of the economic accounts for agriculture prepared by DEFRA annually. A summary is show in the following table.

Fisheries

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what her estimate is of the total weight of discards to date under the Common Fisheries Policy. [50529]

Mr. Bradshaw: Discarding at sea is carried out not only as a result of quota limitations under the CFP, but also in reaction to the particular economics of the industry at the time, for example the prevailing prices of respective species. No systematic recording of this process is undertaken at community level to produce an accurate estimate of the total tonnage of all species discarded.

Flooding

Mr. Scott: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment has been made by (a) her Department and (b) the Environment Agency of the causes of the River Roding flood on 30 October 2000; and what (i) schemes are in place and (ii) plans have been made to prevent a future flood. [50609]

Mr. Morley: Defra has policy responsibility for management of flood risk in England, funds most of the Environment Agency's flood risk activities and provides grant aid on a project by project basis to the other flood risk management operating authorities to support their investment in improvement works. The Agency has powers to undertake works on designated "main rivers" while the London borough of Redbridge (LBR) has similar powers for "ordinary watercourses". Defra has funded three studies carried out by LBR since 2000 on the non-main river aspects of flood risk.

The Agency believes the flooding was primarily caused by the surface water drainage system backing up and being unable to discharge into the river. This affected properties and roads in the Chigwell Road area of Woodford Green.

Since 2000, the Agency has carried out repairs to a low spot in the flood defences behind the Broadmead Baptist Church and selective de-silting and reed removal upstream and downstream of Chigwell Road to maintain channel flow capacity. Thames Water and LBR have repaired missing or broken flap valves to the outfalls in the river. This will prevent river water backing up into the drainage system at times of high flow but a risk of flooding remains because surface water drainage will not be able to discharge into the river during periods of high flows.

The Agency is to complete a flood risk management strategy for the Roding Catchment early this summer. A flood storage area in the upper catchment of the Roding is considered to be the most sustainable solution, economically and environmentally. The Agency patrols for debris every other month, carries out annual tree/hedge/bankside vegetation management during winter months, ad-hoc blockage/obstruction removal and regular inspections and monitoring of flood defence assets.

Genetically Modified Organisms

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps she is taking to enable post-release monitoring of the potential health and environmental effects of a genetically modified organism to take place as required by EU Directive 2001/18. [50533]

Mr. Morley: The UK has fully implemented directive 2001/18/EC. This directive requires that a company which submits an individual GMO for approval provides a plan setting out the post-market monitoring that they will carry out. This plan is then considered as part of the application, revised if necessary to the satisfaction of scientific experts, and its implementation is then made a condition of any consent issued.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when the public consultations on co-existence between genetically modified (GM) and non-GM crops is expected to begin. [50535]

Mr. Morley: We expect to issue a consultation paper this spring.

Gloucestershire Old Spot Pigs

Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she expects to secure from the EU traditional speciality guaranteed status for pork and bacon from pedigree Gloucestershire Old Spot pigs. [50306]

Mr. Bradshaw: Officials have worked closely with the applicant group seeking to register the name, Gloucestershire Old Spots Pigmeat, as a traditional speciality guaranteed product (TSG) under the EU Protected Food Name Scheme. The application was forwarded to the Commission for their consideration in 2004. The Commission has six months within which to consider such applications although this period can be extended if the Commission raise questions about the application.

We are still waiting to hear from the Commission whether it has got any queries about the application and share the concern of the applicant group about the long delay. That is why we have been in regular contact with the Commission over the last 18 months to chase up progress on this application. Until we hear from the Commission it is difficult to give an indication as to when the application process will be completed. Officials last contacted the Commission on 23 January 2006 and understand that a response is imminent.

GM Food

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the UK Government's position is on the European Commission's policy of imposing fines on the French government in relation to the adoption of EU legislation on the handling of genetically modified organisms, with particular reference to the need to introduce safety standards. [49587]

Mrs. McGuire: I have been asked to reply.

Under the Treaty of Rome, it is properly the function of the European Commission to pursue action against member states that fail to implement EC Directives. The UK Governments' policy is to implement EU directives; Directive 90/219/EEC as amended by 98/81/EC on the contained use of genetically modified micro-organisms has been fully transposed into UK law.

Milk

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will visit Shrewsbury constituency to discuss milk prices with Shropshire dairy farmers. [49065]

Mr. Bradshaw: Provided competition law is respected, the Government does not get involved in discussions about price. However, issues around the state of the industry are regularly discussed in the Dairy Supply Chain Forum, which is chaired by my noble Friend, Lord Bach. Ministers also make regular dairy-related visits, for example my noble Friend, Lord Bach visited a dairy farm on 27 January.

Monks Wood National Nature Reserve

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what discussions she has had with English Nature about the likely impact on Monks Wood National Nature Reserve of the proposed closure of the Centre for Ecology and Hydrology Research Establishment; [49181]

(2) what assessment she has made of the likely impact on the management of Monks Wood National Nature Reserve of the proposed closure of the Centre for Ecology and Hydrology Research Establishment. [49182]

Mr. Morley: The Natural Environment Research Council (NERC) is currently consulting widely with stakeholders on proposals on how best the Centre for Ecology and Hydrology can contribute on a sustainable basis to maintaining the quality of environmental science in the UK. DEFRA will be responding to this consultation.

English Nature undertakes the management of the Monks Wood National Nature Reserve, and will also have the opportunity to respond to the consultation. NERC will need to consider all the evidence and views on the potential impact of the proposals, including any representations a bout the Monks Wood National Nature Reserve.

Organic Farming

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what percentage of farmland in each EU country is allocated to organic production. [49983]

Mr. Bradshaw: The figures requested are given in the following table. In 2002 Austria had the highest proportion with 8.7 per cent. of farmland being dedicated to organic farming, Ireland and Greece were lowest with only 0.7 per cent. being dedicated organic land. As a whole. 3.8 per cent. of utilised agricultural area in EU-15 countries was dedicated to organic farming in 2002, up from 1.8 per cent. in 1998. Currently, 2002 are the most up to date figures available with these only being available for EU-15 countries.

Percentage of farmland allocated to organic production 2002

Pedigree Cattle

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimates she has made of the value of pedigree (a) Hereford, (b) Charolais and (c) Dexter cattle aged (i) under six months, (ii) over three years, (iii) over five years, (iv) over 10 years and (v) over 12 years. [49095]

Mr. Bradshaw: No such estimates have been made. However, to inform the development of the cattle compensation arrangements introduced on 1 February the Department has, for 14 months, been receiving cattle sales data from a wide range of sources across GB.

Compensation for pedigree cattle, which is calculated on a monthly basis, is the average price obtained (for same category animals) at reported sales over the preceding 6 months. To inform this process data received through 2005 has been analysed to identify the degree of variability within each of the 47 cattle categories now used to help determine compensation. This review, which will be repeated on annual basis, provides the Department with intelligence on the amount of supporting data needed (in each category) to support table valuations.

Sea Bass

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) when she will publish (a) the outcome of the consultation on measures to increase the number and size of bass available to commercial and recreational fishermen and (b) the Government's response to the consultation; and if she will make a statement; [51445]

(2) what assessment she has made of the likely impact of the requirement to increase the minimum size of bass landed off England and Wales. [51444]

Mr. Bradshaw: Defra's Consultation on measures to increase the number and size of bass available to commercial and recreational fishermen closed on 8 February 2006. The partial Regulatory Impact Assessment issued as part of the Consultation set out our understanding of the costs and benefits of the proposed measures.

There have been a large number of responses from stakeholders to the consultation and there will now need to be a careful analysis of the responses and the information contained in them. Once this has been completed I will make an announcement on next steps.

The Welsh Assembly Government is conducting a consultation on similar measures for Welsh Territorial waters, which closes on 14 February 2006.

Sewage Treatment Plants

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what powers local authorities have to act in respect of nuisance smells from sewage treatment plants. [51455]

Mr. Bradshaw: Odour from the great majority of sewage treatment works can be dealt with under the statutory nuisance provisions of the Environmental Protection Act 1990.

Local authorities have a statutory duty to check their areas periodically for existing and potential statutory nuisances, and to take reasonably practicable steps to investigate complaints made within their areas.

It is for the appropriate local authority to determine whether a smell amounts to a statutory nuisance. Factors to be taken into account include the character of the locality, the duration of the smell and the frequency of its occurrence.

Once satisfied that a statutory nuisance does or may occur, the local authority must serve an abatement notice requiring that the nuisance be ceased or abated within a specified time scale.

It is an offence to breach or fail to comply with an abatement notice, with a maximum fine on conviction of £20,000 for industrial, trade or business premises.

Defra is about to issue a Code of Practice on Odour Nuisance from Sewage Treatment Works to provide high level guidance on the handling and resolution of complaints.

A few sewage treatment works are controlled under the Integrated Pollution and Control regime monitored by the Environment Agency. Local authorities cannot take action against these plants to abate odour under the statutory nuisance regime unless my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State, gives consent, to avoid 'double jeopardy'.

Single Farm Payments

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the minimum amount of single farm payment is. [50672]

Jim Knight: The minimum total area that can be claimed by a farmer under the single payment scheme is O.3ha. If this area was situated in the moorland region the minimum payment for 2005, based on current estimations of the regional average, would be less than one pound.

This calculation assumes that the applicant had no subsidy claims in the reference period of 2000–02, and therefore would only receive the area flat rate.

Sugar

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much sugar was imported into the UK in (a) 1977, (b) 1997 and (c) 2005. [50108]

Mr. Bradshaw: In 1977 the UK imported 1,870,000 tonnes of sugar, by 1997 this had dropped to 1,358,000 tonnes and this dropped further in 2003 to 1,218,000 tonnes. These figures include imports of white, beet and cane sugar whether refined or not. They do not include high sugar content products such as honey, syrups and confectionery. All figures quoted are to the nearest thousand tonnes.

Timber

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what legal advice her Department received regarding the exclusion of social criteria in legislation relating to illegal timber imports and exports. [50839]

Mr. Morley: I am not aware of any legislation related to the import and export of timber that specifically prohibits social considerations from being considered in such commercial activity. This question is closely related to a request made by WWF UK to see the legal advice on which the Government's timber procurement policy was based and I shall explain why that request was declined.

The European Treaty and European public procurement directives set principles and rules that govern the manner in which public contracting authorities specify their requirement, select potential bidders and award contracts. The UK Government's interpretation of these principles and rules has led it to conclude that it is not permissible for public sector contracting authorities to specify requirements that are not directly related to the subject matter of the contract in question and that criteria aimed at protecting or improving the economic and social well being of forest dependent people are generally not directly related to the subject matter of public sector contracts for works, goods and services.

The advice that the Department received on this matter was a combination of guidance published by the European Commission, guidance published by the Office of Government Commerce and communications between Government officials. The published guidance documents were: the Commission's Interpretative Communication on the possibilities of integrating social issues into public procurement under Community law-see http://simap.eu.int/EN/pub/src/welcome.htm and Chapter 9 of the "Joint Note on Environmental Issues in Purchasing"-published by The Office of Government Commerce and Department for the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs in October 2003. The Office of Government Commerce have very recently published a Note on Social Issues in Purchasing to further clarify the position-see http://www.ogc.gov.uk/index.asp?docid = 1004561

The Government will not provide the information requested because we consider the public interest is best served by not disclosing the internal legal advice held by DEFRA. Decisions by Government must be taken in a fully informed legal context, which includes assessing the perceived weakness of its position. It follows that the disclosure of internal communications between Government officials could prejudice the government's ability to defend its legal interests-both directly by unfairly exposing its legal position to challenge and indirectly by diminishing the reliance it can place on the advice having been fully considered and presented without fear or favour.

Gregory Barker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many times action has been taken to stop illegal timber imports into the UK in the last 12 months; and what plans she has to improve her Department's performance in this area. [50852]

Mr. Morley: The UK is the world's fourth largest importer of wood products. However, it is not possible for action to be taken specifically to stop illegal timber imports into the UK in the last 12 months, as timber is not currently identified as legal or illegal at ports of entry. UK Customs have made seizures of wood and wood products under separate CITES legislation but legality of their sourcing is not material.

Once the recently adopted EU Forest Law Enforcement Governance and Trade (FLEGT) Regulation comes into force it will enable member states to prohibit the entry into the EU of illegal timber products from countries that enter into Partnership Agreements with the European Union.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps the Government are taking to extend the requirement to consult the Central Point of Expertise on Timber to more public bodies. [51059]

Mr. Morley: The Government have not set a requirement for any public body to consult the Central Point of Expertise on Timber (CPET). Central Government departments are required to seek to purchase legal and sustainable timber and are aware that CPET has a help line facility should they experience difficulty in obtaining such timber but they are free to choose not to seek help from CPET.

CPET is a free service that is available to all public sector bodies and their suppliers should they have need of it. The Government are raising awareness of the CPET facility at conferences and training workshops and through press articles and direct mailing. A number of public bodies outside of central Government have sought advice from CPET and we expect the numbers of enquiries to increase as word spreads.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if the Government will set a target for all Departments and other Government bodies to purchase only sustainable timber within five years. [51060]

Mr. Morley: The Environmental Audit Committee's Second Report of Session 2004–2005 on Sustainable Timber, paragraph number 91, concluded that it is > "vital for DEFRA to set a clear timetable for implementing a requirement for all departments and other government bodies, local and national, to purchase only sustainable timber. In our view five years would be a realistic deadline."

I consider that it would be inappropriate for me to answer your question, which addresses exactly the same point made by the Committee, before the Government have formally responded to the Committee's Report.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions the Government have had with the Austrian Government on taking forward Forest Law Enforcement, Governance and Trade; and if she will make a statement. [51065]

Mr. Morley: As part of the EU Presidency Troika we continue to be supportive of efforts to take forward the development of the Forest Law Enforcement Governance and Trade (FLEGT) Action Plan and have been in regular contact with Austria.

Work is now focused on implementing the FLEGT regulation and exploring additional options. Following a stakeholder consultation on additional options held in Brussels in January, the European Commission is now considering all the options raised. We expect the delayed report on this to be published by early summer 2006.

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she expects EU Ministers to discuss Forest Law Enforcement, Governance and Trade and the EU Commission's report on relevant legislative options. [51066]

Mr. Morley: The next opportunity for EU Ministers to discuss Forest Law Enforcement Governance & Trade will be once the European Commission tables the Additional Options report later this year.

Following the adoption of the FLEGT Action Plan by Council Conclusions in October 2003, (which committed the EU to exploring options to tackle the trade in illegally logged timber additional to the proposed FLEGT regulation), the UK Government has been frustrated at the time it has taken the Commission to produce this additional report.

Officials attended a European stakeholder consultation meeting in Brussels on 31 January 2006. This was held by the European Commission and the UK's Chatham House (the Royal Institute of International Affairs). The European Commission will consider all the options and issues raised at the stakeholder consultation meeting and produce the delayed report on additional options by early summer 2006.

UN Environment Programme

Peter Law: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs which Ministers represented the United Kingdom at the United Nations Environment Programme's (UNEP) ninth special session of its governing council on 7th to 9th February in Dubai; what papers were circulated (a) by the United Kingdom delegation and (b) relevant to United Kingdom policies; and if she will place copies in the Library. [50232]

Mr. Morley: I led the UK delegation at the 9.SS of the UNEP GC/GMEF. He also attended the International Conference on Chemicals Management (3–6 February, Dubai). The Secretary of State attended the GMEF as a key note speaker on Energy and the Environment.

The UK did not circulate any documents at the meeting.

Working documents for the session, all of which are relevant to UK policy, can be found at:
http://www.unep.org/GC/GCSS-IX/workingdocs.asp

Peter Law: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what representation the United Kingdom had at the United Nations Environment Programme's Seventh Global Civil Society (GCE) forum in Dubai on 5–6 February; what decisions were taken which affected United Kingdom policies; and if she will place in the Library a copy of the GCE statement. [50233]

Mr. Morley: The United Kingdom was represented at official level at the 7th GCE. No decisions were taken. The GCE statement will be placed in the Library.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Aid Distribution

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what discussions his Department has had with non-governmental organisations, charities and civil society organisations on formulating policy on aid distribution. [51360]

Mr. Thomas: DFID officials and Ministers frequently have both formal and informal discussions with civil society organisations both in the UK and overseas on a wide variety of policy issues, including aid distribution. For example in the last year, NGOs have had input to the Commission for Africa report, the formulation of a new humanitarian policy and currently the preparation of DFID's new White Paper.

Departmental Staff

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many staff in his Department are paid on a performance-related basis. [50491]

Mr. Thomas: Within DFID, pay and performance management for staff in the Senior Civil Service (SCS) is fully compliant with the framework set by the Cabinet Office.

All staff in grades below the SCS require a satisfactory performance rating to progress through the pay scales.

Sudan

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what funding is being made available by (a) the UK Government and (b) the EU to the new Government in the South of Sudan. [51848]

Hilary Benn: The UK Government are committed to a contribution of £23.5 million over three years to the World Bank Multi Donor Trust Fund for the South (conditional on fund effectiveness). We have established a Basic Services Fund for the sponsorship of non-governmental organisations working in South Sudan on the delivery of basic health, education and water and sanitation. We are also assisting the Government of South Sudan with the setting up of basic institutional structures; the establishment of a functioning police force, and the development of basic legal systems. In addition, the UK Government are also providing early and significant contributions to the UN 2006 Work Plan for all of Sudan, from which the UN Humanitarian Coordinator has allocated some US$40 million for the South.

The European Commission Country Strategy for Sudan (2005–07) allocates a total of €108 million, with the central focus on Food Security and Education. Other areas of focus include assistance with demobilisation, disarmament and reintegration of soldiers; human rights; good governance, rule of law, direct support to the peace process and peace building initiatives, and the strengthening of civil society and health. The Strategy is national in scope and does not allocate specific activities or funds for South Sudan.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what financial help his Department plans to make available to the representative assembly to be created in Juba, South Sudan; and what financial help his Department has provided to (a) the Sudanese People's Liberation Movement (SPLM) and (b) non-SPLM parties. [51849]

Hilary Benn: The UK Government are focusing directly on assisting the Government of South Sudan with the formation of basic institutional structures. We are also a significant contributor to the World Bank Multi Donor Trust Fund for the South (£23.5 million over three years) which includes government capacity building as one of its key objectives. We do not, for the time being, have plans to directly support the representative assembly to be created in Juba, South Sudan. The UK Government provide assistance to the Government of South Sudan as a single entity and does not differentiate between different political parties.

UN Fund for Women

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what funds the UK has contributed to the UN Fund for Women in each year since 1997. [51408]

Mr. Thomas: The Department for International Development is the largest donor to the United Nations Development Fund for Women (UNIFEM). Total DFID funding to UNIFEM since 1997 is as follows:

	Total funding (£000)
1997–98	1,150
1998–99	150
1999–2000	2,000
2000–01	2,122
2001–02	4,900
2002–03	1,950
2003–04	4,695
2004–05	4,999

Note:
Overall figures are not yet available for 2005–06. From 2003–04 onwards, the above figures include £3 million per annum in support of UNIFEM's core budget.

TRANSPORT

A27

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much has been spent on enquiries and consultation exercises relating to improvements on the A27 around Worthing in each of the last 12 years. [51674]

Dr. Ladyman: A number of studies relating to transport in the South East have included consideration of improvements to the A27 around Worthing but the costs cannot be disaggregated in the way requested.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the purpose has been of each of the enquiries and consultation exercises relating to improvements on the A27 around Worthing in each of the last 12 years. [51675]

Dr. Ladyman: Various enquiries and consultations have addressed transport needs in the South East as well as seeking solutions to traffic congestion both on the A27 and more generally in the town of Worthing. They have included assessment of the contribution which local transport measures can make to the reduction of congestion, as well as road improvements.

Commercial Flights (Hornsey and Wood Green)

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many commercial flights have overflown Hornsey and Wood Green constituency in each of the past five years; and if he will make a statement. [51923]

Ms Buck: This information is not held by my Department. If the hon. Member writes to the Chief Executive of National Air Traffic Services Ltd., they will provide the information requested.

Driving (Bio-optical Spectacles)

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the use of bio-optical spectacles to facilitate driving for people with imperfect eyesight; and if he will make a statement. [51651]

Dr. Ladyman: The minimum standards of medical fitness to drive are laid down in the second EC directive on driving licences (Directive 91/439/EEC).

The use of bioptic devices has been considered by a Medical Expert Working Group established by the EC Driving Licence Committee to consider conditions affecting vision and their impact on driving. The Working Group acknowledged that bioptic devices might help individual drivers but recognised that, to do so, visual acuity standards would have to be lowered and that this might be at the expense of an adequate field of vision. The general opinion of the Working Group expert members is that on European roads, lowering the acuity standard in this way would be difficult to justify. Further research evidence and technological development of the bioptic devices will be needed.

Greater Manchester (Smartcards)

Andrew Gwynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions his Department has had with Greater Manchester bus, rail and tram operators and the Greater Manchester Passenger Transport Executive on the introduction of smartcard technology for pre-travel payment on public transport in the county. [51142]

Dr. Ladyman: There was correspondence in December 2003 between the Department and Greater Manchester Passenger Transport Authority about the planned introduction of smartcards in Greater Manchester. This correspondence related to the ITSO specification for an interoperable ticketing interface for smartcards in travel.

Officials have had informal discussions with Greater Manchester PTE on a number of occasions about the proposed Readycard smartcard scheme, also in the context of the ITSO standard. Officials also attended a GMPTE ITSO workshop last year.

Light Rail/Tram Schemes

Mark Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what his plans are for the future funding of light rail and tram schemes; and if he will make a statement. [52487]

Derek Twigg: I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 9 November 2005, Official Report, column 511W.

M60

Andrew Gwynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what progress has been made in (a) ascertaining responsibility for and (b) rectifying the flooding problem on the M60 between Denton and Hollinwood, Oldham; and whether enforcement action will be taken to ensure its rectification without the requirement for further public funding. [51742]

Dr. Ladyman: There is no requirement to ascertain responsibility nor seek enforcement against third parties as the need for modification of the carriageway surface to alleviate spray (flooding) arose from reasons other than negligent performance by the scheme contractors.

An initial works pilot to re-profile a section of the affected carriageway to improve surface drainage has now been planned for spring 2006, with the remainder of the work likely to be undertaken in 2007.

Mobile Speed Cameras

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether notice is required to be given of the siting of a mobile speed camera. [52079]

Dr. Ladyman: Safety Camera Partnerships within the National Safety Camera Programme are asked to inform the public about the location of camera sites and the type of camera used. The partnerships are not required to give notice of when enforcement will take place at a camera site but all sites must be signed and visible in accordance with the Handbook of Rules and Guidance for the National Safety Camera Programme for England and Wales.

The police may also enforce speed limits using mobile enforcement equipment at any location without giving prior notification.

Network Rail

Chris Grayling: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what arrangements have been made for the Government to guarantee Network Rail's debt; [40912]

(2) what ceiling the Government has placed on its guarantees of Network Rail's debts. [40922]

Derek Twigg: I refer the hon. Member to the statements made by the Secretary of State and parliamentary minutes laid on 27 June 2002, Official Report, columns 971–989. 4 February 2004 and 15 September 2004 Official Report, column 152WS.

The credit support arrangements described in these minutes were initially provided by the Strategic Rail Authority, but were transferred to the Secretary of State for Transport on 26 June 2005 by a transfer scheme made under powers in the Railways Act 2005.

Night Flights

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he will publish the results of the Government's night flights consultation. [51298]

Ms Buck: I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 17 January 2006, given to the hon. Member for Windsor (Adam Afriyie), Official Report, column 1190W.

Red Routes

Andrew Gwynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions his Department has had with (a) metropolitan local authorities and (b) passenger transport executives on the introduction of red route measures to principal transport corridors in cities and conurbations. [51744]

Ms Buck: The only PTE to develop and implement proposals for red routes is Centro, in the West Midlands. Centro are currently implementing a package of measures in Birmingham, Solihull, Wolverhampton and Sandwell as part of a major scheme bid that was given full approval in 2004 by the Department at a cost of £28 million. This scheme is the first of five packages proposed to introduce a total of 130 km of red routes, bus relocations, side road entry treatments, new signs and junction improvements.

The traffic signs required to implement a red route scheme are not prescribed and as such need special authorisation by the Secretary of State. It is not unusual for local authorities contemplating the use of non prescribed signs to contact the Department, but we do not keep records of informal inquiries.

Speed Cameras

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many speed cameras have been vandalised in each police authority in each of the last five years. [51876]

Dr. Ladyman: The Department does not hold this information nor are partnerships required to provide information about vandalism at speed camera sites to the Department. This information may be available directly from partnerships.

Vandalism

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the acts of vandalism which have been perpetrated (a) inside and (b) on the outside of his Department's buildings in the last 12 months. [49497]

Ms Buck: There were five recorded acts of vandalism perpetrated inside the Department for Transport during the calendar year 2005. There were three at the Driving Standards Agency regional premises and two at the Driving Vehicle Licensing Agency premises. These incidents included damage to internal doors, cabinets, the discharging of a fire extinguisher, damage to a vending machine and an interview room counter screen.

There were 55 acts of vandalism perpetrated outside the Department for Transport (at regional agency premises) during the calendar year 2005. These incidents included damaged windows, damage occurring during break-ins, and a few instances of minor arson and damage to vehicles and heating vents.

In addition there have been other minor acts of vandalism known to have occurred outside of agency regional premises for which full details are not available.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Academies

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment she has made of the impact of academies upon the academic performance of children from the lowest socio-economic background. [47760]

Jacqui Smith: Academies are established in some of the most deprived and disadvantaged communities in our country, and admit a high proportion of children from the most disadvantaged socio-economic background. The majority of academies have a significantly higher proportion of children with eligibility for free school meals (FSM) relative to both local authority and national averages. Indeed the average FSM eligibility at academies is 34 per cent., compared to a national average of 14 per cent.

PricewaterhouseCoopers (PwC) are undertaking a full independent evaluation of the academies programme over five years and a comprehensive assessment of the impact of academies upon academic performance will form a vital part of this evaluation.

Improvements in GCSE results are already in evidence, despite many pupils only having attended their academy for a few terms. Of the 14 academies open at the time of the last round of GCSE examinations, all but two showed an increase in the proportion of students achieving five grades A* to C relative to their predecessor schools, and the average increase between 2004 and 2005 in the number of students gaining five grades A* to C across all academies was 7.8 percentage points; some three times the national average.

Several academies have shown remarkable improvements in their GCSE results since opening. The City Academy in Bristol, for example, has shown an increase of 25 percentage points in the number of pupils achieving five grades A* to C in just two years. Four other academies have shown increases of greater than 20 percentage points since opening.

After-school Activities

Mr. Wills: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps she has taken to encourage young people in Swindon to get involved in (a) after-school activities and (b) sports programmes. [50613]

Maria Eagle: We have set out a core offer of extended services and activities that we want all children to be able to access through schools by 2010. This includes a varied menu of study support activities, including sport—at least two hours a week beyond the school day for those who want it. It is for individual local authorities (LAs) and schools to determine what provision best meets the needs of the young people in their area.

Funding for study support is available to all schools and LAs through their base budgets, and also via the School Development Grant which, for Swindon, amounts to £1,366,981 in 2005–06. Funding (approximately £100,000 pa) is also provided for the well established "Playing for Success" Centre at Swindon Town FC, which benefits more than 350 pupils each year.

We have also committed considerable additional funding to support schools in setting up and embedding extended services and activities. A total of £2,050,321 has been allocated to Swindon over three years from 2005–06.

Bicton Church of England School

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the (a) budget for and (b) expenditure on the building of the new Bicton Church of England School in Bicton was. [50089]

Jacqui Smith: The information requested for Bicton Church of England School for the 2004–05 financial year is:

(a) Total planned budget share (including any grants devolved to the school) was £255,875.

(b) Total gross expenditure (including any capital expenditure from revenue) was £271,647.

Notes:

1. Data are drawn from Shropshire local authority's 2004–05 Section 52 Budget and Outturn Statements as at 8 February 2006.

2. The 2004–05 budget information is the combination of the school's total budget share plus any School Standards Grant, Devolved Standards Fund and Excellence in Cities Grant allocated to the school (Threshold and Performance Pay Grant is included in 2005–06).

3. School expenditure does not include any income.

4. In 2004–05 the total resources available to Bicton Church of England School was £296,262. This is the sum of the following:

Balance brought forward

Delegated funds

SEN and minority ethnic pupils

Standards fund residue

Other Government grants

Income generated by schools

5. Shropshire local authority also reported a surplus total revenue balance of just under £25,000 was held by Bicton Church of England School at the end of the 2004–05 financial year.

Bullying

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what training teachers receive to deal with bullying in schools; and how much funding her Department has allocated for training teachers to deal with bullying in schools in (a) West Lancashire and (b) England in the last five years. [51116]

Jacqui Smith: Training has been provided in each Government Office region through the Make The Difference conferences and through training events run by the Anti-Bullying Alliance and direct work by the Alliance with individual schools. Training is also being provided through dissemination events linked to forthcoming advice on countering prejudice driven bullying.

Through the national strategies the Department makes high-quality staff training materials on managing behaviour, including bullying, available to all schools. In addition each local authority is also supported by at least one expert behaviour and attendance consultant in each local authority.

Through the National Programme for Specialist Leaders of Behaviour and Attendance (NPSL-BA), the Department has developed a programme for training specialist staff who have leadership roles in relation to behaviour and attendance, including anti-bullying.

In addition our resources such as the Anti-Bullying Charter and 'Don't Suffer in Silence' offer further support and advice to teachers in this area.

As anti-bullying training funding is not disaggregated or devolved directly, it is not possible to identify national funds or funds for West Lancashire.

Child Care Provision

Mrs. Maria Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many child care places (a) for under fives and (b) in total there were in each year since 1980, broken down by type. [50798]

Beverley Hughes: This information was not collected for the period prior to 1989–90.

Details of the number of child care places available in England for each year between 1990 and 2005 are given in the table.

(a) Figures from Day Care Facilities Surveys (DCFS), 1990–97

	Total number of child care places (a + b + c)	Childminders (a)	Full Daycare (b)	Out of School/ Holiday Clubs (c)	Sessional care (d)
1989–90	303,100	205,600	97,500	No figures	416,400
1990–91	339,400	233,300	106,100	No figures	428,400
1991–92	390,900	254,300	116,800	19,800	414,500
1992–93	469,533	300,700	133,800	35,033	396,900
1993–94	549,300	357,500	147,600	44,200	411,300
1994–95	614,000	373,600	161,500	78,900	410,600
1995–96	646,467	376,200	178,300	91,967	397,700
1996–97	654,900	365,200	193,800	95,900	383,700

(b) Using data from

i. 1997–2003: "Ofsted registered" equivalent statistics generated by DfES from local authority returns; and,

ii. 2003-present: Ofsted registrations

	Total child care places (a + b + c)	Childminders (a)	Full Daycare (b)	Out of School/ Holiday Clubs (c)	Sessional care (d)
1996–97	637,730	309,973	283,975	43,782	—
1997–98	643,736	309,918	283,823	48,995	—
1998–99	688,412	309,423	299,078	79,911	—
1999–00	746,719	304,926	316,021	125,772	—
2000–01	821,537	300,263	337,004	184,270	—
2001–02	892,726	307,485	358,371	226,870	—
2002–03	967,821	300,883	381,550	285,388	280,779
2003–04	1,102,686	319,689	456,298	326,699	274,135
2004–05	1,175,275	316,089	517,975	341,211	249,647

We do not have a breakdown of age groups for childminder, out of school or sessional places. The overwhelming majority of Full Daycare places are for children under the age of 5.

Child Employment

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what assessment she has made of the recommendations of the Better Regulation Task Force on employment law relating to children; and if she will make a statement; [51662]

(2) what plans she has to implement the recommendations of the Better Regulation Task Force on employment law relating to children; [51663]

(3) what discussions she has held with the Department for Trade and Industry on (a) regulations for the time at which children can start work in the morning and (b) the impact of earlier school day starts; [51664]

(4) if she will seek to amend legislation to enable children to start work at 6.30 a.m. in response to the earlier start of the school day in some areas. [51670]

Maria Eagle [holding answer 14 February 2006]: The Government believe that suitable work opportunities, based on individual choice, can be beneficial for young people. Nevertheless, children's entitlement to education is paramount. The existing limits on children's working hours are framed to ensure that neither their readiness to learn when they arrive at school, nor their capacity to do school homework, nor their opportunity for necessary rest and leisure, is compromised by the demands of employment. There are no plans to change this, and no discussions with DTI on the issue have been held.

Guidance has been given to local authorities that Directors of Children's Services should have functions relating to child employment as part of their remit, as recommended by the Task Force. No final decisions have been taken on whether and how the Task Force's other specific proposals will be implemented. They will only be implemented to the extent that they can demonstrate a clear contribution to the key outcomes which we want to see for all children, described in our Green Paper "Every Child Matters".

Class Sizes

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the average class size is in (a) primary schools and (b) secondary schools in (i) England, (ii) the Tees Valley and (iii) Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland. [49436]

Jacqui Smith: The requested information is given in the following table.

Maintained primary and secondary schools[1]: average class size[2,3]—as at January 2005

	Primary			Secondary
	Number of classes	Number of pupils in classes	Average class size	Number of classes	Number of pupils in classes	Average class size
England	146,860	3,851,810	26.2	143,500	3,108,020	21.7
Tees Valley[4]	2,270	56,680	25.0	1,820	40,330	22.2
Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland	330	7,640	23.4	160	3,600	23.1

[1] Includes middle schools as deemed.
[2] One teacher classes.
[3] Classes as taught during one selected period on the day of the census in January.
[4] Includes Hartlepool, Middlesbrough, Redcar and Cleveland, Stockton-on-Tees and Darlington local authorities.

Connexions

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what evidence she has received of fraudulent use being made of the Connexions Card. [50036]

Maria Eagle: The Department has no evidence of Connexions Card holders attempting to claim rewards and discounts available under the scheme fraudulently. However, there is evidence of 17 young people attempting to use the Connexions Card to obtain age related services they were not entitled to. These incidences took place between 2004 and 2006 and were brought to our attention through the action of the police and licensees.

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills whether the Connexions Agency will assist 16-year-olds to apply for benefits to which they are entitled. [50123]

Maria Eagle: The role of Connexions includes ensuring that young people up to the age of 19 years are aware of and able to obtain the benefits to which they are entitled.

The most recent guidance to Connexions services states:

> "The Connexions Service is required to provide young people with general information about Young Persons Bridging Allowance, Jobseekers Allowance, extended Child Benefit and other social security benefits. This includes giving details about how these allowances/benefits can be claimed and the rights and responsibilities associated with them.
> Connexions Services must have agreed arrangements in place to register young people for work or learning, and be able to confirm a young person's registration with Jobcentre Plus where required."

Curriculum Online

Mr. Gauke: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment she has made of the percentage of teachers using Curriculum Online; and what the trends of such usage have been since its introduction. [50964]

Phil Hope: Curriculum Online is a successful way of helping teachers to find appropriate resources to meet the educational needs of individual learners. In 2002, the DfES commissioned the National Centre for Social Research (NatCen) and Bristol university to conduct a four year evaluation of Curriculum Online to examine educational impacts, operational effectiveness and impact on the suppliers of educational digital materials.

The evaluation of educational impacts is being conducted by NatCen and comprises a series of three surveys of teachers (winter 2002, autumn 2004 and the final report in March 2006) and two qualitative studies (the first was published in autumn 2004 and the second in winter 2005). The findings of the qualitative studies are that almost three fifths (58 per cent.) of school respondents in primary schools and 78 per cent. in secondary schools said that they used the Curriculum Online website as a source of information when selecting software.

The latest statistics (September 2005) show that the website attracts around 100 thousand users per month, these figures represent a 300 per cent. increase over September 2004.

Departmental Catering Budget

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what her Department's policy is on the procurement of fair trade produce for consumption on its premises. [49926]

Maria Eagle: The Department encourages the sale of FairTrade and ethical products through our restaurant services that are provided by an external partner and has a range of products available for purchase consisting of coffee, tea, chocolate bars and fruit juices.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Gauke: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate she has made of the savings made in the last two financial years as a consequence of (a) streamlined data collection and (b) reduced reporting and monitoring requirements for schools. [50122]

Jacqui Smith: No quantitative assessment has been made, partly because this would itself place significant burdens on schools. Informal feedback suggests that new data collection arrangements are working effectively, with schools and authorities reporting that processes are more efficient and less resource-intensive, while the data that is made available to them is of greater help for their own management. Six pre-existing surveys have been incorporated into the Schools Census, lowering the overall burdens of collecting from schools.

The Implementation Review Unit (IRU) is an independent panel of serving senior school practitioners which reviews the implementation of existing and new policy initiatives. The IRU has encouraged the Department to introduce a system of impact assessment for all initiatives that have workload implications in schools, including data collection and reporting and monitoring requirements. The 2004–05 IRU annual report welcomed the reduction in the number of new initiatives in 2005, down by 56 per cent. on 2004.

Education Finance

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) how Government grants for education will be affected by the White Paper proposals; [50456]

(2) what changes are expected under the White Paper proposals with respect to councils' allocated education budget; and what assessment she has made of the possible effects on levels of council tax. [50457]

Jacqui Smith: One of the main changes arising from the White Paper will be a greater emphasis on Personalised Learning, with its stronger focus on English and mathematics, and on those children who have a particular gift or talent. We see this greater focus as being key to driving up standards and to tackling the persistent achievement gaps between social and ethnic groups.

As I stated in the Schools Funding announcement on 7 December 2005, funds within the new Dedicated Schools Grant (DSG) have been specifically earmarked for Personalised Learning. Primary schools will receive an additional £230 million by 2007–08, while £335 million will be available for secondary schools to deliver personalised learning for 11 to 14-year-olds.

Those schools with the highest number of children who have fallen behind in English and maths will receive a further targeted £60 million grant in each of 2006–07 and 2007–08, shared equally across the primary and secondary sectors, to provide more effective one-to-one and small group tuition.

In making arrangements for the DSG and its distribution, we have allowed for the White Paper policies of more independent schools entering the maintained sector, and for more schools becoming academies. We do not otherwise expect that the White Paper will affect the Schools Budgets of authorities.

In so far as White Paper policies cause increased costs to affect the LEA Budgets of authorities, we will provide extra funding under the New Burdens rules. We do not therefore expect there to be an impact on council tax.

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what factors determined the funding allocation for Hertfordshire Local Education Authority's dedicated schools grant per pupil for 2006–07. [50776]

Jacqui Smith: I refer the hon. Member to my statement of 7 December, which set out the factors used to determine the allocations of Dedicated Schools Grant for all authorities. That statement and more detailed information may be found on the Teachernet website at:

www.teachernet.gov.uk/management/schoolfunding/2006-07_funding_arrangements/

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what her Department's estimate is of the total cost to public funds of putting a child through state schooling from the age of 5 to 16 years. [51007]

Jacqui Smith: The estimated average cost of educating a pupil from the age of 5 to 16 years is £45,000.

Notes:

1. The figure quoted is an estimate and has been rounded to the nearest £5,000.

2. The cost of educating from age 5 to 16 has been calculated as follows. The per pupil funding figure for 5–10 year-olds in England in 2005–06 is multiplied by 6 (for the 6 years of funding a child would receive between the age of 5 and 10) and the per pupil figure for 11–15 year olds is multiplied by 5. The two figures are then added.

3. Figures in 2005–06 prices.

4. Total funding also includes all revenue grants in DfES Departmental Expenditure Limits relevant to pupils aged 5–15 and exclude Education Maintenance Allowances (EMAs) and grants not allocated at LEA level.

5. The pupil numbers used to convert £ million figures to £ per pupil are those underlying the EFS settlement calculations.

Education Funding

Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what extra funds are available for schools with outstanding results. [50169]

Jacqui Smith: We do not provide additional funding to schools for the achievement of outstanding results, but we are actively harnessing the strengths of our most effective schools for the benefit of the system as a whole. Where schools are playing a wider role in support of the education system we make funding available to support that commitment. We have offered the opportunity for specialist schools that meet performance criteria at specialist re-designation, to take on a leading role. In 2005, high performing schools had the opportunity to take on a second specialism, a vocational second specialism, training school status, or participate in a raising achievement programme. Schools receive a minimum of £60,000 per annum to work in partnership with other schools to raise standards and improve pupil outcomes across the partnership.

At primary level around 1,800 of our most successful Head teachers are working as Primary Strategy Consultant Leaders (PSCLs) to help the leadership teams in underperforming schools in their local authority to develop and improve teaching and learning across their schools. Each PSCL receives £8,000 to cover the time spent out of their school. We have also funded Primary National Strategy Learning Networks which enable groups of primary schools to work together to raise standards in English and mathematics. Lead schools in the networks, which are usually successful or high performing schools, receive £17,000 in total to support the network activity.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will make a statement on the allocation of funding for schools in rural areas in 2006–07. [50219]

Jacqui Smith: The formula used to calculate Schools Formula Spending Share for 2005–06 and previous years took account of the extra spending needed by sparsely populated rural authorities, mainly to keep larger numbers of small primary schools open; the additional costs for secondary schools are mainly from home to school transport, funding for which was delivered through the LEA FSS for 2005–06, and which continues to be part of the local government finance settlement. Since the formula for Dedicated Schools Grant starts from local authorities' spending on schools for 2005–06, which in two thirds of cases was above Schools FSS, so that will also take account of the extra spending needed by rural authorities. In distributing their Schools Budget, most local authority formulae take account of the need to provide extra funding for smaller schools, to allow them to meet the extra costs they face, that a purely pupil led formula would not deliver.

Mr. Rob Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills why funding for colleges with students taking more than four AS levels is being reduced in the 2006/07 funding allocation. [51095]

Bill Rammell: The funding colleges receive for students taking larger programmes of study is reduced on the principle that colleges derive economies of scale as pupils take more intensive programmes, as costs do not rise in proportion to the size of the programme. It will continue to be the case that no funding is paid for parts of programmes larger than the equivalent of 6 AS/A2 levels. The current arrangements allow for the equivalent of 5AS/A2 levels to be fully funded with the sixth being funded at half the standard rate.

On 21 October as part of the announcements of our funding strategy for post 16 education and skills in 2006/07 and 2007/08 we set out our plans to revise the maximum qualification funding for both school sixth forms and FE colleges. The revised arrangement for colleges will allow full funding for the equivalent of 4.25 AS/A2 levels with the next 1.75 AS/A2 levels being funded at two thirds the standard rate. The revised maximum level of funding has been set to reflect the aim to encourage breadth at AS with more specialisation at A2.

The maximum qualification funding does not include the additional per pupil funding available for key skills, tuition support and enrichment activities. It is possible to make use of this funding to fund courses of enrichment activities rather than seek funding for such courses as separate qualifications. We need to ensure an equitable share of resources between schools and across a range of pupils with different needs. The LSC's funding system recognises both the additional costs of larger programmes while maintaining a proper level of funding for those pupils unable to study a larger number of AS/A2 levels.

Education Procurement Centre of Excellence

Mr. Gauke: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment she has made of the (a) changes in performance and (b) savings made as a consequence of the establishment of the Education Procurement Centre of Excellence. [50127]

Bill Rammell: Since the Department for Education and Skills established the Centre for Procurement Performance (CPP) in April 2005, the team has been working pro-actively with the schools sector, children services, Further Education (FE) and Higher Education (HE) to embed the principles of the Gershon Review and secure commitment from the front line. Working with and through key stakeholders in these sectors, CPP has engaged with procurement experts in the sectors, working in partnership on projects and pilots that will help deliver efficiency gains.

This has resulted in nine projects currently underway and a further 14 projects due to commence shortly. At this stage it is too early to assess changes in procurement performance as a result.

The validated procurement efficiency gains to date have amounted to £87 million.

Education Professionals

Mr. Gauke: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps she has taken to enable frontline professionals in (a) schools, (b) colleges and (c) higher education institutions to use their time more productively; and what assessment she has made of the efficiency gains made as a consequence. [50113]

Jacqui Smith: My Department has developed a wide range of initiatives to enable frontline professionals to use their time more productively. These focus on greater use of ICT; reducing bureaucracy; and workforce reorganisation and training.

We are promoting the use of ICT in schools to enable easier and quicker assessment of students' progress and simpler, more timely, and more personalised remedial action to be taken. It will also enable easier and quicker access to online resources, make lesson planning easier and save time for teachers; and lead to better quality lessons and an enriched classroom environment which improve standards for our children.

We have better embedded ICT in the further education sector through the development of a self assessment tool for institutions, better provision of on-line e-learning materials and through development of e-learning training provision for leaders.

To minimise any unnecessary bureaucracy burdens on frontline staff and thereby help them to function more productively we have established gateway groups in each sector to look at the level of bureaucracy being imposed on the frontline and to challenge existing ways of working with the frontline and between agencies. In, for example, the Higher Education sector we have established the Higher Education Regulation Review Group as an independent group of practitioners working in the HE sector and asked them to help identify new and additional ways to reduce existing burdens, as well as reviewing all new Government policies to try and ensure they do not create unnecessary bureaucracy.

The workforce reforms we have introduced have also helped professionals to make better use of their time. In January 2003, the Government, employers and majority of the school workforce unions signed a National Agreement on Raising Standards and Tackling Workload that led to a series of changes to teachers' contracts. Teachers have been freed to teach and a wide range of support staff have been deployed to work with teachers in improving standards of teaching and learning.

Each of these initiatives contributes to our Gershon target of realising £4.3 billion efficiency gains by 2007–08. Productive time savings are expected to be the biggest slice of those gains.

My Department reported progress towards our Gershon Review target in the Department's Autumn Performance Report. It will report further progress in the Departmental Annual Report which we expect to publish in April.

Efficiency Gains

Mr. Gauke: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment she has made of the of the efficiency gains that have been achieved in the last two years as a consequence of improvements in school-level financial management. [50125]

Jacqui Smith: Because of the relatively recent inception of policies to assist schools in their financial management, it is too early to evaluate of their success, especially when success is measured in terms of improved pupil attainment. Policies that have been launched include: the Financial Benchmarking Website (November 2003), the Financial Management Standard and Toolkit (May 2004) and focussed financial management training for finance officers, head teachers and bursars/school business managers in schools and local authorities.

Our measurement techniques have been designed to ensure that we can monitor and report efficiency gains throughout the Gershon review period, which starts in the current financial year, 2005–06. Because of the timing of our data collections from schools we shall be able to report the first of these measures towards the end of the current calendar year.

We do, however, collect very detailed financial benchmarking website user statistics, so we are able to track accurately how many schools and local authorities are using the tools, which provides an indication of the gains we may expect to see in subsequent years. Case study information is also gathered, providing information about the kind of gains schools make through using the website. An example of such a gain was a school which reported gains of £6,000 a year on water rates as a result of action taken after using the benchmarking website.

Mr. Gauke: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what savings have been obtained in (a) schools, (b) colleges and (c) higher education institutions in the last two financial years as a consequence of (i) investment in information communication technology, (ii) reducing administrative burdens and (iii) work force reform. [50126]

Phil Hope: My Department does not keep detailed management information on spending decisions by individual schools, colleges and higher education institutions. However, we have put in place methods to measure efficiency gains accruing through a range of specific initiatives which contribute to our Gershon efficiency target. These are set out in our Efficiency Technical Note. In most cases the gains are recyclable at the frontline into other activities rather than being clawed back by the Department.

My Department reports progress towards our efficiency target through existing departmental reporting processes. We reported progress towards our target in the Department's autumn performance report and will report further progress in the departmental annual report which we expect to publish in April.

Family and Friends Placements

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what strategies her Department is pursuing to assist local authorities further to develop and support family and friends placements for care of children; and if she will make a statement. [50336]

Maria Eagle: We are committed to helping local authorities to improve the use and support of family and friends carers, both for children who are looked after by local authorities and those who remain the legal responsibility of their families.

Information has already been included on the Every Child Matters website about the legal arrangements for caring for a child by family and friends, which cover issues such as parental responsibility, the availability of universal services and benefits, together with details of support that may be provided by local authorities. Practitioners may find this useful when providing advice to carers and potential carers.

Work is being taken forward to ensure that children who cannot live with their birth parents are instead enabled to live in the most appropriate alternative placement for them.

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when she next plans to review the operation of the Common Assessment Framework with regard to children in family and friends placements. [50337]

Maria Eagle: The Common Assessment Framework aims to help identify children's additional needs at an early stage, taking a holistic view of their circumstances, including a specific focus on the involvement of parents or carers. When needs have been identified, the Framework will help relevant practitioners to communicate and agree timely and co-ordinated support.

Practitioners will be able to use the Framework to assess the additional needs of children who are cared for by family or friends, where that would add value. However in many cases such children will already have assessments, and there is no intention to duplicate processes.

The Framework is currently being reviewed through trials in a number of local areas across England, with a view to national implementation over 2006–08. The University of East Anglia, on behalf of my Department, is currently evaluating the trials to inform revisions to the relevant forms, processes, guidance and training materials, which the Government intends to issue by April 2006. The Government's intention is that the Framework will continue to include a specific focus on assessing a child's needs for parenting and care, and that it will be relevant for use with children in families and friends placements where appropriate.

Framework Contracts

Mr. Gauke: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the effects on costs have been in the last two financial years as a consequence of nationally-brokered framework contracts for the acquisition of (a) computers and (b) interactive whiteboards for schools. [50970]

Phil Hope: The British Educational Communications and Technology Agency (Becta) is making significant progress in delivering improved value for money for schools. The approach of national frameworks linked to regional aggregation of demands, coupled with local choice, provides a range of benefits for schools which otherwise would not be realised. The overall effect has been to reduce costs significantly. The total saving from these initiatives so far is £75.8 million.

Savings achieved through the laptop framework agreement are £17.6 million in 2003–04; £9 million in 2004–05; and £4.5 million from April 2005 to December 2005. Savings achieved through the interactive whiteboard framework agreement are £17 million in 2004–05; and £6.6 million from April 2005 to December 2005.

Significant progress is being made on operating and office productivity software used on computers. Becta negotiated a memorandum of understanding with Microsoft. The potential savings for schools are £46 million over three years and equates to typical savings for schools of between 20 per cent. and 37 per cent. dependent upon the mix of software used. Savings achieved so far are £2.6 million from January 2004 to March 2004; £10.6 million in 2004–05; and £7.9 million from April 2005 to December 2005.

Becta is developing a more comprehensive range of framework agreements in order to obtain best value for money on behalf of our schools.

Further Education

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will extend fee remission for further education courses to pensioners in receipt of pensions credit. [50673]

Bill Rammell: We are committed to ensuring further education (FE) serves the needs of the whole community and those learners, and their dependants, receiving a means tested benefit, and unemployed people on Jobseekers Allowance will continue to benefit from free tuition on publicly funded courses. Older learners receiving the Pension (Guarantee) Credit are already eligible for free learning on publicly funded FE courses. The Learning and Skills Council policies on funding free learning (fee remission) are based on the principle that those on low incomes should not have to contribute to the tuition costs of their learning. Learners of any age will continue to have access to literacy, numeracy and English language courses free of charge, as well as free tuition to undertake a first full level 2 qualification.

GCSE Results

Mr. Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what proportion of pupils achieved five GCSEs grade A* to C including mathematics and English in (a) community schools with a specialism, (b) foundation schools with a specialism, (c) voluntary controlled schools with a specialism and (d) voluntary aided schools with a specialism in 2004–05; [50024]

(2) To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many secondary schools with a specialism are (a) community schools, (b) foundation schools, (c) voluntary controlled schools and (d) voluntary aided schools; [50025]

(3) how many secondary (a) foundation schools and (b) voluntary aided schools have sixth forms; and what proportion of pupils gained (i) five GCSEs grades A* to C and (ii) five GCSEs grades A* to C including English and mathematics in each category of school in the last year for which figures are available; [50026]

(4) how many specialist secondary schools (a) with and (b) without sixth forms are (i) community schools, (ii) voluntary aided schools, (iii) voluntary controlled schools and (iv) foundation schools; and what proportion of pupils gained (A) five GCSEs A*-C and (B) five GCSEs A*-C including English and mathematics in each category of specialist secondary school in the last year for which figures are available. [50027]

Jacqui Smith: The information requested is outlined in the following table.

2005 GCSE and equivalent results for 15-year-old pupils by school type, specialist status and sixth form status

GNVQs

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many vacancies there were on GNVQ courses in (a) Leicester and (b) England in each year between 1997 and 2005. [50144]

Phil Hope: The figures requested are not collected centrally.

Grammar Schools

Mr. Davey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many grammar schools have a specialism; and what proportion of pupils achieved five GCSEs A*-C including mathematics and English in grammar schools with a specialism in the last year for which figures are available. [50045]

Jacqui Smith: The information requested is outlined in the table.

2005 GCSE and equivalent results for 15-yea- old pupils in grammar schools: results broken down by specialist status as at September 2004.

Specialist	Number of schools	Percentage of 15-year-old pupils achieving: 5+ A*-C	5+ A*-C including English and Maths
Specialist	120	97.9	96.7
Non-specialist	44	97.7	96.2
Total	164	97.9	96.5

Head Teachers

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment her Department has made of the potential impact of the introduction of the extended schools scheme on head teachers' work-life balance. [49310]

Jacqui Smith: By 2010 we expect all schools to be providing access to a core offer of extended services, including child care from 8 am to 6 pm; a varied menu of study support activities; parenting support; swift and easy referral to specialist services and wider community use of facilities. Head teachers, along with others, will want to ensure that these services are planned to support the overall vision of the school and contribute towards the School Improvement Plan. However, we do not expect teachers to provide or head teachers to directly manage all these new services.

Schools working with their local authority may wish to nominate an extended schools co-ordinator to develop services, and may work in clusters with other schools and children's centres in their area. We are also encouraging schools to work in partnership with existing local private and voluntary sector providers.

The National Remodelling Team will take a lead role in supporting schools through the development of extended services to ensure that it is consistent with the tenets of work force reform. Extended services can help remove barriers to learning and give support to pupils with their non-educational problems, helping school heads and teachers focus on their core job of teaching.

We do recognise that the context of school leadership continues to evolve quickly, and so we have welcomed the School Teachers Review Body's timely recommendation for an independent study to report by December 2006 on the roles, responsibilities, structures and reward systems of the leadership group, looking at both current practice and likely future developments. We will announce shortly further details on the independent study.

Higher Education

Edward Miliband: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many 16 to 19-year-old parents have returned to higher education in Doncaster North constituency since 1997. [50587]

Bill Rammell: The information is not held centrally.

Infant Schools

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will take steps to amend the funding formula for infant schools to reduce fluctuations arising from unpredictable pupil numbers. [50983]

Jacqui Smith: With the introduction of new funding arrangements from April 2006, all local authorities will be required to use a single pupil count, based on pupil numbers in the January before the start of each financial year, to determine their schools' budget shares. The use of a single pupil count will make a significant contribution to improved certainty of funding for our schools.

At the same time, fluctuations in pupil numbers may cause difficulty for some schools and so our school funding regulations allow authorities to vary school budget shares in the face of exceptional pupil turbulence. The new funding arrangements also recognise that primary and infant schools may operate an admission point for their reception pupils in the summer term that the use of a single pupil count would not recognise. Our school funding regulations therefore allow authorities to make an adjustment in the January pupil numbers used to determine a school's budget share, by taking account of the number of pupils admitted at the beginning of the previous summer term.

International Baccalaureate

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment her Department has made of the potential for use of the International Baccalaureate for post-16 education. [51009]

Jacqui Smith: We have always acknowledged the particular strengths of the International Baccalaureate (IB). But we are clear that the IB was not designed to be, and is not, a suitable model to meet the needs of all young people in this country.

Key Stage 2

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what percentage of primary school leavers had a reading age of 11 in each of the last five years. [48129]

Jacqui Smith: The requested information is not available. The Department does however; collect data on pupils' achievements in the end of Key Stage 2 National Curriculum tests. At the end of Key Stage 2 pupils are expected to reach Level 4 in English. Pupils are assessed in both reading and writing to arrive at their overall level in the English test.

The National Curriculum tests measure the literacy skills that children are able to demonstrate at different levels of attainment. Children who reach Level 3 of the National Curriculum are assessed as having effective English skills and can demonstrate a good standard of reading. They are able to read a range of texts accurately and independently, tackle unfamiliar words and self correct when their reading doesn't make sense. Children achieving Level 4 have access to more complex forms of language and can access more complex ideas. They can use inference and deduction and can locate and use ideas and information.

Achievement of the target Level 4 provides children with a solid foundation in learning from which to access the full secondary curriculum. Pupils who achieve level 4 or above at the end of primary school are six times more likely to achieve 5 A*- C grades at GCSE. This is why the Government has set a target for 85 per cent. of 11-year-olds to achieve Level 4 or above in English.

The information provided in the table shows the proportion of pupils achieving Level 3 and Level 4 or above in the KS2 National Curriculum reading tests since 2001.

	2001	2002	2003	2004	2005[1]
Percentage of pupils achieving Level 4 or above in KS2 reading	82	80	81	83	84
Percentage of pupils achieving Level 3 or above in KS2 reading	92	91	91	91	92

[1] 2005 figures are provisional. All other figures are final.

Learning and Skills Council

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment she has made of the impact of industrial action on the re-structuring of the Learning and Skills Council; and if she will make a statement. [50038]

Bill Rammell: The Learning and Skills Council has been having regular discussions with the trade unions at both national and local level. I am encouraged that these discussions have continued beyond the end of the formal consultation period. There is currently no industrial action as a result of LSC restructuring, and I very much hope that it can be avoided.

List 99

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of those who received a caution for having indecent pictures of children were placed on List 99 in the last year for which figures are available. [48436]

Jacqui Smith: The Department does not collect the information that you require in the format requested.

Literacy/Numeracy

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what plans she has to introduce further measures to combat poor literacy and numeracy skills among adults. [49435]

Phil Hope: The Skills for Life Strategy, launched by the Prime Minister in 2001, is the first comprehensive strategy to tackle adult literacy, language and numeracy skills across England. Since 2001, 3.7 millions adults have taken up 7.8 million learning opportunities and 1,130,000 of these learners went on to achieve at least one Skills for Life qualification. The Government plans to help 2.25 million adults to achieve a literacy, language or numeracy qualification by 2010.

Since the launch of the strategy, the Government have put in place the first national literacy, language and numeracy infrastructure, consisting of national standards, curriculum and qualifications. The next phase of the Skills for Life strategy will focus on raising the quality of teaching and learning, professionalizing the workforce, engaging adults who can benefit most from improving their skills, embedding literacy and numeracy learning in wider learning programmes (particularly vocational learning), and fostering progression to wider and higher levels of learning.

Mr. Vaizey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will make a statement on the progress of the review of the national literacy strategy. [49998]

Jacqui Smith: The Primary National Strategy has been asked to renew and update its framework for the teaching of literacy. It has been conducting a period of informal consultation, including discussions with consultancy groups drawn from national samples of head teachers, teachers, local authority representatives, subject and professional organisations and higher education institutions. A consultation forum has been set up on the DfES website.

The Primary National Strategy has started work on writing a draft revised framework for more formal consultation, taking into account points arising from the informal consultation and the interim report of the Rose review of the teaching of early reading. This work will be completed by drawing on the findings that Jim Rose will set out in his forthcoming final report. The draft document will set out key learning objectives for the Foundation Stage and each year of Key Stages 1 and 2, giving a clear sense of the progression expected. It will also provide examples based on a particular year of the range of supporting material that the revised framework will marshal to ensure that teachers and practitioners have easy access to guidance and resources to help them plan and execute high-quality teaching. The draft revised framework will be published for consultation at Easter 2006.

Mathematics

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many students chose to take (a) mathematics and (b) further mathematics A-level in each academic year between 1997 and 2006 in (i) Leicester and (ii) England. [51006]

Jacqui Smith: The following table shows GCE A level entries in Mathematics and Further Mathematics in Leicester Local Authority and in England

	1997	1998	1999	2000	2001	2002	2003	2004	2005
Leicester
Mathematics	280	323	332	294	292	237	207	246	298
Further Mathematics	18	23	10	14	15	8	7	11	10
England
Mathematics	43,167	43,646	43,155	41,635	41,934	33,546	33,850	35,057	35,486
Further Mathematics	3,312	3,466	3,467	3,379	3,357	2,941	2,982	3,246	3,210

Note:

The figures include students in maintained school sixth forms, Academies, City Technology Colleges, Sixth Form Colleges and general FE Sector Institutions. Independent schools are not included.

National Institute of Economic and Social Research

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much public funding the National Institute of Economic and Social Research received in each year since 1997–98 in (a) framework and (b) projected funding; and what the purpose was in each case. [49816]

Bill Rammell: To gather this information would accrue a disproportionate cost. What I can do is provide details of public funding awarded to the National Institute of Economic and Social Research as payment for carrying out research projects on behalf of the Department for Education and Skills.

New School Buildings

Andrew Gwynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment her Department has made of the suitability of former landfill sites for the development of new school buildings; and how many new schools have been built on such sites in each local education authority area in the North West of England. [51138]

Jacqui Smith: The Department has not carried out any studies on the suitability of using former landfill sites for the development of new school buildings, and nor does it have any data on how many schools have been built on such sites. Local planning authorities may well hold this information.

Ofsted

Mr. Gauke: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate she has made of the savings made in the last two financial years as a consequence of a lighter touch process for Ofsted inspections. [50124]

Jacqui Smith: The new lighter touch inspection of schools commenced in September 2005. Changes in the delivery of inspections will result in annual savings within Ofsted of £15 million.

School Food

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many primary schools in England have vending machines that offer chocolate. [49859]

Jacqui Smith: This information is not collected centrally.

School Funding (Data)

Peter Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if, in her review of the funding methodology for schools from 2006–07, she will make it her policy to ensure full comparability of data with earlier years. [49418]

Jacqui Smith: Following the changes to school and local authority funding for 2006–07 and 2007–08, the Department is working on figures for spending on school provision in earlier years that are comparable with the new funding system based around the Dedicated Schools Grant, on both a cash and per pupil basis, and will place them in the Library as soon as they are available. As we take forward the review of funding for schools, we will keep in mind the need to maintain comparability of data going forward to 2008–09 and beyond.

School Hours

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what her policy is on the time of day at which children start school; [50266]

(2) at what time of day secondary school children start school in each local education authority area; [50274]

(3) what research she has evaluated on the time of day at which school children in EU member states start school; and if she will make a statement. [50272]

Jacqui Smith: The governing body of each maintained school determines the time at which schools start, and this is not uniform within individual local education authority areas. My Department does not collect information on start times in individual schools. I have not received any research on the time of day at which school children in EU member states start school.

School Music Facilities

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what funding her Department has made available for school music facilities in (a) Tamworth and (b) England in each academic year since 1997. [51416]

Jacqui Smith: Capital allocations made to Staffordshire local authority and its schools are set out in the following table:

	£ million
1997–98	7.4
1998–99	28.4
1999–2000	18.5
2000–01	34.1
2001–02	27.4
2002–03	32.9
2003–04	35.5
2004–05	41.1
2005–06	29.2

Capital allocations to local authorities and schools are higher than ever before. In 2005–06 they are £5.5 billion and they are planned to rise to £6.3 billion in 2007–08, an increase from £683 million in 1996–97.

Capital allocations made to local authorities and schools in England since 1997–98 are set out in the table below:

	£ billion
97–98	0.6
98–99	1.3
99–00	1.6
00–01	2.5
01–02	2.5
02–03	3.3
03–04	4.2
04–05	4.9
05–06	5.5

Allocations are made on a financial year basis, not the academic year. It is the responsibility of schools and local authorities to determine how they allocate these funds to different projects, including enhancing school music facilities, taking account of local needs and priorities.

Records are not held centrally that show how much of this funding is spent on school music facilities, neither am I able to provide a breakdown for Tamworth.

School Selection

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what factors she took into account when deciding not to allow selection in schools by academic ability. [50799]

Jacqui Smith: Since 1998, it has been unlawful for schools to introduce new selection by high academic ability. It has long been our view that selection by academic ability is divisive.

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what factors she took into account when deciding to allow selection in schools by (a) sporting and (b) physical ability. [50800]

Jacqui Smith: Schools with certain specialisms, including physical education or sport have, since 1999, been able to select up to 10 per cent. of their pupils based upon their aptitude for subjects prescribed by the Education (Aptitude for Particular Subjects) Regulations 1999.

We allow this flexibility so that pupils with an aptitude in one of the prescribed subjects can gain access to schools with specialist teaching when they might not otherwise have been able to do so. Physical education and sport were prescribed because we considered that it was possible to assess aptitude in them as opposed to academic ability.

It is for schools' admission authorities to determine whether they wish to adopt these arrangements.

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will list the criteria on which maintained secondary schools may select pupils. [50805]

Jacqui Smith: Maintained secondary schools may select 10 per cent. of their intake by ability in subjects prescribed by the Education (Aptitude for Particular Subjects) Regulations 1999. Any tests used must be to assess aptitude for the particular subject, and not ability or aptitude for another subject.

Legislation prevents schools from introducing selection by academic ability as part of their admission arrangements, and only those schools that selected on this basis before 1998 may continue to do so.

Grammar schools and schools which are allowed to continue to select part of their intake on the basis of high academic ability may allocate places to top scorers in their entrance test, or set a pass mark. Where there is a pass mark, if more children pass the test than there are places available, the school must apply other criteria to determine who to make offers to. These admission criteria must comply with legislation and be set with regard to guidance in the School Admissions Code of Practice, which requires them to be clear, fair, and objective.

Schools (Newcastle-upon-Tyne)

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what proportion of pupils of secondary schools in Newcastle-upon-Tyne achieved (a) English GCSE grades A to C, (b) mathematics GCSE grades A to C, (c) no GCSEs, (d) five GCSE grades A to C and (e) GNVQ four grades A to C equivalents in each of the last three years for which figures are available. [49347]

Jacqui Smith: The information requested on the number of pupils achieving various qualifications in Newcastle-upon-Tyne local authority can be found it the table.

GCSE achievements of 15-year-old pupils[1] in Newcastle-upon-Tyne local authority

		% of pupils achieving
	Number of pupils	English GCSE (A-C)*	Mathematics GCSE (A-C)*	No GCSE passes[2]	5 GCSE A-C passes[3]*	4 GNVQ grades A-C[4]*
2005	2,621	46.4	39.2	7.5	36.4	25.4
2004	2,784	44.3	38.4	8.5	36.3	15.5
2003	2,917	43.2	36.7	10.1	35.4	6.9

[1] Age at the start of the academic year
[2] Pupils achieving no passes at grades A*-G in GCSEs only
[3] Pupils achieving at least five passes at grades A*-C in GCSEs only
[4] Pupils achieving the equivalent of at least one full Intermediate GNVQ

Schools for the Hearing Impaired

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to her answer of 12 January 2006, Official Report, column 830W, on schools for the hearing impaired, how many of the special schools approved to make provision for pupils with hearing impairment are schools for the deaf; and how many schools for the deaf there were in each year since 1996. [48247]

Jacqui Smith: The available information is shown in the table. Numbers of schools that indicated they were approved to make provision for hearing impaired pupils, and no other category of need, are also shown in the table.

Special Needs

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what guidelines have been issued by her Department to local education authorities on the allocation of special needs funding. [50116]

Jacqui Smith: In May 2004 the Department published guidance to local authorities "The Management of SEN Expenditure", which can be viewed online at www.teachernet.gov.uk/senexpenditure. It includes information and recommendations on delegating SEN resources to mainstream schools and also on the monitoring and accountability arrangements that local authorities should put in place to ensure that pupils' needs are being met.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will make a statement on the role of the Index of Multiple Deprivation in the establishment of guidelines for the allocation of special needs funding. [50117]

Jacqui Smith: Our funding guidance "The Management of SEN Expenditure", published in 2004, included advice to local authorities on developing a funding formula to support most pupils with additional and special educational needs. The guidance included information on the most commonly used indicators and the Index of Multiple Deprivation was suggested as an indicator of deprivation. Other commonly used indicators include prior attainment based upon end of key stage test data; a social need factor such as free school meals; a turbulence factor based on unplanned admissions and leavers; and the number of children for whom English is a second language.

State Education (Procurement Budget)

Mr. Gauke: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the total procurement budget for the state education sector has been for the last three financial years; and what the project budgeted is for the next three financial years. [50112]

Jacqui Smith: The Department for Education and Skills does not have a specific budget for procurement that it allocates to the state education sector. The Government believes that educational institutions should be responsible for managing their funding according to their individual priorities and to make their own expenditure decisions.

Data on non-pay expenditure is available for 2003–04 which amounts to approximately £13 billion. This will include expenditure on procurement as well as running costs and capital expenditure. It is not possible to break down the non-pay expenditure further.

Student Mobility

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what plans she has to support UK student mobility within the European Union in the years 2007 to 2013. [51211]

Bill Rammell: The Government will continue to encourage UK higher education students to take part in Erasmus, the European Action Scheme for the Mobility of University Students. We will work with the national agency responsible for Erasmus to promote the benefits of student mobility.

Sure Start

Edward Miliband: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many children living in disadvantaged areas of Doncaster North constituency participated in Sure Start local programmes in the last period for which figures are available. [50592]

Beverley Hughes: There are six Sure Start local programmes in Doncaster reaching a total of 3,898 children under the age of four. Three of the Sure Start local programmes are based within Doncaster North reaching a total of 2,192 children: Sure Start Moorends and the Willows covers 429 children; Sure Start Bentley, Central and Adwick serves 951 children and Sure Start Spa Spiders which covers 812 children.

Teacher Training

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the Training and Development Agency category rating is of each school-centred initial teacher training schemes in the single secondary subject of physical education. [51470]

Jacqui Smith: The following table shows the quality grading of school-centred initial teacher training (SCITT) providers which offer physical education (PE) as an initial teacher training (ITT) route.

Provider	Quality category
Chiltern Training Group	C
Colchester SCITT	C
Marches Consortium SCITT	C
North East Partnership	B
Suffolk and Norfolk Secondary SCITT	C
Titan Partnership	C
West Midlands Consortium	B

Note:
The quality scale comprises five categories:
A—Very good;
B—Good;
C—Satisfactory;
D—Unsatisfactory; and Non-compliant.

In academic year 2006/07 there will be seven SCITT providers offering PE. These providers will offer about 5 per cent. of the available places.

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what criteria are used by the Training and Development Agency in allocation rounds for school-centred initial teacher training schemes. [51473]

Jacqui Smith: The criteria used by the Training and Development Agency for Schools (TDA) when making allocations of initial teacher training (ITT) places are the same for higher education institutions (HEI) and school-centred initial teacher training institutions. The overwhelming influence on allocations decisions is the quality of ITT offered by the provider, determined through independent inspection by the Office for Standards in Education (Ofsted).

These criteria are set out annually for all providers in an 'invitation to bid' issued by the TDA each July and are further described in their allocations manual. Both the letter and the manual are publicly available on the TDA website: http://www.tda.gov.uk/partners/funding/fundingallocations/allocations.aspx

The criteria for 2006/07 and 2007/08 allocations are listed as follows:

Quality of provision. The TDA give priority to bids from providers with high Ofsted quality gradings;

Track record in recruiting from under-represented groups in primary. Priority is given to bids from providers with good track records in recruiting primary trainees from minority ethnic groups and/or men (greater than 1.5 times the national average);

Denomination. Priority is given to bids from denominational over non-denominational providers if analysis shows the balance needs to be adjusted;

Viable cohort size. Priority is given to bids from providers with small cohorts that need additional or recycled places to make those cohorts of an economic size;

Regional need. Priority is given to bids from providers in regions or sub-regions where vacancies are particularly high (Greater London, the West Midlands, the South East and the Eastern Area Government Office regions);

Training, standards or management and quality assurance. Priority is given to providers receiving a grade 1 for their training, standards or management and quality assurance cells when inspected by Ofsted; and Qualified teacher status (QTS. Priority is given to providers with a strong track record in converting completers with QTS into newly qualified teachers in maintained schools as evidenced by their performance profiles data (providers with completion rates greater than average plus 10 per cent.).

Teachers

Mr. Gauke: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will make a statement on the effects on costs of introducing a new pay structure for the upper pay spine for teachers. [50966]

Jacqui Smith: As a result of the January 2004 Pay Agreement the potential annual spend of £700 million on upper pay spine costs is reduced to a more manageable £400 million per annum in the steady state. We now have a clear framework for rewarding our best and most experienced teachers and the first Excellent Teacher Scheme appointments will be made in September.

Mr. Gauke: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what estimate she has made of the amount of time spent on administrative tasks by teachers; and what steps she has taken to reduce (a) the number of and (b) the time spent on such tasks. [50967]

Jacqui Smith: The independent study into teacher workload conducted by PricewaterhouseCoopers in 2001 identified that two-thirds of a teacher's time was spent on activities other than teaching. Following proposals made by the School Teachers' Review Body and extensive consultation, the National Agreement on Raising Standards and Tackling Workload was signed in January 2003 by Government, employers and the majority of school workforce unions. The agreement contained a series of phased changes to teachers' contracts including, from September 2003, that teachers would no longer be routinely required to perform administrative or clerical tasks.

In order to assess the amount of time spent on such tasks by teachers, the Department uses the Office for Manpower Economics (OME) Teachers' Workload Diary Survey. This survey provides independently collected data on the hours and working patterns of some 2,000 randomly selected teachers in schools in the maintained sector. The survey asks teachers to record the type and duration of activities undertaken in one week in March. Surveys have been carried out in 1994, 1996, 2000, 2003, 2004 and 2005. Estimates from the survey data of the average amount of time spent by teachers in schools each week on various categories of activity, including administrative and clerical tasks, are shown below for each year the survey has been run:

	Admin and clerical tasks
	Primary	Secondary
1994	6.8	4.5
1996	7.8	4.4
2000	7.0	4.6
2003	6.9	4.4
2004	7.1	4.1
2005	5.9	3.8

Undergraduates

Mr. Vaizey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many undergraduates the Government expects to study in the 2006/07 academic year; and if she will make a statement. [49996]

Bill Rammell: The number of full-time and part-time UK domiciled undergraduates studying at English Higher Education institutions and Further Education colleges in the 2006/07 academic year is projected to be 1,400,000[1]. This represents a planned increase of nearly 20,000 (1.5 per cent.) on the projected figure for 2005/06. Projections of HE student numbers are issued each year in the Department's Annual Report and a revised projection will be available on publication of the 2006 report.

[1] Figure is on a headcount DfES whole year count basis and is rounded to the nearest 10,000.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Community Renewables Initiative

Colin Challen: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what consultations his Department has undertaken on the Community Renewables Initiative. [50678]

Malcolm Wicks: The DTI along with other partner organisations commissioned a report into the need for the type of advice service provided by the CRI. This report was circulated to members of the CRI and is now being used to inform ongoing discussions into the future of the CRI.

Colin Challen: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether the Community Renewables Initiative will receive financial support after 31 March. [50704]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 13 February 2006]: Discussions are still ongoing between DTI and other Government Departments and it s not possible to give an answer at this time. We recognise the difficulty this uncertainty is causing but we hope to make a decision shortly.

Company Directors (Personal Liability)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will seek to introduce legislation under which company directors would be held personally liable for publishing dishonest financial statements. [51507]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Clause 387 of the Company Law Reform Bill re-enacts the provisions in section 233 of the Companies Act 1985 which provide for the criminal liability of directors for annual accounts that do not comply with the requirements of the Act and, where applicable, of Article 4 of EC Regulation No 1606/2002 on the application of international accounting standards.

Clause 434 of the Bill re-enacts the provisions of section 245B of the 1985 Act which enable the court, if it finds that accounts do not comply with the Act's requirements (or, where applicable, Article 4's requirements) to order that any reasonable expenses incurred by the company in connection with the preparation of revised accounts be borne by the directors who were party to the approval of the defective accounts.

Company Law

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will seek to introduce legislation under which companies would be required to publish their tax computation. [50020]

Alun Michael: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has no plans to require companies to publish their tax computations. Tax computations are a matter for Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs.

There are many disclosure requirements under the Companies Act 1985 (which will be re-enacted in regulations to be made under the Company Law Reform Bill) and under accounting standards relating to tax that are required to be included in the accounts. As brief examples of the disclosure requirements, (by no means exhaustive), companies are required to report the following under UK GAAP:

- Amount of tax split between UK and foreign tax
- Any special circumstances that affect the overall tax charge or credit for the period, or that may affect those of future periods, should be disclosed by way of note to the profit and loss account and their individual effects quantified
- Deferred tax disclosures, including a reconciliation of the current tax charge or credit on ordinary activities for the period reported in the profit and loss account to the current tax charge that would result from applying a relevant standard rate of tax to the profit on ordinary activities before tax.

Companies reporting under International Accounting Standards need to include (among other things):

- Major component of tax expense/credit
- An explanation of the relationship between tax expense (income) and accounting profit

Consultancy Services

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much his Department spent on outside consultancy services in each year since 2001. [50634]

Alan Johnson: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 5 December 2005, Official Report, column 1005W, to the hon. Member for Cheltenham (Martin Horwood)

Departmental Consultants

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what external consultants and advisers have been engaged by his Department on the proposals to consolidate the number of consumer bodies; and how much in fees has been paid to these external consultants and advisers for this exercise. [51197]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Department of Trade and Industry has appointed KPMG LLP to undertake analysis on the proposals to strengthen and streamline consumer advocacy. The project fee is currently commercially sensitive information and the Department is unable to release this figure.

Parliamentary Questions

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many ordinary written parliamentary questions tabled for answer by him in the last 12 months have been answered (a) within 14 days, (b) between 14 and 28 days, (c) between 28 days and two months and (d) in excess of two months after the date of tabling; and if he will make a statement. [49896]

Alan Johnson: Departments aim to ensure that Members receive a substantive response to their Named Day question on the named day and endeavour to answer Ordinary Written questions within a working week of being tabled. Unfortunately, this is not always possible but this Department makes every effort to achieve these time scales.

Month	Total	Within 14 days	14–28 days	28 days-2 months	Excess of 2 months
February 2005	169	93	45	30	1
March 2005	231	177	54	0	0
April 2005	7	7	0	0	0
May 2005	85	83	1	0	1
June 2005	278	270	6	0	2
July 2005	322	317	5	0	0
October 2005	287	263	23	1	0
November 2005	496	474	21	1	0
December 2005	242	227	14	1	0

Post Office Card Account

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the likely cost to the Post Office will be of ending the Post Office card account in 2010. [51704]

Barry Gardiner: The cost to the Post Office will depend on what accounts might be introduced as an alternative to the Post Office card account beyond 2010. Post Office Ltd. are currently discussing the options with the DWP.

Post Offices

Mr. Alan Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received from Royal Mail on the minimum number of post office branches required to fulfil the terms of its universal service obligations. [50950]

Barry Gardiner [holding answer 13 February 2006]: None. This is a matter for the Postal Services Regulator, Postcomm.

Andrew Gwynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what proportion of franchisees of main posts office terminated their contracts before the agreed end date in each of the last five years; and on how many occasions action has been taken to enforce a contract until a suitable alternative location is in place. [51562]

Barry Gardiner: This is an operational matter for Post Office Ltd. (POL). The Chief Executive has been asked to reply direct to my hon. Friend.

Andrew Gwynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what powers the Post Office has to prevent franchisees of main post offices terminating their contract before the agreed end date. [51577]

Barry Gardiner: This is an operational matter for Post Office Ltd. (POL). The chief executive has been asked to reply direct to the hon. Member.

Postal Services

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment his Department has made of the effect on UK businesses of the price differential between parcels posted in the UK sent to another EU country and parcels posted in another EU country sent to the UK. [51764]

Barry Gardiner [holding answer 14 February 2006]: None. The pricing of parcel services for parcels weighing less than 1 kg that falls within the Universal Service Obligation is a matter for Postcomm, the industry regulator. The wider parcel services market is unregulated and thus fully open to price competition.

Sunday Trading

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many meetings officials from his Department have had with representatives of (a) trade unions, (b) retail organisations and (c) other groups on Sunday trading since September 2004. [51419]

Mr. Sutcliffe: Officials from the Department of Trade and Industry have had seven meetings specifically on Sunday trading with external parties, including a trade union, large and small retailers and other groups. All these meetings have taken place since the Secretary of State's announcement on 14 November 2005 that Sunday trading regulation would be reviewed.

The DTI maintains regular contact with the retail industry and interested parties, for example through the Retail Policy Forum, which meets quarterly.

Tidal Power

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment his Department has made of the potential of tidal power as an alternative to fossil fuels. [49443]

Malcolm Wicks: Tidal power can broadly be split into two categories: tidal-current—this extracts kinetic energy from fast moving tidal currents and tidal impoundment that generates in a similar way to a conventional dam.

The UK Tidal Energy Programme[1] that ran between 1978–94 at a cost of £20 million estimated the total tidal (impoundment) resource to be approximately 50 TWh/y. The largest and most economically viable scheme, the Severn Barrage could contribute ~17TWh/y or ~5 per cent. of UK demand.

The most recent study undertaken in 2004[2] estimated the tidal-current resource at approximately 16 TWh/y (~4 per cent. of current UK supply).

Zirconium Silicate (Iran)

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the answer of 9 February 2006, Official Report, column 1379W, on zirconium silicate (Iran), who (a) the exporter was of the zirconium silicate intercepted in Bulgaria and (b) the end-user of the material; what the expected end-use of the material was; and if he will make a statement. [51799]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 14 February 2006]: Information on the exporter, end-user and expected end-use of the export in question is commercially confidential and as such is exempt from disclosure.

Andrew Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the answer of 9 February 2006, Official Report, column 1379W, on zirconium silicate (Iran), what definition he uses of (a) end-user and (b) expected end-use; and if he will make a statement. [51800]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 14 February 2006]: While there is no written definition of end-user or end-use information, the end-user is the entity for which the goods are ultimately destined, and the end-use is the use to which the goods will be put. Applicants are required to declare that the contents of their application and the supporting documentation are, to the best of their knowledge, accurate. End-use and end-user information provided in support of a Standard Individual Export Licence (SIEL) application, where required, must be verified by documentation provided by the end-user.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Solicitor-General how much the Law Officers Department spent on bottled water in 2004–05. [40326]

The Solicitor-General: 2004–05 the Crown Prosecution Service, HM Crown Prosecution Service Inspectorate and the Legal Secretariat to the Law Officers spent £75,600 on the provision by contract of bottled water, cups, machine rental, sanitisation and maintenance. It has not been possible to isolate the expenditure on bottled water alone.

The aforementioned figures do not include bottles of water available at meetings. No separate details are available for this expenditure and it would incur disproportionate cost to extract it.

The Serious Fraud Office, Treasury Solicitor's Department and parts of the Crown Prosecution Service do not purchase bottled water but provide staff with chilled, filtered water.

The Revenue and Customs Prosecutions Office was set up on 18 April 2005 so does not fall within the timeframe of this question.

Government Papers

Mr. Amess: To ask the Solicitor-General how many copies of Cm 6531 were produced; how many were supplied free-of-charge; to whom; and if he will make a statement. [41727]

The Solicitor-General: Cm 6531 is the Law Officers' Departments Departmental Report 2005. It set out the Attorney-General's Strategy for his Departments and reported on delivery in each Department, including objectives and expenditure plans.

The Stationery Office produced 765 copies of Cm 6531 of which 270 were provided to the Law Officers' Departments.

The Crown Prosecution Service received 170 copies which were distributed within CPS headquarters, throughout the CPS 42 geographical areas in England and Wales and to partners in the criminal justice system.

75 copies were shared between the Revenue and Customs Prosecutions Office, Serious Fraud Office, Treasury Solicitor's Department and HM Crown Prosecution Service Inspectorate where they were distributed for use internally.

The Legal Secretariat to the Law Officers received 25 copies, 11 of which were laid before Parliament or in the House Libraries. The remainder were distributed for use internally.

Jo Martinson

Mr. Amess: To ask the Solicitor-General pursuant to the answer of 24 January 2006, Official Report, column 1963W, on Jo Martinson, what account was taken of the fact that the charges of (a) driving a vehicle without insurance, (b) driving without a licence and (c) not informing the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency of the existence of a material disability, were not instituted against the driver of the vehicle that caused the death of Jo Martinson. [51301]

The Solicitor-General: Offences of driving a vehicle without insurance, driving without a licence and driving a vehicle with a defective condition are instituted by the police. It is for the police to refer possible offences of failing to notify the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency (DVLA) of a material disability or not having a tax disc to the DVLA for its consideration.

No such offences in relation to the driver of the vehicle in question were referred to the CPS for consideration or prosecution in relation to the case involving the tragic death of Jo Martinson.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Solicitor-General pursuant to the answer of 24 January 2006, Official Report, column 1963W, on Jo Martinson, what inquiries he made into the evidence submitted by Essex police to the Crown Prosecution Service that the vehicle that caused the death of Jo Martinson did not have a tax disc. [51302]

The Solicitor-General: The Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) is not responsible for the prosecution of cases involving defendants who do not have a vehicle excise licence. Where it is apparent that a valid vehicle excise licence is not in existence, the police will pass details of this to the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency for its consideration.

I am informed that in the case involving the tragic death of Jo Martinson no evidence was submitted to the CPS regarding the vehicle in question not having a valid vehicle excise licence.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Grass-roots Sports Funding

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much each sports national governing body (NGB) has received from the community club development programme in each of the last three years; and how much NGBs have allocated to grass-roots sports development under the terms of the compact with her Department on income from broadcasting in each year. [51841]

Mr. Caborn: Sixteen National Governing Bodies for Sport and the community sports clubs affiliated to them have received awards from the Community Club Development Fund in the period 2003 to date as follows:

NGB	Year 1 (2003–04)	Year 2 (2004–05)	Year 3 (to date) (2005–06)
All England Netball Association	436,500	222,665	781,547
Amateur Rowing Association	1,657,056	199,445	436,510
Amateur Swimming Association	0	6,720	763,502
Badminton England	134,227	666,644	448,389
British Canoe Union	519,500	635,431	645,985
British Cycling	588,136	216,389	598,630
British Gymnastics Association	60,076	690,000	645,110
British Judo Association	45,625	329,694	1,236,712
England Basketball	205,809	110,000	597,442
English Cricket Board	2,996,330	1,592,513	2,233,388
England Hockey	185,000	248,800	623,308
English Table Tennis Association	14,777	31,485	1,446,738
Football Association	6,706,197	2,236,017	678,816
Lawn Tennis Association	4,413,234	2,394,918	1,610,800
Rugby Football League	38,188	260,591	994,598
Rugby Football Union	7,442,027	1,772,009	1,141,316

The Voluntary Code relating to broadcasting rights and grass roots sport was established and is administered by Central Council of Physical Recreation (CCPR), which is independent of my Department. Signatories have undertaken to invest at least 5 per cent. of broadcasting income in the development of their sports in order to ensure that the next generation of competitors has the support and facilities necessary to succeed at the highest level. Comprehensive information on allocations under the Code is not held by the Department.

National Lottery

Andrew Gwynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the average annual (a) number and (b) value of National Lottery grants awarded to recipients was in (i) Denton and Reddish and (ii) all UK parliamentary constituencies between establishment of the Lottery and 2000 and (A) 2001 and (B) 2005. [51549]

Mr. Caborn: Up until the end of 2000, the average number of Lottery awards per constituency per year was 25, with an average value of £115,000.

In the same time period in Denton and Reddish, the average number of grants per year was 9, with an average value of £13,000.

Between 2001 and 2005, the average number of Lottery awards per constituency per year was 57, with an average value of £50,000.

In the same time period in Denton and Reddish, the average number of grants per year was 24, with an average value of £44,000.

The monetary amounts given are rounded to the nearest £1,000. The information is derived from the Department's Lottery award database. This is searchable at www.lottery.culture.gov.uk, and uses information supplied by the Lottery distributors.

Olympic Games

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport (1) if she will publish an organisation chart of staff in her Department working on the 2012 Olympics; [50624]

(2) if she will list the key civil servants in her Department involved in the delivery of the 2012 Olympics; what the responsibilities of each are; and if she will make a statement; [50625]

(3) how many civil servants in her Department (a) were part of the bid team for the 2012 Olympics, (b) are working on the 2012 Olympics and (c) she expects to work on overseeing preparations for the 2012 Olympics over the next six years. [50626]

Tessa Jowell [holding answer 13 February 2006]: Approximately 12 staff in the Department for Culture, Media and Sport (DCMS) worked on London's bid to host the 2012 Olympic Games and Paralympic Games. Approximately 30 staff in DCMS are currently working on the preparations for the 2012 Games. I anticipate that the core team will number approximately 40 staff over the coming years. In addition, staff across the Department as a whole contribute to the delivery of the Olympic Games. As the team working on preparations for the 2012 Games within DCMS is still in transition, an organisation chart is not yet available.

Princess Diana Memorial Fountain

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much has been spent by (a) her Department, (b) its non-departmental public bodies and executive agencies and (c) National Lottery distributors on the Princess Diana Memorial Fountain; and if she will make a statement. [51859]

Mr. Lammy: To date, the Diana, Princess of Wales Memorial Fountain has cost £5,247,366. The Department has funded £3,862,800 and The Royal Parks Agency has contributed £1,384,566. The Memorial Fountain has not received any funding from National Lottery distributors.

SCOTLAND

Departmental Energy Costs

Mrs. Villiers: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much was spent by his Department on (a) gas and (b) electricity in 2004–05. [51773]

David Cairns: The Scotland Office spent £23,372 on electricity and £96,362 on gas in 2004–05.

Departmental Entertainment

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much was spent on entertainment by his Department in 2004–05, broken down by (a) food, (b) alcohol, (c) staff and (d) accommodation. [50892]

David Cairns: The information is not held in the form requested; however, in 2004–05, the Scotland Office spent £18,420 on hospitality.

Departmental Information

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much was spent on the Department's public relations and information services in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [48969]

David Cairns: The Scotland Office has incurred no expenditure on external public relations.

The running costs of the Office's Press Office since 2000–01 are as follows:

2000–01	178,236
2001–02	157,826
2002–03	162,021
2003–04	136,932
2004–05	131,149

Departmental Staff

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many disciplinary actions against civil servants employed in his Department (a) were commenced and (b) resulted in a sanction being applied in each of the last five years. [43488]

David Cairns: There have been a small number of disciplinary actions against civil servants loaned to the Scotland Office; to protect the privacy of individual staff, data relating to fewer than five people is not disclosed.

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many staff in his Department are paid on a performance-related basis. [50487]

David Cairns: All.

Energy Provision

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he has had with the Scottish Executive regarding the provision of energy for people in the winter months. [48567]

David Cairns: My right hon. Friend and I meet regularly with Scottish Executive Ministers to discuss a range of issues. Government effort is focused on improving supply and working with energy companies and others to mitigate the impact of price rises on vulnerable consumers. Addressing the problem of fuel poverty through installation of central heating is a devolved responsibility in Scotland.

Fair Trade

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what his Department's policy is on the procurement of fair trade produce for consumption on its premises. [49967]

David Cairns: The Scotland Office has taken opportunities to use fair trade products but has very limited requirements for goods which are subject to fair trade schemes. In accordance with Government procurement policy we seek best value for money, in the interests of the taxpayer.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much and what proportion of his Department's catering budget was spent on fair trade produce in the last period for which figures are available. [49968]

David Cairns: The Scotland Office is unable to provide the information requested as expenditure on fair trade produce cannot be readily identified separately from the total catering expenditure.

DEFENCE

Afghanistan

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what his assessment is of the security situation in (a) Nimrooz, (b) Farah, (c) Ghor, (d) Oruzgan and (e) Kandahar provinces. [50349]

Mr. Ingram: Nimruz, Farah and Ghowr have remained stable throughout the period in which ISAF have been in Afghanistan. The security situation in Kandahar and Oruzgan provinces is less permissive than in the north and west of the country. Coalition partners and Afghan forces constantly review the security situation to determine the appropriate size and composition of their forces in order to operate effectively in these areas.

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what (a) British and (b) Allied troops are deployed in (i) Nimrooz, (ii) Farah, (iii) Ghor, (iv) Oruzgan and (v) Kandahar provinces; and what such troops are due to be deployed in each province in the next (A) six and (B) 12 months. [50350]

Mr. Ingram: As announced by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence on 26 January 2006, the UK plans to deploy some 3,300 troops to Southern Afghanistan (Helmand and Kandahar provinces). We currently have around 500 UK troops in Southern Afghanistan. The detail and timing of the deployments of other nations is not for us to comment on.

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what training British troops in Helmand province received prior to deployment. [50357]

Mr. Ingram: All troops deploying to operational theatres, including Afghanistan, receive a pre-deployment training package which is tailored to the theatre into which they are deploying.

Aircraft Carriers

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessments (a) have been and (b) are planned to be made of the practicability of operating Typhoons from the Future Aircraft Carriers. [50574]

Mr. Ingram: In reaching the Joint Combat Aircraft selection decision, we assessed a number of options including Typhoon. Our judgment was, and remains, that the Joint Strike Fighter best meets United Kingdom requirements.

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what his latest estimate is of the cost of designing the Future Aircraft Carrier; and what price France is paying for purchasing that design. [51295]

Mr. Ingram: The total cost of the assessment phase is approximately £300 million and, as we announced on 14 December, we have now committed to the demonstration phase, amounting to some £300 million of further work. This includes elements for long-lead items and risk reduction, as well as developing the design to a point at which a decision to manufacture can be taken.

We subsequently announced, on 24 January, that we will be co-operating with France to produce a common baseline design that both countries can further use to develop their own carriers. France will make a financial contribution in recognition of the investment UK has already made in the design (comprising £30 million now and £25 million in July with a further £45 million at the end of the demonstration phase if France decides to commit to manufacture) and will contribute one third of the demonstration phase costs of the common baseline design.

BBC Monitoring

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what funding BBC Monitoring has received from (a) his Department, (b) other Government Departments and (c) other sources in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [50362]

Ian Pearson: I have been asked to reply.

BBC Monitoring has received the following funding in each of the last five years:

£000

Source	Financial year 2000–01	2001–02	2002–03	2003–04	2004–05
FCO	7,596	6,602	6,813	7,072	7,072
MOD	7,249	6,506	6,720	6,982	6,982
BBC World Service	4,201	4,961	5,105	5,280	5,278
Cabinet Office	454	2,546	2,623	2,719	2,719
Other sources	2,265	3,657	3,486	3,632	3,293
Total	21,765	24,272	24,747	25,685	25,345

In 2005, BBC Monitoring Stakeholders agreed a funding regime up to financial year2010–11 that provides BBC Monitoring with security and stability for the future.

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what funding BBC Monitoring will receive in (a) 2005–06 and (b) 2006–07 from (i) his Department, (ii) other Government departments and (iii) other sources. [50365]

Ian Pearson: I have been asked to reply.

BBC Monitoring funding in 2005–06 and 2006–07 is listed in the table. From 2006–07 onwards, all funding will be channelled through the Cabinet Office and held in a ring-fenced budget. "Other sources" includes commercial sales which are variable and therefore must be regarded as approximate. In the financial year 2005–06 BBC Monitoring will, in addition, draw down £1 million from the BBC Monitoring Reserve Fund.

Source	Financial year 2005–06	2006–07
FCO	5,072	—
MOD	6,982	—
BBC World Service	5,278	—
Cabinet Office	3,719	24,600
Other sources	3,192	3,338
Total	24,244	27,938

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the countries from which media output is monitored by BBC Monitoring. [50368]

Ian Pearson: I have been asked to reply.

In association with its US partner, BBC Monitoring is required to maintain a global capability. The level of coverage differs from country to country. Priorities and coverage is amended to monitor specific events such as elections.

Departmental Catering Budget

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much and what proportion of his Department's catering budget was spent on fair trade produce in the last period for which figures are available. [49917]

Mr. Ingram: Fair Trade items have only recently been selected for inclusion in the Core Range food catalogue available to Service Caterers. Information on expenditure on these items is not yet available.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what his Department's policy is on the procurement of fair trade produce for consumption on its premises. [49928]

Mr. Ingram: To meet the Ministry of Defence's value for money requirements, all catering contractors are required to seek the best price in the open market, consistent with meeting the MOD's quality standard; indeed to do otherwise would contravene European law. In the case of fair trade products, the Department's policy requires contractors to give full consideration to such goods whenever they meet these criteria.

Frimley Park Hospital

Michael Gove: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the possible release of departmental land next to Frimley Park hospital for hospital use. [49840]

Mr. Touhig: The Ministry of Defence property adjacent to Frimley Park hospital is Cadet Training Centre Frimley Park. It is the focus of the UK cadet movement and a valued and fully-utilised facility.

No plans exist at present to vacate or dispose of any part of the site. If such plans are formed in future, due consideration will be given to Frimley Park hospital's past expressions of interest.

Gulf War-related Illnesses

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what fuels used by UK forces on Operation (a) Granby and (b) Telic contained pyridines. [50298]

Mr. Ingram: Testing for pyridine in fuel is not standard Ministry of Defence or industry practice. However, fuels used by the UK armed forces during Operation Granby and Operation Telic were and are commercial fuels and are likely therefore to contain minute traces of pyridine, either through being an inherent component of the crude oil stock, or possibly as a contaminant picked up by the fuel from the distribution system.

Helicopters

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of helicopter lift capability in the armed forces. [51836]

Mr. Ingram: Last year the Ministry of Defence conducted an analysis of our Battlefield helicopter requirement, which drew on military judgement and recent operational experience. This concluded that there are shortfalls in certain specific lift capabilities. In the short term, we are addressing these by looking at ways of delivering the maximum capability from our existing fleets, including by ensuring greater availability and utilisation through streamlined logistic support. In the longer term, the future rotorcraft capability programme is looking at building our helicopter fleets for the future.

Joint Combat Aircraft

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he will continue with the proposed purchase of the Joint Combat Aircraft (JCA) without an agreement by the US to share the technological data required for future upgrading of the JCA. [50575]

Mr. Ingram: We continue to work closely with the United States Government at all levels to ensure that our needs for JSF technical information required to support our Sovereign capabilities are met. This is a key area in our negotiations on the Production, Sustainment and Follow on Development Memorandum Of Understanding.

Marine Life (Sonar)

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the possible effects on marine life of Sonar 2087. [51296]

Mr. Ingram: The Ministry of Defence has conducted environmental impact assessments of marine habitats in which Sonar 2087 might operate. These assessments indicated that while Sonar 2087 has the potential to impact on the marine environment, a range of rigorous mitigation measures have been developed to minimise this and these are integral to our operating procedures. There have been no recorded incidents of harm being caused to marine life by Sonar 2087. We continue to support a sustained programme of research into the effects of active sonar.

Copies of the environmental analysis reports relating to the Sonar 2087 sea trials conducted in 2002 and 2004 have been released to interested parties and are available in the Library of the House.

Met Office

Mr. Leech: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of the likely net change in jobs in Manchester arising from the restructuring of the Meteorological Office Civil Centre Forecast Production Network. [50355]

Mr. Touhig: As a result of my recent decision to move forecast production from Birmingham, London, Belfast, Cardiff and Manchester to the Met Office Operations Centre in Exeter, the number of Met Office jobs at the Met Office's Manchester civil centre will be reduced from 31 to eight. The eight jobs remaining in Manchester will be customer account managers and forecast advisers.

Mine Countermeasures

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what provisions are being made in the Future Mine Countermeasures Vision for the use of (a) remote sweep systems and (b) unmanned surface vessels. [51294]

Mr. Ingram: The Future UK Mine Countermeasures Strategy is in the early stages of development. It is too early to say what part remote sweep systems and unmanned surface vessels might play in the delivery of future capability.

Missile Defence

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what his policy is on UK involvement in ballistic missile defence programmes; and if he will make a statement. [50616]

John Reid: The Government have not yet decided whether or not to pursue missile defence for the United Kingdom, but we continue to examine, with our NATO allies, the developing threat from ballistic missiles and the appropriate responses. We have agreed to the upgrading of the radar at RAF Fylingdales as part of the United States missile defence system, and we also have a programme of joint technical and research projects with the US exploring the relevant technologies.

Pingat Jasa Malaysia

Mary Creagh: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the written statement of 31 January 2006, Official Report, columns 10–11WS, on the Pingat Jasa Malaysia, what steps veterans who wish to apply for such medals should take. [50556]

Ian Pearson: I have been asked to reply.

Information on how veterans can apply for the Pingat Jasa Malaysia can be found in the section entitled 'Medals' on the Ministry of Defence Veterans' Agency website at http://www.veteransagency.mod.uk. Members of veterans' or regimental associations should approach their own organisations which will co-ordinate their applications and arrange for them to be channelled to the Malaysian High Commission in London. Veterans who do not belong to an association can approach the National Malaya and Borneo Veterans' Association (NMBVA), which has agreed to co-ordinate applications for non-members as well as its own members. Full details of the NMBVA are included on the website.

Portland Port

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has for the future use of Portland port by the Royal Navy. [50577]

Mr. Ingram: We intend to continue using berths in Portland port for the Royal Fleet Auxiliary and occasionally for Royal Navy surface warships.

We will also pursue plans to develop the capability within Portland port to host occasional visits by RN nuclear powered submarines.

QinetiQ

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether there are provisions in the contract signed with QinetiQ for the management of his Department's practice ranges to cancel the arrangement early; and what penalties would be incurred. [50513]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 14 February 2006]: As is common with contracts of this nature, the Ministry of Defence's Long Term Partnering Agreement with QinetiQ includes clauses that provide for early termination of the arrangement. The compensation payable would depend upon the circumstances of the cessation.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library a copy of the agreement governing the Government's payments to QinetiQ pension fund prior to the initial public offering; and if he will make a statement. [51851]

John Reid [holding answer 14 February 2006]: The agreement between Ministry of Defence and QinetiQ governing the Government's payments to the company's pension fund is part of a commercially confidential agreement between MOD and the company and I am therefore unable to release it. However, a detailed summary of the key aspects of the pensions agreement appears on pages 83 and 286 of the QinetiQ prospectus, a copy of which was placed in the Library of the House on 26 January.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the QinetiQ shareholdings, broken down by (a) size and (b) type, of QinetiQ managers, from board level to business group managers, broken down by (i) name and (ii) position. [51862]

John Reid: The shareholding interests of the senior executives in QinetiQ are set out in the QinetiQ IPO prospectus, a copy of which was placed in the Library of the House on 26 January. The prospectus also has details of the award of free shares worth £500 to each QinetiQ employee and the Employee Priority Offer, which formed part of the IPO on 10 February, and of the company's plans for employee share schemes after the IPO. Any further details are a matter for the company and should be addressed to the Chief Executive at the following address:

Graham Love
Chief Executive
QinetiQ Ltd.
Cody Technology Park
Building A1
Ively Road
Farnborough
Hampshire GU140LX

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what loans, grants and financial guarantees have been made by his Department to QinetiQ in the last five years. [51863]

John Reid: Over the last five years, the Department has made a number of different loan arrangements with QinetiQ, all of which have since been repaid in full:

(i) At the time of vesting in July 2001 QinetiQ paid MOD for its assets through a combination of equity and £150 million of cash in the form of an interest-bearing loan note.

(ii) Also at vesting, QinetiQ undertook to pay for alternative accommodation for Chertsey-based staff based at the MOD-owned Defence Scientific and Technology Laboratory (Dstl), to allow this site to be closed. This obligation took the form of a loan note for £30 million from QinetiQ to Dstl.

(iii) At vesting MOD put in place a working capital facility of up to £120 million for QinetiQ, for which it was charged a market rate of interest. This was necessary since QinetiQ as a wholly-Government owned company was not allowed to access facilities outside Government. This was subsequently replaced by commercial facilities at a lower rate of interest in February 2002.

MOD also has certain obligations in the form of contingent liabilities which have been presented to Parliament in departmental minutes dated 4 December 2001, 8 July and 17 December 2002.

RAF Menwith Hill

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the purpose is of the two further radomes planned for RAF Menwith Hill. [50808]

Mr. Ingram: The proposed new radomes at RAF Menwith Hill will house additional antennae that will be used in support of the current mission of the base.

RAF Stafford (Museum)

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to put on open display the museum items stored at RAF Stafford. [50863]

Mr. Touhig: As the RAF museum is a non-departmental public body, the day-to-day running is a matter for the Board of Trustees and the senior management team.

I understand that items held within the RAF museum's reserve collection, at RAF Stafford, are available to members of the public by appointment, as the site is not suitable for general public access. The RAF museum regularly reviews the items kept on display at its two public sites, and suitable items from the reserve collection may be included in the revised displays.

Reserve Forces

Linda Gilroy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the effect of the rate of deployment on the rate of recruitment for each of the reserve forces. [50949]

Mr. Touhig [holding answer 13 February 2006]: There is no evidence to date to suggest that the rate of deployment has had any significant effect on the rate of recruitment for each of the reserve forces.

Roadside Bombs

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what measures are under development to protect British forces from shaped roadside bombs; and when these measures will be introduced. [51297]

Mr. Ingram: We continually adapt our training, tactics and procedures to ensure that our troops are not exposed to unnecessary risks in theatre. Additional measures to counter the evolving threat posed by roadside bombs are developed on an ongoing basis and introduced when they are sufficiently mature. However, information regarding specific measures is operationally sensitive.

Royal Navy

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of Royal Navy service personnel went to sea in (a) 2005, (b) 1995 and (c) 1985. [51438]

Mr. Touhig: The information is not held centrally in the form requested.

Information is however available on RN frontline personnel. These personnel work in posts with operational requirements. These personnel may not necessarily spend all their time at sea.

The data in the following table has been collated for the years 2005 and 1997; there is no data available for 1995 or 1985.

Percentage

	Frontline Royal Navy personnel	Frontline Royal Marines personnel	Total frontline personnel
1997	45.6	62.1	48.1
2005	53.9	65.7	56.0

Senior Officers

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) brigadiers and (b) generals were on the active list in the Army in each year since 1997; and what the total strength of the Army was in each year. [50181]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 13 February 2006]: The following table shows the General, Brigadier and total strengths of the Regular Army at the 1 April of each year since 1997, and the latest published data as at 1 December 2005.

Regular Army trained and untrained strengths[1]

Date	General[2,3,4]	Brigadier[4]	Total strength[4]
April-1997	60	170	109,800
April-1998	60	180	109,830
April-1999	60	180	109,720
April-2000	60	180	110,050
April-2001	60	190	109,530
April-2002	50	180	110,050
April-2003	60	180	112,130
April-2004	60	180	112,750
April-2005	60	180	109,290
December 2005	60	180	107,930

[1] Figures are for the Regular Army and therefore exclude full-time reserve service, Gurkhas, the Home Service battalions of the Royal Irish Regiment and Mobilised Reservists. It includes trained and untrained personnel.
[2] Includes officers who have held the appointment of chief of general staff and are retained on the active list.
[3] Figures for Generals include Generals, Lieutenant Generals and Major Generals.
[4] Figures rounded to the nearest 10.

The "Rank Structure of the UK Regular Forces" is published quarterly as a national statistic in the Defence Analytical Services Agency's "Tri-Service Publication 9" (TSP 9). This is available publicly on the internet at: www.dasa.mod.uk.

Service Families (Medical Services)

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what general medical services are provided for the (a) families and (b) partners of those serving in the armed forces; and if he will make a statement; [51821]

(2) what steps he is taking to provide the (a) families and (b) partners of armed forces personnel at RAF Henlow with general medical services; and if he will make a statement. [51826]

Mr. Touhig: At its overseas bases, the Ministry of Defence (MOD) provides primary health care to all entitled dependants, as well as secondary health care in Cyprus and Gibraltar. In Germany, secondary care is provided by the MOD via contracts with regional German hospitals.

In the UK, the provision of general medical services for families and dependants is the responsibility of the NHS. Depending on the training requirements for Defence medical services staff and on the availability of spare capacity to care for a limited dependant population without compromising the medical centre's primary task, the MOD does provide primary care to dependants at some service medical centre locations.

The medical centre at RAF Henlow does not, however, conduct GP vocational training, nor does it have the spare capacity to provide health care for dependants. General medical services for dependants at RAF Henlow are therefore provided by the NHS. The local RAF welfare support services can provide details of the local NHS practices where dependants can register.

Service Widows/Widowers

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) under what circumstances the (a) widow and (b) widower of a former member of armed forces personnel may claim all or part of his or her spouse's pension; [47979]

(2) what pension the (a) widow and (b) widower of a former member of service personnel is entitled to if their partner's death was (i) a result of service in HM armed forces and (ii) not related to service in HM armed forces. [47982]

Mr. Touhig: A widow or widower of a former member of the armed forces is entitled to claim pension benefits if the member dies in retirement with a preserved pension or a pension already in payment. However, where the widow or widower married the member after the member left the armed forces, only the service given on or after 6 April 1978 will count towards their pension.

There are a range of benefits paid on the death of a former member. The level of benefit depends on a number of factors including date and cause of death, rank, salary and number of dependent children. I will arrange for the scheme booklets that cover these issues in more detail to be placed in the House Library. These booklets are available on www.mod.uk (with a search on 'pensions').

Space Tracking and Surveillance System

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the space tracking and surveillance system will be operational. [50809]

Mr. Ingram: This is a matter for the US Government which are developing this system for US use.

Submarines

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many UK ports cater for (a) UK nuclear submarines and (b) UK submarines armed with nuclear weapons; and if he will list those where maintenance of (i) UK nuclear submarines and (ii) UK submarines armed with nuclear weapons is carried out. [50262]

Mr. Ingram: Nuclear-powered submarines have two base ports in the UK: HMNB Clyde at Faslane and HMNB Devonport at Plymouth. In addition, nuclear-powered submarines are being built at Barrow-in-Furness. All three ports have facilities for the maintenance of the vessels' nuclear propulsion plants but, once submarines are in service, all such maintenance is carried out at Faslane or Devonport.

Nuclear-powered submarines are permitted to berth at five other locations in the UK (RNAD Coulport, HMNB Portsmouth, Loch Ewe, Loch Goil and Broadford Bay). Work is underway to authorise further UK ports for nuclear powered submarine visits, including Southampton and Portland. Maintenance of the submarines' nuclear propulsion systems is not carried out in any of these five existing berths, nor will it be at the two proposed ones. However, routine maintenance of non-nuclear systems—which is a normal part of maintaining any vessel, including nuclear-powered submarines—can be conducted at any suitable location.

The classification of berths for nuclear powered submarines does not differentiate between those armed with nuclear and/or conventional weapons.

Type 45 Destroyers

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the (a) original estimated cost and (b) cost on completion was for HMS Daring; and what the (i) original and (ii) current estimate is for each of the other ships in the order. [51569]

Mr. Ingram: The Ministry of Defence does not hold cost information in the way the question seeks it. However, I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 19 December 2005, Official Report, column 2349W.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Bearer Shares (Crown Dependencies)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which Crown Dependencies permit (a) the issuance and (b) trading in bearer shares. [50568]

Bridget Prentice: I am advised by the Governments of the Crown Dependencies that the issuance of, or trading in, bearer shares is not permitted in Jersey. Bearer shares are also not permitted under Guernsey companies legislation. Since April 2004 the issuance of bearer shares has no longer been permitted in the Isle of Man and any already in existence were disenfranchised unless converted into registered shares. There is a possibility that some remain in existence as registered shares and they could be passed from one person to another, but the Isle of Man Government are not aware of any trading taking place in bearer shares more widely.

Ethiopia

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the political and security situation in Ethiopia, with particular reference to the reported violence in rural areas of the country. [50734]

Ian Pearson: We remain concerned at the reports of ongoing sporadic violence in rural areas of Ethiopia, which demonstrate the continuing political and social divisions in the community. The people of Ethiopia need the reassurance of a peaceful, just and democratic future. To this end, we continue to urge the Government of Ethiopia, and opposition, to exercise restraint, return to inclusive peaceful dialogue and continue the democratisation process. We stand ready to support Ethiopia in achieving this.

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the defence attaché in Addis Ababa last visited the ex-Somaliland Scouts Association. [50735]

Ian Pearson: The defence attaché from Addis Ababa visited the Somaliland Scouts Association in Hargeisa on 28 April and 14 September 2005. The principal purpose of the first visit was to discuss the ex-Scouts' welfare. In this context he explained that the UK Government had made provision for their pensions at independence and therefore has no residual responsibility. He also discussed ways in which the defence section in Addis Ababa could assist with communications to the relevant UK charities to address demonstrable cases of hardship and followed this up on his second visit.

Press Coverage

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on how many occasions since 1 April 2003 he has complained to the Press Complaints Commission about the coverage in the press of (a) Ministers or officials and (b) his Department; and how many of these complaints were upheld. [47085]

Mr. Straw: None.

Somalia

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the security situation in Somalia. [51424]

Ian Pearson: Somalia has had no effective Government since 1991. We are supporting the establishment of Transitional Federal Institutions to restore peace and security, but in the interim most of Somalia continues to be controlled by armed clans and factions which frequently resort to violence. We therefore advise against all travel to Somalia because of the terrorist threat, the dangerous level of criminal activity and internal insecurity. Westerners and those working for western organisations have been targeted in recent shootings.

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the activities of (a) al-Qaeda and (b) Islamic fundamentalists in Somalia. [51427]

Ian Pearson: The absence of effective Government in Somalia creates a vacuum in which terrorists, such as, al-Qaeda, operate, threatening the region and the wider international community. Islamic fundamentalists are seeking to create an Islamic State in Somalia. We have been closely engaged in the Somali national reconciliation conference and the subsequent political process. We continue to work closely with the UN and other members of the international community to achieve a comprehensive and lasting settlement and a return to good governance in Somalia, through the establishment of Transitional Federal Institutions and a return to democracy.

Staff Pay

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many staff in his Department are paid on a performance-related basis. [50515]

Ian Pearson: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office employs a total of 6,078 UK-based staff, including inward secondees from other Departments, at its locations in the United Kingdom and overseas. All are paid on a performance-related basis.

Locally-engaged (LE) staff at posts overseas are employed and paid on the basis of prevailing local practice. All posts have been asked to introduce wherever possible performance-related pay systems, although we have no details of the numbers of LE staff to whom this currently applies.

Sudan/Chad

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent assessment he has made of cross-border attacks by militias between Sudan and Chad; and what discussions he has had with the (a) African Union and (b) UN on measures to reduce such attacks. [50526]

Ian Pearson: Relations between Chad and Sudan have been strained since the rebel attack on Adre, Chad on 18 December last year. Although an attack on that scale has not reoccurred, the security situation on the border remains extremely tense, with both Chadian and Sudanese militias operating. We have made clear our view that no action should be taken to inflame this situation and my noble Friend, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office Minister for Africa, Lord Triesman of Tottenham, did so most recently during the Sudanese Foreign Minister's visit to London on 3 February.

We welcome the signing in Libya of an agreement between Chad and Sudan on 8 February in which the two countries pledged to improve bilateral relations and refrain from supporting rebel militias. We will press both Governments to fulfil their commitments and our embassy in Khartoum is in regular contact with the African Union and the UN in order to monitor the situation.

UK Diplomatic Posts (Security)

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the security of UK embassies and consulates in countries where there have been demonstrations about the cartoons of the Prophet Mohammed. [51545]

Ian Pearson: There has been no specific change in the threat to the security of our posts overseas as a direct result of the cartoons of the Prophet Mohammed. However, we have been in touch with all our posts to provide additional security advice in the event of possible demonstrations and advised that they maintain a heightened level of vigilance.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Business Investment

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the (a) level of inward investment and (b) number of new start up businesses in Northern Ireland was in each year since 2000, broken down by council area. [51068]

Angela E. Smith: Table (a) as follows provides the level of inward investment associated with assisted projects for each of the financial years 2000–01 to 2004–05, analysed by district council area.

Carers (Subsidised Travel)

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to provide subsidised travel for carers in Northern Ireland. [51063]

Mr. Woodward: I have no plans at present to provide subsidised travel for carers in Northern Ireland. The Department for Regional Development is committed to reviewing the Northern Ireland Concessionary Fares Scheme. This review is due to commence shortly. Options for extending provision, including to carers, will be considered as part of this review.

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to extend the Northern Ireland concessionary fares scheme to include carers; how many people he expects would benefit as a result; how much the extension would cost; and if he will make a statement. [51064]

Mr. Woodward: I have no plans, at present, to extend concessionary travel on public transport to include carers. The Department for Regional Development is committed to reviewing the Northern Ireland Concessionary Fares Scheme. This review is due to commence shortly. Options for extending provision, including to carers, will be considered as part of this review.

Citizens Jury

Mr. Wills: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland on how many occasions his Department consulted citizens juries on departmental policies in the last five years; in how many of those consultations the recommendations of the citizens jury differed from existing departmental policy; and on how many occasions departmental policy was changed to reflect the recommendations of the citizens jury. [46245]

Mr. Hain: The Northern Ireland Office has never consulted citizens juries on departmental policies.

Although the Northern Ireland Office has not used citizens juries we do provide an opportunity for stakeholders and the wider public to contribute to NIO polices and legislation including where appropriate focus groups and public meetings. The aim is to increase the involvement of people and groups in public consultation and to seek their views. Consultations are carried out in accordance with the Cabinet Office Code of Practice on Written Consultation and the consultation period will normally last for a minimum of 12 weeks to give the public time to respond. The Northern Ireland Office website www.nio.gov.uk provides a library of consultations and where available the summary of responses and associated revision to the policy or legislation.

Invest Northern Ireland

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what discussions have taken place between representatives of Invest Northern Ireland and (a) each district council in Northern Ireland and (b) Larne Enterprise Development Company in the last 12 months; and what representations Invest Northern Ireland have received from each. [51050]

Angela E. Smith: In the last 12 months, Invest NI staff have represented the agency at 383 meetings of committees/partnerships that have either been council led or have included council involvement. In most cases these meetings involved more than one council. A breakdown for each individual council area is given in the following table.

In addition, staff throughout the agency, and in particular its local office network, are regularly involved in discussions with local councils in relation to a broad range of Invest NI's functions and activities.

In the same period, Invest NI's chief executive also met with ten local councils to update them on Invest NI's current activity in their areas and to discuss any issues of concern (these meetings are also captured in the following table). During this period each council was also invited to meet with Invest NI's chairman and chief executive to comment on Invest NI's 2005–08 draft corporate plan.

Invest NI has invested considerable time and effort to build a positive working relationship with Larne Enterprise Development company (LEDCOM) and staff from the agency have attended a total of 43 formal meetings or events associated with LEDCOM during the last 12 months. In addition there have been many other informal discussions between Invest NI and LEDCOM.

Planning Appeal Commission

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many Planning Appeal Commission hearings were held in Northern Ireland in each of the last 10 years. [51329]

Angela E. Smith: The Planning Appeals Commission is a tribunal non-departmental public body, and the chief commissioner has written to the hon. Gentleman. A copy of the letter has been placed in the Library.

Post-primary Education

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will carry out an audit of the post-primary schools estate in Northern Ireland to establish the (a) extent and (b) cost of (i) investment and (ii) divestment that would be necessary to implement the changes proposed in the draft Education (Northern Ireland) Order. [51484]

Angela E. Smith: The changes being proposed by the draft Education (Northern Ireland) Order do not necessarily require accommodation changes. As local collaboration plans are developed to meet the entitlement framework there may be a need to provide facilities in some schools in support of the new arrangements, and these would be assessed on a case-by-case basis.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland has also announced recently an independent review of education in Northern Ireland which will look at the strategic planning of the whole estate, taking account of provision for 14 to 19-year-olds. Conclusions from the review would therefore inform implementation of decisions following consultation on the draft Order.

Tourism

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to assist the hospitality industry in Northern Ireland to improve further the levels of service to visitors. [51357]

Angela E. Smith: The tourism and hospitality sector has been identified as a key area for achieving economic growth in Northern Ireland. There are a number of Government agencies working together to assist the hospitality industry in areas such as customer service, staff skills development and competitiveness by providing a range of initiatives and programmes.

Government supports the People 1st Sector Skills Council to identify the skills needs of the hospitality industry in Northern Ireland and to broker a formal agreement between Government, educators and employers to meet these skill needs. In addition, hospitality and tourism has been identified as a priority skill area for further education by the Department for Employment and Learning.

Invest NI also has an important role to play; client companies of Invest NI, including those with a tourism focus, can avail of a range of support for businesses such as the Business Improvement Training programme which is targeted at delivering company specific projects which address specific training and development issues. Mentoring support may also be provided aimed at helping companies improve their product and service.

NITB as the strategic leader of tourism has as one of the objectives of the Strategic Framework for Action 2004–2007 'The Delivery of Memorable Experiences'. One of the delivery mechanisms for this objective is a series of Masterclasses the aim of which is to raise the performance in the tourism industry and develop international competitiveness. NITB, in conjunction with Tourism Training Trust (TTT) has recently completed a review of the Welcome to Excellence suite of training programmes for the hospitality industry and TTT in conjunction with other tourism stakeholders will be encouraging the hospitality industry to avail of this training.

HEALTH

Children (Behavioural Problems)

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children were referred to NHS services with behavioural problems in 2004–05, broken down by local education authority. [43916]

Mr. Byrne: Information is not collected in the format requested. An Office for National Statistics survey, "Mental Health of Children and Young People, 2004" (September 2005) found that 6 per cent., of children aged five to 6 had a conduct disorder.

Colon Cancer

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of (a) the number and (b) the proportion of the population of England aged over 50 who have been screened for cancer of the colon; what plans she has (i) to promote and (ii) to extend such screening; and what estimate she has made of the proportion of the population likely to be screened in the future. [44309]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Screening for bowel cancer in England is currently only available as part of the English bowel cancer screening pilot in Coventry and Warwickshire. The pilot began in 2000, and is now into its third round of screening. People aged 58 to 69 are sent a kit called a faecal occult blood (FOB) test, which looks for hidden blood in the stools, an indicator that bowel cancer may be present. People are invited every two years, and complete the kit in their own homes before returning it to the laboratory where the results are interpreted.

Around two percent., of people who take the FOB test will be positive, and they are invited for a full bowel investigation called a colonoscopy.

In 2004–05, 31,074 people were screened at a cost of around £800,000. Research and an independent evaluation of the pilot have shown that around 60 percent., of the population take up their invitations to participate in bowel cancer screening.

The Government have stated its commitment to a national bowel cancer screening programme. On 30 January 2006, the new Health White Paper, "Our health, our care, our say: a new direction for community services" reaffirmed that the programme will be rolled out from April 2006. Departmental budgets for 2006–07 are currently being finalised, and announcements will be made in due course.

Free Care

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what directions she plans to give to NHS trusts following the recent decision by the High Court to clarify the responsibility between the NHS and social services departments on what constitutes (a) free care and (b) means-tested care. [48907]

Mr. Byrne: I intend to reinforce existing guidance to the national health service and local councils, alerting them to the decision of the High Court and ensuring that their current local policies are in line with the judgement. In April, we will publish for consultation a national framework for NHS continuing care, which will give further clarity and consistency on the responsibilities of NHS and social services for long term care.

Maternity Services

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many midwifery assistants have been employed by Southport and Ormskirk NHS Trust in each of the last five years. [45100]

Mr. Byrne: The table shows the number of unqualified maternity nursing staff employed by Southport and Ormskirk Hospital National Health Service Trust.

NHS Trusts

Julia Goldsworthy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 9 January 2006, Official Report, column 151W, on NHS trusts, if she will list the NHS organisations with which turnaround teams will be working; what the total number of staff is in those teams; and whether their reports will be made public. [49161]

Jane Kennedy: The turnaround teams were announced by the Secretary of State in a ministerial statement on 1 December 2005, Official Report, column 37WS.

The first stage of this is a baseline assessment, the aim of which is to ensure there is an agreed understanding of the local financial problem and that actions are in hand to address this. The contract for the baseline assessment was awarded to consultants KPMG. The full list of organisations where baseline assessments are being undertaken is as follows.

KPMG identified the specific staffing requirements to undertake the baseline assessments.

I released a report from the Director of Finance of the Department of Health on 25 January 2006. This gives the results of the first phase of assessments. Further reports will follow.

Post-natal Depression

Mr. Wills: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what target she has set for the percentage of mothers identified with post-natal depression receiving treatment. [45707]

Mr. Byrne: The maternity standard of the national service framework for children, young people and maternity services requires all professionals involved in the care of women immediately following childbirth to be able to distinguish normal emotional and psychological changes from significant mental health problems, and to refer women for support according to their needs.

Professional Misconduct

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) prosecutions and (b) convictions of NHS employees there have been under sections 38 to 41 of the Sexual Offences Act 2003. [48218]

Fiona Mactaggart: I have been asked to reply.

Data is not held centrally by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform or the Department of Health on the number of NHS employees who have been prosecuted and found guilty of offences under sections 38 to 41 of the Sexual Offences Act 2003.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Asylum/Immigration

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many failed asylum seekers applied for judicial review of their decisions in 2005. [50640]

Mr. McNulty: Information on judicial reviews is published annually. Copies are available from the Library of the House and on the Home Office research development and statistics directorate website at http://homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html. Data for 2005 will be available in August 2006.

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) immigration staff, (b) female immigration officers and (c) male immigration officers were in post at each of the asylum removal centres in the last period for which figures are available. [50641]

Mr. McNulty: The information requested is set out in the table.

IND staff employed in immigration removal centres (as at end January 2006)

	Total staff	Male	Female
Campsfield	6	2	4
Colnbrook	8	1	7
Dover	8	5	3
Dungavel	7	4	3
Harmondsworth	43	17	26
Haslar	6	3	3
Lindholme	6	3	3
Oakington	50	22	28
Tinsley	6	3	3
Yarl's Wood	22	11	11
Total	162	71	91

Note:

At all the centres there are both operational (warranted) and non-operational (administrative) staff who are responsible for managing contacts between detainees and case holders and for monitoring the custodial service, provided by contractors. There are additional members of staff at each of Harmondsworth, Oakington and Yarl's Wood who are responsible for performing on site casework for the non suspensive appeals (NSA) and fast track asylum processes.

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will place in the Library copies of the Home Office guidance issued to immigration officers on making decisions on whether to detain asylum applicants. [50643]

Mr. McNulty: Guidance to immigration officers on making decisions on whether to detain asylum applicants is contained in chapter 38 of the Operational Enforcement Manual (OEM) and in chapter 31 of the immigration directorate's instructions (IDIs). Both documents are maintained and updated as electronic guidance. Both are available from the IND website.

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers who had fully complied with their reporting requirements were detained in 2005. [50646]

Mr. McNulty: 3,481 people were detained at Immigration Service reporting events during 2005. For the first quarter of the year, the figure contains both asylum and non-asylum cases as the data was not separately collated. Sifting out such cases could now only be achieved by the examination of individual case records at disproportionate cost. Also, without similar reference to individual records, it is not possible to confirm that all of these individuals had been fully compliant with reporting restrictions throughout their applications.

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers were detained in removal centres in each of the last three years. [50661]

Mr. McNulty: The Home Office does not hold information on the total number of persons who were detained in each of the last three years. It would only be available by examination of individual case files at disproportionate cost. Quarterly snapshots are published showing the number of persons detained solely under Immigration Act powers on the last Saturday of each quarter. This information may be found in the quarterly asylum statistics publication and can be found on the Home Office research development and statistics directorate website at http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/immigration1.html.

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what average time social services took to respond to a call to collect an unaccompanied asylum-seeking child in the last period for which figures are available. [50669]

Mr. McNulty: The Home Office does not hold centrally figures relating to the social services response time to collect an unaccompanied asylum seeking child and as these figures are not routinely recorded at United Kingdom ports they could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the cost of (a) formal investigation of an immigration complaint by the immigration and nationality directorate and (b) processing a service-level complaint was in the last period for which figures are available. [50657]

Mr. McNulty: The costs associated with the immigration and nationality directorate's complaints process are variable, depending on the precise nature of the complaint and the investigation undertaken. Therefore these figures are not available.

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the annual wage is of an (a) immigration officer and (b) entry clearance officer. [50663]

Mr. McNulty: The information is as follows.

(a) The annual basic salary of an immigration officer is dependent upon their length of service in the grade, their performance and the location in which they are working. Immigration officers based in London are paid on a scale currently rising from £19,337 to £24,670. Immigration officers working at Gatwick are paid on the same scale.

Immigration officers based outside of London are paid on a scale currently rising from £18,948 to £24,174. In addition to the basic salary, allowances may be paid according to location and shifts.

(b) The annual basic salary of an entry clearance officer (ECO) would normally be either on the immigration officer London scale rising from £19,337 to £24,670 or the executive officer scale rising from £18,568 to £22,978.

Those from a Government Department other than the Home Office are paid on their own Department's scale. In addition, allowances may be paid according to location.

Blueprint Project

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much has been spent on the Blueprint project in each of the last three years. [47705]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Expenditure on the Blueprint drug education research programme is shown in the table:

	£ million
2003–04	1.8
2004–05	2.3
2005–06	1.2

British Citizenship

Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will waive the fees involved for applying for and gaining British citizenship in circumstances where British subjects who are long-term UK resident wish to travel to countries for whom citizenship is a requirement of entry. [50606]

Mr. McNulty: It is a legal requirement under section 42 (1) of the British Nationality Act 1981 that the fee payable by virtue of the Act shall be paid before a person is registered as a British citizen. There is, therefore, no discretion to waive fees for any particular group of applicants for British citizenship.

Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received from members of the public on the cost to British subjects of applying for and acquiring British citizenship. [50608]

Mr. McNulty: There is no record of such representations. To check whether any have been made could be achieved only at disproportionate cost.

Cannabis

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures he plans to undertake to highlight the risks of cannabis use. [47696]

Mr. Charles Clarke: On 19 January, I announced our intention to introduce a comprehensive package of education and public health measures, in partnership with DH, DfES and the police, including:

- targeting young people through the FRANK campaign to raise understanding about the dangerous and illegal impact of cannabis consumption;
- a campaign aimed at the broader public that will be run in partnership with the police and will publicise the penalties for cannabis dealing, production and possession;.
- a campaign to highlight the dangers of cannabis of those with an existing mental health condition aimed at sufferers, carers and health professionals.

The package of communications will ensure that no one, including young people, is left in any doubt about the harms and legal status of cannabis.

Child Protection

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures he has taken to reduce the incidence of children accessing obscene images on the internet. [48164]

Paul Goggins: The Internet Watch Foundation (IWF) was formed following an agreement between the Government, police and the internet service provider industry that a partnership approach was needed to tackle the distribution of child abuse images online. It provides a 'notice and take down' service to UK ISPs so they can remove illegal content from their servers and works closely with law enforcement agencies to help them trace offenders. The IWF and ISPs have reduced the proportion of potentially illegal content found to be hosted in the UK from 18 per cent. in 1997 to less than 1 per cent. now. We have been working with the main UK ISPs as they put in place technical solutions to prevent their customers accidentally accessing illegal child abuse websites identified by the IWF.

In November 2005, we published the 'Good Practice Guidance for Search Safe Providers and Advice to the Public on How to Search Safely' document. This gives advice to the public on how to make good use of search engines to explore the internet and reduce the risk of being exposed to unwanted and unsuitable results. We are also working with industry to develop a BSI standard for software that helps parents control what their children access on the internet.

We launched a £1 million public awareness campaign on 15 January this year. The campaign is the latest wave of our awareness activity and includes advice for parents and children on how to use the internet safely, including how to avoid accessing illegal images.

We have announced the creation of the new Child Exploitation and Online Protection Centre, which will be operational from April 2006. The centre will be a focal point for police, child protection and industry work to ensure that children can use the internet safely.

Commission for Racial Equality

Julie Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the total budget for the Commission for Racial Equality (CRE) was in (a) 2004–05 and (b) 2005–06; how much funding the CRE has received in each year since 2000–01 to support its work with public bodies to promote race equality; and how much it will receive in 2006–07 for that work. [44875]

Paul Goggins [holding answer 31 January 2006]: The total budget for the CRE comprises the grant-in-aid it receives from the Home Office plus income from other sources. In 2004–05, its total budget was £19.7 million, made up of £19.2 million grant-in-aid and £0.5 million other income. In 2005–06 its grant-in-aid is £19.1 million and Parliamentary Supply Estimates assume that the CRE will receive £0.5 million in other income. Estimates for 2006–07 are still in preparation.

In 2001–02 the CRE's grant-in-aid was increased by £3 million to provide for the cost of its new enforcement duties under the provisions of the Race Relations (Amendment) Act 2000, including its work with public bodies to promote race equality. As this sum was built into the baseline for subsequent years, it is not possible to identify how much of its grant-in-aid for later years relates to this work.

Consultants

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps his Department takes to ensure that consultancies do not claim excessive expenses while working for the Department and its agencies. [29056]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Contracts provide that expenses are reimbursed on the basis of reasonable costs actually incurred within the standard limits of travel and subsistence rates paid to civil servants of equivalent status. Expenses will not be paid for assignments based within London. Claims are validated by Departmental supervisory staff. Invoices are paid in arrears and are monitored to ensure costs comply with the contract. Consultants are required under contract to retain records of reimbursable costs for two years for audit purposes.

Crack Cocaine

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the number of crack cocaine users in the UK. [47691]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The British Crime Survey (BCS) provides an estimate of the number of people in England and Wales who used drugs in the year before interview. The estimated numbed of people aged 16 to 59 in England and Wales who had used crack cocaine in the previous year obtained from the BCS for the year 2004–05 is 32,000.

The BCS is a good measure of drug use in the general population and provides a consistent measure of trends over time. However it should be noted that, as a survey of households, the BCS does not cover some groups who may have relatively high rates of crack cocaine use, such as the homeless and prisoners. Nor, in practice, will any household survey cover people whose lives are so busy or chaotic that they are hardly ever at home. Therefore these estimates may underestimate the number of crack users in the country. Home Office commissioned research to obtain better estimates of the number of problematic drug users, including crack users, on a regular basis is currently under way.

Criminal Justice System (Ethnic Monitoring)

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the level of ethnic monitoring at all stages of the criminal justice system; and how it has changed since 1997. [49127]

Fiona Mactaggart: The Government recognises the importance of ethnic monitoring in the criminal justice system and the necessity of continuing to improve this in order to ensure that the criminal justice system is fair and non-discriminatory.

Ethnic monitoring based upon visual perception began to be introduced in the criminal justice system in the 1980s. Since one April 2003 agencies have in addition introduced the recording of ethnicity based on self-classification using the 16 categories used in the 2001 census. The aim is to continue to work with agencies on implementing fully the 2001 categories across the criminal justice system over the next few years. The results from this monitoring are annually published by the Home Office in the report "Statistics on Race and the Criminal Justice System". Up until 1997 the published data covered racist incidents, homicides, stop and searches, cautioning, persons under the supervision of the probation service or in prison as well as the ethnicity of criminal justice practitioners. Since 1997 the extent of the data published has expanded and now also includes arrests, court proceedings, police complaints and youth offending.

Crown Prosecution Service

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions his Department had with the Crown Prosecution Service regarding the prosecutions of (a) Otis Ferry and (b) Maya Evans; and if he will make a statement. [50832]

Fiona Mactaggart: The Home Office has had no discussions with the Crown Prosecution Service regarding these cases.

Custody Conditions

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the conditions in which people awaiting trial in custody are kept; and whether any changes are planned to the applicable standards. [50019]

Fiona Mactaggart: Unconvicted prisoners have a special status and as far as possible retain their rights as citizens. This includes arrangements to provide more visits and other privileges not available to convicted prisoners. There are no plans to alter the current Prison Service standard.

Domestic Violence

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the new powers of arrest under section 10(1) of the Domestic Violence, Crime and Victims Act 2004 will be implemented in England and Wales. [51343]

Fiona Mactaggart: Section 10 of the Domestic Violence Crime and Victims (DVC&V) Act 2004 made the provision for common assault to become an arrestable offence. On 1 January 2006, the existing arrest provisions (under PACE) whereby specific offences are arrestable offences based on the concept of seriousness were replaced by a simplified approach providing a constable with the power of arrest for all offences.

The exercise of the power will be subject to the constable considering and being able to show that arrest is necessary. A new PACE Code of Practice on Arrest was introduced on 1 January 2006 which set out the necessity principle in line with section 110 of the Serious Organised Crime and Police (SOCAP) Act 2005.

This has meant that the commencement of section 110 of SOCAP has now overtaken section 10 of the Domestic Violence Crime and Victims Act. Section 10 of the DVC&V Act has therefore been repealed prior to commencement.

Domestic Violence

Edward Miliband: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what provision is available in (a) South Yorkshire and (b) Doncaster North constituency to deal with domestic violence. [50589]

Fiona Mactaggart: The following provision for domestic violence is available in South Yorkshire and Doncaster North constituency. (a) South Yorkshire Sheffield:Women's Aid: Provides advice, specialist support and safe accommodation for women and children experiencing physical, emotional or sexual abuse. Council. National services, for example the National Free Phone 24 Hour Help Line, are also available to victims of domestic violence throughout England and Wales.

Drugs

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of how many users of class A drugs there were in the UK in each year from 1998 to 2005. [44142]

Paul Goggins [holding answer 30 January 2006]: Estimates of the number of users of class A drugs in each year in the period 1998 to 2005 are presented in the following table.

Number of 16 to 59-year-old users of class A drugs in England and Wales in the year before interview from the British Crime Survey

	Number
1998	[1]809,000
2000	1,001,000
2001–02	996,000
2002–03	1,028,000
2003–04	1,091,000
2004–05	1,012,000

[1] These point estimates are based on survey data and are therefore subject to sampling error and have associated confidence intervals.

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the average sum spent each day by problematic drug users on drugs; and what percentage of such money he estimates is raised through crime. [44646]

Paul Goggins: Current estimates of the average sum spent each day by problematic drug users on drugs are not available.

	Average expenditure per day used (£)
1998
Amphetamines	9.31
Heroin	28.80
Cocaine	13.68
Cannabis	6.40
Ecstasy	29.94

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the number of users of class A drugs aged under 25 years in each of the last five years; how many (a) residential and (b) non-residential drug treatment places were available in each year; and what estimate he has made of the (i) street price and (ii) volume of circulation of (A) cocaine, (B) crack cocaine and (C) heroin in each year. [44647]

Paul Goggins: The available information is given as follows.

Estimates of the number of users of class A drugs, aged 16–24, in each year in the period 2000 to 2005 are presented in table 1.

The Department of Health does not centrally collate information on the number of drug treatment places available.

Estimates of the street prices for cocaine, crack cocaine and heroin are shown in table 2. We do not have estimates of the volume of drugs in circulation on an annual basis.

Table 1: Estimated number of users of class A drugs aged 16 to 24 in England and Wales in the year before interview from the British Crime Survey

	Number of users[1]
2000	542,000

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, how much his Department has spent on campaigns to raise awareness of the health effects of illegal drugs in each year since 1997. [47546]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The FRANK campaign, launched in May 2003, which is administered and funded jointly by the Home Office and Department of Health, provides young people and their families with information and advice about drugs, including health effects. Spend on media and advertising on FRANK is given in the following table.

£ million

	Spend on media and advertising
2003–04	3.7
2004–05	1.9
2005–06 (planned)	1.4

Drugs Classification

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will refer tobacco and alcohol to the Advisory Council on the Misuse of Drugs for classification under Schedule 2 of the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971 as Class A, B or C drugs. [45174]

Paul Goggins [holding answer 24 January 2006]: Tobacco and alcohol will not be referred to the Advisory Council on the Misuse of Drugs for the consideration of their control under the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971.

EU Travel Ban

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what mechanisms are in place to alert Ministers to the entry to the UK of individuals on an EU travel ban list; and whether such mechanisms have been triggered since such bans were introduced. [50615]

Mr. McNulty: The Secretary of State designates EU and UN travel bans by order made under section 8B of the Immigration Act 1971—the most recent is the Immigration (Designation of Travel Bans) (Amendment) Order 2005. In accordance with section 8B an individual on an EU or UN travel ban is treated as an excluded person and must be refused entry to the UK. Unless it is considered that one of the exceptions to the obligation to exclude may apply Ministers are not normally approached in individual cases.

Group 4 Securicor

Kelvin Hopkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what key performance indicators are used to evaluate the performance of group 4 Securicor in the provision of the electronic monitoring of offenders. [51209]

Fiona Mactaggart: The performance of group 4 Securicor in the operation of electronic monitoring is evaluated in the following areas of service:

1. Length of breaks in the electronic monitoring service (the period of time for which the service provider is unable to monitor people who are subject to electronic monitoring).

2. The cumulative period of electronic monitoring service breaks over a rolling 12-month period.

3. Length of breaks in call centre telephone services availability.

4. The cumulative period of breaks in call centre telephone services availability over a rolling 12-month period.

5. Telephone response time by human operator to calls to the free-phone in the call centre.

6. Availability of a facility to receive electronic notifications of people who are to be monitored.

7. Installing electronic monitoring equipment and inducting people on to the monitoring programme.

8. Visiting to remove the electronic monitoring equipment at the end of a monitoring requirement.

9. Advising those monitored of approved absences during the curfew period.

10. Reporting instances where the location of a person subject to active tracking is lost and regained, or where the tracking equipment is tampered with.

11. Contacting the curfew address in the event of an absence exceeding a specified time.

12. Reporting a violation of an exclusion requirement to the relevant authority.

13. Informing the relevant authorities of a decision to start breach proceedings, where the service provider is responsible for enforcement action.

14. Attending court breach hearings.

15. Timeliness of operational reports.

16. Providing a monthly statistical report.

17. Providing exception reports relating to the investigation of incidents, and equipment damage and failure.

18. Timeliness of providing reports by non-electronic means.

19. Levels of satisfaction with training provided by the service provider.

20. No persons employed by the service provider are known to have unspent convictions.

21. No incorrect confirmation of the identity of people to be monitored at the time of installing monitoring equipment.

22. Correct staff numbers and types for visits to juveniles.

23. Information about people being monitored being available to the Home Office within a specified to time of it going on to the service provider's computer system.

24. Reporting serious complaints against the service provider to the Home Office within a specified time.

25. Recording and maintaining data about persons already subject to electronic monitoring at the start of the current contracts.

Kelvin Hopkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many contracts have been awarded to Group 4 Securicor for the provision of electronic monitoring of offenders by (a) his Department and (b) other Government agencies. [51214]

Fiona Mactaggart: The Home Office awarded three contracts to Group 4 Securicor for the operation of electronic monitoring in England and Wales from one April 2005. These contracts are for the North East and North West; East Midlands, Yorkshire and Humberside; and the South East and South West. No such contracts have been awarded by other Government agencies.

Kelvin Hopkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the value is of contracts between the Government and Group 4 Securicor for the provision of electronic monitoring of offenders. [51281]

Fiona Mactaggart: The value of the electronic monitoring contracts depends on the number of people monitored. In the financial year 2005–06, the total value of the contracts awarded to Group 4 Securicor for electronic monitoring is expected to be about £37 million.

Kelvin Hopkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what mechanisms are in place to review contracts awarded to Group 4 Securicor for the provision of electronic monitoring of offenders. [51373]

Fiona Mactaggart: The Home Office conducts a monthly audit of the performance of Group 4 Securicor against a range of performance measures. A failure to meet the specified service levels results in financial deductions from the amount paid to Group 4 Securicor for providing the electronic monitoring service. The contracts began to operate on one April 2005 and are for a period of five years, which may be extended by up to two more years. They will be reviewed nearer to their expiry date as part of the Government procurement process. The contracts contain standard provisions enabling the government to terminate them early if the contractor defaults on the provision of the service.

Home Detention Curfews

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many offenders in Cambridgeshire were on home detention curfews

(HDCs) in 2004–05; and what proportion of these offenders failed to complete the HDC period successfully. [48665]

Fiona Mactaggart: The information requested, as recorded on the Prison Service IT system, is provided in the following table.

Number of persons released from prisons in Cambridgeshire[1] on home detention curfews (HDC) in 2004–05—and percentage of those offenders who failed to complete the HDC period.

	Those released on HDC from Cambridgeshire prisons			Recalls			Percentage recalled
	2004	2005	Total	2004	2005	Total	2004	2005	Total

All Cambridgeshire prisons	45	434	479	5	26	31	11	6	6.5

[1] The question has been answered to give the number of prisoners released from Cambridgeshire prisons; information on offenders from Cambridgeshire who have been released on HDC is not held centrally.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for how many hours in total tagged criminals in (a) Leicester and (b) England and Wales have broken their curfews since 2000. [48682]

Fiona Mactaggart: Information is not broken down in the way requested, and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many tagged criminals in (a) Leicester and (b) England and Wales have broken their curfews since 2000; and what proportion this represents of the total number of tagged criminals in each case; [48683]

(2) how many criminals in (a) Leicester and (b) England and Wales have been prosecuted for breaking their curfews since 2000. [48684]

Fiona Mactaggart: In the period from 1 April 2005 to 31 January 2006, a total of 37,336 people began and ended a period of electronic monitoring in England and Wales.

Of these, 25,708 (69 per cent.) completed their curfews without breaching, 9,434 (25 per cent.) completed their curfews following one or more breaches, and 2,194 (6 per cent.) had their curfews revoked following breach action. In the same period, in Leicestershire, from a total of 742 people on electronic monitoring, 637 (86 per cent.) completed their curfews without breaching, 83 (11 per cent.) completed their curfews following one or more breaches, and 22 (3 per cent.) had their curfews revoked following breach action. Information is not available for Leicester itself, or for the period before 1 April 2005, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Human Trafficking Convention

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if the Government will sign the European convention on action against trafficking in human beings. [41873]

Paul Goggins: The Government have not yet taken a decision on whether the United Kingdom (UK) will sign the Council of Europe convention on action against trafficking in human beings. Whilst we support the aims of the convention, there are provisions which present some concerns for the UK and which remain under active consideration. We are assessing the level of risk associated with these provisions and looking at how we might implement the convention safely without placing more vulnerable people at risk.

The Government are committed to tackling trafficking in human beings, domestically and internationally, and has in place a multi-faceted strategy on trafficking in human beings. We are determined that the measures we take bring the criminals responsible for this serious organised crime to justice, protect the victims of trafficking and do not undermine our ability to control our borders.

Identity Cards Scheme

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much has been spent on the identity cards scheme to date. [47572]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Since the beginning of the financial year 2003–04, £32.05 million has been spent by the Identity Cards Programme up to the end of December 2005.

Identity Fraud

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to his Minister's letter to the hon. Member for Birmingham, Selly Oak of 23 June 2005, Home Office reference M12110/5, how the identity card scheme will reduce the opportunity for those facilitating terrorist and organised criminals to operate using multiple identities; and how the scheme will monitor the support activities of terrorist networks. [50426]

Andy Burnham: The Identity Cards Scheme will combat the use of multiple identities in a number of ways. Details provided in applications will be verified through checks on public and private databases to verify the existence of an identity in society and its link to the applicant.

Key supporting documentation will be examined to check for inconsistencies where appropriate and applicants will be interviewed personally to verify their details. Enrolment staff will be subject to security checks and working processes will promote accountability and defeat internal collusion. A fraud investigation unit will supervise enrolment and work with law enforcement agencies to investigate suspicious activities. In addition to all of these steps there will be the additional protection of verifying a person's biometrics against previously enrolled identities.

The biometric check at enrolment will conduct a check against previously registered biometrics to help detect a person attempting to enrol multiple identities or steal the identity of someone who has already enrolled. The cumulative effect of all these measures will make significantly more difficult the use of multiple identities by terrorists and their supporters. The increased security of identity will also help to combat money-laundering and other types of fraud which are perpetrated in support of terrorist activities.

In cases of serious crime or threats to national security the scheme will provide, subject to appropriate authorisation procedures, the capability for law enforcement and intelligence and security agencies to be provided with information on when a person's record on the Register has been checked or amended. This will make it harder for identified terrorist suspects to disguise transactions such as renting accommodation, hiring cars or buying mobile phones by using multiple identities.

Internet (Improper Use)

Mr. Oaten: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to his answer of 12 September 2005, Official Report, column 2567W, on improper use of the internet, what recent assessment his Department has made of (a) the costs and (b) the timescale for development of the IMPACT programme; and if he will make a statement. [32854]

Mr. Charles Clarke: IMPACT is a key contributor to implementing the recommendations of Sir Michael Bichard's Inquiry into issues surrounding the Soham murders. The costs and timescale of the IMPACT Programme are currently being assessed as part of the work to finalise the business case, which will be considered by the Home Office Group Investment Board in March 2006.

New capability is already being delivered incrementally to the police service: the IMPACT Nominal Index was made available in a Child Abuse Investigation Unit in each force in England and Wales on 23 December 2005, enabling users in one force to identify which other forces might hold information on a specified individual in their intelligence, crime, custody, domestic violence, firearms and child protection business areas. This will be rolled out to other Child Abuse Investigation Units and into other business areas over the rest of this year.

Juvenile Offenders

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many crimes were committed by juvenile offenders in (a) Haltemprice and Howden, (b) the East Riding of Yorkshire and (c) the Humberside police authority area in each quarter since 2001; how many cautions were issued in relation to such cases; and how many children in the East Riding of Yorkshire (i) were convicted, (ii) were in local authority care, (iii) received a reprimand, (iv) received a final warning and (v) were found guilty in each year since 2001. [49102]

Fiona Mactaggart: Data held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform on the number of juvenile offenders reprimanded, given final warnings, prosecuted, and found guilty of all offences in Humberside police force area, is provided in the following table. Figures are presented for the years 2001–04. It is not possible to separately identify (a) Haltemprice and Howden, and (b) East Riding of Yorkshire as the data is not collected at this level of detail.

Data on children looked after is collected by the DfES. Figures for the East Riding of Yorkshire for the years 2001–04 are available on the DFES website at www.dfes.gov.uk.

Murder Inquiry

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to receive the report from the inquiry team into the murder of John Victor Monkton; and if he will make a statement. [50818]

Fiona Mactaggart: The investigation into the tragic death of John Monckton is being lead by Andrew Bridges, Her Majesty's chief inspector of probation. He will look carefully at what happened in this case, and whether there are wider implications for the release and management of offenders, in particular the case management and risk of Damien Hanson and Elliot White. Mr. Bridges will report back to the Home Secretary with clear recommendations and lessons learnt from the case, which will be published on Her Majesty's inspectorate of probation website on 28 February 2006.

National Offender Management Service

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the National Offender Management Service in Wales requires a statutory regional body corporate for the purposes of (a) employing staff and (b) commissioning services. [49029]

Fiona Mactaggart [holding answer 8 February 2006]: The National Offender Management Service in Wales is part of the National Offender Management Service, which is in turn part of the Home Office. As such there would be no necessity to create a separate statutory body for employing staff or commissioning services in Wales.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how local delivery in the unitary authority area of Wales will be managed under the National Offender Management Service if the current probation boards are abolished. [49030]

Fiona Mactaggart [holding answer 8 February 2006]: In the consultation document "Restructuring Probation to Reduce Re-offending", published on 20 October 2005, the Government set out its proposals for the future of the probation service in England and Wales. Further announcements on these proposals will be made in due course. Until the future structure of policing in Wales has been decided, it is not possible to be clear about the implications for the probation service.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what areas he expects the National Offender Management Service in Wales to prioritise within the diversity portfolio of issues in addition to those relating to the Welsh language and disability. [49041]

Fiona Mactaggart: The Director for the Offender Management Service in Wales is responsible for ensuring that there is full commitment to all aspects of diversity in developing and providing services to offenders.

The core principles surrounding this commitment include: recognising and valuing the uniqueness of each individual; embracing "difference" and treating every-one with dignity and respect; providing fair, accessible, inclusive, appropriate and effective provision that demonstrates a fair service to all; ensuring that no service is disproportionate or unwittingly influenced because of ethnicity, gender, class, religion, culture, age, sexuality or disability; meeting all legislative responsibilities under the Sex Discrimination Act 1975, the Welsh Language Act 1993, the Disability Discrimination Act 1995, the Race Relations (Amendment) Act 2000, the Religion and Beliefs Act 2003, and the Employment Equality (Sexual Orientation) (Amendment) Regulations 2003.

Joining Together in Wales—an Adult and Young People's Strategy to Reduce Re-offending—forms the basis of a consultation to develop a reducing re-offending action plan for Wales. The outcome of the consultation and the subsequent development of the action plan will also help inform the best way to meet diversity issues in Wales.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he will take to ensure that the implementation of National Offender Management Service (a) procedures and (b) allocated funding are fit for purpose in Wales. [49053]

Fiona Mactaggart: Full regard is being given to the difference devolution has made to Government. We will continue to work closely with the Welsh Assembly Government and other partners in Wales in developing the National Offender Management Service in Wales to ensure it is fit for purpose.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps will be taken under the National Offender Management Service to involve (a) local health trusts and (b) housing departments. [49069]

Fiona Mactaggart: The National Assembly for Wales has devolved responsibility for health and housing matters and they are two of the key themes being addressed through Joining Together in Wales: an Adult and Young People's Strategy to Reduce Re-offending.

The strategy was published jointly between the Welsh Assembly Government and the Home Office. It identifies key issues and work needed to address them and forms the basis of a current consultation to develop a reducing re-offending action plan for Wales that involves all the key stakeholders. In England, NHS Primary Care Trusts started to assume responsibility for the commissioning of prison health services in the public prisons in April 2004 and will assume full responsibility in April 2006.

In 2005–06 nearly £176 million has been allocated for prison healthcare. Following on from this transfer of responsibility and funding, a new development programme for extending offender health support is being launched on 8 February. One objective of this programme is to enable the effective co-commissioning of offender health services at all points of the offender's contact with the criminal justice system.

Regional Offender Managers in England are also working to develop links between local and regional criminal justice and housing services, including local authorities. Schemes under development include the Housing and Returning Prisoners protocol in the North East region, the Community Gateway in the South West region and work across the London Accommodation Pathway.

The National Probation service is also a formal partner with local housing authorities in the commissioning of housing support services through the 'Supporting People' programme. The new Civil Society Alliance will be working with local authorities and other partners to improve offenders' access to local services, including through involvement in the new Local Area Agreements.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which organisation in Wales will assume the lead role for the National Offender Management Service. [49201]

Fiona Mactaggart [holding answer 9 January 2006]: The Home Office will continue to develop the National Offender Management Service in Wales in partnership with the Welsh Assembly Government.

Operation Elucidate

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many Chinese nationals were removed under Operation Elucidate in 2005. [50645]

Mr. McNulty: 172 Chinese nationals were removed under Operation Elucidate in 2005.

Police/Community Support Officers

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the average salary of (a) a newly-trained police constable and (b) a community support officer was in each police force on the most recent date for which figures are available. [49043]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The information is as follows:

(a) The table shows the salary of a police constable on completion of initial training and the relevant regional allowance. The pay scales for police constables range from £20,397 for a newly recruited officer, rising to £32,025 for an officer with 10 year's service. Additionally, a constable who has served at the top of the pay scale for one year has access to a competence-related threshold payment of £1,062 per year.

(b) Salary and other terms and conditions for police community support officers (PCSOs) are determined by the respective police authority. We do not routinely maintain data on PCSO salaries. The most recent data we have on PCSO salary costs and allowances is contained in a report by Accenture on terms and conditions for PCSOs, which was published on three February. The report provides a range of data on basic pay rates and allowances paid to PCSOs and an analysis of the variations between forces. The report found that the typical average salary for PCSOs was £17,269 and the average total cash reward (basic salary plus allowances and overtime) was £20,526. The report is available on the Home Office website:

Prisoners

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will ensure that all prisons make condoms available anonymously to prisoners and other detainees. [49237]

Fiona Mactaggart: Prison doctors were advised in 1995 that they should make condoms available to individual prisoners, on application, if in their clinical judgement, there is a risk of transmission of HIV infection during sexual activity. The Prison Service is planning to issue, in the early part of 2006, revised guidance and instructions which aim to clarify the policy on condoms so that it can be applied more evenly across the prison estate.

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the shortest amount of time served by a prisoner sentenced to life imprisonment before being released on licence was in each year between 1987 and 1999. [49426]

Fiona Mactaggart: The information requested, as recorded on the Prison Service IT system, is provided in the following table.

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the Department's policy is on the transport of pregnant prisoners and what guidelines have been issued to the prison service on the matter. [49438]

Fiona Mactaggart: NOMS aims to transport pregnant prisoners in non-cellular vehicles, whenever possible. This follows an assessment of their medical and personal needs by prison operational managers and health care professionals. The contractor should be advised of this requirement in advance of the journey. Where this has not happened, and the prisoner declares herself to be pregnant, the contractor must seek the advice of a healthcare professional as to whether a non-cellular vehicle should be used for the transfer.

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the number of prisoners who have converted to Islam whilst in prison in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [50458]

Fiona Mactaggart: Statistics on the religious affiliation of prisoners in 1994 to 2004 is published in Table 8.5 of the Home Office Statistical Bulletin: Offender Management Caseload Statistics 2004. Copies of this publication are available in the House of Commons Library. Information is not held centrally on the number of prisoners converting to different religions whilst in prison.

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many persons breached a prison licence due to (a) a further offence, (b) inappropriate behaviour and (c) breaching supervision conditions in each of the last eight years. [48791]

Fiona Mactaggart: Information on the number of offenders released on Home Detention Curfew (HDC) or sentenced to four years or more who were recalled to prison as a result of a breach of post custody licence can be found in tables 10.7,10.8 and 10.9 of the Home Office Statistical Bulletin: Offender Management Caseload Statistics 2004. Information on the number of offenders sentenced to less than four years who were recalled to prison in 2004–05 is provided at paragraph 10.12 of the same publication. Copies of this publication are available in the House of Commons Library.

Specific information on the reasons for the recall in each of the last eight years of those released on parole is provided in the following table. Data held centrally on non-parole cases recalled by specific reason for recall are not sufficiently complete or reliable for publication.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he has taken to ensure the Supply Reduction Good Practice Guide is applied in every prison establishment; and if he will make a statement. [48419]

Fiona Mactaggart: The Supply Reduction Good Practice Guide was distributed to all establishments in October 2003. Supply reduction performance is monitored by area managers during routine visits to establishments and bilateral meetings with governors and the director of operations. At an area level performance, is monitored by area drug co-ordinators who receive monthly data on performance targets from establishments. The good practice guide is central to that process.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many investigations for alleged misconduct have been conducted into (a) prison governors and (b) prison officers at each establishment in each of the last five years; what proportion of these investigations led to (i) no action being taken, (ii) revised guidance, (iii) informal disciplinary action and (iv) formal disciplinary action; and if he will make a statement. [48432]

Fiona Mactaggart: Data on investigations is not collated by grade and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. There have been 7,486 formal investigations between July 2000 and 1 February 2006. Table A details the number of investigations held in prisons, area offices and Prison Service headquarters. Table B details the outcome of the investigations completed in the period July 2000 and 1 February 2006.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with (a) the National Offender Management Service, (b) the Prison Service and (c) private sector operators regarding the role of the private sector in the delivery of penal services; and if he will make a statement. [48508]

Fiona Mactaggart: My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary has regular discussions with his officials in the Home Department, both within the National Offender Management Service and with the Prison Service, about the delivery of penal services. The role of the private sector may be raised at such discussions. The Home Secretary met with representatives of the private sector delivering penal services on 8 November 2005.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which prisons offer anger management courses; and how many offer psychiatric support. [48882]

Fiona Mactaggart: The Prison Service delivers a controlling anger and learning to manage it course (CALM) this is an accredited offending behaviour programme and is run in the 24 prisons listed in the table. Additionally, there are a number of prisons offering local non-accredited work on issues relating to anger management.

There are mental health in-reach teams in 102 prisons this will soon be available across the prison estate.

Probation Services

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will bring forward legislation to devolve the commissioning of probation services. [51187]

Fiona Mactaggart: We intend to bring forward legislation to restructure the probation service as soon as parliamentary time allows. This will not devolve the commissioning of probation services. As set out in our consultation paper Restructuring Probation to Reduce Re-offending, we propose to alter the statutory framework to enable the regional offender managers, including the director of offender management service Wales, to commission services in their area from a range of providers

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the national probation service in Wales will conclude its restructuring process. [51192]

Fiona Mactaggart: Restructuring of the probation service is dependent on legislation and may be affected by other structural changes in the criminal justice system, for example to police force boundaries. We cannot at this stage be certain about when these processes will conclude.

Reoffending

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many adult offenders were reconvicted (a) in 1997 and (b) in 2005. [43590]

Fiona Mactaggart: Reoffending rates are published annually. The most recent data are published in 'Adult reoffending: results from the 2002 cohort'. Home Office Statistical Bulletin 25/05. This is available on the Home Office's website (http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/hosbpubs1.html). The report contains information on reconviction for the 1997 cohort and reoffending that results in conviction for the 2002 cohort.

Stolen Pets

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have been prosecuted for holding a stolen pet as ransom in each year since 1997; and what punishments have been imposed. [49437]

Fiona Mactaggart: It is not possible, from the information held on the court proceedings database by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform, to identify instances of holding a stolen pet as ransom.

Tackling Drugs, Changing Lives

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what events are planned as part of the Tackling Drugs, Changing Lives strategy in (a) February and (b) March. [44193]

Paul Goggins: No events are planned to take place in February as part of the Tackling Drugs Changing Lives series of events. In March, events have been planned to take place in Portsmouth and Peterborough.

Terrorism

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what the cost is of the anti-terrorist poster campaign in London; [50844]

(2) for how long the anti-terrorist poster campaign in London will run; [50845]

(3) how many sites are covered by the anti-terrorist poster campaign in London. [50846]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The posters in question were produced by the Metropolitan Police Service, for which the Metropolitan Police Commissioner has operational responsibility. I will ensure that he receives a copy of your questions and ask him to reply direct to you.

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to extend the anti-terrorist poster campaign in London to other cities. [50847]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The posters in question were produced by the Metropolitan Police Service, for which the Metropolitan Police Commissioner has operational responsibility. I will ensure that he receives a copy of your questions and ask him to reply direct to you.

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has for further poster campaigns once the one in London finishes. [50848]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The posters in question were produced by the Metropolitan Police Service, for which the Metropolitan Police Commissioner has operational responsibility. I will ensure that he receives a copy of your questions and ask him to reply direct to you.

Terrorism Act

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many stop and searches have been made under the Terrorism Act 2000, broken down by (a) ethnicity and (b) age group. [50225]

Mr. Charles Clarke: Statistics on the number of stop and searches under the Terrorism Act 2000 are published annually by the Home Office. The Home Office Report—'Statistics on Race and the Criminal Justice System 2004' details the number of stop-searches under Section 44 of the Terrorism Act 2000, by force and ethnicity. It is available via the following link: http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/pdfs05/s95race04.pdf.

Statistics do not include a breakdown of age groups because they are not collated in this way.

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many arrests have been made as a result of stop and searches under the Terrorism Act 2000. [50226]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The Home Office Statistical Bulletin—'Arrests for Recorded Crime (Notifiable Offences) and the Operation of Certain Police Powers under PACE 2004–05', provides information on the number of stop-searches by force area, under section 44 of the Terrorism Act 2000. It also details resulting arrests under both the Terrorism Act and other legislation, and can be accessed via the following link http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/pdfs05/hosb2105.pdf.

Traffic Offences

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) males and (b) females were (i) prosecuted and (ii) convicted in (A) Southend, (B) Essex, (C) the Metropolitan police area of London and (D) England and Wales of driving the wrong way down one-way streets in each of the last five years for which information is available. [39748]

Paul Goggins: The information requested has been taken from the court proceedings database held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform and is contained in the table.

Number of males and females proceeded against and found guilty at all courts for offences under S36(1) Traffic Signs Regulations and General Directions 1994 S.2(10) at South-east Essex petty sessional area (PSA), Essex and Metropolitan police force areas(PFA) and England and Wales, 2000–04 [1]

Work Permits

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many work permit holders were granted permanent settlement in the UK in each of the last five years. [50652]

Mr. McNulty: The latest published information on work permit holders granted permanent settlement in the UK in each of the last five years is shown in the annual Command Paper "Control of Immigration: Statistics, United Kingdom, 2004". Copies are available from the Library of the House and on the stationery office website: http://www.official- documents.co.uk/document/cm66/6690/6690.asp.

Young Offenders

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many repeat youth offenders there were in (a) Romford and (b) Havering in each of the last five years. [48549]

Fiona Mactaggart: The data are not currently available on a sub-national basis. Information on the criminal histories of sentenced young offenders is published on an annual basis by the Home Office. The most recent data was published in chapter six (in particular, table 6.5) of Sentencing Statistics 2004 (HO Report 15/05) a copy of which has been placed in the Library or can be found at www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/pdfs05/hosb1505.pdf

Data Sharing

Mr. Heald: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will place in the Library a copy of the advice and guidance issued by the Information Commissioner on (a) data-sharing between public sector databases and (b) the co-ordinated online register of electors. [43541]

Ms Harman: I have placed in the Library a copy of the Information Commissioner's office's February 2001 publication, 'Data sharing between different local authority departments'. Any other advice issued by the Information Commissioner's office on this issue would likely to have been specific to particular databases and so would be held by the organisations responsible for those databases, rather than by my Department.

In respect of the Co-ordinated Online Record of Electors specifically, I have placed in the Library the relevant parts of a letter of 7 July 2005 from the Information Commissioner's office, encapsulating their views on the Government's thinking on CORE at that time.

Departmental Staff

Bob Spink: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many of her Department's staff are paid on a performance-related basis. [50079]

Bridget Prentice: Staff who are employed on DCA terms and conditions are all subject to performance related pay. These include staff in the former Court Service agency (now part of Her Majesty's Courts Service), staff at the Public Guardianship Office and those staff who are part of the DCA and its Associated Offices. This is a total of 12,750 staff.

On 1 April 2005, with the creation of Her Majesty's Courts Service as an executive agency of the Department, the DCA became responsible for all former employees of the Magistrates' Courts Service in England and Wales. This is a total of 12,067 staff. Those staff who were previously employed by the magistrates courts currently remain on their previous terms and conditions and are not paid on a performance-related basis. There is a DCA Pay and Grading Project currently under way. New pay, grading and benefit arrangements are due to be introduced for all DCA staff later this year. Performance related pay is likely to be a feature of the new system.

Legal Services Commission

Keith Vaz: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs (1) what assessment the Legal Services Commission made of the contribution of the Specialist Support Project to the Legal Services Commission's corporate priorities; [51375]

(2) on what basis the Legal Services Commission assessed that funding for the Specialist Support Project was not sustainable. [51376]

Bridget Prentice: Specialist Support Contracts form part of the Legal Services Commission's (LSC) special projects budget, that was reviewed in the summer 2005 against a number of criteria. These included the LSC's Corporate Priorities, compatibility with the future vision for the Community Legal Service, and Value for Money effectiveness.

The LSC has concluded that as specialist support services provide advice to other legal advisors and not directly to clients, this did not represent the most cost-effective approach to meet the increasing need for front-line advice.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs (1) how her Department plans to replace the Specialist Support Project's expertise in dealing with the legal cases of vulnerable minority groups once Legal Services Commission funding ends; [51377]

(2) what estimate her Department has made of the future level of demand for specialist support legal services. [51378]

Bridget Prentice: The Legal Services Commission contracting arrangements include quality assessment such as Peer Review, File Assessment, and Quality Profiles. These all look to improve the quality of advice across front line providers, by indicating areas for improvement, allowing providers to build on and improve their legal competences and expertise, and reducing the need for specialist support services.

An example is the Immigration and Asylum Accreditation scheme, mandatory from August 2005, which should ensure that clients get the quality of advice they expect.

First tier organisations will continue to be able to seek specialist advice (e.g. counsel's opinion) in particularly complex circumstances.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Allotment Land

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the applications he has received in the last 12 months for the de-registration of allotment land; and if he will make a statement on his Department's policy on such applications. [44574]

Yvette Cooper: Under Section 8 of the Allotments Act 1925 the Secretary of State, my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister's consent is required for the disposal of statutory allotments. 45 applications were received for disposal in the period from January 2005 to January 2006, which are set out in the table, of which six were granted approval for disposal.

In determining such applications the following criteria are applied:

Consent for disposal cannot be given unless certain criteria are met. The criteria are that:

The allotment in question is not necessary and is surplus to requirements;

Adequate provision will be made for displaced plot holders, or that such provision is not necessary or is impracticable;

The number of people on the waiting list has been effectively taken into account;

The authority has actively promoted and publicised the availability of allotment sites and has consulted the National Society of Allotment and Leisure Gardeners;

and,

The implications of disposal for other relevant policies, in particular development plan policies, have been taken into account.

Bonfires

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what powers local authorities have to regulate day-time bonfires. [51085]

Mr. Bradshaw: I have been asked to reply.

Bonfires on domestic and business premises are regulated by local authorities under the statutory nuisance provisions in sections 79 to 82 of the Environmental Protection Act 1990. Local authorities have a duty to investigate complaints of smoke from premises that might be prejudicial to health or a nuisance, and if satisfied that a statutory nuisance exists or is likely to occur or recur an abatement notice must be served requiring the abatement of the nuisance or the restriction of its occurrence or recurrence. Failure to comply with the terms of an abatement notice will, upon summary conviction, result in a fine of up to £5,000 for domestic premises and £20,000 for business premises, in addition, section 2 of the Clean Air Act 1993 prohibits emissions of dark smoke from the open burning of material on industrial and trade premises. The Act provides a maximum fine of £20,000.

Councils (Discussions)

Mr. Drew: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what guidance he has issued on the rights of councillors to initiate discussions on matters which may be opposed by the council executive. [49440]

Mr. Woolas: The New Council Constitutions Guidance, issued by the Government to assist implementation of Part II of the Local Government Act 2000, gives advice on the role of members in the local authority decision-making process, including their role on overview and scrutiny committees.

Departmental Assets

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the items of departmental property worth over £100 that have been reported as (a) lost and (b) broken in the last 12 months. [47685]

Jim Fitzpatrick: No items of property belonging to the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister and its agencies were reported as (a) lost and (b) broken in the last 12 months. However, two laptops previously reported as lost in my reply to the hon. Member for Hornsey and Wood Green on 30 June 2005, Official Report, column 1651W are now reported as stolen.

This answer does not include property owned by Government Offices, who carry out functions on behalf of ten Government Departments.

Departmental Catering Budget

Andrew George: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what his Department's policy is on the procurement of fair trade produce for consumption on its premises. [49927]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The purchasing policy of the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister reflects the Government's value for money policy and the EU procurement rules, which require the procurement of goods and services to be based on value for money and acquired by competition unless there are convincing reasons to the contrary, and the objectives of the office.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister does not specify a requirement of fair or ethically traded products, but does welcome fair trade options as a part of any contracts for the supply of catering or hospitality services.

Deprivation

Shona McIsaac: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the levels of deprivation were in each lower level super output area in (a) Cleethorpes constituency and

(b) Great Grimsby constituency in the last year for which figures are available, in ascending order from the most deprived. [42104]

Yvette Cooper: The following table lists the ranks for each lower layer super output area (LLSOA) in (a) Cleethorpes constituency and (b) in Great Grimsby constituency, based on the Indices of Deprivation 2004, which is the last index available.

In considering the data please note that these are national ranks, with the most deprived LLSOA in England being given a rank of one and the least deprived being ranked 32,482.

Home Information Packs

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when he plans to publish a detailed implementation plan for the introduction of home information packs. [48386]

Yvette Cooper: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is discussing the main elements of the implementation plan with stakeholders and expect to share the details with them shortly.

Homelessness

Sarah Teather: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to his answer of 5 July 2005, Official Report, column 307W, on homelessness, when he expects to publish the code of guidance. [50993]

Yvette Cooper: A revised "Homelessness Code of Guidance for Local Authorities" is due to be published in the next few months.

Housing

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what proportion of right-to-buy sales in West Lancashire since 1980 were (a) bed-sit, (b) one-bed, (c) two-bed, (d) three-bed and (e) four or more bedrooms. [45133]

Yvette Cooper: Information on the number of bedrooms for properties sold through the right to buy scheme is not held centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much funding local authority housing in (a) England and (b) Tamworth constituency received in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available, broken down by source. [48656]

Mr. Woolas: The information requested is not held centrally, and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans he has to ensure that tenants of arm's length management organisations are able to decide their future tenancy arrangements when the current contracts expire; and if he will make a statement. [44464]

Yvette Cooper: Tenants should be fully consulted on all significant changes to the management of their homes, as they were on decisions to set up an arm's length management organisation.

Mr. Truswell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much funding local authority housing in (a) England and (b) Leeds has received in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available, broken down by source. [46004]

Yvette Cooper: The information requested is currently not held centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Truswell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what steps he is taking to increase the volume of affordable social housing provided by (a) local authorities, (b) the not-for-profit sector and (c) the private sector. [46005]

Yvette Cooper: The Government set a target of providing 75,000 social rented homes from 2005–06 to 2007–08, that is, an additional 10,000 homes, a 50 per cent. increase on 2004–05.

Of these it is estimated around 3,000 will be provided through local authorities and at least 60,000 through registered social landlords or other developers. The Government have announced in the Barker review to explore new innovative ways for local councils to support more social house building in future.

The Government have already widened the availability of funding through the Housing Corporation's Affordable Housing programme to include non-registered social landlords.

Jeff Ennis: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many council houses in (a) Barnsley and (b) Doncaster have been brought up to the Decent Homes Standard; and how many remain to be brought up to the standard. [46555]

Yvette Cooper: The information is as follows.

(a) Barnsley has reported that their number of non-decent dwellings has decreased from 8,437 in April 2003 to 5,458 in April 2005. Barnsley did not supply the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister with non-decent estimates prior to April 2003.

(b) In 2002 Doncaster reported that their number of non-decent dwellings as of April 2001 was 8,858. Their number of non-decent dwellings in 2005 was reported at 13,324.

This reported increase is due to Doncaster revising their figures after a stock condition survey and a validation of stock condition data in preparation for an option appraisal, and not necessarily a physical increase in their number of non-decent dwellings.

Business Plan Annual Monitoring returns.

Jeff Ennis: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what proportion of council housing stock in (a) Barnsley and (b) Doncaster has been sold under the right to buy scheme since 1980. [46556]

Yvette Cooper: The proportion of council housing stock in Barnsley and Doncaster that has been sold under the right to buy scheme since its introduction in 1980 can be found on the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's website at:

http://www.odpm.gov.uk/embedded_object.asp?id=1156373

Mr. Hands: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many people in the London borough of Hammersmith and Fulham are waiting to be found suitable accommodation by the local authority while living in accommodation judged unacceptable by social services. [45947]

Yvette Cooper: The information requested is not held centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Leisure Facilities Transfer (West Lancashire)

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the effect of the transfer of leisure facilities in West Lancashire to newly-formed charitable trusts on their access to capital for refurbishment. [51119]

Mr. Caborn: I have been asked to reply.

Specific information on the transfer of ownership of leisure centres from local authorities to newly-formed charitable trusts is not centrally collated. However, information from the Leisure Data Base Company suggests that approximately one-fifth of public leisure facilities in England are provided through trusts.

My Department recognises the importance of this issue in ensuring the continued sustainability of publicly provided sports facilities. The Audit Commission is currently undertaking a study into the different types of management arrangements available to local authorities for running these services and how they approach the task of choosing the option best suited to local needs. This is expected to include a consideration of the potential implications of each of these options, including for charitable trusts.

I will ensure a copy of the study is placed in the House Libraries once it is published.

Local Authority Expenditure

Keith Vaz: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much local authorities have spent on gas in each year between 1997 and 2005. [51148]

Mr. Woolas: Estimates for how much local authorities have spent on gas in each year between 1997 and 2005 have been tabled as follows. From 2002–03 onwards, figures include other (non-electricity) energy costs (eg solid fuel and fuel oil) as well as gas.

	£000
1998–99	114,439
1999–2000	112,727
2000–01	121,717
2001–02	151,698
2002–03	201,290
2003–04	187,822
2004–05	222,481

Subjective Analysis Returns (SAR) submitted by local authorities to the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister.

Figures prior to 1998–99 were not collected centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The SAR is a sample survey and collects information from 121 authorities in England. The data have been grossed up to provide estimates for England as a whole.

Comparisons across years may not be valid due to changes in responsibilities and the method of reporting the information. In particular, the data for 1998–99 to 2002–03 are presented on a non-Financial Reporting Standard 17 (FRS17) basis while the data for 2003–04 and 2004–05 are presented on a FRS17 basis. Hence, figures for different years may not be directly comparable.

Millennium Dome (Redevelopment)

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what responsibilities he has had for the millennium dome in each year since his appointment as Deputy Prime Minister. [49713]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Deputy Prime Minister inherited responsibility for the millennium dome in May 2002 when the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister was created as a Department in its own right. Prior to that responsibility for the dome rested with the former Department for Transport, local government and the regions.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister sponsors English Partnerships, the national regeneration agency, which has owned the dome site since 1997 and was charged with securing a long term use for the millennium dome structure and regeneration of associated land on the Greenwich peninsula.

English Partnerships have entered into legally binding contracts with Meridian Delta Ltd (MDL), a consortium consisting of Lend Lease and Quintain Estates and Development Plc, and Anschutz Entertainment Group (Anschutz), for the redevelopment of the dome and the regeneration of approximately 190 acres of land on the Greenwich peninsula.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister continues to oversee and monitor English Partnerships' role in securing the financial returns from the deal and in working with MDL and Anschutz in the redevelopment of the millennium dome and associated land to ensure successful delivery of the regeneration of the area. English Partnerships also continues to have responsibility for certain aspects of the dome's maintenance, security and insurance until Anschutz completes the construction of the arena and takes on full responsibility for the dome structure and its immediate surroundings.

Supporting People

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will put mechanisms in place to ensure that the calculation of the needs-based formulae for supporting people grants will not include a ceiling; and that the implementation of the increase grant will take effect in full from April 2007. [51185]

Mr. Woolas: Through "Creating Sustainable Communities: Supporting Independence", the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is currently consulting on whether, and if so how, to take forward any changes to the basis for allocating supporting people grants to local authorities. In parallel, the ODPM is also consulting on a technical model which provides one option for an alternative approach to allocations. Consultation on both runs until 28 February 2006, and decisions will be taken once we have had the opportunity to consider all representations received.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has, however, already announced guaranteed minimum supporting people grant allocations for 2007–08. These have been set on the basis of each authority receiving at least 95 per cent. of their grant for 2006–07. The ODPM will determine and confirm how to allocate the remainder of the funding following and in the light of the current consultation. However, the announcement of minimum allocations means that any change to the basis for grant distribution cannot be implemented in full from April 2007.

TREASURY

Departmental Expenditure

Mrs. Villiers: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much was spent by his Department on (a) gas and (b) electricity in 2004–05. [51769]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The amounts spent on (a) gas and (b) electricity consumed in 1 Horse Guards Road during 2004–05 were (a) £3,566 and (b) £332,130.

Free Bus Travel

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what assessment he made of the method of distributing the sum of money allocated to the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister to cover the cost of the free bus travel policy announced in the Budget when deciding the total sum of money to be applied to the policy; [51466]

(2) how the sum of money allocated to the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister to cover the cost of the free bus travel policy announced in the Budget was calculated; [51467]

(3) what representations he has received concerning the calculation of the sum of money allocated to the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister to cover the cost of the free bus travel policy announced in the Budget. [51468]

Mr. Des Browne: The Government are providing an extra £350 million for 2006–07 through the Formula Grant system which will be sufficient to fund the cost to local authorities, as set out in Budget 2005. Local authorities were fully consulted by The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister on the distribution by a new formula and received very few representations against. Decisions on the distribution of local government grant for 2006–07 and 2007–08 were made as part of the local government finance settlement, approved by this house on 6 February 2006.

The £350 million included reimbursement to operators for lost income, additional costs due to the increase in generated users, the reimbursement of authorities already offering free off-peak local bus travel, and inflation.

A small number of representations have been received regarding the Budget 2005 announcement of an increase in concessionary fares. However, these have concentrated on the method of distribution as opposed to the calculation of the £350 million allocated.

Parliamentary Questions

Anne Main: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many and what percentage of the written parliamentary questions addressed to him he has answered personally in each year since he took up his post. [50227]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Written questions are usually answered by the Minister with day to day responsibility for the issue concerned.

Post Office

Norman Lamb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what services to the public which are provided by his Department are available from the post office. [51199]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Customers can pay direct taxes (including national insurance contributions) at the post office. They can also buy National Savings and Investment products and £5 Royal Mint commemorative coins.

Revenue and Customs

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs and its predecessors spent on (a) television and (b) radio advertising in each of the last five years for which figures are available; and what the advertising campaigns were for in each case. [44791]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 24 January 2006]: The following table details media spend figures, by campaign, excluding VAT and all fees, for (a) television and (b) radio advertising from 2000 to 2005.

Tax Credits

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many tax credit cases have been with the (a) Compliance Co-ordination Unit and (b) Field Force in each month since 2003–04. [38555]

Dawn Primarolo: Compliance activity for this work area is no longer organised in the teams referred to as (a) Compliance Co-ordination Unit and (b) Field Force. This means that the Department is unable to supply the information requested.

Mr. Gale: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what research was conducted in preparing the Government news network press release issued on 1 February on the tax credit system. [50215]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 13 February 2006]: The press release was based on published statistics, administrative data on Tax Credits, and calculations by HM Treasury and HM Revenue and Customs.

Mr. Soames: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much in total has been overpaid in tax credits since they were introduced. [50702]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 13 February 2006]: Estimates for 2003–04 of the numbers of in-work families with tax credits awards, including information on overpayments and underpayments, based on final family circumstances and incomes for 2003–04 are published in "Child and Working Tax Credits. Finalised Awards. 2003–04." This publication and provisional estimates for the number of in-work families with tax credit awards as at selected dates in 2004–05 are available on the HMRC website at:

http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/personal-tax-credits/cwtc-quarterly-stats.htm

Estimates of numbers and values of overpayments or underpayments for 2004–05 awards at 5 April 2005 will be published in May 2006.

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the stages of the working tax credit system are from application to payment; how many claims have been stopped as fraudulent or possibly fraudulent cases at each stage since the scheme began; and if he will make a statement. [47657]

Dawn Primarolo: All claims for tax credits are subjected to risk assessment and key personal details are matched against other HMRC frameworks before any payments are made. I refer the hon. Gentlemen to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Yeovil (Mr. Laws) on 10 January 2006, Official Report, column 558W.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Asbestos

Jim Dobbin: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will extend the Health and Safety Executive's consultation period on the Control of Asbestos Regulations 2006. [47010]

Mrs. McGuire: The consultation on the proposed changes to the Control of Asbestos at Work Regulations 2002 is being undertaken by the Health and Safety Commission. The length of the consultation period is therefore a matter for the Commission, not Ministers. I understand that this was set by the Commission in its meeting of 11 October 2005. I am informed by the HSC that key stakeholders have now submitted their views.

Jim Dobbin: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what factors the Health and Safety Executive took into account when setting the deadline for the consultation on the Control of Asbestos Regulations 2006. [47011]

Mrs. McGuire: The Health and Safety Commission, rather than the Health and Safety Executive, set the timetable for consultation on proposed amendments to the Control of Asbestos at Work Regulations 2002 and decided that the time allowed was an adequate period for people to properly consider the document and prepare their responses. This is in line with the 12-week minimum required by the Cabinet Office's code of practice on consultation. The Health and Safety Executive had also previously discussed the issues with key stakeholders.

Benefit Payment Methods

Mr. Alan Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many payments of (a) state pension, (b) pension credit and (c) other benefits are made each week to (i) Post Office card accounts, (ii) basic bank accounts and (iii) other bank accounts in (1) the UK, (2) Argyll and Bute constituency and (3) each region. [49344]

Mr. Plaskitt [holding answer 6 February 2006]: The information is not available in the format requested. The table below shows the number of DWP pensions and benefits being paid into (i) Post Office card accounts and (ii) bank/building society accounts as at December 2005.

Scotland (excluding Argyle and Bute)	621,500	156,200	587,100

Figures are rounded to the nearest 100 and relate to payment accounts in Great Britain.

Pensions and benefits are paid at different frequencies. Most are paid weekly.

Figures refer to benefit payment accounts. People in receipt of more than one benefit/pension will be counted for each separate benefit/pension in payment. People who have their benefit/pension combined and paid at the same time will only be counted through the paying benefit.

Benefits

Mrs. Curtis-Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people in the age bands (a) 18 to 25, (b) 25 to 40, (c) 40 to 55 and (d) 55 to 65 years were in receipt of (i) disability allowance, (ii) invalid care allowance, (iii) carers allowance, (iv) incapacity benefit and (v) other health-related benefit in (A) absolute numbers and (B) as a percentage of the total population of the Crosby constituency in each year between 2000 and 2005. [44964]

Mrs. McGuire: I have asked the chief executive of the Disability and Carers Service, Mr. Terry Moran to write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

Letter from Terry Moran:

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, how many people in the age bands (a) 18 to 25 (b) 25 to 40 (c) 40 to 55 and (d) 55 to 65 years were in receipt of (i) disability allowance (ii) invalid care allowance (iii) carers allowance (iv) incapacity benefit and (v) other health-related benefit in (A) absolute numbers and (B) as a percentage of the total population of the Crosby constituency in each of the years 2000 to 2005.

The Minister for Disabled People, Anne McGuire MP, promised you a substantive reply from the Chief Executive of the Disability and Carers Service.

The information available is in the attached annexes.

I hope this is helpful.

Citygate Public Affairs

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what meetings the Department has held with Citygate Public Affairs Ltd. since July. [36753]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department does not maintain a central list of such contacts. Ministers and civil servants, including special advisers meet many people as part of the process of policy development and business delivery. All such contacts are conducted in accordance with the requirements of the Ministerial Code, Civil Service Code, Code of Conduct for Special Advisers and Guidance for civil servants on contacts with lobbyists and people outside Government.

Compulsory Redundancies (Benefit Offices)

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on negotiations with the Public and Commercial Services Union on compulsory redundancies for jobcentre and benefit office workers. [44840]

Mrs. McGuire: In November 2004 the Department reached a negotiated agreement with the PCS, FDA and Prospect trade unions. This agreement states that staff would only be declared compulsorily redundant after full and meaningful consultation with trade unions has taken place. The agreement allows for consultation to be undertaken at the appropriate level within the organisation and with a view to reaching agreement about ways to avoid, minimise or mitigate compulsory redundancy. DWP Management and the unions agreed to work constructively together to seek to avoid compulsory redundancies through redeployment and voluntary measures.

In accordance with the agreement, a forum of management and departmental trade unions has met monthly to review jointly the operation of the agreement. At the latest joint forum the unions agreed that the agreement was holding up well in the majority of government office regions. To date the Department has reduced staffing by just under 15,000 with only one compulsory redundancy, which involved exceptional circumstances. The Department will continue to work with its trade unions to avoid compulsory redundancy wherever possible.

Credit and Benefit Overpayments

Greg Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many individual credit and benefit overpayment cases have been referred to his Department by hon. Members since 2001. [40529]

Mr. Plaskitt [holding answer 11 January 2006]: Records prior to 2003 are no longer available.

Details of individual pension credit and benefit overpayment cases referred to the Department by hon. Members for the years 2003 to 2005 are shown in the following table.

	Number
2003	151
2004	220
2005	406

Customer Management System

Mr. Anthony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the estimated cost is of repairing the Customer Management System in his Department. [46829]

Margaret Hodge: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the chief executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lesley Strathie:

The Secretary of State for Work and Pensions has asked me to reply to your question asking what the estimated cost is of repairing the Customer Management System in his Department. This is something that falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

The Customer Management System (CMS) is performing to agreed service levels so there is no repair cost as such. However, like all DWP Information Technology systems, CMS has a programme of future releases that will update and improve the system to reflect changing legislative and business requirements.

Debt Manager Software

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much debt has been written off as a result of problems with the new IT software package debt manager. [45278]

Mr. Plaskitt: No debt has been written off.

Departmental Advertising Campaigns

Anne Milton: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list the public information advertising campaigns run by his Department in the past 12 months; and how much his Department spent on (a) newspapers and (b) television advertising for those campaigns. [42516]

Mrs. McGuire: The information is not available in the format requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. The information is held in financial years and the following table provides the figures for the current financial year to date.

Department for Work and Pensions National Public Advertising Information Campaigns April 2005 to date

Notes:
1. All figures have been rounded to the nearest thousand.
2. All national advertising campaigns are listed together with the newspaper and television advertising expenditure relating to those campaigns. National advertising campaigns that do not include either newspaper or television advertising are also listed.
3. The information is not available in the format requested and has therefore been provided for the current financial year only.
4. All figures are exclusive of VAT.

Departmental Assets

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list the items of departmental property worth over £100 that have been reported as (a) lost and (b) broken in the last 12 months. [47671]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information requested is as follows:

(a) Items of departmental property worth over £100 reported as lost from 1 January 2005 to 31 December 2005 are as follows:

Asset description	CCNBV (£)
NEC TFT Monitor	118.52
Dell Latitude C600 Laptop	367.61
NEC Multisync Monitor LCD1550X	454.91
Dell Latitude C600 Laptop	460.67

NEC Powerpoint Projector	909.51
NEC Powermate Desktop PC	446.70
Compaq EVO N600C PC	655.27

(b) The Department does not hold details of property that has been broken.

Departmental Expenditure

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the annual expenditure on vehicles by (a) his Department and (b) each (i) non-departmental public body, (ii) executive agency and (iii) other public body for which he is responsible in (A) Scotland, (B) Wales, (C) each of the English regions and (D) Northern Ireland was in each of the last three financial years; and what the planned expenditure is for 2005–06. [39988]

Mr. Plaskitt: The figures provided are for the department, all its agencies and non-departmental public bodies and cover vehicle purchase costs and car hire and associated running costs. The department does not collect centrally information in the agency or geographic format requested and to provide it would incur disproportionate cost.

Departmental annual expenditure on vehicle purchase and car hire (£)

[1] Anticipated

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what expenditure on (a) buildings and (b) insurance of buildings and staff was by (i) his Department and (ii) each (A) non-departmental public body, (B) executive agency and (C) other public body for which his Department is responsible in (1) Scotland, (2) Wales, (3) each English region and (4) Northern Ireland in each of the last three financial years; and what the planned expenditure is for 2005–06 in each case. [40091]

Mrs. McGuire: A full response is not available from standard information systems in the format requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. A partial response has therefore been provided.

(i) (a) (b) —The Department's estate has been sold or transferred under a PFI partnership deal to Land Securities Trillium (LST) and in return for the payment of a unitary charge, LST is responsible for providing a full facilities management service across the estate. As payments are made for the service as a whole the Department could provide a breakdown for the facilities, agencies and regions requested only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Staff

Justine Greening: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his latest estimate is of the cost to be included in the departmental expenditure limits for involuntary and voluntary staff exit schemes in (a) 2005–06, (b) 2006–07 and (c) 2007–08; and if he will make a statement. [32430]

Mrs. McGuire [holding answer 28 November 2006]: The latest estimate of the cost to be included in the departmental expenditure limit on voluntary and voluntary exits is in the following table.

	£ million
2005–06	213
2006–07	85
2007–08	205

Kate Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans his Department has to change the London allowance of its staff; and if he will make a statement. [50010]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department for Work and Pensions no longer has separate "London allowances" for its staff. Instead the Department has four pay zones which all attract different rates of basic pay: inner London; outer London; specified location pay zones, which are a number of offices in the South East which have experienced recruitment difficulties in the past; and national, which covers the rest of the country. The difference between pay rates in the national zone and inner London differs for each pay scale, but is generally about £3,500.

The pay scales are fixed until July 2007 as part of a three year pay deal agreed with the unions in 2004. The negotiations with the unions about the detail of pay 2007 will cover the full range of pay arrangements, including the approach to geographic pay.

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many staff in his Department are paid on a performance-related basis. [50481]

Mrs. McGuire: All employees below senior civil service level are eligible for bonuses, depending on their level of performance. For members of the senior civil service both their bonuses and their base pay increases are dependent on performance.

Disability Symbol

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the criteria are for use by an organisation of the two tick disability symbol; under what circumstances organisations lose the right to use the symbol; and how many organisations have lost the right to use the symbol in each of the last five years. [44512]

Mrs. McGuire: The Disability Symbol does not apply in Belfast North as the scheme does not operate in Northern Ireland. However, in the rest of the UK, organisations applying for symbol status must agree to meet commitments, which cover guaranteeing an interview for disabled people who meet the minimum requirements for the job, consultation with disabled employees on developing and using their abilities, retention, disability awareness and review.

Front-line Staff

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what definition he uses of front-line staff as referred to in the introduction to the 2005 departmental report. [45239]

Mrs. McGuire: The front-line staff referred to in the introduction to the 2005 departmental report are defined as those staff that have regular, direct contact with customers. The definition is included in the Department's Efficiency Technical Note, which is published on the Department's website.

Full-time Carers (Financial Support)

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what financial support the Government have made available to full-time carers since 1997. [45882]

Mrs. McGuire: The Government's national carers strategy, which we developed with carers and the organisations that represent them and published in 1999, has achieved much in improving the financial support for carers, including older carers, through carer's allowance and other benefits, and through introduction of the carers grant to support local authorities in providing breaks and services for carers. Carers have access to the full range of social security benefits depending on their individual circumstances.

We have extended access to carer's allowance to carers aged 65 and over through abolition of the age limit which precluded them from claiming the benefit; extended entitlement to carer's allowance for up to eight weeks after the death of the person being cared for; linked the amount, net of allowable expenses, that a carer's allowance recipient can earn from paid employment to the level of the annually increased national insurance lower earnings limit; and increased in April 2001 the carer premium in income support and other income-related benefits by an extra £10 a week on top of the normal uprating.

Since 1997, the number of carers receiving carer's allowance has increased by 21 percent. to over 437,000, with a further 287,000 entitled to but not in receipt of carer's allowance (because they receive another income maintenance benefit). Expenditure on the benefit has increased by 26 percent. in real terms (at 2005–06 prices) and is expected to be over £1.1 billion in 2005–06. Some 207,000 carers under 60 years of age also receive extra help through the carer premium in income support, and over 164,000 pension credit recipients (households) receive the additional amount for carers.

In addition, most carers entitled to carer's allowance are credited with national insurance contributions to protect their entitlement to state pension and around two million carers will benefit from the special arrangements we have made for them in the state second pension.

In the last local government finance settlement we confirmed our commitment to continue the carers grant beyond 2006. Until at least the end of the 2007–08 financial year, provision for the grant will be £185 million a year.

Gas Safety

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many deaths occurred due to carbon monoxide poisoning in each of the last 10 years; and how many of these deaths involved (a) liquid petroleum gas, (b) fire and explosions, (c) exposure to unburnt gas from piped gas and (d) exposure to carbon dioxide from piped gas. [50998]

Mrs. McGuire: An analysis of gas-related incidents reported to the Health and Safety Executive in the last 10 years shows the following breakdown of fatalities from exposure to carbon monoxide (CO), fire and explosions, and other exposure (these are primarily from exposure to unburnt gas from piped gas):

Number of gas-related fatalities by incident kind and year

	Exposure to CO		Fire and explosion
	Piped Gas	LPG	Piped Gas	LPG	Other exposure[1]	Total

2004–05[3]	16	2	2	—	2	22
Grand total	205	42	66	5	4	322

[1] Information on 'other exposures' was not collected prior to 2003–04.
[2] In the case of exposure to CO and fire & explosion, these are separated into those from piped gas and liquefied petroleum gas (LPG).
[3] The figures for 2004–05 are provisional.

Notes:
1. HSE does not collect information on exposure to carbon dioxide.
2. Information on LPG was not collected separately prior to 1996–97.
3. These figures may not correspond with official statistics because the analysis has been conducted using a different source.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many prosecutions there have been by the Health and Safety Executive of unregistered gas installers in each of the last 10 years; and how many of these were successful. [50999]

Mrs. McGuire: The number of prosecutions relating to unregistered gas installers is as follows:

	Reg 3(3)1		Reg 3(7)2		Total
	Total number of prosecution actions taken	Of which: Convictions	Total number of prosecution actions taken	Of which: Convictions	Total number of prosecution actions taken	Of which: Convictions

2004–05[3]	21	20	5	5	[4]26 (29)	[4]25 (28)

[1] Regulation 3(3) requires installers to be a member of a class of persons approved by HSE (i.e. CORGI registered).
[2] Regulation 3(7) prohibits anyone from falsely pretending to be a member of a class of persons (i.e. CORGI registered).
[3] The information for 2004–05 is provisional.
[4] In 2004–05, there were also three successful prosecutions under Reg 3 which have not been allocated to a sub-reg number. In summary 29 prosecutions were made, 28 of which were successful.

Note:

The question seeks information for each of the last 10 years. The table sets out data from 1996–97. Access to older data is not readily available and would require the restoration of archived databases.

Health and Safety Executive, Safety and Enforcement Statistics.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much funding has been spent by his Department on reducing rates of carbon monoxide poisoning in each of the past 10 years; and what steps the Government is taking (a) to promote gas safety awareness and (b) to prevent deaths by carbon monoxide poisoning. [51001]

Mrs. McGuire: The amount spent by the Health and Safety Executive (HSE) on campaigns to publicise the dangers of carbon monoxide (CO) poisoning in each of the past 10 years was as follows:

	Amount (£)
1995–96	[1]1,374,000
1996–97	101,000
1997–98	695,000
1998–99	82,000
1999–2000	150,000
2000–01	150,000
2001–02	250,000
2002–03	150,000
2003–04	112,000
2004–05	100,000

[1] Inc. TV and radio.

Additionally, during the period, £101,000 was spent maintaining the Gas Advice Helpline.

During 2006, HSE is undertaking a major review of the gas safety regime and this will be launched at a stakeholder forum on 20 February. The review is aimed at ensuring that the gas safety regime is based on the most sensible and proportionate approach to managing the risk. It will include research to examine the scale of the CO problem and awareness of the risks.

Other interdepartmental efforts to promote CO awareness have included:

HSE has worked with ODPM on their Home Fire Risk Check Initiative, where, in addition to smoke alarm installation, funding is also available for fire and rescue services to purchase and install a number of carbon monoxide detectors to offer additional protection.

DH produced a leaflet in autumn 2005 about domestic carbon monoxide poisoning that is endorsed by HSE, industry and the registered charity CO-Gas Safety. In his update newsletter of 11 January 2006, the Chief Medical Officer gave advice to all doctors in England on how to recognise CO poisoning.

GPs (Personal Capability Assessments)

Mr. Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what changes in the role of general practitioners he expects in relation to personal capability assessments for benefits. [48591]

Mrs. McGuire: General Practitioners do not play any direct role in the personal capability assessment; they do however provide medical information as part of the initial evidence gathering process.

We will be reviewing this process, including the forms that General Practitioners have to complete, to increase compliance with requests for medical information and the quality of the information provided. In addition the claimant's General Practitioner will receive a copy of the new capability report at the end of the assessment process identifying health interventions which would help the individual improve their functional capability so that they would be more likely to return to work.

Our Green Paper; "A new deal for welfare: Empowering people to work"; has proposals for measures to support this. These include proposals designed to help General Practitioners support patients with health conditions and disabilities to remain in or return quickly to work thus reducing the likelihood of them having to claim incapacity benefits.

Health and Safety Executive

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether the Health and Safety Executive was involved in (a) recommending and (b) approving planning permission for the development of (i) the Buncefield Oil Depot in Hemel Hempstead and (ii) residential or business properties near the depot; and if he will make a statement. [50954]

Mrs. McGuire: Since 1995 the Health and Safety Executive (HSE) has advised the local planning authority on 28 planning applications for developments near the Buncefield Depot. HSE advised against four proposals and advised that a further seven should be allowed only if additional conditions were met. So far as HSE is aware, the local planning authority followed HSE's advice in all 28 cases. No records are available concerning the original development of the Depot, which took place before HSE was established.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the role of the Health and Safety Executive is in (a) approving and (b) commenting on planning applications relating to (i) fuel depots and (ii) developments near fuel depots. [51078]

Mrs. McGuire: The Health and Safety Executive (HSE) is consulted under the Planning (Hazardous Substances) Regulations 1992 by a hazardous substances authority before the authority decides whether to issue a consent for an establishment, such as a fuel depot, to hold a quantity of prescribed hazardous substances above a specified threshold. HSE advises the authority on the hazards and risks presented by the proposed substances and supplies a consultation distance around the establishment. Before granting planning permission for specified subsequent developments within this consultation distance, the local planning authority is required to consult HSE under the Town and Country Planning (General Development Procedure) Order 1995.

HSE's role is to advise the hazardous substances authority or the local planning authority on whether or not to grant consent or planning permission. In all cases the decision is made by the relevant authority.

Incapacity Benefit

Sir Malcolm Rifkind: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people aged 25 years or under claimed incapacity benefit in each year for which figures are available since 2000. [30848]

Mrs. McGuire: Information on the number of claims made broken down by age is not available. The available information, caseloads for those under 25, is in the following table.

Incapacity benefit (IB) and severe disablement allowance (SDA) claimants aged 25 years or under; Great Britain.

May	IB/SDA	IB	SDA
2000	194,900	133,800	61,100

Mr. Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the number of incapacity benefit claimants in Gravesham constituency who might be able to work if provided with support. [43267]

Margaret Hodge: No formal assessment has been made.

Mr. Khan: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people in Tooting are in receipt of incapacity benefit, broken down by age, gender and ethnicity. [47747]

Mrs. McGuire: Information on the ethnicity of incapacity benefits claimants is not available. The available information is in the following table.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many recipients of incapacity benefit in Tamworth had their benefit reduced in each of the last five years, broken down by reason; and if he will make a statement; [48647]

(2) how many people living in Tamworth constituency claimed incapacity benefit in each year since 1997; and what proportion of the working age population in the constituency this represents in each year. [48648]

Mrs. McGuire: The only reason for a claimant's incapacity benefit to be reduced is the receipt of an occupational pension in excess of £85.00 a week. The number of cases so affected in Tamworth is too small to be able to provide a precise figure.

Information on the number of incapacity benefit and severe disablement allowance claimants in the Tamworth parliamentary constituency is in the following table. Working-age population figures are not available for parliamentary constituencies, so the information about proportions cannot be estimated.

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many new (a) applicants and (b) recipients there were of incapacity benefits in each of the last five years. [51765]

Mrs. McGuire: The information is not available in the format requested. The available information on the number of claims processed each year is in the table.

Learning Disabled (Employment)

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what proportion of people with a learning disability are in paid employment; and if he will make a statement. [43068]

Mrs. McGuire: The spring 2005 release of the Labour Force Survey shows that proportion of people with a learning difficulty in paid employment was 17.2 per cent.

The Labour Force Survey is unable to differentiate between people with a learning difficulty and people with a learning disability, and groups them together within the above category. Officials are currently examining the feasibility of future releases having separate categories.

It should also be noted that the above employment rate has been calculated using 'main health condition', and thus will not include people who's learning difficulty may be their second or subsequent health condition. The figure should be used as a guide rather than as fact.

Ministerial Travel

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions on how many occasions since 7 July he has used the London underground in connection with his official duties. [35028]

Mrs. McGuire: The Secretary of State has used the London underground once in connection with his official duties since his appointment as Secretary of State for Work and Pensions on 2 November 2005.

Ministers use public transport wherever possible and practical to complete their journey and all ministerial travel on official business is undertaken in accordance with the rules set out in travel by Ministers.

Pension Credit (Denton and Reddish)

Andrew Gwynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people in Denton and Reddish constituency receive the pension credit. [51140]

Mr. Timms: The number of people in receipt of pension credit in the Denton and Reddish constituency as at November 2005 is 5,900 individuals (5,000 households).

Notes:
1. Figures are rounded to the nearest hundred.
2. Caseload figures are taken from the GMS scan at 25 November 2005, rated up to give end-month estimates.
3. Pension credit (PC) replaced minimum income guarantee (MIG) on 6 October 2003. Existing MIG recipients were automatically converted onto pension credit on that date (assuming they still met the eligibility criteria).
4. Household recipients are those people who claim PC either on behalf of themselves only or on behalf of a household. This number is equal to the number of households in receipt of PC. The number of individual beneficiaries is the claimants plus their partners.
5. Parliamentary constituencies are assigned by matching postcodes against the relevant postcode directory.
6. These figures are early estimates. Operational processing times mean that a number of claim commencements and terminations are not reflected in the figures. The final figures incorporated within the Work and Pensions Longitudinal Study (WPLS) will take account of such cases.

Pensions (Direct Payment)

Mark Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether it is his policy to stop an individual's pension payments if he or she refuses to receive pension payments by the direct payment method. [50257]

Mr. Plaskitt: It is not the Departments policy to stop an individual's pension payments if he or she refuses to receive pension payments by the direct payment method.

Direct payment into an account is the safest, most reliable way to receive payment and in most cases provides the greatest range of access to cash and other financial services. Customers who do not provide account details are paid by cheque. However, we do not believe that cheques are appropriate for the vast majority of our customers.

Personal Capability Assessments

Mr. Hunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his Department's estimate is of the average cost of undertaking a medical examination for the personal capability assessment. [49801]

Mrs. McGuire: This information is confidential and cannot be disclosed as to do so may prejudice the commercial interests of the Department and/or its suppliers.

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many and what percentage of statutory sick pay claimants (a) received personal capability assessments (PCAs) in each year since 1997 and (b) he expects to receive PCAs in each year to 2008. [51976]

Mrs. McGuire: The personal capability assessment does not apply to statutory sick pay because, in that instance, incapacity for work is judged in relation to the job that the person has been doing under their contract of employment.

Post Office Card Accounts

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the timetable is for migrating Post Office card account customers to other forms of bank accounts. [48732]

Mr. Plaskitt: Government funding for the Post Office card account will continue until March 2010 as always planned.

We are starting some small scale pilots shortly to test various approaches to moving people from having their benefit or pension paid into a Post Office card account to payments into a bank account. Our emphasis will be on those bank accounts which can be used at post office branches. The pilots will help us see how customers react, including how many people continue to use the Post Office.

The pilots will run for about three weeks. We will then evaluate the results and discuss the findings with the Post Office. We will aim to develop a joint strategy with the Post Office to move customers from the Post Office card account. Our priority will be to ensure that this is a straightforward process for the customers themselves. Our timetable and strategy will be informed by the results of the pilots. There is no reason why the viability of post offices should be threatened if customers continue to draw cash at the Post Office after moving on from the Post Office card account.

Mr. Alan Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on the three pilot schemes his Department plans to operate during February to test the approaches for moving recipients of pensions and benefits away from Post Office card accounts. [49232]

Mr. Plaskitt [holding answer 6 February 2006]: Government funding for the Post Office card account will end in March 2010 as always planned. All existing Post Office card account customers will still be able to use the Post Office to collect their benefit or pension if they wish by using a bank account there—25 different bank accounts can be accessed at Post Office branches now, and we hope there could be more in the future.

We are starting some small-scale pilots shortly to test various approaches to moving people from having their benefit or pension paid into a Post Office card account to payments into a bank account. Our emphasis will be on those bank accounts which can be used at Post Office branches, to help the Post Office retain as much business as possible. The pilots will help us see how customers react, including how many people continue to use the Post Office.

The pilots will run for about three weeks. We will then evaluate the results and discuss the findings with the Post Office. We will aim to develop a joint strategy with the Post Office to move customers from the Post Office card account. Our priorities will be to ensure that this is a straightforward process for the customers themselves and to help the Post Office retain as much business as possible. The pilots will be important in identifying the best way to do this.

I understand the Post Office is developing new banking and savings products which will be suitable for some existing Post Office card account customers. Our pilots will also help the Post Office design these products to ensure they meet customers' needs. We would like every DWP customer who currently has a Post Office card account to do their banking at the Post Office if that is what they want.

As the National President of the National Federation of SubPostmasters has recognised, although the Post Office card account itself has a limited life, there are opportunities to convert customers to other Post Office services.

That is why it is important that the Government and Post Office should work closely together to ensure customers are fully aware of developments and continue to have a range of choices in how they access their money. Our pilots will ensure that our future payments strategy between now and 2010 reflects the needs of our customers and helps the Post Office develop its proposed new banking and savings products.

Post Office Ltd

Mr. Paterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list the service contracts in place between his Department and Post Office Ltd. [48730]

Mr. Plaskitt: The service contracts in place between the Department for Work and Pensions and Post Office Ltd are:

1. The Post Office card account contract.

2. A contract to ensure that customers who are receiving payment by cheque can continue to receive payments in the event of disruption to normal delivery services.

Public Service Agreement Data

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether the data to measure 2004 public service agreement target No. 2 are published. [29200]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department for Work and Pensions 2004 public service agreement target No. 2 is a joint target with the Department for Education and Skills. The target appears as target No. 1 in the Department for Education and Skills public service agreement.

I refer the hon. Member to the answer provided on 10 January 2006, Official Report, column 517W, by my right hon. Friend the Minister for Children and Families (Beverley Hughes).

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether the data required to measure 2004 public service agreement target No. 3 are from consistent data sources. [29201]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department for Work and Pensions 2004 public service agreement target No. 3 is a joint target with the Department for Education and Skills. The target appears as target No. 2 in the Department for Education and Skills public service agreement.

I refer the hon. Member to the answer provided on 9 January 2006, Official Report, column 426W, by my right hon. Friend the Minister for Children and Families (Beverley Hughes).

Social Security Benefits

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what (a) identifiable administration costs and (b) Scotland's share of non-identifiable administration costs associated with the delivery of social security benefits in Scotland were in 2004–05; and what the (i) identifiable and (ii) non-identifiable costs were per benefit recipient of administration. [46144]

Mr. Plaskitt: The administration budgets regime overseen by Treasury does not monitor country or regional administration costs separately. In addition administration costs are only reported at a strategic objective level.

Non-identifiable expenditure is deemed to be incurred on behalf of the UK as a whole.

The Public Expenditure Statistical Analysis published annually by Treasury contains information on country and regional analysis of departmental expenditure.

Statutory Instruments

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many statutory instruments introduced by his Department were (a) withdrawn, (b) amended by a further statutory instrument and (c) reprinted because of defective drafting in each session since 1997; and what steps he (i) is taking and (ii) plans to take to prevent further such instances. [33656]

Mrs. McGuire: The information is not available in the format requested. The Department for Work and Pensions was formed in June 2001 from the Department of Social Security and parts of the former Department for Education and Employment including the Employment Service. The information in this response relates to the DWP and the DSS. Since 1997, four draft statutory instruments have been withdrawn and 23 instruments issued free of charge because of an error or defect in an earlier instrument.

The Department lays in the order of 90 statutory instruments a year. We have a range of measures in place to provide expert advice and training to lawyers and officials involved in the process and aim to ensure that lessons are learned.

Vandalism

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list the acts of vandalism which have been perpetrated (a) inside and (b) on the outside of his Department's buildings in the last 12 months. [49513]

Mrs. McGuire: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Written Answers to Questions

Thursday 16 February 2006

CABINET OFFICE

Better Regulation

Mr. Bone: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on progress on delivering the Government's better regulation agenda. [51524]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The Government remain on track to deliver the radical programme of regulatory reform set out in the March 2005 Budget and the Better Regulation Action Plan published in May 2005.

The Legislative and Regulatory Reform Bill will make it quicker and easier to reform out-dated, unnecessary or over-complicated legislation to bring about a risk-based approach to regulation.

Crown Copyright

Peter Law: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what restrictions are placed on the use made of materials released by Government Departments under Crown copyright. [52422]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The re-use of Crown copyright material is generally encouraged. The main restrictions on re-use include not using Crown copyright for the principal purpose of advertising or promoting a particular product or service; not presenting products as if they were issued on behalf of government; and not to present information in a way that could mislead the public.

Departmental Information

Mr. Gale: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how much was spent on the Department's public relations and information services in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [48965]

Mr. Jim Murphy: Cabinet Office expenditure on public relations and information services in the last five years is shown in the table

	Amount (£)
2000–01	1,963,878
2001–02	2,192,538
2002–03	2,164,812
2003–04	2,019,075
2004–05	2,751,622

These figures comprise:

the costs for running press office services for years 2000–01 to 2004–05; and the costs for web services, employing PR agencies and for setting up phone lines as part of advertising campaigns for the year 2004–05. The Cabinet Office does not hold central records for this activity before 1 April 2004, and to provide that information would result in disproportionate costs.

Legislative and Regulatory Reform Bill

Mr. Harper: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster whether the powers proposed to be given to Ministers under the Legislative and Regulatory Reform Bill will enable the alteration of the rights of (a) freeminers and (b) commoners in the Forest of Dean. [50579]

Mr. Jim Murphy: The Legislative and Regulatory Reform Bill will enable the reform of legislation—including both public general Acts and local Acts—by order. It will also enable reform of the common law by order but only where this is for the purpose of implementing a recommendation of one of the UK Law Commissions. The power to make such orders is subject to a number of conditions, including that the provision made by the order does not remove any necessary protection and does not prevent any person from continuing to exercise any right or freedom he might reasonably expect to continue exercising. Orders are also subject to procedural safeguards including public consultation and scrutiny and veto by parliamentary committees. The Government currently have no plans to reform the legislation which may affect the right of freemining, or to reform any rights of common which might exist in the Forest of Dean.

Trident

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will commission a report from the Prime Minister's Strategy Unit on the Trident nuclear deterrent; and if he will make a statement. [48033]

Mr. Jim Murphy: There are no plans for the Strategy Unit to undertake any work on the Trident nuclear deterrent.

CONSTITUTIONAL AFFAIRS

Commonhold Tenures

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs how many (a) households and (b) developments have adopted commonhold tenures since the introduction of commonhold. [46948]

Ms Harman: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for North East Hertfordshire (Mr. Heald) on 13 February 2006, Official Report, column 1590W.

Council Tax Valuations

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Meriden of 24 January 2006, Official Report, column 1943W, on council tax valuations, if she will list the property attribute that the Land Registry provides to the Valuation Office Agency. [50952]

Bridget Prentice: HM Land Registry provided property data to the Valuation Office Agency during 2005 for the reasons given in my answer to the hon. Member for Meriden on 24 January 2006. The data items supplied were as follows:

title number of property or land

the tenure (freehold or leasehold)

the price paid (where available)

the name of the registered proprietor(s)

lease details (deed date, term, rent)

property address, including town name property description (detached, flat etc)

local authority name.

Land Registry does not currently provide property data to the Valuation Office Agency.

Freedom of Information

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what recent discussions she has had with the (a) Information Commissioner's Office and (b) others on the 100 year closure rule and the Freedom of Information Act 2000; and if she will make a statement. [51124]

Ms Harman: Ministers and officials in my Department meet regularly with the Information Commissioner's Office. These meetings cover a range of issues including the operation of the Freedom of Information Act. There have been no recent discussions specifically relating to the 100 year closure period.

Andrew Gwynne: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will take steps to ensure that the minutes of the board meetings of external organisations operating public services on behalf of local authorities are made available for public scrutiny. [51135]

Ms Harman: Under section 5 of the Freedom of Information Act 2000 (the FoI Act), external organisations operating public services on behalf of local authorities can be brought within the FoI Act. This would give the public a right to request the board meeting minutes where they related to the provision of the public services.

Information relating to the provision of public services by local authority contractors is already available for public scrutiny. For example, the terms of the contract and performance of the contractor are open to inspection and inquiry by those authorities' overview and scrutiny committees. Meetings of, and documents considered by, a local authority committee are open to public access by virtue of provisions of the Local Government Act 1972. All information held by a local authority, including that provided by a contractor, is subject to the provisions of the FoI Act.

No organisations have yet been brought within the FoI Act using section 5 of the FoI Act. We will assess whether the current levels of accountability enable sufficient public scrutiny of local authority contractors before considering whether a legislative approach is appropriate.

Bob Spink: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what assessment she has made of the implications of the Freedom of Information Act 2000 for the release of the (a) 1911 and (b) 1921 census data; and if she will make a statement. [51732]

Ms Harman: The implementation of the Freedom of Information Act has not altered government policy to make the decennial census returns publicly available after a period of 100 years. In line with this policy, the National Archives is developing plans to make the 1911 census available online to the widest possible audience in 2012. The 1921 census remains in the custody of the Office for National Statistics.

Bob Spink: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs what total sum has been received by her Department for the provision of information under the Freedom of Information Act 2000 in its first year of operation. [48474]

Ms Harman: None. My Department has not charged for information released under the Freedom of Information Act.

In-house Legal Services

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs which proposals in the Compensation Bill will apply to in-house legal services provided by trades unions. [48631]

Bridget Prentice: Part 2 of the Compensation Bill provides the legislative base for introducing statutory regulation of claims management services. The primary aim is to regulate the activities of commercial claims management companies in certain sectors, to tackle bad practices and improve consumer safeguards. Where trades unions provide claims management services within a regulated sector, for example personal injury, they would be subject to regulation unless explicitly exempted—achieved by secondary legislation. The Government have indicated the intention to exempt trade unions, subject to the views of both Houses during the Bill's passage. We will take full account of concerns and other comments made in coming to a final decision on this issue.

Justice for All

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs if she will make a statement on progress towards meeting the target set out in the Justice for All White Paper 2002 to establish a secure portal to enable victims to track their cases online by 31 December 2005; when she expects such a portal to be available in every criminal justice area; and what assessment she has made of the reasons for the delay in meeting the target. [47532]

Mr. Charles Clarke: I have been asked to reply.

Following the concerns expressed by organisations representing victims and witnesses, and after victims and witnesses individually expressed a preference for dealing with trained intermediaries, it was considered inappropriate to deliver a secure internet service to enable victims to track their own case online, as defined in the Justice for All White Paper 2002. Instead, with Ministerial approval, an alternative solution was implemented. Following a successful pilot exercise, the "No Witness No Justice" initiative was set up to provide Witness Care Units across England and Wales staffed by trained intermediaries, who understand the needs of victims and witnesses and are more responsive to their individual requirements.

To support these Witness Care Units a new witness care management tool, called the Witness Management System, has been created. This provides trained Witness Care Unit officers with access to existing case data stored on the Crown Prosecution Service Case Management System, as well as the ability to search the system by witnesses and to add/amend case details relating to victims and witnesses. These officers can, therefore, provide both victims and witnesses with key information, not only about the progress of their case but also about how the CJS works and what the next steps are likely to be.

The Witness Management System in use in 100 out of the 170 Witness Care Units in England and Wales and is already playing a key role in providing first class care for victims and witnesses. The roll-out to all Witness Care Units will be completed during the spring of 2006.

Land Registry

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Minister of State, Department for Constitutional Affairs whether the Land Registry records whether a property purchaser is a first time buyer. [50884]

Bridget Prentice: Land Registry does not record this information.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

British Library

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much the British Library spent on purchasing (a) books, (b) stamps and (c) other items for collections in each of the last 10 years. [52313]

Mr. Lammy: The British Library's expenditure on purchasing items for its collections over the last ten years was as follows:

Expenditure[1]

£ million

	1997–98	1998–99	1999–2000	2000–01	2001–02

[2] Forecast.

Notes:
1. Other collection items" include manuscripts, music scores, maps, newspapers, patents, sound recordings, theses and print and drawings.
2. Figures include both revenue and capital expenditure on acquisitions. Acquisitions expenditure arising from donations for purchase of major items is excluded due to its distorting effect on the figures.
3. In 1998–99 budgetary pressures meant the library had to undertake a large programme of journal cancellations and stop buying books that were regarded of low-use or lesser research significance.
4. In 1999–2000 the library was able to allocate more resources to acquisitions due to increased funding.
5. Expenditure on stamps was zero because the library acquires philatelic material by donation, bequest, transfer from other organisations or by loan.
6. A breakdown of expenditure in 1996–97 has not been provided because the information is only held in paper records which, if retrieved, would be unlikely to give the details requested. The total acquisitions expenditure for 1996–97 (excepting donations, as explained in note 2) is £13.7 million.

British Museum

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much has been spent on acquisitions at the British Museum in each of the last five years. [52451]

Mr. Lammy: The British Museum has spent the following amounts on acquisitions in the last five years.

	£ million
2000–01	9.275
2001–02	17.847
2002–03	2.238
2003–04	6.578
2004–05	1.163

This includes items purchased using the museum's funds, items given in lieu of inheritance tax, items purchased with the help of donations and items donated to the museum.

Burma

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what advice her Department has given to the Heritage Lottery Fund regarding sourcing timber from Burma. [52219]

Mr. Lammy: My Department has not issued the Heritage Lottery Fund (HLF) with advice regarding the sourcing of timber from Burma, but has encouraged it to develop a policy on timber procurement with the assistance of the Central Point of Expertise on Timber. This is set out in guidance published by the HLF in January 2005.

Creative Partnerships Scheme

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what proportion of schools in England have received funding for arts education under her Department's Creative Partnership scheme in each year since the scheme began. [52380]

Mr. Lammy: Creative Partnerships does not provide direct funding for arts education in schools. Creative Partnerships works with schools to provide children with the opportunity to explore their creativity, working with creative organisations and individuals. The proportion of schools that have benefited from Creative Partnerships up to 2004–05 is set out in the table:

		Proportion of schools[1] (%)
2002–03	1st Phase roll out—16 areas	1
2003–04		2
2004–05	2nd Phase roll out—9 further areas	3

[1] LEA maintained and non-maintained specialist schools.

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the cost of administering the Creative Partnerships scheme has been in each year since the scheme began. [52381]

Mr. Lammy: Creative Partnerships was established in 2002 in 16 areas and was expanded in a phased approach working in a total of 36 areas by September 2005.

The administration costs of Creative Partnerships are set out in the table:

	Costs including National Office (£ million)
2001–02	0.24
2002–03	2
2003–04	4.52
2004/-05	6.77

Mr. Swire: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many people are working on the Creative Partnerships scheme. [52382]

Mr. Lammy: The number of staff currently employed to work directly on Creative Partnerships is 149.

Gambling Addiction

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps her Department is taking to increase awareness of the dangers of gambling addiction in (a) Romford, (b) Havering and (c) England. [52408]

Mr. Caborn: My Department is working closely with the Gambling Commission, the Responsibility in Gambling Trust, the Department of Health and others to address problem gambling through research, education and treatment.

The Gambling Act 2005 places a duty on gambling operators to behave in a socially responsible manner. 'Social responsibility' will be an explicit licence condition, and operators will be expected to contribute to work on the prevention, identification and treatment of problem gambling through their own policies and practices and through their support for other bodies working on research, education and treatment.

We plan to bring the Act fully into force with effect from September 2007.

International Sporting Events

Hugh Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many people from (a) her Department, (b) UK Sport, (c) Sport England and (d) the English Institute of Sport (i) have attended and (ii) are planning to attend the Turin Winter Olympics for (A) all and (B) part of the Games. [52628]

Mr. Caborn: The information requested is set out in the tables.

Libraries

Mr. Mark Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the overall level of library books stocked in England was at 1 January in each of the past 10 years. [52124]

Mr. Lammy: The Public Library Statistics, published by the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy for the past 10 financial years shows the following level of public library book stock held over the last 10 years:

	Public Library Book Stock (England)
1995–96	105,384,000
1996–97	103,305,000
1997–98	99,576,000
1998–99	98,101,000
1999–2000	96,644,000
2000–01	94,372,000
2001–02	92,434,000
2002–03	90,637,000
2003–04	87,091,000
2004–05	84,546,000

Mr. Mark Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how many library books have been purchased in England in each of the past 10 years. [52125]

Mr. Lammy: The Public Library Statistics, published by the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy for the past 10 financial years shows the following level of public library book acquisitions in England over the last 10 years:

	Public Library Books Purchased (England)
1995–96	9,527,757
1996–97	8,814,444
1997–98	8,503,131
1998–99	8,965,849
1999–2000	8,936,896
2000–01	9,184,597
2001–02	9,193,571
2002–03	9,943,280
2003–04	9,943,384
2004–05	9,931,344

The figures show that public libraries are acquiring more books than they were 10 years ago with, as more factual and reference material becomes available on the internet, a bias towards more fiction works. There was a significant increase in acquisitions from 2002–03 onwards coinciding with the introduction of the public library standards in England.

Mr. Mark Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what steps she is taking to assist local authorities in maintaining library assets. [52126]

Mr. Lammy: Library assets are part of an authority's estate in the same way as any other council service. DCMS has no special funding available for maintaining such assets.

Nevertheless, in recent years, around £130 million of Government PFI credits have been allocated to projects that are wholly or partly public library based. These will help to create assets of real community value.

I also welcome the Big Lottery Fund's £80 million public library strand of its new community learning programme that will create new and improved libraries for local people to enjoy and to become involved with.

Mr. Mark Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what recent guidance her Department has issued to local authorities on the management and running of local libraries. [52127]

Mr. Lammy: Framework for the Future, published by DCMS in February 2003, was the first ever national public library strategy document. It aimed to encourage public libraries geared to the needs of 21st century users.

In September 2003, the Museums Libraries and Archives Council (MLA) published a three-year action plan intended to address some of the issues identified in the "Framework" document. MLA issues detailed guidance material on public library matters as and when it thinks it appropriate.

Mr. Mark Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what targets her Department set for local authorities for the management of local libraries in 2005–06. [52128]

Mr. Lammy: In 2005–06 the 149 public library authorities are being asked to report on their conformity with, or on their progress to meet, the 10 Public Library Service Standards. Coinciding with the introduction of the standards, we have seen significant improvements in core library provision particularly in the areas of opening hours, material acquisitions and ICT provision.

The standards form part of the Comprehensive Performance Assessment's Culture Block along with four additional library indicators on the number of active borrowers; resident satisfaction with the library service; stock level/stock-turn, and cost per visit.

In addition, for the first time in 2005–06, those authorities are being asked to report on their position against 16 indicators which make up the Public Library Impact Measures. This baseline information will be used to set targets for 2006–07 for those indicators that prove to be robust. The Impact Measures help to highlight libraries' contribution to wider community agendas as reflected in the shared priorities of central and local government.

Mr. Mark Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport whether her Department has issued best value targets to local authorities on the management of local libraries. [52129]

Mr. Lammy: The Public Library Service Standards have been adopted as part of the suite of Best Value Performance Indicators. Authorities were asked to work towards a score of 18 or more points out of 20 to move into the "four" category.

Previously issued BVPIs relate to the numbers of library visits; satisfaction with finding or reserving a particular item or piece of information and, general satisfaction with a library service as part of an authority's overall cultural and recreational activities. The aim of these BVPIs is to encourage year on year performance improvement.

Mr. Mark Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what best value performance indicators her Department uses for local authorities with regard to local libraries. [52130]

Mr. Lammy: DCMS's primary assessment of the performance of the 149 library authorities in England is through the Public Library Service Standards. The standards have now been incorporated into a Best Value Performance Indicator within the national suite of BVPIs as well as becoming part of the libraries data feeding into the Comprehensive Performance Assessment Framework.

Lost Property (Royal Parks)

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what the (a) level and (b) source was of departmental income arising from unclaimed lost property in the Royal parks in the last period for which figures are available; and if she will make a statement. [52577]

Mr. Lammy: When the Royal parks constabulary policed the Royal parks, unclaimed lost property was auctioned off periodically and the income from sales went to the Royal parks. Income from lost property for 2003–04, the last year that the Royal parks constabulary policed the parks, amounted to £2,574. The income for 2003–04 came from two sources, Lloyds International Auction Galleries (£2,282) and cash found in the parks (£292).

The Metropolitan Police Service (MPS) took over policing the Royal parks in April 2004. Since then unclaimed lost property has been dealt with centrally and that which is saleable is eventually auctioned off, with the proceeds going to the Police Benevolent Fund.

Monuments and Statues

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much central Government funding has been used to establish new monuments and statues in (a) Romford, (b) Havering and (c) Greater London in each of the last seven years. [52477]

Mr. Lammy: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is not aware of any central Government funding used to establish new monuments and statues in (a) Romford and (b) Havering between 1999 and the present.

During the period from 1999 to the present, the following monuments and statues, all of which have been, or are planned to be erected in Greater London, have been funded either directly or indirectly by central Government:

DCMS contributed £611,502 towards the cost of the 11 September Memorial Gardens in Grosvenor Square, opened on 11 September 2003;

DCMS contributed £3,862,800 and The Royal Parks Agency £1,384,566 towards the cost of the Diana Princess of Wales Memorial Fountain, opened in July 2004;

Arts Council England contributed £80,000 towards the statue of Alison Lapper on the Fourth Plinth in Trafalgar Square in 2004–05;

The Women of World War II Memorial Fund secured a grant of £934,115 from the National Heritage Memorial Fund for the erection of the memorial, which was unveiled in 2005;

The Foreign and Commonwealth Office has committed £266,000 towards the cost of a memorial to the victims of the Bali bombings. £10,000 has been spent to date;

HM Treasury has allocated £2 million to finance the proposed statue of the Queen Mother statue, which will be funded by the proceeds of a £5 coin being issued by the Royal Mint in 2006 to commemorate the 80th birthday of Her Majesty The Queen;

HM Treasury announced on 13 February 2006 that they stand ready to play a part in funding a memorial to those who lost their lives in the 7 July attacks on London, but funding will be finalised following consultation with the bereaved families and decisions on the style and location of the memorial.

Furthermore, in March 2005 the Chancellor announced the Memorials Grants scheme, which returns to charities and faith groups the equivalent of the VAT incurred in erecting and maintaining memorial structures. The scheme has been operational since November and funding of £5 million p.a. is available until 2008. On 16 December 2005, £3,325.90 was paid towards the construction of a memorial to the Siege of Malta in Tower Place, Tower Hill, City of London. Currently, no payments have been made for structures in Romford or Havering under this scheme.

National Gallery

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport how much funding was provided by her Department to the National Gallery in each of the past seven years. [52460]

Mr. Lammy: Grant in Aid allocated by DCMS to the National Gallery over the past seven years was:

	£ million
1998–99	18.69
1999–2000	19.48
2000–01	19.21
2001–02	19.95
2002–03	20.45
2003–04	20.45
2004–05	21.23
2005–06	21.99

Funds are also available to DCMS sponsored museums through specific project funding streams. The National Gallery has received Strategic Commissioning funding to promote partnerships with regional museums as follows:

2003–04	300,000
2004–05	80,000
2005–06	160,000

In 2004–05 the National Gallery was also awarded £296,300 from the DCMS/Wolfson Foundation Museums and Galleries Improvement Fund.

Olympic Funding

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what public funding she expects will be needed to establish each sporting arena for the 2012 Olympics. [52401]

Mr. Caborn: The most up to date breakdown of the costs of the sporting arenas needed for the 2012 Olympic games and Paralympic games was published in table 6.6.2b of London 2012's candidate file which was submitted to the International Olympic Committee in November 2004. This is available on the website of the London Organising Committee for the Olympic games: www.london2012.com/en/news/publications/Candidatefile/.

Figures shown in the candidate file are given at 2004 prices. The funding package for the games allows for inflation in venue costs of 37.18 percent.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what public funds have been allocated to the British Olympic ski team in each of the last seven years. [52312]

Mr. Caborn: Since 1999, the Government and national lottery distributors have allocated a total of £2,743,502 to the British ski team, which includes snowboarding.

The funding has been allocated to individual athletes directly, and to Snowsport Scotland and Snowsport GB, the National Governing Bodies for skiing and snowboarding.

The precise allocation of Exchequer and lottery funding for the British ski team, through UK Sport and SportScotland, is set out in the two tables.

[1] From 2003–04 onwards, the total figure includes funding for a national coaching post. The amount given for this post was £27,247 in 2003–04, £40,000 in 2004–05 and £56,000 in 2005–06.

Sports Facilities (Havering)

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on the provision of sports facilities in Havering; and what improvements are planned over the next five years. [52265]

Mr. Caborn: Sport England's active places database shows there are 10 swimming facilities and 15 sports halls in Havering—this includes public, private and school facilities.

Since 1994, this Department and lottery distributing bodies have invested over £5.5 million in sports facilities in Havering.

We are unable to predict what investment will be given to Havering over the next five years but all funding requests for sports facilities will be given due consideration and assessed in line with the priorities outlined in the Regional Sports Board plan.

Swimming

Anne Snelgrove: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport what action she is taking to support the provision of public swimming baths in (a) Swindon and (b) England. [52287]

Mr. Caborn: Access to good quality sporting provision, including swimming pools, is an essential part of enabling people to lead healthier lives and to participate in sport. There are currently over 4,400 swimming facilities across England which are open to the public. Since 1997 Government and Lottery distributing bodies between them have invested over £3 billion in physical activity and sport, and in that time £249 million of Lottery investment has gone to swimming—the largest amount given to any sport. Sport England has a swimming strategy in place and is working with local authorities to help them implement it. I understand that Sport England are in discussion with Swindon Council about the needs assessment that the Council is undertaking which includes examining its swimming provision.

Tour de France

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport if she will make a statement on the benefits to the UK of staging the grand depart of the 2007 Tour de France. [52402]

Mr. Caborn: The Tour de France is the world's largest annual sporting event. Transport for London who have been leading this project on behalf of the Mayor of London assess that there will be a number of benefits to the UK as a result of London winning the right to host the 2007 grand depart. These include a range of sporting benefits, such as a nationwide increase in cycling participation, an improvement in the health of the nation to help to combat obesity and enhancing the UK's reputation as a host of major international sporting events.

It is also expected the tour will generate an immediate economic benefit of an estimated £70 million through increased visitor numbers over the three day period.

Union Flag

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport under what authority the Department issues rules for flying the Union Flag on Government buildings; why such displays are limited to 18 days a year; and if she will make a statement. [52304]

Mr. Lammy: The Department for Culture, Media and Sport is responsible for issuing the rules for hoisting the Union Flag on Government buildings. The rules are approved by the Queen on advice from the Department.

The Union Flag is flown on Government buildings to mark the Birthdays of members of the Royal Family undertaking official duties and specific national events including Remembrance Day, Europe Day, St. George's Day, Her Majesty's Accession and Wedding Day. The Union Flag is also flown on other occasions not listed in the rules, for example for State Visits, by special command from Her Majesty.

There are no plans at present to change this. However individuals and local authorities and other organisations can fly the Union Flag whenever they wish, subject to compliance with local planning requirements.

DEFENCE

Afghanistan

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) nurses, (b) doctors and (c) dentists will accompany the deployment to Afghanistan. [50359]

Mr. Ingram: The medical element of the deployment to Afghanistan has been structured to satisfy the operational requirement. On current plans it will include 70 nurses, 21 doctors and three dentists. These will be supported by a further 79 medical staff and 107 support personnel. This requirement will be kept under review.

UK forces will also have access to multinational medical facilities based in Afghanistan.

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had with the authorities in (a) Iran and (b) Pakistan on reducing the flow of (i) drugs, (ii) arms and (iii) unauthorised people from Pakistan to Afghanistan. [50360]

Dr. Howells: I have been asked to reply.

We have an ongoing dialogue with Iran and Pakistan on such issues. Our ambassador in Kabul most recently discussed these issues during a visit to Islamabad in February 2006. In May 2005 Foreign and Commonwealth Office officials met representatives of the Afghan and Iranian Ministries of Foreign Affairs in Kabul for trilateral consultations on counter-narcotics co-operation and regional economic co-operation. The Afghanistan/Pakistan/US Tripartite Commission regularly addresses a range of common security issues. Over 3.5 million refugees have returned to Afghanistan since 2001, the huge majority from Iran and Pakistan.

Aircraft Cannibalisation

Dr. Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer of 30 January 2006, Official Report, column 29W, on aircraft cannibalisation, how many (a) C-130 Hercules, (b) Tristars, (c) VC-10s and (d) C-17A Globemaster aircraft have been taken out of service as a consequence of cannibalisations in each of the last three years. [51789]

Mr. Ingram: Cannibalisation is a recognised method of the removal of serviceable part(s) from an aircraft which is already unserviceable or due to enter scheduled engineering servicing, during which time the cannibalised parts will not be required. Only in exceptional circumstances would a serviceable aircraft be cannibalised.

In 2005, there were five instances where serviceable C130J Mk 5 aircraft were cannibalised to satisfy an immediate spares requirement for a C130J Mk 4 (stretched) aircraft as these were more appropriate for the operational task required at the time. For the C130K there were no instances of cannibalisation of serviceable aircraft in 2005. Records for both C130 J and K aircraft are not held for 2003 and 2004. Although information is held on the number of cannibalisation occurrences for Tristars, VC-10s and C-17A Globemaster aircraft, it does not record whether the losing aircraft was serviceable, unserviceable or in scheduled maintenance.

Ammunition

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many rounds of ammunition were dumped because of quality issues in the last 12 months and from which (a) country of origin and (b) company such ordnance was supplied. [49175]

Mr. Ingram: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 25 January 2006, Official Report, column 2129W.

Disability (Armed Forces)

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps the Government are taking to ensure the housing needs of former members of the armed forces who are disabled are met; and if he will make a statement. [49146]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

Members of the armed forces who are disabled may apply for housing to any local authority, and may also seek accommodation from a Registered Social Landlord. Housing authorities are responsible for setting their own allocation policies and procedures. However, they must ensure that their allocation scheme is framed so as to give reasonable preference to certain categories of persons, including people who need to move on medical and welfare grounds. Legislation has recently been amended to make clear that "medical and welfare" includes grounds relating to a disability. In addition, some Registered Social Landlords specialise in housing people with disabilities; while others have been set up with the intention of housing ex-forces personnel.

Local authorities also provide a wide range of support services to help disabled people maintain independent lives in their own homes providing care services, aids, equipment and adaptations. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister contributes to the funding of these services through the payment of Supporting People programme grant to local authorities, which may be spent by the local authority on a range of housing related support services, and under the Disabled Facilities Grant scheme.

There is provision within the War Pensions Scheme to pay grants towards the cost of adapting the home of a severely disabled war pensioner where the need arises because of the pensioned disablement. This payment may be paid in addition to any local authority grant which might be made.

Service Leavers receive comprehensive briefings on housing and financial matters before returning to civilian life, including, if appropriate, advice from the Joint Service Housing Advice Office. In addition, the Veterans Agency provides a single point of contact within the MoD for veterans and their dependants seeking help and advice on a range of issues including housing.

Drug Seizures (Royal Navy)

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the major incidents of drug seizures by Royal Navy warships in each year since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [50576]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 15 February 2006]: Details of major drugs seizures carried out by the Royal Navy and the Royal Fleet Auxiliary since 1997 are outlined in the table:

Date		Drug seizures
April 1997	HMS York	4 tonnes cannabis
June 1997	HMS Edinburgh	3 tonnes cannabis
June 1998	HMS Monmouth	2 tonnes cannabis
1999	—
2000	—
September 2001	HMS Coventry	1 tonne cocaine
2002	—
May 2003	HMS Cumberland	3.6 tonnes cocaine
July 2003	HMS Iron Duke	1.3 tonnes cocaine
October 2003	HMS Manchester RFA Wave Knight	1.1 tonnes cocaine
November 2004	RFA Wave Ruler	1.8 tonnes cocaine
January 2005	RFA Wave Ruler	1.8 tonnes cocaine
January 2005	RFA Wave Ruler	1.7 tonnes cocaine
October 2005	HMS Cumberland	1.9 tonnes cocaine
October 2005	HMS Cumberland RFA Wave Knight	1.3 tonnes cocaine
February 2006	HMS Southampton RFA Grey Rover	3 tonnes cocaine

This list includes only seizures over 1 tonne in weight. It does not include seizures in the Caribbean before 2000, for which data is not available. It also does not include drugs jettisoned by traffickers as a result of Royal Navy intervention.

Halal Meat

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps he is taking to ensure that serving members of the (a) Army, (b) Navy and (c) Royal Air Force who are Muslim are offered halal meat. [52035]

Mr. Touhig: In accordance with the United Kingdom legislation and Government guidelines, HM forces cater for all personnel irrespective of gender, race, religious belief, medical requirements and committed lifestyle choices.

Halal meat is purchased from approved sources, as and when there is an identified need. Additionally, to ensure that serving Muslims are appropriately fed when on operations, the Ministry of Defence provides a halal variant of its Operational Ration Pack.

Merchant Fleet

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent assessment he has made of the number of merchant (a) ships and (b) seafarers available to provide strategic support at times of national emergency. [51299]

Mr. Ingram: Historically, the number of merchant ships, including militarily useful vessels, and seafarers is monitored by the Department for Transport. Currently, for movement by sea, strategic support is provided to the Ministry of Defence (MOD) through the Private Finance Initiative Strategic Sealift Service, which comprises up to six British flagged Roll-On/Roll-Off vessels, manned by British officers and crews.

Should, during a national emergency or on any other occasion, demand for sealift exceed the capacity of the Strategic Sealift Service, suitable merchant ships would be chartered from the commercial market to fulfil the requirement. Over the past five years experience has shown that there is sufficient merchant shipping available to meet the needs of the MOD.

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the (a) names and (b) flags of merchant shipping chartered or used by his Department in each year since 2000. [51300]

Mr. Ingram: The information requested has been placed in the Library of the House. The list mainly comprises dry cargo and Roll-On/Roll-Off vessels, however, information on specialist ships chartered during financial years (FY) 2004–05 and 2005–06 (to date) is included. Information on specialist ships chartered during earlier years is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Military Explosive

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence from what source tri amino trinitro benzene will be obtained following the planned closure of the Royal Ordnance Factory, Bridgwater. [51582]

Mr. Ingram: Decisions on sourcing tri amino trinitro benzene are principally a commercial matter for BAE Systems Land Systems.

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what sales of military explosive from the Royal Ordnance Factory, Bridgwater have been made to the United States in each of the last five years; and what representations have been made to his Department by the United States concerning the future of the factory. [51583]

Mr. Ingram: The sale of military explosives by BAE Systems Land Systems to the USA is a commercial matter for the company. No representations have been made by the United States Government to the MOD concerning the future of BAE Systems Land Systems' Bridgwater facility.

Residual Vapour Detectors

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which company manufactured the 4,000 sets of residual vapour detectors used in Operation Telic. [52436]

Mr. Ingram: Records are no longer held of which manufacturer originally supplied the 4,000 Residual Vapour Detector kits held in central stock for Operation TELIC. However, all 4,000 kits were refurbished by Richmond Packaging Limited under a contract awarded in February 2003.

RFA Argus

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer of 8 February 2006, Official Report, column 1240W on the Joint Casualty Treatment Ship, whether the possibility of not replacing RFA Argus has been ruled out. [51586]

Mr. Ingram: No decisions on the future provision of a deployed maritime medical capability will be made until the review of the Joint Casualty Treatment Ship programme has been completed, and the results considered in the Ministry of Defence's next planning round.

Royal Navy

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what average number of days was spent at sea by Royal Navy service personnel in (a) 2005, (b) 1995 and (c) 1985. [51412]

Mr. Touhig: This information is not held centrally in the format requested. I will write to the hon. Member with the information that is available and a copy of my letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Senior Officers

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) air commodores and (b) air marshals were on the active list in the RAF in each year since 1997; and what the total strength of the RAF was in each year. [50182]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 13 February 2006]: The numbers of Air Commodores and Air Marshals on the active list in the Royal Air Force each year since 1997 and the strength of the RAF in each year are shown in the following table.

	Air Commodores	Air Marshals	Trained strength	Untrained strength	Total strength
April 1997	90	50	54,200	2,670	56,870
April 1998	90	50	52,680	3,170	55,840
April 1999	80	40	51,760	3,450	55,210
April 2000	80	50	50,990	3,720	54,720
April 2001	90	50	49,850	3,850	53,700
April 2002	80	40	48,910	4,090	53,000
April 2003	80	50	48,540	4,700	53,240
April 2004	80	50	48,740	4,650	53,390
April 2005	80	40	48,850	3,020	51,870
December 2005	70	40	47,470	2,180	49,640

Notes:
1. Personnel on the active list of the RAF are those currently serving who have completed phase one training. Additionally, former Marshals of the RAF, Chiefs of Air Staff and Vice-Chiefs of Defence Staff who have retired are included on the active list. This accounts for between five and 10 over the period.
2. Air Marshals includes the ranks of Air Vice-Marshal, Air Marshal and Air Chief Marshal.
3. Regular Strengths exclude full-time reserve service and Mobilised Reservist.
4. All figures have been rounded to the nearest 10. Figures ending in 5 have been rounded to the nearest multiple of 20.

Shipbuilding

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what his estimate is of the number of ships to be built under the Military Afloat Reach and Sustainability programme; and if he will make a statement. [50578]

Mr. Ingram [holding answer 15 February 2006]: I refer the hon. Member to the Written Ministerial Statement I gave on 14 February 2006, Official Report, column 74WS. The Military Afloat Reach and Sustainability project is still in the early stages of its Assessment Phase and it is therefore too early to say how many ships will be built or what the final designs and specifications for these vessels might be. We will use the assessment phase to look into the potential options before any decisions are made at the main gate investment point.

Territorial Army

Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the Territorial Army (a) establishment and (b) strength is for (i) 2nd lieutenants, (ii) lieutenants, (iii) captains, (iv) majors and (v) lieutenant colonels. [50933]

Mr. Touhig: The strengths of the requested Territorial Army (TA) Officer ranks are shown in the following table. The TA establishment is not defined by individual rank.

Strength of TA Officers as at 1 January 2006

Rank	Total
2nd Lieutenants	590
Lieutenants	800
Captains	1,980
Majors	1,640
Lieutenant Colonels	350

Notes:
1. Figures include TA and Mobilised TA.
2. Figures exclude non-regular permanent staff (NRPS) and full-time reserve service (FTRS).
3. Figures are rounded to the nearest 10.

Trident

Dr. Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions his Department has had with counterparts in the United States on United Kingdom participation in the US Navy's life-extension plan for Trident missiles. [51584]

John Reid: I refer the hon. Member to the replies I gave to him on 21 November 2005, Official Report, column 1566W and to the hon. Member for Newport West (Paul Flynn) on 17 January 2006, Official Report, column 1197W.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Accessibility Planning Indicators

Sarah Teather: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what progress has been made in developing accessibility planning indicators since July 2004. [50196]

Yvette Cooper: Local planning authorities are required to prepare annual monitoring reports that include core output indicators, which are submitted to the Secretary of State by the end of December each year. Regional planning bodies assess these reports to enable them to prepare regional annual monitoring reports which are submitted to the Secretary of State annually on 28 February.

Local Development Framework Monitoring: A Good Practice guide was published in March 2005 and contains a number of core output indicators which local planning authorities are required to monitor. An update on the core indicators was published in October 2005.

Core output indicator 3b specifically requires authorities to monitor the accessibility of new residential development that is built within 30 minutes public transport time of a number of key services, (including GPs, hospitals, primary and secondary schools, areas of employment and major retail centres).

Advanced Corporation Tax Relief

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the (a) cost to and (b) effect on the local government pension scheme of the abolition of advanced corporation tax relief. [51086]

Mr. Woolas: Since 1998, each local government financial settlement has provided an additional indexed sum of £130 million per annum to mitigate the effect on their pension funds of the abolition of advanced corporation tax relief. This amount was determined with the full support of the local government association. Successive actuarial valuations for each local government pension scheme pension fund, in 2001 and 2004, will also have taken full account of this change.

Allotment Land

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what his Department's estimate is of (a) the land available for allotments in Greater London in each of the last five years and (b) the likely amount of such land in each London borough in 2006–07. [44575]

Yvette Cooper: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Antisocial Behaviour

Mr. Wills: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what steps he plans to take to tackle antisocial behaviour in social housing in Swindon. [50611]

Yvette Cooper: The Respect Action Plan, launched by the Prime Minister in Swindon last month, recognises the important role social landlords play in tackling antisocial behaviour. In delivering the plan we will work with landlords to build on their success in delivering preventative approaches, support provision and taking enforcement action. This will include engaging the sector in developing a new 'Respect Standard' for housing management.

We have provided landlords with a wide range of tools to tackle ASB and I know these have been used effectively in Swindon, where family support provision is also in place to help turn around the lives of challenging families. Much has been achieved by landlords and their partner agencies but we must sustain momentum and intensify this activity as a key factor in delivering sustainable communities.

Areas of Outstanding Natural Beauty

Tim Loughton: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister on how many planning decisions he has given a ruling in each of the last four years involving developments on areas of outstanding natural beauty; and if he will list them. [48071]

Yvette Cooper: My right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister has decided 27 planning cases in the last four years involving development on Areas of Outstanding Natural Beauty. These are tabled as follows.

Case name	Description of development	Decision	Date of decision

Arson

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many incidents of arson there were in (a) Peterborough and (b) Cambridgeshire in each year since January 1997. [52448]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The following table shows the number of fires which were started deliberately and attended by Cambridgeshire fire and rescue service since 1997. Separate data are only available centrally for Peterborough for 2002 and 2003.

	Number of deliberate fires
	Cambridgeshire[1]	Peterborough[2]
1997	890	—
1998	940	—
1999	1,188	—
2000	1,293	—
2001	1,199	—
2002	1,406	657
2003	1,387	588
2004	1,109	—

Asset Register

Anne Main: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the top 150 most valuable assets held on his asset register; and what their financial value is in each case. [49328]

Jim Fitzpatrick: A list of the 150 most valuable assets held on the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's Asset Register as at 31 December 2005 has been made available in the Library of the House.

Building Regulations

Dr. Whitehead: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when he will lay the statutory instrument to bring Part L of the building regulations into force. [50936]

Yvette Cooper: In the press release of 13 September 2005 I announced that changes to Part L of the building regulations were being introduced two years early in April 2006. The statutory instrument will be laid in sufficient time to allow this to happen.

Building Standards

Bob Russell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) if he will reassess the (a) Building Regulations and (b) Structural Engineering Requirements for proposed new buildings using design methods and materials similar to those in the building which collapsed in Katowice, Poland, on 28 January; and if he will make a statement; [47777]

(2) if he will require local authorities to reassess the structural strength of new buildings which have been erected in England using design methods and materials similar to those in the building which collapsed in Katowice, Poland, on 28 January; and if he will make a statement. [47778]

Yvette Cooper: The cause of the recent collapse of the Polish exhibition centre roof is not yet known, although early reports indicate that snow loading was probably a contributory factor. While the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister remains vigilant to any reported building collapses so as to ensure a low probability of such an incident occurring in the UK, adequate safeguards on achieving minimum requirements for stability and robustness are provided in the Building Regulations Approved Document Part A and the relevant British Standards codes of practice which they reference. Based on the current evidence there is no need to instigate any checks on buildings here in the UK arising from the Polish building collapse.

Business Rates

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what estimate he has made of the average business rates bill in England in 2005–06. [51080]

Mr. Woolas: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on the 13 February 2006, Official Report, column 1630W.

Cambridgeshire and Peterborough Fire Authority

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will provide additional funding to Cambridgeshire and Peterborough fire authority to take account of the additional service requirement resulting from Peterborough's increase in size. [49286]

Mr. Woolas: The local government finance settlements for 2006–07 and 2007–08 laid before the House on the 31 January 2006 include the use of population projections as the dominant data drivers of population in the settlements. The population projections used are Office for National Statistics (ONS) trend based projections based on the ONS mid-2003 population estimates. This will make the settlement more forward looking as the projections reflect demographic trends seen in an area.

These projections do not take into account events that have not yet occurred, such as population change as a result of proposed housing expansion, as these are affected by future policy changes or local decisions. As part of its response to the independent review of housing supply produced by Kate Barker, the Government have announced a cross-cutting review within the 2007 comprehensive spending review to ensure that appropriate infrastructure will be provided to support housing and population growth. The review will: determine the social, transport and environmental infrastructure implications of housing growth in different spatial forms and locations; establish a framework for sustainable and cost-effective patterns of growth, including be examining the use of targeted investment through the community infrastructure fund and growth areas funding to support the fastest growing areas; and ensure that departmental resources across government are targeted appropriately for providing the national, regional and local infrastructure necessary to support future housing and population growth.

Correspondence

Bob Spink: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what advice and guidance he has given to (a) local councils and (b) the Audit Commission on the way in which local councils should deal with hon. Members' correspondence on behalf of constituents regarding planning applications. [42217]

Yvette Cooper: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has not provided any advice in this area.

Council Housing

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will institute an inquiry into the conduct of Sefton council in relation to each of the two ballots of tenants on the transfer of council housing held by the council. [39421]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 9 January 2006]: Sefton council has not yet applied for consent to transfer its housing stock. When it does so the council will need to demonstrate to the Secretary of State that a majority of its tenants are not opposed to the transfer going ahead, including providing information about the two ballots.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what criteria he applies in considering the results of multiple ballots of the same tenants on a single large scale voluntary transfer of council housing; and how he intends to deal with those circumstances in Sefton in August and November. [39423]

Yvette Cooper: When a local authority applies for consent to transfer its housing stock it is for the authority to satisfy the Secretary of State on the range of criteria set out in section 16.2 of the "Housing Transfer Manual 2005"—a copy is available in the Library. The application for consent should be received by the office at least six weeks before the transfer is due to be completed.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether (a) his Department, (b) his housing action team and (c) the Regional Housing Board was consulted by Sefton council about a second tenants' ballot on the large scale voluntary transfer proposal. [39431]

Yvette Cooper: Sefton council informed the Office and the Community Housing Task Force of their decision to re-ballot tenants on their large scale voluntary transfer proposal. Sefton council did not inform the Regional Housing Board of their decision.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many local authorities have been authorised to build new council housing in the last five years; and how this new housing will be financed. [41148]

Yvette Cooper: Local authorities continue to have the powers to build houses and indeed are doing so under the housing private finance initiative. It has also proved possible for local authorities to use council tax revenue to finance specific housing projects.

Council Tax Benefit

Sarah Teather: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the (a) incentives and (b) disincentives to save arising from the fixing since 1999 of the savings threshold for ineligibility for (i) council tax benefit at £16,000 and (ii) reductions of council tax benefit at £3,000. [51563]

Mr. Plaskitt: I have been asked to reply.

No such assessments have been made. The treatment of capital in council tax benefit is kept under review to ensure that it strikes a sensible balance between providing targeted support and not penalising those who have saved.

The lower capital limit is £6,000 for pensioners, and will be raised to £6,000 for other people from April 2006. There is no upper capital limit in council tax benefit for people who receive the guarantee element of pension credit.

Departmental Staff

Kate Hoey: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans his Office has to change the London allowance of its staff; and if he will make a statement. [50006]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The office does not pay a London allowance to its staff. For staff below the senior civil service (SCS), London weighting was consolidated into salaries some years ago. The SCS does not distinguish between London and other pay.

Development (Brownfield Land)

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what percentage of new housing development in (a) each borough council in Hampshire, (b) Portsmouth and (c) Southampton has been on brownfield land in each year since 1997. [50573]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 13 February 2006]: The estimates available centrally are from Land Use Change Statistics, are shown in the following table. The percentages for individual local authorities tend to be highly variable from one year to another as they can be affected by the characteristics of just one or two large developments. The table also shows the averages over four years.

Domestic Violence

Sandra Gidley: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many refuge places for victims of domestic violence there were in England in each year since 1997; and how much central Government funding has been made available to such refuges in each year. [51348]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 13 February 2006]: It is not possible to provide information in the form requested.

At April 2003, there were around 5,800 units of support for women at risk of domestic violence. More recent data suggests that there were around 6,000 units of support at April 2005. These figures include both accommodation in refuges and other forms of provision including floating support services where victims are supported to remain in their own accommodation where appropriate.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister annually provides Supporting People funding to enable top-tier English local authorities to provide housing-related support. In doing so, however, ODPM does not specify or earmark amounts to be spent on either specific forms of provision or specific vulnerable groups. However, most recent data suggests that local authorities spent approximately £58 million from Supporting People funding on services for women at risk of domestic violence in 2004–05.

In April 2003 further measures were announced to support refuge provision through capital programmes over a three-year period. In 2003–04 a total of £18.8 million funding was provided for new refuge provision and refurbishment of existing refuge schemes. The Government have also committed a further £7.5 million nationally in 2004–05 and 2005–06 with an additional £5.8 million provided through the Housing Corporation. Priority is being given to projects arising from local authority housing and homelessness strategy reviews to meet gaps in service provision. 427 new units of accommodation will be provided.

East of England Regional Assembly

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the cost to public funds was of the East of England Regional Assembly in 2004–05. [51163]

Yvette Cooper: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister made a grant of £2,112,000 to the East of England Regional Assembly in 2004–05.

The grant supports the Assembly in the performance of its designated functions to scrutinise the work of East of England Regional Development Agency; fulfil its regional planning responsibilities; and for the development of its strategic regional role.

The Regional Assembly may have derived additional revenue from other sources including members' subscription.

Empty Homes

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the Government's policy is on the use of empty dwelling management orders in relation to seizing properties which are empty due to the death of the owner. [49687]

Yvette Cooper: Where a dwelling is unoccupied following the death of the owner, it will be excepted from the making of an interim empty dwelling management order for a period of six months following grant of representation. The dwelling will continue to be excepted after this period if the new owner plans to bring it back into occupation or put it on the market.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what estimate his Department has made of the cost of residential property tribunals to assist the imposition of empty dwelling management orders. [49822]

Yvette Cooper: An additional £1 million is being made available annually to the Residential Property Tribunal Service to cover its new jurisdictions under the Housing Act 2004. Currently the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister estimates that up to 15 per cent. of its new cases will comprise of considering applications from local housing authorities for approval to make interim Empty Dwelling Management Orders and dealing with related appeals.

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many empty homes there have been in (a) Peterborough constituency and (b) Peterborough city council area in each year since 1997. [50340]

Yvette Cooper: Information on empty homes in the parliamentary constituency of Peterborough is not available because the data are not collected below district level. For (b) , the number of vacant dwellings in Peterborough unitary authority from 1997 to 2004, is tabled as follows:

	Snapshot date	Vacant dwellings
1997	1 April	4,040
1998	1 April	3,990
1999	1 April	2,667
2000	1 April	2,659
2001	1 April	2,517
2002	1 November	2,080
2003	3 November	1,497
2004	1 November	1,809

Source:

The figures for 1997 to 2001 are based on a combination of the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's Housing Strategy Statistical Appendix (HSSA) return, and the Housing Corporation's Regulatory Statistical Return (RSR). For the years 2002 to 2004 the figures are based on the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's Council Tax Base 1 (CTB1) return.

These figures are for all vacant dwellings, including dwellings that have been empty for fewer than six months, some for less than one month. The Government are introducing new powers from April 2006 for local authorities to reduce the number of long-term empty homes in their area.

Energy Saving

Mr. Evans: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment his Department has made of the potential for energy-saving from well-installed double-glazing. [51039]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 13 February 2006]: Regulatory impact assessment completed by the former Department of the Environment, Transport and Regions (DETR) in October 2001 supported the introduction of better thermal standards for new and replacement windows in part L of the building regulations from April 2002. This regulatory impact assessment can be seen on the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's website.

English Partnerships (Peterborough)

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much has been raised by English Partnerships through the sale of assets in Peterborough in each of the last eight years. [49291]

Yvette Cooper: English Partnerships has received the following amounts through the sale of assets in Peterborough since 1997:

Financial year	Receipts (£million)
1997–98	3.4
1998–99	0.9
1999–2000	2
2000–01	10
2001–02	2.2
2002–03	3.7
2003–04	3.9
2004–05	10.3
2005–06[1]	1.1
Total	37.5

Fire Safety

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the timetable is for the review of Approved Document B—Fire Safety; and when he intends to bring forward his Department's final proposals. [45140]

Yvette Cooper: The public consultation on the proposed changes to Part B (Fire safety) of the Building Regulations and the accompanying guidance in Approved Document B ended on 18 November 2005. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is currently considering the responses and other supporting evidence received and will be consulting the Building Regulations Advisory Committee in due course. The ODPM aims to publish a revised version towards the end of this year which would come into force in April 2007.

Flag Poles

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the planning process is for (a) erecting flag poles and (b) placing non-national flags on an existing flag pole. [42656]

Yvette Cooper: Planning permission is required before a flag pole is erected. The exceptions are vertical flag poles flying a national flag, or flagpoles flying flags as advertisements under Class 7 of Schedule 3 of the Town and Country Planning (Control of Advertisements) Regulations 1992. The flying of all other flags requires the express consent of the local planning authority. Provided they have the necessary consent, no further planning permission is required for the flag pole.

Free Bus Travel

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what alternative methods were considered by his Department to distribute the sum of money allocated to cover the cost of the free bus travel policy announced in the Budget. [51464]

Mr. Woolas: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer, added £350 million to revenue Support grant for England in 2006–07 to cover the cost of the free bus travel policy announced as part of his Budget on 16 March. For the purposes of grant distribution, consideration was given to using the existing formula for the lower tier Environmental, Protective and Cultural Services (EPCS) relative needs formula and a number of variants of that. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister consulted on and have now adopted a variant of that formula that is reweighted to reflect factors that reflect support for the disabled and the needs of areas where take-up is likely to be highest.

Home Improvement Packs

Mr. Gauke: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the likely impact of home improvement packs on the number of properties which will be available for sale. [50906]

Yvette Cooper: The number of properties available for sale at any one time will depend on a range of factors, principally interest rates and the strength of the economy. Home Information Packs are not expected to have a significant impact in their own right, but we are in discussion with the industry as to how to ensure a smooth transition when they come into effect in June 2007.

Home Information Packs

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when he plans to meet the National Association of Estate Agents to discuss the introduction of home information packs. [44200]

Yvette Cooper: I will be meeting with the president of the National Association of Estate Agents (NAEA) on 27 February.

Mr. Walker: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how long the information contained in homebuyers information packs will remain valid before a new survey is required; and if he will make a statement. [51719]

Yvette Cooper: The home condition report in the home information pack should be not more than three months old when the home is first put on the market. There will be no requirement to update a report while the home is on the market. In the normal course, the condition of a property is unlikely to change rapidly unless there is an intervening event, such as fire or flood. Sellers and buyers may commission an updated report where they consider this necessary, and the industry is developing cost-effective solutions to facilitate this.

Home Inspections

Mr. Maples: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the compliance with the Human Rights Act 1998 of the provisions of the Local Government Finance Act 1992 relating to home inspections. [51645]

Mr. Woolas: The Local Government Finance Act does not provide powers for Valuation Office Agency (VOA) staff or any other persons to enter properties forcibly for the purposes of compiling or maintaining the council tax valuation list. Inspectors from the VOA will only ask to undertake internal inspections of properties where information cannot be gathered by an external inspection or through other sources and will make every effort to arrange appointments with occupiers in advance and confirm these by letter. If a request to enter a property is declined, the VOA will normally make a best judgement about the correct band for the property. There will, of course, be a right of appeal against any banding that is made. These procedures do not breach the Human Rights Act 1998 and in particular Article 8 of the European Convention on Human Rights.

Homebuy Schemes

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the interest rate to be charged by mortgage lenders to participants in the Open Market HomeBuy scheme; and whether this will be a different rate from the prevailing market rate. [39488]

Yvette Cooper: Discussions are continuing with lenders on the details of the core proposition for the private financing of Open Market HomeBuy equity loans which was announced on 5 December. Lenders are likely to charge a small premium on the interest rate of the standard mortgage, but the aim of the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is to ensure that the products are comparable with current shared equity schemes and affordable for our client groups.

Homelessness

Justine Greening: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what grant funding for homelessness was provided to each London borough in 2004–05; how much is being provided in 2005–06; how much is projected for 2006–07; and if he will make a statement. [50332]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 9 February 2006]: Homelessness grants from the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister supplement other sources of Government funding that help to tackle homelessness, including housing capital investment, Supporting People and Revenue Support Grant.

In 2004–05 and 2005–06 a total of £71,658 million (revenue and capital) in homelessness grants was allocated to local authorities in London by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister.

The table provides details of homelessness grant allocations made by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister in 2004–05 and 2005–06 to each local authority in London. Indicative allocations for 2006–07 are also included this table.

Funding provided by the Directorate has supported action to successfully reduce rough sleeping by more than 70 per cent. since 1998, end the use of B and B hotels as long-term accommodation for families with children, and develop homelessness strategies and preventative approaches which have resulted in the first sustained fall in new cases of homelessness for nearly a decade.

Ms Keeble: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many homeless acceptances there have been in each local authority in the East Midlands region in each of the last four quarters. [50907]

Yvette Cooper: The following table presents information reported by each local authority in East Midlands for the past four quarters on the number of households under homelessness legislation which were accepted as eligible for assistance, unintentionally homeless and in priority need, and consequently owed a main homelessness duty.

The duty owed by the local authority is to secure suitable accommodation. If a settled home is not immediately available, the authority may secure temporary accommodation until a settled home becomes available. As an alternative to the provision of temporary accommodation some authorities arrange for households to remain in their current accommodation (homeless at home), until a settled solution becomes available.

ODPM PIE Homelessness returns (quarterly).

Ms Keeble: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what guidance his Department has issued in the last 12 months to local authorities on handling homelessness cases. [50908]

Yvette Cooper: In the last 12 months the Office of the Deputy Prime Minster has made the following guidance available to local authorities and other agencies in relation to homelessness:

Tackling Homelessness Amongst Ethnic Minority Households—A Development Guide—Published September 2005 and;

Hostels Review Toolkit—Published March 2005.

In addition, the ODPM published the following documents:

Policy Brief 13: Survey of English Local Authorities about Homelessness—Published December 2005;

Policy Brief 12: Hostels Capital Improvement Programme—Published September 2005;

Guidance on Best Value Performance Indicator 213: on prevention of homelessness through housing advice—Published July 2005;

Policy Brief 11: Providing More Settled Homes—Published June 2005 and; Sustainable Communities: Settled Homes; Changing Lives—Published March 2005.

All of these publications are available on the ODPM website at: www.odpm.gov.uk

Ms Keeble: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what discussions his Department has had in the last 12 months with housing authorities on the handling of homelessness cases. [50913]

Yvette Cooper: Officials in the Homelessness and Housing Support Directorate in the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister have an on-going programme of work with local authorities to discuss good practice in the delivery of homelessness services. In the past 12 months this has included visits, meetings, regional seminars and telephone conversations. As part of this work meetings were held in the autumn with approximately 150 local authorities to specifically discuss their action plans to reduce the number of households living in temporary accommodation.

Richard Burden: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what criteria he is using for the allocation of the £88 million funding announced by the Minister for Housing in December 2005 for local authorities to reduce or prevent homelessness. [51644]

Yvette Cooper: The £88 million funding announced on 13 December 2005 has been allocated to local authorities over two years (2006–07 and 2007–08) to assist them in delivering their homelessness service and reflects the Government's continued commitment to tackle and prevent homelessness. As part of the allocation process every local authority was asked to complete a short survey about their homelessness service. In allocating the funding the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister took account of local homelessness pressures and evidence from the survey returns of local commitment to prevent homelessness and reduce the use of temporary accommodation in line with our homelessness strategy "Sustainable Communities: settled homes; changing lives". A summary of the survey returns is included in "Survey of English Local Authorities About Homelessness. Policy Briefing 13" which is available on the ODPM website.

Homelessness grants from ODPM are intended to supplement main sources of expenditure on homelessness (for example, local authority general fund expenditure and housing investment) to fund innovative services that tackle and prevent homelessness more effectively.

Anne Main: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many (a) homeless people and (b) people in temporary accommodation there are in (i) St. Albans and (ii) Hertfordshire; and if he will make a statement. [51155]

Yvette Cooper: Information about English local authorities' actions under homelessness legislation is collected quarterly and is in respect of households rather than people. The number of households accepted as eligible for assistance, unintentionally homeless and in priority need during 2004–05 and April to September 2005–06, and the number of households in temporary accommodation arranged by local authorities under homelessness legislation as at 31 March and 30 September 2005, is tabled as follows for St. Albans and Hertfordshire.

After being accepted as homeless, a household will be placed in some form of accommodation. They may be placed in temporary accommodation, until a settled solution becomes available, or they may be given a settled solution straight away depending on the accommodation available to the local authority. As an alternative to temporary accommodation an authority may arrange for a household to remain in their current accommodation (homeless at home), until a settled solution becomes available.

Information is also collected on the number of people who sleep rough, that is, those who are literally roofless on a single night. The table below also shows the number of persons sleeping rough on a single night of each year.

Households accepted as homeless during the year, households in temporary accommodation at the end of the period, and numbers of rough sleepers

Mr. Khan: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister when he expects to publish (a) the external evaluation of the range of approaches which have been developed with homelessness grants since 2002 and (b) the good practice guidance based on this study. [42904]

Yvette Cooper: It is planned to publish the good practice guidance on homelessness prevention and a summary of the research in March 2006. It is also planned to publish the full research report on the evaluation of homelessness prevention initiatives in the summer of 2006. When available copies of the guidance and research will be available free of charge from the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's website at: www.odpm.gov.uk/homelessness.

Homes for Islington

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much funding has been made available to Homes for Islington by his Department; what proportion of it is a loan; what the interest rate is on the loan; and what the repayment terms are. [44465]

Yvette Cooper: The London borough of Islington has been allocated funding totalling £24.9 million by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (ODPM) for its Arms Length Management Organisation (ALMO), "Homes for Islington", for the financial years 2004–05 and 2005–06. Allocations for 2006–07 and 2007–08 will be made shortly. The borough also received a mainstream housing capital allowance from ODPM of £10.888 million in 2004–05 and £11.317 million in 2005–06.

ODPM's financial support for local authorities for capital investment takes the form of supported borrowing approvals. These give permission for a local authority to borrow money to fund capital expenditure on its stock. Housing Revenue Account (HRA) Subsidy is paid to local authorities by ODPM to cover the interest payments that a local authority must make on this borrowing. The terms of the loans taken out by local authorities such as Islington are a matter for the individual local authorities.

Households (Statistics)

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the average number of households is in (a) district council area, (b) county council area, (c) English unitary council area, (d) metropolitan council area and (e) London borough area. [49818]

Yvette Cooper: The average number of households in England are as follows:

(a) District council	Number
Households accepted[1] as homeless
All local authorities excluding unitary local authorities, metropolitan councils and London boroughs	41,000
(b) County council
All county councils excluding metropolitan councils	288,000
(c) Unitary authorities
All unitary local authorities in England excluding London boroughs and metropolitan councils	76,000
(d) Metropolitan council
All metropolitan council areas	127,000
(e) London borough
All London boroughs including City of London	98,000

Business Plan Statistical Appendices.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what estimate the Government have made of the number of new domestic dwellings to be planned for construction in each of the next 20 years. [47877]

Yvette Cooper: The Government responded to Kate Barker's review of Housing Supply on 5 December, outlining their ambition to increase housing delivery in England over the next decade to 200,000 net additions per year, from current delivery of around 150,000 net additions per year.

The numbers set out in the response represent Government's ambition nationally. The actual housing numbers planned for delivery are determined at a regional and local level through statutory planning processes.

Andrew Gwynne: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what discussions he has had with Tameside and Stockport councils to ensure that the efforts to stabilise the housing market in East Manchester do not displace problems to adjacent areas in Tameside and Stockport. [51136]

Yvette Cooper: The future investment plans of Manchester Salford Housing Market Renewal Pathfinder are currently being evaluated by the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister to ensure that they continue to make the maximum positive impact for the significant investment we are making in the area. These will be tested against a set of criteria including strategic fit, evidence of need and opportunity and value for money but also ensure that impact on adjacent areas is properly addressed. The plans represent the culmination of many months of work by the board of Manchester Salford Partnership—Tameside have a place as observers on this board.

The Association of Greater Manchester Authorities in partnership with the North West Regional Housing board have recently commissioned work to extend Manchester Salford Housing Market Renewal's Research, Foresight and Intelligence project. This will look at changes in the Greater Manchester housing market areas outside of the existing Housing Market Renewal Programme and advise on how best the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister can intervene to complement HMR investment and to ensure that housing continues to play a strong role in supporting sub-regional economic growth whilst protecting existing green belt provision.

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the density rate target is for new housing projects in Shropshire. [51380]

Yvette Cooper: National policy set out in Planning Policy Guidance Note 3: "Housing" (March 2000) is for local planning authorities to avoid developments which will make inefficient use of land (those less than 30 dwellings per hectare net) and to encourage housing developments which makes more efficient use of land (those between 30 and 50 dwellings per hectare net). Local planning authorities may also have regard to local housing density policies in their adopted development plans and emerging local development frameworks. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is currently consulting on draft Planning Policy Statement 3: "Planning for Housing" which proposes a new approach for local planning authorities to establish density policies in their areas, but with the presumption remaining that in developing density policies, the minimum density should be no less than 30 dwellings per hectare.

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what percentage of new homes in Shropshire he expects will be built on brownfield sites. [51381]

Yvette Cooper: Planning Policy Guidance Note 3: "Housing" which the Government issued in March 2000 sets a target for 60 per cent. of additional housing to be provided nationally on previously developed land and through conversions of existing buildings by 2008. The regional spatial strategy for the West Midlands sets a target for Shropshire of 59 per cent. of all development to be provided on previously developed land and for this target to be reflected in new local development frameworks. Local planning authorities in Shropshire should determine housing applications having regard to this guidance, other relevant policies in their local development plans and any other material considerations.

Mr. Spring: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many new homes he expects to be built in Suffolk in (a) 2006–07 and (b) each of the next three years. [50693]

Yvette Cooper: The Suffolk County Structure Plan (adopted 2001) sets out the annual requirement for new homes to be built in the county. The average annual requirement is 2,650 until 2016. These requirements will, in due course, be superseded by those contained in the Regional Spatial Strategy (RSS) for the East of England once it is adopted. The average annual requirement currently in the draft RSS is 2,930 new homes.

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what proportion of West Lancashire council housing stock has been sold under the right-to-buy scheme in each year since 1980. [45132]

Yvette Cooper: The proportion of housing stock owned by West Lancashire council, sold through the Right to Buy (RTB) scheme in each financial year since 1980–81, as reported by West Lancashire is tabulated as follows. The table shows the number of Right to Buy sales in each financial year as a percentage of the stock at the beginning of that period.

West Lancashire: right to buy sales

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many applicants there are on the West Lancashire housing waiting list. [45136]

Yvette Cooper: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to the hon. Member for Yeovil (Mr. Laws) on 17 October 2005, Official Report, column 811W, in which the number of households on the housing waiting list in each English local authority for each year from 1996–97 to 2005–06 was made available in the Library of the House.

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many empty homes there have been in West Lancashire constituency in each year since 1997. [51120]

Yvette Cooper: The number of vacant dwellings in the local authority area of West Lancashire from 1997 to 2004, is tabled as follows:

	Snapshot date	Vacant dwellings
1997	1 April	1,397
1998	1 April	1,433
1999	1 April	504
2000	1 April	925

The figures for 1997 to 2001 are based on a combination of the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's Housing Strategy Statistical Appendix (HSSA) return, and the Housing Corporation's Regulatory Statistical Return (RSR). For the years 2002 to 2004 the figures are based on the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's Council Tax Base 1 (CTB1) return.

These figures are for all vacant dwellings, including dwellings that have been empty for fewer than six months, some for less than 1 month. The Government are introducing new powers from April 2006 for local authorities to reduce the number of long-term empty homes in their area.

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many council houses have been sold under the right-to-buy scheme in West Lancashire in each year since 1980. [51122]

Mr. Evans: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment his Department has made of the role of repairing existing housing stock in meeting demand for affordable housing. [51038]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 13 February 2006]: The Government recognise that better use of the existing housing stock, including repairs to existing stock and bringing empty homes back into use, can help meet demand for housing.

Investment through the Housing Corporation's approved development programme (ADP) supports not only new build but also acquisition and refurbishment of housing stock securing it for use as affordable housing. Around 1,700 social rented homes out of a total of over 16,000 social rented homes were provided through acquisition and refurbishment in 2004–05 through the ADP.

The Government encourage local authorities to procure empty homes from owners in return for grant or loans to cover the cost of repairs.

The Decent Homes Standard requires all social housing to be made decent by 2010 and to this end local authorities and registered social landlords (RSLs) have invested £21 billion in improving their stock since 1997.

The Housing Corporation's regulatory code makes clear that RSLs are expected to develop and manage good quality homes that seek to meet people's needs and preferences now and in the future, ensuring that: the homes their residents live in are well maintained and in a lettable condition; maintenance is carried out effectively and necessary investment in the future of their stock is made a key priority.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what percentage change he expects in (a) council house rents and (b) management and maintenance grants in 2006–07. [49737]

Yvette Cooper: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister expects local authority rents to rise by an average of 4.7 per cent. in 2006–07. The Government does not expect any local authority to raise rents by more than 5 per cent. in 2006–07 and 2007–08, and the intention is that authorities which would otherwise lose out will have their Housing Revenue Account (HRA) adjusted in year.

Management and maintenance allowance will rise by 9.06 per cent. in 2006–07. This represents 2.46 per cent. for inflation and 6.6 per cent. for rebasing.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what recent research he has evaluated on the cost of maintaining council homes. [45299]

Yvette Cooper: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister keeps under review the need to spend on maintenance and management of the local authority stock. The most recent research was published in June 2003: "Estimation of the need to spend on maintenance and management in the local authority housing stock".

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much of the income from council tenants' rents in the determination for 2006–07 he estimates will be retained by councils. [45333]

Yvette Cooper: The Housing Revenue Account Subsidy Determination does not set actual rents; these are the responsibility of the individual local authorities as part of their landlord function. The annual determination sets, among other things, each authority's guideline rent. That is the rental income per dwelling assumed in calculating an authority's Housing Revenue Account (HRA) subsidy entitlement.

Nationally, rental income does not meet the costs of the aggregate need to spend on council housing, and there is an overall net payment of HRA subsidy from the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister to local authorities. This situation is forecast to continue for the foreseeable future.

Sarah Teather: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the impact of the average increase in council rents resulting from his Department's final housing revenue account subsidy determinations for 2006–07 on pensioners not in receipt of housing benefit. [50547]

Yvette Cooper: No assessment is made during the annual housing revenue account subsidy determination process of the impact of average rent increases on any particular section of the community. The subsidy system is very influential in informing the decisions a council will take on rent setting, but it does not immediately impact on actual individual rents which are a matter for the authority as landlord.

Authorities retain wide discretion in the setting of rents, including a variation of plus or minus 5 per cent. on individual rents under rent restructuring. For 2006–07 we introduced a suggested additional cap of 5 per cent. on the average actual rent increase in addition to the existing cap of RPI plus ½ per cent. plus £2.

Sarah Teather: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what proportion of local authority housing stock in each Government office region is (a) houses and bungalows, (b) low rise flats, (c) medium rise flats and (d) high rise flats. [51019]

Yvette Cooper: The data in the following table are derived from the audited base data returns from local authorities for stock at April 2005.

Percentage

Region	Houses and bungalows	Low rise flats	Medium rise flats	High rise flats
East Midlands	67.96	19.13	10.95	1.96
Eastern	60.95	22.20	14.05	2.80
London	22.25	12.18	43.73	21.84
North East	73.77	14.10	7.05	5.08
North West	61.65	22.61	10.13	5.60
South East	53.55	22.86	19.14	4.46
South West	57.25	23.52	15.05	4.18
West Midlands	60.56	19.67	9.63	10.14
Yorks and Humber	66.70	18.44	9.44	5.41
Total England	54.04	18.52	18.69	8.74

Mr. Evans: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment his Department has made of the impact on (a) the environment and (b) energy efficiency of the repair and renovation of existing registered social landlord housing stock with energy saving measures. [50610]

Yvette Cooper: The 2003 English House Condition Survey (EHCS) indicates that the number of social sector homes failing to meet the decent home standard as a result of inadequate thermal comfort fell by 20 per cent. between 2001 and 2003. EHCS also indicates that, among the housing stock, that of registered social landlords has the highest average energy efficiency as assessed under the Government's Standard Assessment Procedure (SAP).

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister recognises the environmental impact of poor housing conditions and has commissioned research to establish the extent to which social housing landlords are carrying out works in excess of the requirements of the decent home standard, with particular reference to heating and insulation. It is also undertaking a review of the measures that can be taken in existing buildings, including homes, to improve sustainability and energy and water efficiency.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether individuals evicted from social housing due to antisocial behaviour (a) are eligible to be re-housed, (b) may be classed as homeless and (c) are eligible for (i) housing benefit and (ii) council tax benefit; whether eligibility for each will apply under the Government's Respect agenda proposals; and if he will make a statement. [46966]

Yvette Cooper: Addressing the hon. Member's questions in turn:

(a) Eligibility for re-housing:

Local authorities have the power to treat as ineligible for an allocation a person who has been guilty of unacceptable behaviour serious enough to make him unsuitable to be a tenant of the authority. The only behaviour which would be regarded as unacceptable for these purposes is behaviour which would entitle an authority to an outright possession order on fault grounds, this could include antisocial behaviour.

Circular 07/04 on Tenancy Management: Eligibility and Eviction, issued by the Housing Corporation and to which all registered social landlords must have regard, states that ineligibility for housing on the ground of the applicant's antisocial behaviour should be based on evidence of the behaviour. The circular also states that previous tenancy enforcement action (including eviction) for antisocial behaviour should not be taken into account if it occurred two or more years prior to the date of application and the tenant's household has conducted a tenancy satisfactorily in the intervening period.

(b) Homelessness:

Where a person is evicted for antisocial behaviour he may decide to make a homelessness application to a local authority. If the authority has reason to believe that he may be homeless or threatened with homelessness it must make inquiries to enable it to determine his application.

When considering the application the authority would have to decide, among other things, whether the applicant had become homeless intentionally (that is, homeless as a result of a deliberate act or omission in consequence of which his accommodation ceases to be available to him). Where the applicant has been evicted from his previous accommodation because of antisocial behaviour this is likely to be regarded as a deliberate act which would mean that the applicant would be found to be intentionally homeless.

If the applicant has a priority need for housing (eg if he has dependent children) but has become homeless intentionally, the authority would have a duty to secure accommodation for them for long enough to give them a reasonable opportunity of finding their own accommodation. However, the authority will not owe the applicant a 'main homelessness duty' to continue to secure that accommodation is available for occupation by the applicant.

(c) Eligibility for benefits:

Where someone has been evicted on ASB grounds and subsequently takes up new accommodation where they are eligible for payment of council tax then any application for council tax benefit would be assessed in line with existing rules. Their previous housing record, including eviction on anti-social behaviour grounds, would not form part of this assessment.

The same principle applies to Housing benefit: liability for rent would cease on eviction, so no housing benefit would be payable. But if rent is payable at the next address, housing benefit would be freshly assessed.

Respect agenda proposals

The Respect action plan proposes no changes to code of guidance on allocations or homelessness legislation. Through the plan we have announced our intention to launch a national network of intensive family support schemes as part of a long-term cross-government strategy on problem families to improve the way public services deal with them. Family support projects will help tackle the underlying causes of ASB. For example, where appropriate, families evicted for antisocial behaviour may be referred to a support project so that anti-social behaviour can be tackled rather than displaced.

The plan commits us to considering the best way of encouraging those involved in persistent ASB to engage with family support projects. As the plan states one option would be to introduce sanctions on those people who have been evicted for antisocial behaviour and then refuse to take up offers of help. Sanctions could include financial penalties or housing benefit measures.

Housing Debt

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the interest rate charged on the housing debt of local authorities was in (a) 1980, (b) 2000 and (c) 2005. [49735]

Yvette Cooper: Local authorities do not borrow for specific purposes but instead manage their loans as a portfolio. The Housing Revenue Account makes a contribution to the loan charges of a local authority's debt portfolio based upon the proportion of those loans used for housing purposes and based on the average interest rate of all of the authority's borrowing, known as the Consolidated Rate of Interest (CRI).

The CRI for 1980 is only available at disproportionate cost. The average CRI for local housing authorities in England for financial year 2000–01 was 5.95 per cent., the average CRI for local housing authorities in England for financial year 2005–06 currently stands at 5.31 per cent., though it should be noted that this rate is likely to change as the financial year not yet ended.

Housing Revenue Accounts

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much central government funding was allocated to councils' housing revenue accounts in 2005–06; and what the estimate is for 2007–08. [45297]

Yvette Cooper: The net contribution made by central government to local authority housing revenue accounts in England is approximately £207.6 million for 2005–06, based upon unaudited advance claims submitted by local housing authorities.

The estimate for 2007–08 is expected to be broadly similar and it is expected that payments to deficit authorities will continue to exceed surpluses redistributed from negative subsidy authorities throughout this period.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the cost to central funds was of supported borrowing for local authority housing revenue accounts in each year since 1997. [45304]

Yvette Cooper: The charges for capital element of Housing Revenue Account Subsidy entitlement by local housing authorities for 1997–98 to 2004–05 (the latest year for which we have data) was as follows:

	Amount (£)
1997–98	2,205,198,847
1998–99	2,136,542,900
1999–2000	2,012,611,835
2000–01	1,923,747,474
2001–02	1,810,651,777
2002–03	1,669,557,784
2003–04	1,531,423,203
2004–05	[1]1,173,227,602

[1] Data for 2004–2005 is not yet complete.

Under the set-aside system that was in place until 2004–05, local authorities were required to set aside a proportion of their income to repay debt. So levels of housing debt (nationally) fell, leading to a fall in support required for support of that debt.

Early indications for 2005–06 are there will be an upswing (£2 million) in the value of HRAS for charges for capital, as national housing debt stops declining due to set-aside.

Key Workers (Dorset)

Annette Brooke: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what account he took of average house prices in Dorset in allocating funds to assist key workers via Homebuy loan schemes in (a) 2004–05 and (b) 2005–06. [51850]

Yvette Cooper [holding answer 14 February 2006]: As the Key Worker Living programme only operates in London, South East and Eastern regions there are no specific Homebuy loans being offered for key workers within the South West under the Government's programme. Within Dorset funding is available for a number of Homebuy and shared ownership schemes which, depending on local priorities, key workers may be eligible to apply for. Within 2004–05 there were 120 such completions, final figures for 2005–06 are not yet available.

LACORE Database

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on implementation of the local authority lettings continuous recording (LACORE) database. [49825]

Yvette Cooper: CORE (Continuous Recording of lettings) is a system for monitoring the letting of social rented housing which has been in operation by housing associations for the last 15 years. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is currently in the process of extending CORE to include lettings by local authorities. Participation by local authorities is voluntary although it is hoped that all will do so. Of the 220 local authorities which own social housing stock 86 (39 per cent.) are already submitting CORE data and an additional 105 (48 per cent.) are planning to start by 1 April 2006. The remaining 29 (13 per cent.) have not yet committed to a start date.

Lifetime Homes Standards

Mr. Hunt: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what estimate his Department has made of the cost to housebuilders of making the Lifetime Homes Standards obligatory on all new house builds; and if he will make a statement. [49792]

Yvette Cooper: No estimate has been made of the cost of making the Lifetime Homes Standards obligatory on all new house builds. The Lifetime Homes Standards will be introduced as a voluntary element of the Code for Sustainable Homes. The rate of adoption of the standards will be monitored, and Government have not ruled out regulation. If regulation is required, a regulatory impact assessment will be made, as normal, to establish the cost.

Local Authority Finance

Mr. Purchase: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what arrangements he plans to make for his Department's financial support to local authorities for private sector capital investment from 1 April; and if he will make a statement. [46137]

Yvette Cooper: Our current plans are that ODPM grant for PFI projects will continue to be paid on the same basis as in 2005–06. HRA housing projects will be supported as part of Housing Revenue Account Subsidy. All other operational projects will be supported by PFI grant, for which Section 31 grant determinations will be published in March setting out the full details.

Mr. Purchase: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the likely effects on local authority planning and delivery of delaying an announcement on housing capital grants. [46139]

Yvette Cooper: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister will announce awards of capital grant to support local authorities' housing capital investment programmes in 2006–07 shortly and in sufficient time for those authorities to make full use of that support.

Local Authority Repair Allowances

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether local authority major repairs allowances were fully spent in each of the last three years. [45298]

Yvette Cooper: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister does not hold this information centrally, and could provide it only at disproportionate cost. Local authorities are not required to spend their major repairs allowance (MRA) in year. They may carry the balance of their MRA forward, allowing them to build a significant resource to undertake major capital works programmes if required, rather than spreading the work out over a number of years, which may not be as efficient.

Local Government Finance

Sarah Teather: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much of the £4.8 billion referred to in his Department's press release number 0278 of 20 December 2005 for local authorities in England in 2006–07 will come from rents paid by council tenants. [50543]

Yvette Cooper: The £4.8 billion referred to in the press release which accompanied the Housing Revenue Account Subsidy Determination 2006–07 on 20 December 2005 covers allowances for management, maintenance and major repairs predominantly. In addition to expenditure in these areas, local authorities in England service debt charges amounting to some £1.2 billion annually.

Projected rental income for 2006–07 is expected to be about £5.8 billion. The shortfall of about £200 million will be made up by the Government.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many (a) council tax and (b) business rate (i) banding and (ii) valuation appeals there were in each year since 1996–97; and how many were successful (A) in whole and (B) in part in each year. [51055]

Mr. Woolas: The number of council tax banding and national non-domestic rate valuation appeals in England in each year since 2000–01 is as follows:

	Council tax banding	National non-domestic rates
2000–01	33,764	715,104
2001–02	29,195	346,704
2002–03	25,346	144,105
2003–04	23,036	140,267
2004–05	24,422	130,410

Records held by the Valuation Tribunal Service (VTS) do not identify whether an appeal has been fully or partially upheld. The VTS does not hold information on council tax and national non-domestic rate appeals for years prior to 2000–01.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on how council tax capping will operate in London in 2006–07. [51084]

Mr. Woolas: No decisions on council tax capping in 2006–07 have been taken yet. The Deputy Prime Minister does not intend to determine capping principles until after authorities have set their budget requirements.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the average council tax bill was in England in 2005–06. [51099]

Mr. Woolas: Details of the average council tax bill in England in 2005–06 are published in Table 2.2f of Local Government Financial Statistics England 2005, a copy of which is available in the Library of the House and on the web at: http ://www.local.odpm.gov.uk/finance/stats/lgfs/2005/lgfs16/h/lgfs16/xlsfiles/lgfs16-2-2f.xls .

Local Government Restructuring

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what recent discussions (a) he has had and (b) Members of his Department have had with local authorities on local government restructuring. [49820]

Mr. Woolas: My right hon. Friend the Member for South Shields (Mr. Miliband) announced a comprehensive programme of engagement on local government re-organisation on 2 February. As part of this programme my right hon. Friend the Member for South Shields (Mr. Miliband) met with councillors, chief executives, public sector partners, the business sector and other key stakeholders from Shropshire, Telford and Wrekin and Herefordshire on 7 February in Shrewsbury.

Members of the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister have held meetings with chief executives of county and district councils to discuss local government restructuring on six separate occasions since December 2005.

Local Government Wages

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the average increase in local government employee wages was in each year since 1996–97; and what the cost of the local government wage bill was in each year since 1996–97. [42605]

Mr. Woolas: Information on local government wages is not held centrally. However, the increase in the local government employee pay bill and the cost of the local government employee expenditure in each year as reported by local authorities, are shown in the following table for the years available:

	Local government employee pay[1,2]		Local government employee expenditure[2,3]
	Cost (£ billion)	% Increase	Cost (£ billion)	% Increase
1996–97	—	—	30.237	2.9
1997–98	—	—	31.167	3.1
1998–99	25.904	—	32.395	4.4
1999–2000	28.531	10.1	35.737	9.9
2000–01	30.571	7.1	38.185	6.9
2001–02	33.083	8.2	41.283	8.1
2002–03	35.769	8.1	44.345	7.4
2003–04	38.662	8.1	48.676	9.8
2004–05	41.235	6.7	52.940	8.8

[1] This figure is for pay only, excluding National Insurance employer contributions, pensions, and employee related costs, but including overtime payments, bonuses, golden handshakes etc. It has only been collected on this basis since 1998–99. It is estimated from the Subjective Analysis Return (SAR), part of the Revenue Outturn (RO) suite of forms collected by ODPM from local authorities. The SAR is a sample survey and collects information from 121 authorities in England. The data have been grossed up to provide estimates for England as a whole.

[2] Comparisons across years may not be valid due to changes in the method of reporting the information. In particular, the outturn data for 1996–97 to 2002–03 have been calculated on a non-FRS

(Financial Reporting Standard) 17 basis while the outturn data for 2003–04 and 2004–05 have been calculated on an FRS 17 basis. Hence, figures for different years may not be directly comparable.
[3] Total net current expenditure on employees as collected by the RO forms. This includes all direct and indirect employee expenses and contributions to employee-related provisions, including national insurance contributions, pensions and employee related expenses.

Milton Keynes Partnerships Committee

Mr. Lancaster: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister who the voting members of Milton Keynes Partnerships Committee are; and whether their posts are remunerated. [51030]

Yvette Cooper: The voting members of Milton Keynes Partnership, the local delivery vehicle for Milton Keynes, and the status of their remuneration, are shown in the following table.

Voting member	Representing	Remunerated
Sir Bob Reid	Independent	Yes
Anne Limb	Independent	Yes
Cllr Isobel McCall	Milton Keynes Council	Yes
Cllr Euan Henderson	Milton Keynes Council	Yes
Cllr Roger Bristow	Milton Keynes Council	Yes
Wendy Lehmann	Voluntary organisations	Yes
Malcolm Brighton	Health sector	Yes
Andrew Peck	Business community	Yes
Dr. Pauline Lane	English Partnerships	No
Dennis Hone	English Partnerships	No

Mobile Telephone Masts

Mr. Amess: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister (1) how many new mobile telephone masts have been erected under permitted development rights in (a) Southend-on-Sea, (b) Southend West constituency and (c) Essex in each of the last 48 months for which figures are available; [50476]

(2) how many applications there have been to construct mobile telephone masts in (a) Southend-on-Sea, (b) Southend West constituency and (c) Essex in each year since 2000; how many of these applications have been (i) granted and (ii) refused; and what the reason for refusal was in each case. [50477]

Yvette Cooper: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

However, during September and October every year the mobile network operators write to every local authority with details of their network rollout for the year ahead. When they write to the local authority they also provide details of their existing sites within the local authority area. The hon. Member may want to contact the network operators for copies of their plans.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what power his Department has granted since 1997 to local authorities to refuse applications by mobile telephone companies to erect telephone masts; and if he will make a statement. [50480]

Yvette Cooper: All ground based masts are already subject to planning control so that if the local authority considers that the development will pose a serious threat to amenity, it is able to refuse approval. For masts over 15 metres in height a full planning application is required. For masts under 15 metres in height a prior approval application is required.

Since 1997, the Government have strengthened the prior approval arrangements twice. Local planning authorities can decline a mast on planning grounds in prior approval applications in the same way as a normal planning application so long as they act within eight weeks. Eight weeks is also the performance target for dealing with most planning applications for telecommunications developments.

Mr. Spring: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many planning applications for new mobile phone masts have been approved in West Suffolk in each year since 1997. [50724]

Yvette Cooper: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

However, during September and October every year the mobile network operators write to every local authority with details of their network rollout for the year ahead. When they write to the local authority they also provide details of their existing sites within the local authority area. You may want to contact the network operators for copies of their plans.

Negative Equity

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what estimate he has made of the total value of negative equity in homes in (a) England and (b) the North West in (i) 1996 and (ii) the most recent year for which figures are available. [46535]

Yvette Cooper: The information requested is not held centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Oil Firing Technical Association

Graham Stringer: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what (a) criteria and (b) benchmarks will be used in his review of the Oil Firing Technical Association. [48804]

Yvette Cooper: The Oil Firing Technical Association (OFTEC) operates a competent person self-certification scheme for the installation of oil-fired combustion appliances and oil storage systems, authorised under the Building Act 1984. It is only this part of OFTEC's activities that the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has powers to review.

Reviews of the performance of competent person schemes take place against schemes' conditions of authorisation: financial, managerial and technical ability to operate a scheme; assessment of competence of applicants to register with a scheme; periodic random monitoring of completed work to make sure it complies with the requirements of the Building Regulations; a robust system to deal fairly and speedily with complaints from customers; and certification of work to customers and the relevant local authority.

All competent person schemes, including OFTEC's are required to achieve UKAS accreditation under the conditions of authorisation. UKAS will then monitor schemes to make sure that the conditions of authorisation are being fulfilled and the scheme is delivering compliance with the requirements of the Building Regulations.

Oil-fired Central Heating

Graham Stringer: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will introduce regulations to require a Declaration of Safety Certificate after the installation of an oil fired heating system. [48760]

Yvette Cooper: Provisions for such certificates to be issued are already part of the Building Regulations 2000, as amended. Such certificates attest that the installation meets the safety standards in the Regulations. Where such installation work is notified to a building control body, that body will issue a completion certificate where the installation fully complies with all relevant requirements of the Building Regulations. Where the work is carried out by an installer registered with a competent person self-certification listed in Schedule 2A of the Building Regulations, that installer will give a compliance certificate to the occupier of the premises where the installation took place with a copy to the local authority.

Open Market Homebuy Option

Michael Gove: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many households the Government estimates will be covered by the Open Market Homebuy option by the end of the two-year pilot. [48901]

Yvette Cooper: Information on the number of households that will benefit from the Open Market Homebuy product from April 2006 is not yet available. The Government are providing subsidy for all the Homebuy products via the Housing Corporation's Affordable Housing programme. A decision on the overall programme is expected in March 2006, when the amount of subsidy for Open Market Homebuy will be confirmed.

From October 2006, Government funding will be enhanced by the private financing of equity loans from three lenders. This will enable us to help an additional 20,000 households into home ownership by 2010.

Overcrowding

Dr. Kumar: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will estimate how many families in (a) England, (b) the Tees Valley and (c) Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland are living in overcrowded conditions. [45109]

Yvette Cooper: There are two measures of overcrowding—the statutory definition and the bedroom standard.

Based on the bedroom standard, the number of overcrowded households in England during the three-year period 2002–03 to 2004–05 is estimated to have been 510,000.

Information on compliance with the statutory standard is not collected systematically but, in the autumn of 2001, an attempt was made to estimate the number of households living in conditions that breach these standards. Using data from the "Survey of English Housing" for the period 1997–98 to 1999–2000 and from the 1996 "English House Condition Survey" it was estimated that there were 25,000 households in England that were so overcrowded that the statutory standard was breached.

Reliable estimates for the Tees Valley and for Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland are not available.

Pheasant Shooting

Mr. Roger Williams: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what guidance his Department has issued on the planning status of pheasant rearing units. [44206]

Yvette Cooper: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has not issued any specific guidance on the planning status of pheasant rearing units. The planning guidance for agriculture, for England, is contained in Planning Policy Guidance Note 7: "Rural Areas".

Planning

Keith Vaz: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many planning applications have been processed in (a) Leicester and (b) England in each year between 1997 and 2005; and how many were heard by committees of local planning authorities. [50444]

Yvette Cooper: Following are the figures for Leicester and England. The "Statistics of Planning Applications, October to December 2005" is due to be published on 31 March 2006 and will appear on the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister web pages under "planning statistics".

Calendar year	Decisions in Leicester	Decisions not delegated to officers[1]	Decisions in England	Decisions not delegated to officers[1]
1998	1,469	403	465,000	153,000
1999	1,449	373	472,000	139,000
2000	1,594	369	499,000	127,000
2001	1,772	400	527,000	121,000
2002	1,783	373	571,000	102,000
2003	2,084	265	620,000	89,000
2004	2,095	117	650,000	75,000

[1] Since April 1997 statistics have been collected on decisions delegated to officers without reference to councillors under a scheme of delegation. 'Undelegated' decisions therefore includes decisions taken by chairmen or sub-committees, as well as those by the entire planning committee

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what plans he has to pool Planning Delivery Grant funding into local area agreements. [51075]

Mr. Woolas: Planning Delivery Grant is not ring fenced, and may be included by local authorities in their local area agreement pooling arrangements.

The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister will be consulting on reforms to the Planning Delivery Grant as part of a wider package of incentives for housing and planning during this year. This will involve consultation on mechanisms for delivery and how the grant might be distributed.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what guidance his Department has issued on the account which should be taken of special protection area status in assessing planning applications; and if he will make a statement. [49823]

Yvette Cooper: In August 2005 the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (ODPM) and the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (Defra) issued a joint Government circular: "Biodiversity and Geological Conservation—Statutory obligations and their impact within the planning system" (ODPM 06/2005, Defra 01/2005). The circular provides administrative guidance on the application of the law relating to planning and nature conservation as it applies in England. It covers the requirements of the EC Habitats Regulations 1994 in respect of Special Protection Areas (SPAs) designated under the EC Birds Directive .

Planning Policy Statement 9: "Biodiversity and Geological Conservation" was published at the same time. It advises planning authorities that, in taking planning decisions affecting sites of international importance, such as SPAs, they should ensure that appropriate weight is given to their status.

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what obligations local planning authorities have to consult English Nature in relation to planning applications in a special protection area. [49824]

Yvette Cooper: A planning authority is required, under the General Development Procedure Order 1995, to consult English Nature before granting planning permission within or which is likely to affect a site of special scientific interest (SSSI). All special protection areas (SPAs) on land above the mean (tidal) low water mark are also SSSIs and are thus covered by this requirement to consult. The planning regime does not extend below the low water mark.

Anne Milton: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many planning decisions made by (a) Guildford and (b) Waverley borough councils were (i) referred to and (ii) overturned by the Planning Inspectorate in each of the past five years. [48710]

Yvette Cooper: The table shows the total number of planning appeals, in the areas of Guildford and Waverley borough councils, determined by the Planning Inspectorate for the calendar years 2001 to 2005 together with the number allowed and percentage of appeals allowed.

	2001	2002	2003	2004	2005
Guilford
Total decided	82	68	110	91	136
Total allowed	28	29	32	28	40
Percentage allowed	34	43	29	31	29
Waverley

Total allowed	38	34	41	61	71
Percentage allowed	44	39	28	39	39

Mr. Sanders: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the national targets are for the Planning Inspectorate; and what the performance of offices covering Torbay are in relation to those targets. [46613]

Yvette Cooper: The Planning Inspectorates targets for 2006–06 (revised December 2005) are:

Timeliness—cases determined by the written representations method

1. Planning appeals: By the end of 2005–06, 50 per cent. of all planning appeals decided by written representations to be determined in 16 weeks.

2. Enforcement appeals: 80 per cent. of all enforcement appeals decided by written representations to be determined in 32 weeks.

Timeliness—cases determined by the hearings method

3. Planning appeals: By the end of 2005–06, 50 per cent. of all planning appeals decided by hearings to be determined in 30 weeks.

4. Planning appeals—proposals for 10 or more dwellings: to open the hearing within 20 weeks of the start date of the case and, in 80 per cent. of the cases, to issue a decision within 10 weeks of the close of the hearing.

5. Enforcement appeals: 80 per cent. of all enforcement appeals decided by hearings to be determined in 33 weeks.

Timeliness—cases determined by the inquiry method

6. Recovered planning appeals and called-in applications: to meet the individual timetable set for the issue of the decision.

7. Planning appeals: By the end of 2005–06, 50 per cent. of all planning appeals decided by inquiry to be determined in 30 weeks.

8. Proposals for 10 or more dwellings: to open the inquiry within 20 weeks of the start date of the case and, in 80 per cent. of the cases, to issue a decision within 10 weeks of the close of the inquiry.

9. Enforcement appeals: 80 per cent. of all enforcement appeals decided by inquiry to be determined in 43 weeks.

Timeliness—development plans

10. To provide an Inspector for development plan inquiries in at least 90 per cent. of cases on the date requested by the local authority, provided that the objection period has ended and at least six months' notice has been given.

11. To deliver 90 per cent. of Inspectors' reports on development plan inquiries to local authorities according to timescales agreed under service agreements.

Quality

12. To satisfy the Advisory Panel on Standards, and thus the Secretary of State and the Welsh Assembly Government, annually and following rigorous monitoring, that the quality of all the Inspectorate's work is being maintained at a high standard, with 99 per cent. of its casework free from justified complaint.

Information

13. To survey customer satisfaction with the Inspectorate's performance and to act upon the results.

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will place in the Library of the House a copy of the national planning guidance relating to housing that was in force before the publication of Planning Policy Guidance 3 in 2000. [48056]

Yvette Cooper: A copy of the Planning Policy Guidance Note 3: "Housing" published in March 1992 has been made available in the Library of the House.

Polytunnels

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what guidance (a) his Department and (b) the Planning Inspectorate has issued on planning policy on polytunnels. [46975]

Yvette Cooper: The Government's national planning policies on development in the countryside and on agricultural development, which includes horticulture, are set out in Planning Policy Statement 7, Sustainable Development in Rural Areas, published August 2004. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister (including the Planning Inspectorate) has not issued any planning guidance specifically on the use of polytunnels.

The considerations in determining whether, in the first instance, horticultural polytunnels come within the scope of planning controls and, if so, whether they are permitted development under the Town and Country Planning (General Permitted Development) Order 1995, have not changed. Each case should be considered individually, in the light of the particular facts and circumstances pertaining.

Where the decision-taker, the local planning authority in the first instance, decides in any particular case that the erection and use of polytunnels constitutes "development" and requires a specific planning permission, any planning application should be determined in accordance with relevant policies in an adopted development plan for the area, subject to any other material considerations.

Proposed Railway Bridge (Colindale)

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on his Department's financial contribution to the proposed new railway bridge over Aerodrome Road, Colindale. [41222]

Yvette Cooper: In the announcement on second round growth area funding of 24 August 2005 the London borough of Barnet was invited to submit a fully developed bid for up to £7 million for this project to replace two railway bridges over Aerodrome Road. This bid was received in December and is currently being considered. A formal announcement of the projects that will receive Government money will be made within the next few weeks.

Regional Assemblies

Keith Vaz: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the role of regional assemblies in England. [51149]

Yvette Cooper: The Government are committed to the development of fit-for-purpose regional institutions and to continue their clear policy to devolve and decentralise power to regions, where this adds value. This is integral to creating sustainable communities.

Regional assemblies are inclusive strategic bodies 'of the region' and bring together representatives from key sectors across the region, sub-region, major cities and city areas and the rural areas. They were designated under the Planning and Compulsory Purchase Act 2004 as the Regional Planning Body with responsibility for preparing the Regional Spatial Strategy, including the Regional Housing and Transport strategies on behalf of the relevant Secretary of State.

The Government have indicated they will give assemblies additional functions where they consider it appropriate. They have accepted the Barker recommendation that Regional Housing Boards and Regional Planning Bodies be merged and are currently considering responses from regional assemblies detailing how each would take on this new merged role.

Regional Housing Boards

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether regional housing boards will continue to operate from the Government Offices for the Regions. [51082]

Yvette Cooper: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister has already announced merging regional housing and planning functions by passing responsibility for the work of the Regional Housing Boards from the Government Offices to the Regional Assemblies (and in London the Mayor), which in each region is already the Regional Planning Body. The ODPM is working to effect these new arrangements by September 2006.

Rent Increases

Mr. Purchase: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister pursuant to the answer of 31 January 2006, Official Report, column 429W, if he will publish the consultation paper setting out the arrangements for compensating housing authorities that keep average rent increases to 5 per cent. in both 2006–07 and 2007–08. [48949]

Yvette Cooper: The intention is to adjust the housing revenue account (HRA) in year for housing authorities who keep rent rises to below 5 per cent. The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister expects to publish a consultation paper shortly on the mechanisms for adjustment.

Rent Restructuring

Sarah Teather: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will place in the Library the summary of responses to his Department's three year review of rent restructuring. [50544]

Yvette Cooper: A copy has been made available in the Libraries of both Houses.

Sarah Teather: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the impact of the introduction of greater differentials in rent for larger properties resulting from his Department's final housing revenue account subsidy determinations for 2006–07 on the income after housing costs of larger families. [50545]

Yvette Cooper: The introduction of greater differentials for five and six bedroom properties is intended to encourage landlords to provide more properties of this size, enabling more large households to move out of expensive, unsuitable and often overcrowded accommodation in the private rented sector.

No separate assessment was made as part of the annual housing revenue account subsidy determination exercise. Differentials were looked at as part of our wider policy assessment at the time of the three-year review of rent restructuring, when many respondents to the consultation welcomed the policy.

Rent Subsidy Rules

Sarah Teather: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what local authorities were granted a derogation from housing revenue account rent rebate subsidy limitation rules in 2005–06. [50546]

Yvette Cooper: There have been no applications for a derogation from rent rebate subsidy limitation in 2005–06.

Roadside Advertising

Ben Chapman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether his proposals to create a database of unauthorised roadside advertisement companies will include the sites on which they advertise. [50680]

Yvette Cooper: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister will liaise with local planning authorities on the type of information to be contained in the database of companies prosecuted for illegally advertising or selling illegal advertising alongside motorways and trunk roads.

Shropshire (Unitary Authority)

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the merits of Shropshire becoming a unitary authority. [49061]

Mr. Woolas: A consultation meeting was held on 7 February with stakeholders in Shropshire. No conclusions have been drawn.

Squatters

Mrs. Spelman: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what estimate the Government have made of the number of squatters in empty local authority housing. [48060]

Yvette Cooper: Information on the number of squatters in empty local authority housing is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Supermarkets (Planning Permission)

Keith Vaz: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what account is taken of competition issues when planning permission is considered for new supermarket stores. [49672]

Yvette Cooper: Planning policy statement 6: planning for town centres (PPS6) sets out the Government's planning policy for town centres and main town centre uses, which include retail. Statements of the Government's planning policy should be taken into account by those responsible for the preparation of both regional and local planning policy documents. Planning policy statements are also considerations which may be material to decisions on individual planning applications.

The Government's key objective for town centres is to promote their vitality and viability and PPS6 sets out other Government objectives which need to be taken into account in the context of this key objective. One of these is directed at supporting an efficient, competitive and innovative retail sector. In planning for additional development local planning authorities are also advised to provide for consumer choice by ensuring that provision is made for a range of sites for shopping and other main town centres uses to meet the needs of the whole community.

But PPS6 makes it clear that it is not the role of the planning system to restrict competition, preserve existing commercial interests or to prevent innovation. Each application for planning permission must be determined on its merits having regard to the policies in the relevant development plan and to any other material considerations. The Department of Trade and Industry (DTI) and the Office for Fair Trading (OFT) have overall responsibility for competition issues.

Swindon Borough Council

Mr. Wills: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what the total cost of officials from his Department engaged full-time in supporting Swindon borough council has been since 2003. [46887]

Mr. Woolas: No official from the ODPM has been engaged full-time in supporting Swindon borough council.

A lead official was appointed in 2002 to monitor Swindon borough council's improvement. That official is paid at rates within the salary range for a senior civil servant at pay band 1, ie minimum rate £54,788 to maximum rate £76,156. During the period concerned, between two and four days each week have on average been spent on work related to Swindon.

In addition £2 million has been provided, by ODPM and Department of Health, to support Swindon's improvement.

Telecommunication Transmitters

Peter Bottomley: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether he proposes to alter the scope and powers of local planning authorities in relation to telecommunication transmitters. [50419]

Yvette Cooper: On 4 April 2005 I announced that the Government would be commissioning research into the future direction of electronic communications technology, and the need for mast developments. This research will inform the ongoing review of the planning arrangements for such developments.

Thames Gateway

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the public sector bodies involved in the Thames Gateway development. [49715]

Yvette Cooper: The key partners are identified in "Creating Sustainable Communities: Delivering the Thames Gateway" (page 52), which sets out the Government's vision for and commitment to the Gateway. My right hon. Friend the Minister of Communities and Local Government announced last November that the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister will additionally be publishing a strategic framework to help shape and guide investments, decisions and actions by Government and our delivery partners across the Thames Gateway.

Traveller Sites

Colin Burgon: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the traveller sites provided by each of the five local authorities in West Yorkshire; and how many pitches (a) there are and (b) are currently occupied on each site. [52025]

Yvette Cooper: As at the date of the last bi-annual Gypsy and Traveller Caravan Count, undertaken on 19 July 2005, the Gypsy and Traveller sites provided by local authorities in West Yorkshire were:

Mary Street Gypsy Site, comprising 28 pitches, all occupied, and Esholt Gypsy Site, comprising 19 pitches, 16 of which were occupied, provided by City of Bradford metropolitan district council.

Cottingley Springs Site, comprising 41 pitches, all occupied, provided by Leeds city council.

Heath Travellers Site, comprising 39 pitches, 38 of which were occupied, provided by City of Wakefield metropolitan district council.

No sites are provided by Calderdale metropolitan borough council or Kirklees metropolitan council.

Valuation Office Agency

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what estimate (a) his Department and (b) the Valuation Office Agency made of the average size of (i) business premises which paid business rates and (ii) a Band D property in the last year for which estimates are available. [51061]

Mr. Woolas: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister produces estimates of commercial and industrial floorspace from data received from the Valuation Office Agency (VOA). Using these data, the average size of business premises in England and Wales at 1 April 2004 (the latest available data) was 433 m^2. The figure for England was 434 m^2 and for Wales it was 429 m^2.

These figures are based on bulk class premises, namely retail premises, offices, factories and warehouses. These types of commercial and industrial property have floorspace information available from the VOA.

The Valuation Office Agency has not separately produced any average size estimates for business premises.

Neither ODPM nor the Valuation Office Agency has produced any average size estimates for Band D properties.

Workplace Bullying/Racism

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what advice his Department has given to local authorities on reducing (a) bullying and (b) racism in the workplace. [49817]

Jim Fitzpatrick: The Office of the Deputy Prime Minister does not give advice to local authorities on tackling bullying and racism. This line of advice would be given to local authorities by local government organisations such as the Local Government Association, the Employers' Organisation and the Improvement and Development Agency, or by national organisations such as the Commission for Racial Equality.

EDUCATION AND SKILLS

Adoption

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many (a) same sex couples and (b) civil partners applied to adopt children between 30 December 2005 and the most recent date for which figures are available. [48756]

Ms Harman: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested is as follows:

(a) 10 adoption applications have been received from same sex couples since the 30 December 2005.

(b) Statistics for civil partners are not being collected.

Bullying

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what role school welfare officers play in preventing bullying and truancy in and from schools in Lancashire; and if she will make a statement. [51404]

Jacqui Smith: Education welfare officers help to identify the causes of poor attendance, such as bullying where that is a factor, and work with both schools and families to resolve attendance issues, arranging home visits where necessary.

In addition education welfare officers in Lancashire participate in regular truancy sweeps organised by the local authority and police.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what research her Department has (a) evaluated and (b) commissioned in the last three years on bullying in schools. [51724]

Jacqui Smith: The Department has not, in the last three years, evaluated any research on bullying in schools.

The Department commissioned an external evaluation of our guidance to schools on tackling bullying, "Don't Suffer in Silence", by researchers at Goldsmith's College, University of London. The results, though based on a fairly low response rate from schools, show that the schools found that the pack met their expectations and helped in drawing up their anti-bullying policies.

This evaluation included research into the perceived success of the anti bullying strategies and interventions recommended in the guidance. Schools generally reported a high level of satisfaction with the interventions they had used.

The Department commissioned the Thomas Coram Research Unit at the Institute of Education, University of London, to review the research evidence relating to homophobia in schools and to talk to groups with an interest in this area. The Department published their work in its Research Report series in late 2004, number 594, entitled "Homophobia, Sexual Orientation and Schools: A Review and Implications for Action".

Chesterton Community High School

Paul Farrelly: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills which of the features of trust school status she considers would contribute to the raising of standards at Chesterton community high school in Newcastle-under-Lyme. [51551]

Jacqui Smith: The opportunity to form partnerships with external organisations will strengthen trust schools' governing bodies, and help to invigorate school leadership by providing an external source of direction, continuity and focus for the school. Trust governors will help their schools to develop a distinctive ethos and approach to the curriculum and the organisation of the school, with a central focus on raising standards and creating new opportunities for children.

A trust could therefore contribute to the raising of standards at a school like Chesterton community high school by involving external partners in the leadership of the school in a sustainable way. However, it would be for the governing body of Chesterton community high school to determine whether to make a link to a trust. A trust could also encourage collaboration if it supported a number of schools in the area.

Child Care

Edward Miliband: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many child care places have been created in Doncaster North in each year since 1997. [50590]

Beverley Hughes: We do not have information relating specifically to the number of child care places in the Doncaster North constituency. Nor do we have information broken down to local authority level for the number of child care places for 1997 and 1998.

The following table show the number of new child care places created in the Doncaster local authority area since 1999.

	Gross new child care places	Net increase in child care places (after closures)
1999/2000	332	101
2000/01	1,006	588
2001/02	597	299
2002/03	1,238	770
2003/04	1,437	945
2004/05	1,245	852

Figures quoted for years 1999/2000 to 2001/02 are based on local authorities' quarterly child care returns to DfES. From March 2003 onwards the figures are drawn from Ofsted's registration data.

Child Protection

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many individuals convicted or cautioned for a sexual offence against children listed under schedule 3 of the Sexual Offences Act 2003 are not included on the Protection of Children Act 1978 List. [46657]

Ruth Kelly [holding answer 30 January 2006]: Since the establishment of the Protection of Children Act List all those individuals referred to the Secretary of State and who meet the criteria set out in legislation have been included in the Protection of Children Act List. That includes those people who have been referred with a caution or conviction for a sexual offence against children under schedule 3 of the Sexual Offences Act 2003.

The Protection of Children Act 1999 List is primarily a referral system for employers who have dismissed an individual for misconduct that harmed a child or placed a child at risk of harm. For all regulated/child care positions it is mandatory to check whether individuals are on the Protection of Children Act List prior to appointment (subject to exceptions where, for example, another specified organisation has carried out a check within the last 12 months). That check is carried out through a CRB check. The Protection of Children Act List provides an additional safeguard within the CRB system for a limited range of circumstances set out in legislation, for example where somebody employed in a regulated child care position has been dismissed because they harmed a child.

Civil Servant Relocations

Mr. Gauke: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many employees of (a) her Department and (b) the Office for Standards in Education have been redeployed from London and the South East since July 2004; and how many she expects to be redeployed in this way in the next two financial years. [50968]

Maria Eagle: My Department and sponsored organisations are implementing the Lyons Review recommendations to relocate around 800 posts from the Department and its non-departmental public bodies out of London and the South East by 2010.

During the financial year 2004–05, 58 posts in DfES were relocated from London to our existing offices in Runcorn, Sheffield and Darlington. So far in 2005–06, 21 posts have been relocated and up to a further nine posts will have relocated by the end of period. There has been no redeployment of staff from London to fill these posts. There are no plans to redeploy staff out of London in the next two financial years.

At 1 July 2004, Ofsted has just over 750 office-based posted in London and the South East. Ofsted estimate that by June 2006 there will be 360 office-based posts in London, as a result of their restructuring programme to meet the Government's efficiency target. To date, 30 staff have been redeployed to other Ofsted offices outside London and the South East and 49 staff have been redeployed to posts elsewhere in the civil service. Ofsted has no plans for further redeployment in the next two financial years.

Computer-based Marking

Mr. Gauke: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps she has taken to extend computer-based marking. [51311]

Jacqui Smith: The Qualifications and Curriculum Authority, which regulates qualifications in England, has responsibility for ensuring that ICT is used appropriately and efficiently for examinations and tests. Some awarding bodies are piloting use of ICT to support marking of a range of different qualifications. Already, over 600,000 on-screen tests have been taken successfully by people seeking to gain key skills qualifications and skills for life certificates.

Within the national curriculum test context, a new test in ICT at key stage 3, to be taken on-screen and marked by computer, is being developed, and subject to a successful pilot, will be introduced in 2008.

Consultants

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much her Department has spent on outside consultants in each of the last five financial years. [51727]

Bill Rammell: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Angus (Mr. Weir) on 31 January 2006, Official Report, column 340W.

Consultation (Youth Issues)

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the outcome of the consultations on youth matters was; what steps she plans to take as a result of those consultations; and if she will make a statement. [51210]

Maria Eagle: There was a record response to the consultation on the Youth Matters Green Paper, which attracted over 19,000 completed questionnaires from young people and 1,000 submissions from organisations, professionals and parents. They generally welcomed the proposals, with strong support for more opportunities for young people and empowering them to make decisions and influence provision. We will shortly publish the Government response and plans to implement the proposals.

Corporate Services

Mr. Gauke: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what measures she has taken to improve the efficiency of corporate services functions within further education colleges; and what savings have been made as a consequence. [52399]

Bill Rammell: As part of the Learning and Skills Council's (LSC) agenda for change business excellence strand, the LSC will develop and share with colleges benchmarking data showing the relative efficiency of colleges' corporate services. Providing this information will demonstrate to colleges the potential for them to reduce spending on these services to current sector averages, increasing their own ability to deliver to the front line.

We will be measuring efficiency gains from a range of specific initiatives which contribute to our Gershon efficiency target, including corporate services efficiencies in colleges. These are set out in our efficiency technical note. In most cases, the gains are recyclable at the frontline into other activities rather than being clawed back by the Department. The Department is reporting progress towards our overall efficiency target through existing departmental reporting processes. We reported progress towards our target in the Department's autumn performance report and will report further progress in the departmental annual report which we expect to publish in April.

Departmental Entertainment

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much was spent on entertainment by her Department in 2004–05; and how much of that sum is accounted for by (a) food, (b) alcohol, (c) staff and (d) accommodation. [50888]

Maria Eagle: All expenditure on official entertainment is made in accordance with Departmental guidance on financial procedures and propriety, based on the principles set out in Government Accounting. The Department for Education and Skills spent a total of £35,000 on entertainment in 2004–05. It is not possible to split these figures into the elements requested. The figures exclude costs incurred as part of official events or formal meetings held to further Departmental business.

Early Years Education

Edward Miliband: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many three and four-year-olds in Doncaster North constituency have received (a) 12.5 hours a week, (b) 15 hours a week and (c) 20 hours a week of free early-years education in each year since 1997. [50591]

Beverley Hughes: Information is not collected in the form requested.

All four-year-olds have been entitled to a free early education place since 1998 and from April 2004 this entitlement was extended to all three-year-olds. The free entitlement consists of a minimum of five two and a half hour sessions per week for 33 weeks of the year for six terms before statutory school age, which is the term following their fifth birthday. This will increase to 38 weeks from 1 April 2006 and to 15 hours a week by 2010. By that time, parents who wish to do so will also be able to access the free entitlement flexibly across a minimum of three days.

Some local authorities may additionally offer subsidised child care places but this information is not collected centrally.

Figures for January 2005 show that all four-year-old children receive some form of free entitlement. The figure for three-years-olds is 96 per cent. This covers all maintained, private, voluntary and independent providers and represents 535,100 three-year-olds and 568,300 four-year-olds.

In January 2005 in Doncaster North constituency there were 800 free nursery places taken up by three-year-old children. The equivalent figure for four-year-olds was 940.

The latest figures on early education places for three and four-year-olds in England were published in Statistical First Release 43/2005 "Provision for children under five years of age in England—January 2005 (final)" in September, which is available on my Department's website at:

http://www.dfes.gov.uk/rsgateway/DB/SFR/s000604/index.shtml

Erasmus Lifelong Learning Programme

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what level of support for the Erasmus Lifelong Learning programme has been agreed for the UK for each of the years from 2007 to 2013. [51194]

Bill Rammell: The EU Education Council, which my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Education and Skills, chaired on 15 November 2005, reached a partial political agreement on the new lifelong learning programme for 2007–13, which includes Erasmus. This agreement covered all aspects of the programme except the budget, which was subject to agreement on the overall EU budget.

While the December European Council reached agreement on the overall EC budget for the new financial perspective period 2007–13, the level of support for the Erasmus programme will depend on the outcome of negotiations with the European Parliament on both the overall size of the budget and the share of the relevant heading to be spent on the lifelong learning programme, and within that for Erasmus. Once this has been agreed, later this year, the programme will then return to the Education Council for the outstanding issues to be negotiated and for a political agreement to be sought. Only then will it be possible to determine the national allocations for each programme.

Foster Care Allowances

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment she has made of whether the proposed level of minimum foster care allowances are adequate; and what representations she has received from (a) representative, (b) expert and (c) voluntary groups in the field of fostering on the level of these allowances. [51838]

Maria Eagle: The national minimum allowance proposed in our consultation is based on thorough consideration of the research available into the cost of caring for a child and on the additional costs associated specifically with fostering children. The steering group that contributed to the development of the proposals included key stakeholders such as the Fostering Network and the British Association of Adoption and Fostering, local authority representatives, members of voluntary organisations, fostering services and others. Focus groups of foster carers, children with experience of foster care and fostering services also informed the consultation paper. It is too early to report on representations received in response to the consultation, which was launched on 31 January and will run for three months. We will produce a report on the consultation response in early summer, before announcing the level of the national minimum allowance in July.

Freedom of Information Act

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what total sum has been received by her Department for the provision of information under the Freedom of Information Act 2000 in its first year of operation. [48471]

Maria Eagle: The Department for Education and Skills has not charged for the provision of any information under the Freedom of Information Act 2000.

The Freedom of Information Act allows for public authorities to determine when the cost of processing a request will exceed the appropriate limit, which for central Government is set at £600 and for the wider public sector £450. In this instance the public authority may decide to either approach the applicant to help them refine their request and where possible to bring it under the appropriate limit. Alternatively, public authorities may charge the applicant the cost of processing the request. There is, however, no obligation for Departments to provide information if the cost of processing the request exceeds the appropriate limit.

Public authorities may also charge for disbursements when handling requests where it is deemed appropriate. Further information on the FOI fees regime can be found on the DCA website at http://www.foi.gov.uk/feesguide.htm

Further Education

Mr. Rob Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much funding was made available to further education colleges in (a) 2004–05, (b) 2003–04 and (c) 2002–03. [50801]

Bill Rammell: Information about the total Learning and Skills Council's (LSC) post-16 programme expenditure for all further education (FE) providers including colleges is available from the LSC's published accounts as follows:

	£ billion
2002–03	4,399
2003–04	4,788
2004–05	5,080

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what arrangements are required for the vetting of staff in further education colleges, with particular reference to those in contact with pupils aged under 16. [46225]

Maria Eagle: We have made it clear in guidance that CRB checks are strongly recommended as part of the appointment process on anybody who will be working in a school or further education institution.

Arrangements for the vetting of staff working in further education colleges are set out in the Department's guidance "Child Protection: Preventing Unsuitable People from Working with Children in the Education Service" (issued May 2002) which states that > "Teachers, other staff and volunteers whose job regularly caring for, training, supervising or being in sole charge of children under 18 years of age should obtain an Enhanced Disclosure'.

The guidance, 'Criminal Records Bureau: Managing the Demand for Disclosures' (issued December 2002), provides further advice about seeking disclosures.

"Safeguarding children in education" (September 2004) emphasises the wider responsibilities on employers including adopting recruitment practices which involve scrutinising applicants, verifying any qualifications, obtaining references, checking previous job history as well as the mandatory check of List 99 and CRB check where appropriate.

Recent changes announced by the Secretary of State mean that existing arrangements detailed in the above guidance will be strengthened through the introduction of new regulations which will make an on appointment CRB check compulsory for all new appointments of teachers and teaching support staff in a further education institution who have not worked in a further education institution or school in the last three months.

Mr. Gauke: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what measures she has undertaken to improve procurement in the further education sector; and what assessment she has made of the effect of these measures on costs. [52041]

Bill Rammell: The Learning and Skills Council has recently established a procurement development team to drive forward improved procurement in the FE sector, working closely with the Centre for Procurement Performance at the Department for Education and Skills. Significant progress has been made over recent months including:

the establishment of a sector network to trial new approaches and disseminate good practice;

the development of an FE good practice guide to procurement across the sector; raising awareness of the use of procurement cards;

developing a programme to improve procurement skills in the sector; and conducting a pilot of an e-procurement system.

We will be measuring efficiency gains from a range of specific initiatives which contribute to our Gershon efficiency target, including improved procurement in the FE sector. These are set out in our Efficiency Technical Note. In most cases, the gains are recyclable at the frontline into other activities rather than being clawed back by the Department. The Department is reporting progress towards our overall efficiency target through existing departmental reporting processes. We reported progress towards our target in the Department's autumn performance report and will report further progress in the departmental annual report which we expect to publish in April.

Higher Education

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many applications to higher education institutions there were for the (a) 2006/07, (b) 2005/06 and (c) 2004/05 academic year; and if she will make a statement. [44183]

Bill Rammell: Latest figures published by Universities and Colleges Admissions Service (UCAS) show that, between 2004/05 and 2005/06, total applicants from England to full-time undergraduate courses rose from 339,967 to 368,801, an increase of 8.5 per cent.

Latest figures for 2006/07, covering students who applied by mid-January, show that applicants from England are down by 4.5 per cent., from 284,359 to 271,663. Given the big increase in applications last year, it is not unexpected that this year's UCAS application figures reveal a fall in comparison. But applications this year are still up by 12,500 (or 4.8 per cent.) compared to the corresponding figure in 2004, and I am confident that we will continue to see a return to a long term upward trend as happened after tuition fees were introduced in 1998. Figures from UCAS also show that there has been no reduction in the proportion of students from lower socio-economic groups applying to university.

International Student Assessment Study

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment she has made of (a) the key outcomes from the most recent Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development's Programme for International Student Assessment study and (b) the implications of the study for education policy in England; and if she will make a statement. [51471]

Jacqui Smith: Because of our low participation rates in the Programme for International Student Assessment (PISA), it was the view of the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD), that the data for the United Kingdom from the 2003 study could not be reliably used. It would therefore be inappropriate to try to draw conclusions for education policy in England from the data.

The Government believe that international comparisons studies, such as PISA, offer unique and valuable insights into how the outcomes of our education system compare with those of other countries. That is why the Department for Education and Skills is putting its efforts into meeting the targets for school and pupil participation rates for the next PISA study which will take place later this year.

However, in assessing the outcomes of any such studies, we will keep in mind the conclusions of the Education and Skills Select Committee in its Fifth Report of Session 2004–05, published on 9 March 2005, that > "the data supplied by international educational comparisons is both of interest and of use in the formulation of education policy. Nevertheless, individual studies always have their limitations and cannot alone form a sound basis on which to build the foundations of a publicly funded school system".

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what her Department's participation was in the most recent Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development's Programme for International Student Assessment study; and when that participation commenced. [51472]

Jacqui Smith: Ministers agreed to participate in the OECD's Programme for International Student Assessment (PISA) on 2 August 2000. Since 1997 the Department has been involved in the overall development of PISA through its membership of the international PISA Governing Board.

As sponsor of the PISA study in England the Department appointed the Office for National Statistics (ONS) as data collection contractor for PISA 2003, after a tendering exercise. ONS collected data from a sample of schools chosen by the independent PISA Consortium which leads the study internationally. ONS supplied the resulting data directly to the Consortium. The Department published a Statistical First Release on 7 December 2004, detailing the status of the England and UK data.

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the response rate was for participation in the most recent Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development's Programme for International Student Assessment study; and which other OECD member countries achieved a similar response rate. [51476]

Jacqui Smith: The school and pupil response rates for the United Kingdom and other OECD countries for PISA 2003 are set out in the table as follows.

	Weighted school participation rate after replacement (Percentage)
	Final sample—after school replacement	Final sample—students within schools after school replacement

IT Equipment

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much funding her Department has allocated for IT equipment in schools in (a) West Lancashire and (b) England in each year between 1997 and 2005. [51117]

Phil Hope: The Department does not hold information on funding for ICT at constituency level. However, West Lancashire is in Lancashire LA and allocations for this authority, since 1998, are detailed in 'Funding for ICT in Schools in England" which is available in the House Library. The document also includes total funding allocations for schools in England in each year.

Learning Environments

Mr. Gauke: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment she has made of changes in the productivity of teaching staff as a consequence of use of (a) virtual learning environments and (b) managed learning environments. [51312]

Jacqui Smith: The Department for Education and Skills has asked the British Educational Communications and Technology Agency (Becta) to undertake a study to assess the impact of both virtual learning environments and managed learning environments on the productive time of the front line workforce. This study will report in April 2006.

Level 2 Qualifications

Kelvin Hopkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 16 January 2006, Official Report, column 1011W, on Level 2 Qualifications, how many EU member states have taken up the Level 2 entitlement since it was introduced. [51787]

Phil Hope: The latest full year volumes available are for academic year 2004/05 in which the Level 2 Entitlement (L2E) pilot was operating in the North East and South East regions only. The number of learners from national EU member states benefiting from free tuition for a first full Level 2 qualification in the L2E pilot regions in 2004/05 was less than ten from a cohort of 2,795 learners.

Lisbon Objectives

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what plans she has to achieve the Lisbon objectives for education; and if she will make a statement. [51195]

Bill Rammell: The UK Government outlined its plans to achieve the Lisbon objectives in its national reform plan published in October 2005. This described how our national education and skills policies are contributing to the Lisbon objectives, in particular, through raising productivity and thereby contributing to economic growth.

Local Area Agreements

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills when she expects to issue guidelines to local authorities on their commissioning role under local area agreements. [51207]

Jacqui Smith: Local area agreements are voluntary, three year agreements between central Government and local authorities and their partners. 66 phase two agreements, starting in April 2006, are currently being finalised on the basis of guidance issued in June 2005. This guidance is being reviewed, and will be revised as necessary in respect of phase three agreements to be negotiated in 2006–07.

Looked-after Children

Mr. Kidney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many looked after children were placed out of area by local authorities in the latest year for which the data are available; and what proportion of the total this represents. [51842]

Maria Eagle: I refer the hon. member to my answer of 18 July 2005, Official Report, column 1402W.

Physical Education

Mr. Andy Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what average number of hours per week of physical education was undertaken in (a) primary and (b) secondary schools in Loughborough constituency area in 2004–05. [51126]

Jacqui Smith: The 2004–05 national school sport survey found that pupils in primary schools in the Burleigh school sport partnership in Loughborough spend an average of 95 minutes in a typical week on curriculum physical education (PE). The average time for pupils in secondary schools in the partnership is 111 minutes.

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will take steps to ensure that facilities for physical education and sport at Southfield school, Kettering enable the school to make provision for all pupils to participate in two hours of high quality physical education and sport each week. [52431]

Jacqui Smith: It is the responsibility of the schools and local authorities to determine how they allocate capital funds to different projects, including enhancing school sports facilities, taking account of local needs and priorities.

Over the last three years, we have allocated over £191 million to Northamptonshire and schools in its area, which includes Southfield school, of which £101 million relates to a PFI contract and over £4 million to a Targeted Capital Fund (TCP) Scheme. In the next two years, 2006–07 and 2007–08, we are allocating over £65 million to the local authority, including £12 million for TCP schemes. Officials have been informed that Northamptonshire county council is considering how the facilities at Southfield school might be improved.

The Government are investing £750 million in the New Opportunities for PE and Sport Programme across the United Kingdom over the period 2003–04 to 2007–08. £581 million was allocated to England, of which £25 million was passed to the Space for Sport and the Arts Programme and £30 million set aside for football projects within schools to be distributed via the Football Foundation. Of the £581 million allocated to England, £556 million has been committed to date and over £191 million spent.

The Government's publication, Schools for the Future, Inspirational Design for PE and Sport Spaces, can be downloaded from www.teachernet.gov.uk/publications, using reference 2064–2005DOC-EN.

Postgraduate Courses

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what steps her Department is taking to encourage children from families on low income to pursue postgraduate courses. [49614]

Bill Rammell: The Government are committed to encouraging people from all backgrounds to take up research careers, and this includes making the career choice a more attractive one and the career more secure. As part of this, we have provided funding for an increase of one-third in the minimum Research Council PhD stipend between 2003–04 and 2005–06.

The available evidence suggests that, once people qualify with a first degree qualification, their background does not significantly affect their decision to enter postgraduate study. The 2005 report "Young Participation in Higher Education", by the Higher Education Funding Council for England (HEFCE), estimates that the degree of inequality between young postgraduate participation rates is similar to that of young undergraduate students suggesting that the effects of background are negligible at this stage.

Our policies to widen participation at undergraduate level, including our reforms to student finance, and the Aimhigher programme which seeks to raise the attainment levels of young people and their aspirations to university, are therefore also likely to help to widen participation at postgraduate level.

Public Information

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how much was spent on the Department's public relations and information services in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [48961]

Bill Rammell: The following table lists spend on public relations and information services for the Department of Education and Skills, in each of the last five years.

School Bus Passes

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what rules apply to the provision of school bus passes to (a) junior and (b) high school children. [51402]

Jacqui Smith: There are no specific rules relating to the provision of bus passes.

Under current legislation local education authorities (LEAs) have a legal duty to make transport arrangements, which might include bus passes, where they consider it 'necessary' to secure a pupil's attendance at school. The law stipulates that it must always be considered 'necessary' where a child of compulsory school age attends their nearest suitable school, and this is beyond 'statutory walking distance' (two miles for those under the age of eight and three miles for those aged eight and over).

School Playing Fields

Mr. Andy Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills how many school playing fields in Loughborough constituency have been sold since May 1997. [51125]

Jacqui Smith: We have not approved any application involving the sale of a school playing field in Loughborough constituency since May 1997.

School Psychologists

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the average waiting time is for a child in Lancashire to see a school psychologist. [51403]

Maria Eagle: This information is not collected centrally.

School Sport Facilities

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what funding her Department has made available for improvements to school sports facilities in (a) Tamworth and (b) England in each year between 1997 and 2005. [51415]

Jacqui Smith: Significant funding is being provided specifically to enhance PE and school sport facilities between 2001 and 2009. In total, £686 million of lottery funding is providing a step change in school sport facilities through the space for sport and arts and big lottery's new opportunities for PE and sport programmes.

Local authorities and schools may supplement this with the formula capital funding that we provide to them. However, it is the responsibility of the schools and local authorities to determine how they allocate these funds to different projects, including enhancing school sports facilities, taking account of local needs and priorities. Records are not held centrally that show how much of this funding is spent on school sports facilities, neither am I able to provide a breakdown for Tamworth.

Schoolchildren (Employment)

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills (1) what estimate she has made of the number of children who work before school; what types of employment they are engaged in; and how many children are estimated to be employed in each type; [50267]

(2) if she will make a statement on her Department's assessment of the impact on children of carrying out paid work before the start of the school day. [50273]

Maria Eagle: The information requested is not collected centrally. Local authority bylaws establish in general what work children may undertake. Such bylaws may permit children to work for one hour before school, although not before 7 am. This limits the kind of work that children may legally carry out in the mornings before school. Within these limits, participation in suitable work is a matter for individual choice, with advice where necessary from parents, carers, and other relevant adults. Such work can offer young people an opportunity to develop their self-confidence and life skills, such as personal organisation and dealing with people.

Sector Skills Councils

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will rank the licensed Sector Skills Councils by proportion of their funding derived from the Sector Skills Development Agency in the last year for which figures are available; and what proportion of the balance of funding for each council was derived from (a) other public sources and (b) the private sector. [51279]

Phil Hope: The list shows the Sector Skills Councils ranked by proportion of their funding derived from the Sector Skills Development Agency. They are ranked highest to lowest by proportion of income (top to bottom of the list). Only the first 18 are ranked. The information is based on data collated in July 2005. Data was not available for the new/unlicensed SSCs at that point and ConstructionSkills is an outlier.

Information on the proportion of balance funding derived from (a) the public sector and (b) the private sector is not given as the release of this information would prejudice commercial interests.

Services Education

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills pursuant to the answer of 2 February 2006, Official Report, column 686W, on services education, how many admission forums have service representatives sitting on them. [51383]

Jacqui Smith: The Department does not collect information about the membership of admission forums. The Children's Education Advisory Service (CEAS), an agency of the Ministry of Defence that supports service families, believe that the CEAS, along with some Army and RAF welfare personnel, are represented on 15 admission forums.

Setting

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what guidance her Department has issued regarding setting children by ability in schools. [51788]

Jacqui Smith: We have published case studies, research evidence and, through our National Strategies and Gifted and Talented programmes, issued guidance to schools to help support their own professional judgement when considering a range of ability grouping practices to better meet the learning needs of pupils and ensure their progression.

Skills Training (Universities)

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will make a statement on the provision of key skills training in universities. [51728]

Bill Rammell: Higher Education Institutions (HEIs) are autonomous organisations and are therefore responsible for assuring the quality and standards of their own provision. However, there are a number of national measures in place to assist institutions in maintaining and continually improving standards, and to safeguard the public interest in sound quality and standards in higher education. These measures include the Quality Assurance Agency for higher education (QAA) and the Higher Education Academy, a sector owned body, set up to enhance teaching and learning in universities and colleges.

Special Needs

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what assessment she has made of the adequacy of special needs education funding in Hertfordshire; and if she will make a statement. [51153]

Jacqui Smith: Local authorities have a duty to make appropriate provision for all pupils in their area, including those with special educational needs (SEN), through their locally agreed funding formula. In common with other authorities, Hertfordshire has benefited from the significant increases in funding that this Government have committed to education since 1997 and is set to receive an increase of 13.2 per cent. per pupil in its dedicated schools grant over the next two years.

Teacher Training

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what the cohort size of each school-centred initial teacher training scheme is; and what the percentage change in the cohort size of each scheme is for the (a) 2006–07 and (b) 2007–08 allocation round. [51475]

Jacqui Smith: The cohort size of each school-centred initial teacher training scheme and the percentage change in cohort size for the 2006–07 and 2007–08 allocation round is provided in the following table.

Veterinary Students

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills if she will include veterinary students in the exemption from tuition fees. [51439]

Bill Rammell: The Education (Student Support) Regulations 2006, which come into effect from September this year, do not exempt any group of students from the payment of tuition fees.

From September, no eligible, full-time students will have to pay tuition fees before they start their course or while they are studying as they will be able to take out a fee loan to cover the full cost of their fees.

Some students, exceptionally, have their tuition fees paid in full or part for specific courses leading to public sector employment, including medical courses and some teacher training courses. These schemes are funded by the relevant Government Departments.

Youth Support Services

Mr. Willis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Skills what role she expects for (a) the voluntary and (b) private sectors in the delivery of youth support services following commissioning under local area agreements. [51193]

Maria Eagle: We recognise the important role of the voluntary sector in developing and delivering services to young people, particularly those experiencing disadvantage. We are also keen to draw in the contribution of the private sector in planning and delivering a variety of opportunities for young people. Local area agreements, involving local authorities and a wide range of local partners, are an important part of these processes. Government offices, who negotiate agreements on behalf of central Government, need to be satisfied that all appropriate partners have been brought into the development, negotiation and delivery of each agreement.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Agriculture Budget

Mr. Dunne: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what proportion of the agricultural budget from the EU for the UK reached UK farmers in (a) 2004 and (b) 2005. [50685]

Jim Knight: The major category of budgetary expenditure, under pillar I of the Common Agricultural Policy (CAP), paid to producers is direct payments. Direct payments are paid directly to producers whose entitlement (prior to decoupling) was typically based on area of cropland or numbers of livestock.

According to the EU Commission's FEOGA—Garantie: Depenses documents total CAP expenditure in the UK was £4.0 billion in the 2004 budget year and £4.2 billion in 2005. Using the definition of 'direct payments' in the Commission's provisional draft budget for 2006, the share going on direct payments to producers was estimated to be approximately 82 per cent. in both 2004 and 2005.

In addition producers gain from expenditure on market price support (largely export refunds and intervention purchasing and storage costs). Expenditure on market price support measures is paid to intervention agencies or exporters, however, producers benefit from the higher market prices generated by these market interventions.

Producers also receive expenditure on CAP pillar II measures (agri-environment schemes and rural development).

Mr. Dunne: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what proportion of the total agricultural budget of the EU reached farmers in the EU in (a) 2004 and (b) 2005. [50686]

Jim Knight: The major category of budgetary expenditure, under Pillar 1 of the Common Agricultural Policy (CAP), paid to producers is direct payments. Direct payments are paid directly to producers whose entitlement (prior to decoupling) was typically based on area of cropland or numbers of livestock.

According to the EU Commission's Provisional Draft Budget for 2006, total expenditure under the CAP was €43.3 billion in the 2004 budget year and €48.8 billion in 2005. Using the definition of 'direct payments' in the same source the share going on direct payments to producers was estimated to be 69 per cent. in 2004 and 68 per cent. in 2005.

In addition producers gain from expenditure on market price support (largely export refunds and intervention purchasing and storage costs). Expenditure on market price support measures is paid to intervention agencies or exporters, however, producers benefit from the higher market prices generated by these market interventions.

Producers also receive expenditure on CAP Pillar II measures (agri-environment schemes and rural development).

Animal Welfare Bill

Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to the answer of 25 January 2006, Official Report, column 298W, on the Animal Welfare Bill, if she will list the dates of each meeting held; who attended; and what matters were discussed. [51646]

Mr. Bradshaw: Since 2001 the Department has held numerous meetings on the Animal Welfare Bill with the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals and the British Veterinary Association. Representatives of the Council of Docked Breeds have attended meetings relating to the docking of dogs' tails. It would not be practical to list the dates, attendees and matters discussed.

Avian Influenza

Robert Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what precautions she recommends should be taken by owners of flocks of fewer than 50 birds to minimise risks associated with the spread of avian influenza; [52139]

(2) what mechanisms she is using to inform owners of avian flocks under 50 birds of their responsibilities in the event of an outbreak of avian influenza in the UK; and what advice she has provided to them. [52140]

Mr. Bradshaw: Owners of all poultry flocks should follow the guidance on strengthening biosecurity measures set out in the leaflets, posters and advertisements that Defra has issued very widely.

We also recommend that owners of less than 50 birds should register their flocks under the GB Poultry Register. In the event of an outbreak, this will help us to communicate with them more effectively, to alert them and provide them with necessary guidance.

Bass Fishing

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the effect on charter boats in the South West of her proposal to increase the minimum length of bass that can be landed. [52333]

Mr. Bradshaw: Defra's Consultation on measures to increase the number and size of bass closed on 8 February 2006. The partial Regulatory Impact Assessment issued as part of the Consultation set out our assessment of the costs and benefits of the proposed measures and sought comments on this assessment.

There have been a large number of responses from stakeholders to the consultation, including from charter boat interests. Once an analysis of responses and the information provided has been completed, I will make an announcement on next steps.

Blueberries

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what was the total cost of imports of blueberries in (a) 2002 and (b) 2005. [51271]

Jim Knight: Blueberry trade is not recorded separately, it is recorded under the category 'other berries' which also includes, amongst others, blackberries, mulberries and loganberries. In 2002 the total value of imports for this category was £2.0 million. For the period January to November 2005 the total value of imports for this category was £5.0 million.

Bovine TB

Nick Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the annual Government expenditure on (a) farmer compensation and (b) testing and veterinary costs for bovine tuberculosis has been since 1998. [46732]

Mr. Bradshaw: The information is as follows.

Government expenditure on tuberculosis compensation, testing and veterinary costs since 1998

	Testing and veterinary costs	Farmer compensation
1998–99	6.61	2.36

Burma

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much the Government have spent on projects promoting wild bat surveys in Burma in the last five years. [52465]

Jim Knight: Defra's Darwin Initiative has funded one project on bat surveys in Burma in the last five years. This project was to provide a national database for bats from limestone karst areas, an action plan for cave bats, and management plans for key karst areas. The Darwin Initiative committed a total of £120,000 to this project, spread over three years to March 2005.

Climate Change

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to the answer of 9 February 2006, Official Report, column 1350W, on climate change, if she will list the other Government Departments with whom her Department has been working closely. [52637]

Mr. Morley: We have been working closely with other Government Departments through a number of ministerial groups, including: the Sustainable Energy Policy Network, the Ministerial Committee on Energy and Environment (EE) and the sub committee on Sustainable Development (EE (SD).

The Departments represented on these groups are:

No. 10,
Office of the Deputy Prime Minister,
Her Majesty's Treasury,
Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs,
Cabinet Office,
Home Office,
Foreign and Commonwealth Office,
Ministry of Defence,
Department for Trade and Industry,
Department for Transport,
Department for Environment Food and Rural Affairs, Department for Culture Media and Sport,
Department for Health,
Department for International Development,
Department for Constitutional Affairs,
Department for Education and Skills,
Department for Work and Pensions,
Scotland Office,
Northern Ireland Office,
Wales Office,
Office of Science and Technology.

Peter Law: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what her assessment is of the most cost-effective way to mitigate the projected climate change set out in the document Avoiding Dangerous Climate Change, published by her Department on 30 January. [50224]

Mr. Morley: The most effective way to mitigate the effects of climate change described in Avoiding Dangerous Climate Change is by a response as broadly based as possible. This needs to involve adaptation as well as emissions reduction. Emissions reduction should address all anthropogenic greenhouse gases and all economic sectors, including reduction of emissions from deforestation, and there should be enhancement of the uptake and storage of carbon by forests and soils. It will be most cost effective if action to limit and reduce emissions extends to the greatest possible number of countries, consistent with the principle of common but differentiated responsibility set out in the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change and the Kyoto Protocol. The framework provided by the Convention and the Protocol will facilitate function of market mechanisms which promote cost effectiveness.

Commercial Developments (Energy Efficiency Standards)

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps the Government are taking to ensure that new commercial developments are built to the highest energy efficiency standards; and if she will make a statement. [49537]

Yvette Cooper: I have been asked to reply.

On 13 September 2005, I announced improvements to the energy efficiency standards set out in Part L of the Building Regulations. The Part L changes come into effect in April 2006 and will make a major contribution to the UK's commitment to combat climate change delivering increased energy standards of up to 27 per cent. for new commercial buildings. In support of these changes, the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister is working with the construction industry, including building control bodies to facilitate improved compliance.

Departmental Entertainment

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much was spent on entertainment by her Department in 2004–05; and how much of that sum is accounted for by (a) food, (b) alcohol, (c) staff and (d) accommodation. [50887]

Jim Knight: The figures include expenditure on official entertainment made in accordance with the principles set out in "Government Accounting" and can range from tea and biscuits to catering for major events at which the Department—at official or Ministerial level—discusses a range of issues from high-level policy issues to highly technical, legal and scientific issues. All such expenditure is made in accordance with published departmental guidance on financial procedures and propriety.

Defra recognises and endorses that the expenditure of taxpayers' money on official hospitality is a highly sensitive matter and the slightest hint of casualness can lead to disproportionate adverse public reaction.

Offering hospitality should not be regarded as the normal way of conducting Departmental business nor should it be offered merely because it is pleasant to provide it; indeed it is desirable to avoid the impression that business cannot be conducted without hospitality or entertainment.

On each occasion Defra officials are required to consider carefully what form and extent of hospitality should be offered and if it can be justified—by both the host and the authorising officer—bearing in mind the need for economy and the limited funds available.

Defra 2004–05	£
Food	132,818
Alcohol	4,848
Staff	65,453
Accommodation	60,674
Other	134,110
Total	397,903

Included in the 'Other' category are transactions which, owing to the limitations of information within our accounting ledger, cannot be classified into the categories asked for.

Departmental Staff

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many people were employed by the (a) Centre for Environment, Fisheries and Aquaculture Science, (b) Office of Water Services, (c) Veterinary Laboratories Agency, (d) Central Science Laboratory, (e) Veterinary Medicines Directorate, (f) Department of Environment, Food and Rural Affairs and (g) Pesticides Safety Directorate in each of the last 12 months for which information is available; and how many and what percentage of posts were vacant in each region in each month. [51162]

Jim Knight: The figures requested are published in Civil Service Statistics. Table A covers staff numbers (on a FTE and headcount basis) for each organisation. Civil service statistics are available in the Library and at the following address on the Cabinet Office Statistics website: http://www.civilservice.gov.uk/management/statistics/index.asp

Information on the number and percentage of vacant posts in each region and each month could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Engagements

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs on what date a Minister from her Department last visited Shropshire. [50103]

Jim Knight: A Minister from this Department last visited Shropshire on 25 February 2005.

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will visit the Minsterley Agricultural Show this year in the hon. Member for Shrewsbury's constituency. [51239]

Jim Knight: No decisions have been reached yet on ministerial attendance at agricultural shows in 2006.

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will visit the Wroxeter Vineyard in Shrewsbury constituency to discuss the impact of Government regulations on the development of English vineyards. [51240]

Jim Knight: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has no immediate plans to visit an English vineyard having visited one just last month. However, my officials will be engaging with industry representatives in the coming months to discuss the impact of the EU wine regime on the UK in the context of European Commission thinking to reform the regime.

Farm Incomes

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the average annual income of (a) dairy, (b) beef, (c) arable, (d) mixed and (e) sheep farmers in (i) England and (ii) Lancashire was in each of the last three years. [50975]

Jim Knight: Data on farm incomes according to the classification in the question are not available. The average net farm income for similar farm types in England and Lancashire over the last three years are shown in the table. Data for some farm types are missing due to insufficient farms in the sample.

Farm Business Survey

Net farm income is defined as the return to the principal farmer and spouse for their manual and managerial labour and on the tenant type capital of the business.

Rosie Cooper: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the (a) percentage and (b) real terms changes in total income from farming were in West Lancashire in each of the last four years. [51114]

Jim Knight: Estimates of total income from farming are not available for West Lancashire. However, statistical models are used to produce estimates for the whole of Lancashire which are given in the following table. It should be noted that these estimates are subject to sampling and other sources of statistical error and therefore need to be treated with caution.

	Total income from farming		Total income from farming in real terms (2005 prices)
	£ million	Percentage change	£ million	Percentage change

GM Imports

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the recent World Trade Organisation ruling on the EU decision to help block new GM imports. [52236]

Mr. Morley: Owing to the WTO rules, I am unable to go into the details of the interim panel report at this stage. These rules stipulate that an interim panel report is confidential, and is only circulated to the parties to the dispute in order for them to send comments to the panel. However, once the final report is issued, this will be made publicly available.

Light Bulbs

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the merits of banning incandescent light bulbs on grounds of their relative inefficiency. [51766]

Mr. Morley: The Government remains fully committed to raising product standards and encouraging consumers to use the most efficient products available. The Government cannot itself though, simply ban or otherwise prevent the free trade in such products on the basis of their energy efficiency and therefore no assessment of the merits of banning incandescent light bulbs has been made. This would be reliant on the European Commission, other member states and the European Parliament agreeing that this was necessary.

National Wildlife Crime Intelligence Unit

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to her answer of 31 January 2006, Official Report, column 372W, on the National Wildlife Crime Intelligence Unit, what options are under consideration for the future location of the National Wildlife Crime Intelligence Unit; what implications its relocation will have for its resourcing; and when she expects to reach a decision on its future. [52240]

Jim Knight: I am hoping to make a announcement on this shortly.

Pet Sales

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs on how many occasions since 1 January 2004 her Department has sought legal opinion on the legality of (a) pet fairs and (b) pet markets, with particular reference to itinerant sales; what those opinions concluded; and if she will place copies of each opinion in the Library. [40584]

Mr. Bradshaw: It is not current practice to disclose information about internal legal advice. However, I will shortly send the hon. Member a briefing note on the Bill which provides a summary of the law on pet fairs which we made available to the EFRA Select Committee on the Bill. A copy of the briefing note will be placed in the Library of the House.

Poland

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what discussions she is having with her Polish counterpart to encourage agricultural imports and exports between Poland and the UK. [50106]

Mr. Bradshaw: There have been no recent discussions between the Secretary of State and her Polish counterparts concerning agricultural imports and exports between the Poland and the UK. However, Food from Britain and the International Agriculture Technology Centre, both funded by Defra and responsible for promoting exports of UK food and drink and primary agricultural products respectively, have undertaken activities to increase the level of exports of UK products to Poland.

The type of activities include assisting producers to enter, evaluate and develop Poland as an export market, organising seminars and workshops in Poland and attendance at relevant trade shows. The products covered include red meat, fish, dairy, poultry, tea, alcoholic beverages, ambient groceries and aquaculture.

Potatoes

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many tonnes of potatoes were produced in Shrewsbury constituency in (a) 1989 and (b) 2005. [51269]

Jim Knight: We do not collect information specifically on potato production at a constituency level.

It is possible to provide information on the area of potatoes grown within a constituency but only from 1992, the earliest year from which it is possible to compile data on this basis. The latest data are for 2004; the 2005 data are not yet available. An estimate of the production can be calculated using the average yield figure for England. Potato area data and estimates of production for Shrewsbury constituency for 1992 and 2004 are:

	Potato area (hectares)	Potato production (thousand tonnes)
1992	1,678	77
2004	1,255	54

Looking back to 1989, it is possible to provide information on the area of potatoes grown at a county level and calculate an estimate of production based on the average yield figure for England. Potato area data and estimates of production for Shropshire for 1989, 1992 and 2004 are:

	Potato area (hectares)	Potato production (thousand tonnes)
1989	7,088	269
1992	5,748	264
2004	4,224	182

It should be noted that area data for 1992 are based on main holdings only; data for other years are based on all holdings. Data for 1989 and 1992 are for maincrop potatoes; data for 2004 are for early and maincrop potatoes.

Secondments

Dr. Iddon: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many people from science and technology backgrounds have been seconded into the civil service in her Department in each of the last three years. [48408]

Jim Knight: Defra continues to promote and encourage the exchange of personnel between the Department and a range of organisations. In the last three years the Department has seconded individuals from both the private and public sector to develop and exchange good practice and expertise. Unfortunately detailed data regarding whether these individuals have science and technology backgrounds is not held centrally and would be possible only at disproportionate cost.

Single Farm Payment

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent assessment her Department has made of the impact on farmers of late payments of the single farm payment. [50788]

Jim Knight [holding answer 13 February 2006]: In my statement on 31 January 2006, Official Report, column 10WS, I confirmed that payments under the Single Payment Scheme would begin before the end of February 2006. This is in line with the forecast made over a year ago and well within the EU regulatory window of 1 December 2005 to 30 June 2006. All evidence to date suggests no otherwise viable businesses will fail because of the timing of these payments, but I know cash-flow is currently an important issue for a number of farmers and that my statement has, consequently, been widely welcomed.

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the effects the delays in single farm payments have had on the supply chain within the farming industry; and what discussions she has had with farmers on compensation for their creditors as a result of the delays. [52480]

Jim Knight: My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State, and the rest of the Defra ministerial team meet regularly with farmers and their representatives, when the timing of payments under the single payment scheme (SPS) and the related impact on the agricultural industry are regular topics of discussion. The most recent such meeting was with the President of the National Farmers Union on 14 February, when my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State reconfirmed the Government's commitment to begin SPS payments before the end of February as was made clear in the statement on 31 January 2006, Official Report, column 10WS. I am sure that representatives of the agricultural supply chain, having previously expressed concerns about consequential effects of cash flow problems within the industry, will have welcomed that statement.

Tuberculosis Compensation

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what account was taken by her Department of the cost of replacing an animal with another of similar quality when setting the compensation level for cattle slaughtered under tuberculosis control measures before 1 February 2006; [52509]

(2) what weight (a) is given and (b) was given before 1 February, when considering the compensation value of a cow slaughtered under tuberculosis control measures, to the fact the animal is or was (i) from a closed organic herd and (ii) six months in calf to a pedigree South Devon Bull. [52641]

Mr. Bradshaw: Prior to 1 February 2006 legislation required that the level of compensation for cattle affected by bovine tuberculosis (bTB) was market value, i.e. the price, which might reasonably have been obtained at the time of valuation, from a purchaser in the open market, if the animal were not affected by or exposed to bTB.

Under the current table based cattle compensation system, which came into force on 1 February, no breed specific weighting is provided, nor is there weighting for organic cattle. However, there are separate tables for pedigree and non-pedigree animals. And compensation payments also vary according to the age and sex of an animal.

A Cattle Compensation Advisory Group (made up of stakeholder representatives) will be established soon to help monitor the new compensation arrangements.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will reassess the compensation provided for a cow slaughtered under tuberculosis control measures following the introduction of the new system on 1 February; what mechanism is open to the owner of a cow slaughtered under tuberculosis control measures to appeal against the compensation value assigned to the animal by a valuer appointed by her Department before 1 February; and if she will make a statement. [52512]

Mr. Bradshaw: The new arrangements for cattle affected by bovine tuberculosis came into force in England on 1 February 2006. In making these changes, the Department's objective is to have in place a system that promotes good industry practice, enhances disease control, addresses the serious (and independently identified) problem of over-compensation, and is fair to both cattle owners and the taxpayer.

Under these arrangements, we believe that all farmers effectively gain because they are being compensated for disease affected animals (whose true worth are salvage value only) using a price based on the value of healthy animals.

As part of government's ongoing commitment to work in partnership with stakeholders, Defra is setting up a Cattle Compensation Advisory Group involving industry stakeholder representatives. We expect this stakeholder group to help us monitor the new compensation arrangements.

Under the previous system of compensation, there was no mechanism for appeal against valuations once a cattle owner and the department had agreed a valuer.

Waste Efficiency

Joan Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the potential savings identified were in the report on waste efficiency savings in the London market jointly commissioned by her Department and the Greater London Authority; and what steps she plans to take to achieve these savings. [51829]

Mr. Bradshaw: The report into waste efficiency savings in the London market jointly commissioned by Defra and the Greater London Authority identified efficiency savings of potentially £44.9 million for 2007–08 and £104.9 million for 2009–10.

Plans to achieve these savings will be agreed with the GLA and stakeholders when the current review of the powers and responsibilities of the Mayor of London and the GLA is complete and in this regard, the Department expects to see a final package of measures for announcement in March 2006.

Wildlife Management/TB

Bill Wiggin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will make a statement on the public consultation on wildlife management and related TB issues. [52291]

Mr. Bradshaw: I refer the hon. Member to the Written Ministerial Statement given on 15 December 2005, Official Report, columns 165–66WS, and the Debate on 15 December 2005, Official Report, columns 1442–49.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

European Programme for Critical Infrastructure Protection

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the nature of measures supported under the European programme for critical infrastructure protection; and what the treaty base is for such measures. [52566]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: Under the UK presidency of the EU, we agreed a set of principles for critical infrastructure protection. The Commission produced a Green Paper on the subject at the end of 2005, which is the focus of ongoing discussion between the Commission and experts from member states. Until there are concrete proposals, we cannot comment on the treaty base for a future programme.

Foreign Travel (Health and Safety)

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many UK citizens have died abroad as a result of accidental death or dismemberment in each of the last 20 years. [51543]

Dr. Howells: Our records only go back to 1994 and the following table shows the number of accidental death cases of UK citizens handled by consular staff since then. We do not collect statistics on dismemberment.

	Number
1994	384
1995	360
1996	373
1997	344
1998	369
1999	358
2000	310
2001	270
2002	260
2003–04	295
2004–05	389

Gibraltar

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with the Government of Gibraltar on representation of the people of Gibraltar in the UK Parliament; and if he will make a statement. [51382]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: My right. hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has not had any recent discussions with the Government of Gibraltar on the representation of the people of Gibraltar in the UK Parliament.

The hon. Member may also wish to refer to my reply of 9 February 2006, Official Report, column 1449W, which explains the Government's position on overseas territories' representation in Westminster and EU Parliaments.

Iran

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with the Government of Iran regarding respect for human rights. [52184]

Dr. Howells: We remain deeply concerned at human rights violations in Iran, and discuss our concerns frequently with the Iranian authorities, at both ministerial and official level. Senior officials most recently discussed human rights concerns with the Iranian Charge d'Affaires in London on 17 January, 24 January and 8 February; the British ambassador in Tehran did so when he met Deputy Foreign Minister Jalili on 4 January; and the Austrian Foreign Minister did so on behalf of the European Union when she spoke to her Iranian counterpart on 14 February. My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary raised human rights concerns with Iranian interlocutors on several occasions last year.

Iraq

Harry Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has received about the health of former Iraqi Foreign Secretary, Tariq Aziz; what consideration is being given to his release; and if he will make a statement. [45955]

Dr. Howells: Tariq Aziz is being held in Iraqi custody in Iraq. It is a matter for the Iraqi authorities if or when he may be released. We understand that he has complained of ill health and is receiving medical treatment.

Israel/Palestine

Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the Government continues to recognise the pre-1967 Green Line as the international border of the State of Israel. [52343]

Dr. Howells: We believe that it is for the parties to determine their permanent borders through mutual agreement in accordance with the road map. Under Phase III of the road map, both parties will determine their permanent borders through mutual agreement. Final status issues can only be resolved through negotiations and agreement between the parties themselves.

Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the report by the United Nations Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs concerning the introduction by Israel of additional movement restrictions on Palestinians in the Jordan Valley; and what representations he is making to the Government of Israel on the subject. [52710]

Dr. Howells: We are concerned about the additional movement restrictions in the Jordan Valley just as we are concerned about free movement issues elsewhere. Israel has a right to protect its citizens from terrorist attack but also a duty to ensure the effect of its security measures on the Palestinian population are minimised. We will continue to raise this concern at all levels with the Israeli Government. In addition to this, we seconded a senior British Army officer to work with the UN Office for Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs and Quartet Special Envoy James Wolfensohn's team to examine ways of improving freedom of movement in the West Bank.

Richard Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of UN resolutions 194 and 242 on the rights of Palestinian refugees; and what steps he is taking to ensure that the rights of Palestinian refugees are both respected and incorporated in future peace negotiations. [52369]

Dr. Howells: We believe that the roadmap is the best way forward to secure a peaceful settlement in the Middle East. In phase three of the roadmap, the parties are to reach a final and comprehensive permanent status agreement that "includes an agreed, just, fair and realistic solution to the refugee issue".

Kyrgyzstan

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps are being taken by his Department to support good governance, stability and the transition to democracy in Kyrgyzstan. [52186]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: I refer the hon. Member to the answers I gave to him on 10 January 2006, Official Report, column 465W.

I met the Kyrgyz Foreign Minister Djekshenkulov on 1 February and reiterated our support for good governance, stability and democratic reform in Kyrgyzstan, including through the project work of the Department for International Development (DFID) office in Bishkek. On 31 January my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under Secretary of State at DFID, Gareth Thomas, was able to deliver similar messages to Foreign Minister Djekshenkulov.

The Ambassador and his team based in Almaty have been to Kyrgyzstan four times since the turn of the year and met various members of the Kyrgyz Government, including President Bakiev and Foreign Minister Djekshenkulov, as well as non-governmental organisations and other members of civil society. We will continue to work closely with other international partners and donors, including the Organization for Security and Co-operation in Europe, US AID, United Nations Development Programme and the World Bank to ensure the effectiveness of our respective programmes and the continuity of our messages on democratic reform, good governance and stability.

Russia

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with his counterparts in the EU regarding human rights and the use of torture in Russia. [52162]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary and I regularly discuss relations with Russia with our EU counterparts, including human rights. The most recent discussion of Russia by all 25 EU Foreign Ministers took place at the General Affairs and External Relations Council on 3 October. At this meeting, the EU's objectives for the 4 October EU-Russia summit were agreed. On the human rights situation, these related to Chechnya, judicial reforms, human rights defenders and media freedom. These points were raised by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister with President Putin at the summit.

The human rights situation in Russia is the subject of regular discussions at Council Working Group meetings, including to prepare for EU- Russia human rights consultations. The specific issues of torture and combating immunity for perpetrators of torture were discussed during the March 2005 consultations.

Sugar Regime

Derek Conway: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the allocation of €190 million per annum to sugar protocol nations under the EU financial perspectives will be considered by (a) the EU Council and (b) the European Parliament. [36491]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: Following agreement at the December 2005 European Council to the overall ceiling for the 2007–13 Financial Perspective, the European Commission is expected to publish its proposal for a breakdown of expenditure for different instruments on 16 February. The Council and the European Parliament will take forward discussion of individual allocations on the basis of that proposal.

Venezuela

Mr. Galloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the Prime Minister's answer of 8 February 2006, Official Report, column 873, what rules of the international community the Government considers to have been broken by the Government of Venezuela; and if he will make a statement. [51713]

Mr. Douglas Alexander: I have nothing further to add to the answer my right. hon. Friend the Prime Minister gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Elmet (Colin Burgon) at Prime Minister's Questions on 8 February 2006, Official Report, column 873.

Western Africa

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with authorities in (a) Mauritania and (b) Western Sahara about stopping the flow of illegal immigrants into Europe from these areas. [51275]

Dr. Howells: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has not held discussions with the Mauritanian authorities on this subject. The Government regard the status of Western Sahara as undetermined, and as a result we do not recognise any 'Western Saharan authorities'.

The Government takes the issue of illegal migration very seriously. We are currently engaged in dialogue with EU partners, and both source and transit countries, on how best to meet this challenge. Substantial progress was made during the UK presidency to implement EU initiatives to tackle illegal migration across the Mediterranean and to strengthen co-operation with transit countries in North Africa. The 10th anniversary Euromed summit in November 2005 adopted a five-year work programme covering enhanced co-operation on all aspects of migration, including reducing illegal migration and trafficking in human beings. A Euromed ministerial meeting on migration will be held in 2006 to drive forward this agenda.

The conclusions of December's European Council included a pledge to address illegal migration "in partnership with African countries and regional organisations, such as the Economic Community of West African States, through a range of fora, initiatives and regional meetings, including an EU-Africa Ministerial Conference in Morocco in 2006".

Building on our presidency achievements, we will continue to encourage the EU to work in closer partnership with transit and source countries to tackle illegal migration across the Mediterranean and for improved migration management globally.

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will support an amendment in the Fisheries Council to the EU-Morocco Fisheries Partnership Agreement to exclude the territory of Western Sahara from the agreement. [51622]

Dr. Howells: Article 2 of the fisheries agreement initialled on 28 July 2005 indicates that it applies "to the Moroccan fisheries zone under the sovereignty or jurisdiction of the Kingdom of Morocco". This delimitation of the geographical scope of the agreement is identical to the delimitation in the previous agreement, which expired in 1999.

The Government will consider its position on the draft agreement as part of the approval process, and in order to do so is currently awaiting further information from the Commission.

HEALTH

"Our Health, Our Care, Our Say"

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for what reason patient and public involvement was not mentioned in her Department's White Paper "Our Health, Our Care, Our Say". [51040]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 13 February 2006]: The White Paper contains some very clear messages about how a stronger voice can be achieved by strengthening arrangements for patient and public involvement.

Chapter seven sets out a series of principles which will underpin the strengthened voice for patients and the public in health and social care.

Alzheimer's Disease

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will publish a short version of the appraisal consultation document produced by the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence on the use of Alzheimer's disease drugs for distribution to those who responded to the consultation; and if she will make a statement. [51712]

Jane Kennedy [holding answer 14 February 2006]: No. The National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) has published the appraisal consultation document on its website at www.nice.org.uk. I understand that at the start of the consultation process, NICE sent copies of its consultation document to all those who had responded to its earlier consultation.

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether her Department has submitted a formal response to the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) in connection with its appraisal of donepezil, rivastigmine, galantamine and memantine for the treatment of Alzheimer's in addition to that submitted to NICE by her Department in March 2005. [51895]

Jane Kennedy: Yes. The Department submitted a formal response to the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) on 13 February. We will publish a copy of our response on the Department's website and will place a copy in the Library.

Ambulance Service

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what use the ambulance service made of public mobile communications networks during the response operation to the incidents on the London Underground and bus network on 7th July 2005. [43781]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The London Ambulance Service National Health Service Trust uses an analogue radio system and mobile phones to communicate with and between front-line staff. Our understanding is that both were used on 7 July 2005.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on plans to restructure ambulance services in Staffordshire. [51420]

Ms Rosie Winterton: A 14-week consultation, led by strategic health authorities, is currently being held on the future organisation of ambulance trusts. The Department proposes that there are 11 trusts, including one that would incorporate the existing West Midlands, Staffordshire, Hereford and Worcester, and Coventry and Warwickshire National Health Service Ambulance Trusts. Any changes to the organisation of ambulance trusts will only happen following local consultation and discussion with relevant parties in the local area.

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations she has received on plans to restructure ambulance service provision in Cambridgeshire; and if she will make a statement. [52328]

Ms Rosie Winterton: A 14-week consultation, led by strategic health authorities, is currently being held on the future organisation of ambulance trusts. The Department proposes that there are eleven trusts, including one that would incorporate the existing East Anglian, Essex and Bedfordshire and Hertfordshire National Health Service Ambulance Trusts. Any changes to the organisation of ambulance trusts will only happen following local consultation and discussion with relevant parties in the local area.

Anticholinesterase Drugs

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence guidelines for the use of anticholinesterase drugs. [50441]

Jane Kennedy: The National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) has consulted on draft guidance on the use of anticholinesterase drugs for the treatment of Alzheimer's disease. The consultation ended on 13 February 2006. NICE has not yet finalised its guidance to the national health service.

Avian Influenza

Peter Law: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to ensure key workers in (a) power plant operations, (b) telephone services and (c) other essential public services are inoculated against avian influenza. [25715]

Ms Rosie Winterton: There has been some confusion between seasonal flu, avian flu and pandemic flu. Avian influenza is a disease which mainly affects birds. Seasonal flu refers to the viruses that circulate in the human population and cause widespread illness each winter. Pandemic flu will occur only after an avian virus has mutated into a strain to which large numbers of the population have not been exposed and which can spread easily between humans.

We are finalising a contract for the purchase of a two to three million doses of vaccine against the H5N1 strain currently circulating in South East Asia and other areas. This vaccine can be used for research and for possible use for health care workers in an emergency, and may provide some limited protection against a pandemic emerging from that source. We hope to award this contract shortly and would receive some stocks early next year.

No definite plans have been developed to vaccinate health care workers, or other key workers, against avian influenza.

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the total number of human (a) fatalities and (b) infections resulting from H5N1 avian influenza to date, broken down by country. [46673]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The number of confirmed cases and deaths from avian influenza (H5N1) is provided by the World Health Organisation (WHO) which is shown in the table. This information is regularly updated and is available on the WHO website at:

www.who.int/csr/disease/avian_influenza/country/cases_table_2006_01_25/en/index.html.

Cumulative number of confirmed human cases of avian influenza A/(H5N1) reported to the World Health Organisation, 25 January 2006

Date of onset	Cambodia		China		Indonesia
	Cases	Deaths	Cases	Deaths	Cases	Deaths
2003	0	0	0	0	0	0
2004	0	0	0	0	0	0
2005	4	4	8	5	16	11
2006	0	0	2	2	3	3
Total	4	4	10	7	19	14

Date of onset	Thailand Cases	Thailand Deaths	Turkey Cases	Turkey Deaths	Vietnam Cases	Vietnam Deaths	Total Cases	Total Deaths
2003	0	0	0	0	3	3	3	3
2004	17	12	0	0	29	20	46	32
2005	5	2	0	0	61	19	94	41
2006	0	0	4	2	0	0	9	7
Total	22	14	4	2	93	42	152	83

Notes:
1. Total number of cases includes number of deaths.
2. HO reports only laboratory-confirmed cases.

The WHO reports those cases confirmed in WHO collaborating laboratories.

In Turkey, a total of 21 cases, including four deaths have been confirmed by the Turkish authorities, these include the four cases and two deaths in the table.

Mr. Hands: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what estimate she has made of the likely number of cases of strain H5N1 in the United Kingdom in the event of a pandemic; [46598]

(2) what estimate or range of estimates she has made of the likely death toll in the United Kingdom in the event of a pandemic of strain H5N1. [46599]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The pandemic strain may not necessarily be H5N1. The widespread occurrence of a highly pathogenic avian (bird) influenza virus (H5N1) in poultry since 2003, which has also infected some people, is thought to provide a seedbed for the possible emergence of a new virus with greater affinity for people and thus the potential to cause a new pandemic.

Estimates of the impact of an influenza pandemic are based on the best available evidence. However, the number of people affected and the impact on the healthcare system will depend critically on the detailed properties of the pandemic Flu virus.

Bowel Cancer

Dr. Gibson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what projections her Department has made of the expected take up of the National Bowel Cancer Screening Programme in (a) 2005–06, (b) 2006–07 and (c) 2007–08; [43477]

(2) for Health in how many sites she expects to introduce bowel cancer screening in April; [43478]

(3) what the estimated total cost of the roll-out of the National Bowel Cancer Screening Programme is to (a) her Department and (b) primary care trusts. [43479]

Ms Rosie Winterton: NHS Cancer Screening Programmes are currently assessing strategic health authority bids for their local endoscopy units to become local screening centres.

The Government have stated their commitment to a national bowel cancer screening programme. On 30 January 2006, the new Health White Paper, "Our health, our care, our say: a new direction for community services" reaffirmed that the programme will be rolled out from April 2006. Departmental budgets for 2006–07 are currently being finalised, and announcements will be made in due course.

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures are in place (a) to inform people from (i) ethnic minorities, (ii) deprived areas and (iii) hard to reach groups about the National Bowel Cancer Screening Programme and (b) to encourage them to participate. [43776]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 19 January 2006]: A bowel cancer communications group was set up in 2005 to discuss communications with the public when the bowel cancer screening programme begins. The voluntary sector, patient groups, researchers, NHS Cancer Screening Programmes and the NHS Cancer Screening Programmes press office are all represented on the group. The group is considering all aspects of communications, including reaching ethnic minorities, people from deprived areas and hard to reach groups.

In addition, bowel cancer screening leaflets sent out with each invitation will be translated into a number of languages, as happens in breast and cervical screening now. Lessons are also being learned on how to reach these groups from the existing breast and cervical screening programmes, and from the bowel cancer screening pilot.

Dr. Richard Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what central funding has been made available for the roll-out of the National Bowel Cancer Screening Programme in (a) 2004–05, (b) 2005–06, (c) 2006–07 and (d) 2007–08; and what ring-fenced funding has been made available to primary care trusts to assist with the roll-out. [44401]

Ms Rosie Winterton: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Norwich, North (Dr. Ian Gibson) today.

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the national bowel cancer screening programme will be rolled out from April. [47617]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 2 February 2006]: The Government have stated their commitment to a national bowel cancer screening programme. On 30 January 2006, the new Health White Paper, "Our health, our care, our say: a new direction for community services" reaffirmed that the programme will be rolled out from April 2006. Departmental budgets for 2006–07 are currently being finalised, and announcements will be made in due course.

Braintree Community Hospital

Mr. Newmark: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether (a) there are any plans to delay construction of the new Braintree Community Hospital on the site of St. Michael's Hospital, (b) the levels of funding originally planned for the new hospital have changed and (c) changes have been made to the project's scheduled completion date since its original approval; and what the scheduled completion date is for the hospital. [47002]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Essex Strategic Health Authority (SHA) has no plans to delay construction of a new Braintree Hospital on the site of the existing St. Michael's Hospital. Witham, Braintree and Halstead Care Trust has consistently maintained that this private finance initiative (PFI) project had to fit hand in glove with the Mid Essex Hospital PFI scheme at Broomfield Hospital and this has taken time to negotiate.

Witham, Braintree and Halstead Care Trust is currently pulling together its full business case (FBC) which will include revised capital costs and revenue costs. The care trust plans to bring its FBC to the SHA in the summer/autumn this year for consideration and approval.

Breast Cancer

Mr. Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress is being made in rolling out HER2 testing for all women diagnosed with breast cancer. [47020]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Professor Mike Richards, the National Cancer Director, is working with cancer networks to ensure that testing arrangements are put in place to enable women who require it to be tested for HER2 status. This work is ongoing.

Steve Webb: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the reasons for the long-term trend in rates of breast cancer over the last 30 years. [47986]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 2 February 2006]: The reasons behind the increase in breast cancer rates are complex. The Cancer Atlas, published by the Office for National Statistics in 2005, states that most of the known risk factors for breast cancer relate to a woman's reproductive history and that lifestyle factors, such as poor diet and alcohol consumption, may also contribute to a higher risk.

Although breast cancer rates are increasing, death rates are falling. Since 1997 there has been a 13 per cent. decrease in breast cancer mortality in those under 75.

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the (a) average and (b) longest wait for urgent breast cancer referral at the Peterborough and Stamford Hospitals NHS Foundation Trust was in the latest period for which figures are available. [50428]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information is not available in the requested format. However, information relating to:

the number of patients referred by their general practitioner with suspected breast cancer, by waiting time from referral to first outpatient appointment is shown in table 1; and the number of patients treated for breast cancer during the quarter within two months (62 days) of the decision to refer by their GP have been shown in the table 2.

Chelmsford Primary Care Trust

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) why the average NHS funding per person for the Chelmsford Primary Care Trust (PCT) area is less than the average figure for England; what measures are being taken to bring the funding for the Chelmsford PCT area closer to the average figure for England; and if she will make a statement; [48368]

(2) what the average NHS funding per person is in (a) England and (b) the Chelmsford Primary Care Trust area; and what each figure is projected to be in 2008. [48370]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answers 6 February 2006]: The recurrent revenue allocations per head for 2005–06 and 2007–08 for Chelmsford Primary Care Trust (PCT) and England are shown in the table.

Unweighted

	Allocation per head
	2005–06	2007–08
Chelmsford PCT	975	1,159
England	1,172	1,388

Revenue allocations are made to PCTs on the basis of the relative needs of their populations. A weighted capitation formula is used to determine PCTs' target shares of available resources, to enable PCTs to commission similar levels of health services for populations in similar need.

The components of the formula are used to weight each PCTs crude population according to their relative need (age, and additional need) for healthcare and the unavoidable geographical differences in the cost of providing healthcare (the market forces factor).

The formula does not determine allocations. The formula is used to set targets, which then inform allocations. Actual allocations reflect decisions on the speed at which PCTs are brought nearer to target through the distribution of extra funds (pace of change policy).

Pace of change policy is decided for each allocations round. For the 2006–08 allocations, it has been decided to move PCTs more quickly towards their fair share of funds. As a result of this allocation round, no PCT will be more than 3.5 per cent. under its fair share by the end of 2007–08. At the start of 2006–07, Chelmsford PCT will be very close to their target allocation (only 0.1 per cent. below target).

The reason that Chelmsford PCT receives lower allocations per person than the England average, is that the measurement of healthcare needs across the population of Chelmsford is lower than the England average.

The development of the formula is kept under constant review by the advisory committee on resource allocation (ACRA). ACRA is an independent body, made up of national health service managers, academics and general practitioners. ACRA will make recommendations on any changes to the formula, that may be required in advance of the next round of allocations.

Chicken Farms

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if her Department will issue advice to educational establishments on the health implications for (a) children and (b) staff of a school of being in close proximity to a large-scale chicken farming establishment. [51802]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer14 February 2006]: The Department does not propose to issue advice on the health implications for children and staff of a school of being in close proximity to a large-scale chicken farming establishment.

Child Eye Examinations

Mr. Dunne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she is taking to ensure that parents understand the importance of eye examinations for children. [46658]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 31 January 2006]: Personal child health records are provided to parents after the birth of their child. The record provides families with a means of recording visits, immunisation, concerns raised and action taken. The record covers the range of health and development milestones and although it cannot go into the detail of conditions the record does prompt inquiries about vision and promotes further discussion and specific eye checks where indicated.

Free sight tests are available under the national health service for children under 16 and those aged 16 to 18 in full time education. Sight tests allow the opportunity to review all aspects of eye health, including investigations for signs of disease.

Information about the extensive arrangements for providing help with NHS optical services and other health costs are publicised in leaflet HC11 "Are you entitled to help with health costs?".

Colon Cancer

Mr. Gauke: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how much was spent by the NHS in 2004–05 on testing for colon cancer; [46189]

(2) which test procedures are used to detect colon cancer; what plans she has to change the procedures; and if she will make a statement; [46190]

(3) what proportion of people over the age of 50 have undertaken a test for colon cancer. [46191]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Screening for bowel cancer in England is currently only available as part of the English bowel cancer screening pilot in Coventry and Warwickshire. The pilot began in 2000, and is now into its third round of screening. People aged 58 to 69 are sent a kit called a faecal occult blood (FOB) test, which looks for hidden blood in the stools, an indicator that bowel cancer may be present. People are invited every two years, and complete the kit in their own homes before returning it to the laboratory where the results are interpreted.

Around 2 per cent. of people who take the FOB test will be positive, and they are invited for a full bowel investigation called a colonoscopy.

In 2004–05, 31,074 people were screened at a cost of around £800,000. Research and an independent evaluation of the pilot have shown that around 60 per cent. of the population take up their invitations to participate in bowel cancer screening.

Community Matrons

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps the Government are taking to increase the number of qualified community matrons in Bedfordshire; and if she will make a statement. [47350]

Ms Rosie Winterton: There are plans in place that by the end of 2007 there will be 3,000 community matrons in post in England. Strategic health authorities are monitoring primary care trusts (PCTs) to ensure that they are on target to achieve this.

Bedfordshire PCT currently has two community matrons in post.

PCTs in partnership with local stakeholders, have the responsibility to ensure that national health service establishments are adequately staffed to deliver high quality and sustainable services as well as ensuring the safety of those people under their care.

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures the Government are taking to enhance the skills and training of community matrons in Bedfordshire; and if she will make a statement. [47354]

Ms Rosie Winterton: An outline of the responsibilities of community matrons was provided in the document, "Supporting People with Long-Term Conditions—liberating the talents of nurses who care for people with long term conditions", which was published in February last year. Since then the Department has issued a competency framework to help employers and workforce planners develop education programmes, and community matrons themselves understand what additional knowledge and skills they need for the work. The Department will soon publish an education framework so that education providers can develop local programmes and commissioners specify contracts appropriately.

In addition, this year the Department will be hosting a series of master-classes for community matrons, and the results will be published.

The local health communities within the Bedfordshire and Hertfordshire Strategic Health Authority area, are working towards implementing the competency framework issued by the Department.

Delayed Discharges

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many delayed discharges there were in acute hospitals serving the Cambridgeshire area in the last 12 months; and how many acute hospital bed nights these represented. [50427]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is shown in the table.

Note

Data in the table are taken from local monitoring of delayed discharges included in the SITREPs collection. The delayed transfers of care figures are based on a snapshot taken on the last typical Thursday in the month. This differs to the day used in the separate, quarterly LDPR commissioner collections on which the figures published in the Statistical Supplement to the Chief Executive's Report to the NHS, December 2005 are based. The number of days delayed sums all delays in the month.

Dentistry

Mr. Keetch: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many dentists in Hereford constituency whose training was funded by the NHS only treat private patients. [44612]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department does not collect information on dentists who only treat private patients.

It is not possible to ascertain whether an individual private dentist was trained using national health service funding. Nor is it possible to ascertain whether individual private dentists who were trained using NHS funding but subsequently declined to treat NHS patients are continuing to practice.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS dentists stopped registering NHS patients in (a) 2003, (b) 2004 and (c) 2005. [44833]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is not held centrally.

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS dentists have been practising in Peterborough constituency in each year since 1997. [47921]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The number of general dental services (GDS) and personal dental services (PDS) in the Peterborough parliamentary constituency in each year since 1997, are shown in the table.

Data on dentists that work purely in private practice are not held centrally.

Notes:
1. Data includes all notifications of dentists joining or leaving the GDS or PDS, received by the Dental Practice Board, up to 19 October 2005. Figures for the numbers of dentists at specified dates may vary depending upon the notification period, for example, data with a later notification period will include more recent notifications of dentists joining or leaving the GDS or PDS.
2. Dentists include principals, assistants and trainees. Prison contracts have been excluded from the data.

Mr. Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she is taking to ensure that sufficient NHS dentists are recruited in Bolton. [51536]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 13 February 2006]: Since 2003–04, the Department has invested an additional £250 million in national health service dentistry and supported the NHS in recruiting the equivalent of an extra 1,459 dentists to improve patient access. The Government are also funding an additional 170 training places per year from 2005.

From April 2006, the NHS will be implementing major reforms to dentistry to build upon this success. New contracts for dentists will abolish the traditional fee per item remuneration system and support new ways of working with a greater focus on preventative care. Evidence from personal dental services pilot schemes is that these new ways of working free up significant capacity that dentists can then use in part to see a greater range of patients.

Dentists' current NHS earnings will be protected for at least three years and there will be a five per cent. reduction in the courses of treatment that general dental services practitioners are expected to carry out each year.

From April 2006, primary care trusts (PCTs), including Bolton PCT, will also have devolved responsibility and ring-fenced budgets for commissioning primary dental services. This means that, if a dentist leaves the NHS or reduces their NHS commitment, the resources stay with the PCT to be re-invested in local dental services.

Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the personal dental service pilot in Wirral. [47938]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Dental practices in Wirral have played an important role in piloting new ways of working through personal dental services (PDS) arrangements. There has been a major improvement in access to national health service dentistry across Wirral.

The lessons learned in the Wirral and other pilot sites have informed the new arrangements for NHS dentistry being implemented from 1 April 2006. From this date, dentists in pilot PDS schemes are entitled to transfer to substantive PDS agreements under the new regulations.

Sir Paul Beresford: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many staff in the Dental Policy Directorate (a) are and (b) were (i) dentally qualified or practising dentists and (ii) officers of (A) the British Dental Association and (B) the Dental Practitioners' Association. [43582]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 19 January 2006]: There are five dentally qualified staff in the dental services team.

The former employment of departmental members of staff is a matter for the individuals concerned, and it is not the Departments policy to collect or publish such information.

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was spent on school dentistry in each primary care trust in each of the last three years for which figures are available. [45912]

Ms Rosie Winterton: This information is not held centrally. We estimate the full cost of the community dental services, in which dentists who visit schools are employed, is approximately £100 million per annum.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients were registered with an NHS dentist in Essex in each of the last five years; and how many new registrations there were in each year. [48347]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 2 February 2006]: The information requested is shown in tables 1 and 2. General dental services (GDS) and personal dental services (PDS).

[1] Between January 2001 and September 2002 data are for GDS dentists only. From October 2002 onwards the data are for GDS and PDS dentists.

Notes:

1. Table 2 indicates monthly additions and deletions to registrations within Essex SHA. However it is not possible to say if they are new registrations.
2. Some of the patients being added to the list will be patients regarded as old patients by dentists (or the patients) who are being re-registered after a gap of more than 15 months (GDS).
3. A yearly breakdown for table 2 is not possible as this may include duplications in registrations added and registrations deleted. This data should only be used as a monthly snapshot.
4. Most PDS schemes that have registrations have re-registration periods in excess of fifteen months, so the figures for PDS schemes are generally higher than they would have been for the same attendance pattern under GDS.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what the average waiting time is for residents in Chorley constituency to be taken on as NHS patients by a dental practice; [49211]

(2) how many dental practices are taking new NHS patients in Chorley constituency. [49210]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is not held centrally.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what steps she is taking to minimise increases in charges for NHS dental work; [49212]

(2) what assessment she has made of the effects on health of cost disincentives to people in relation to regular dental check-ups. [49213]

Ms Rosie Winterton: From April 2006, a new system of patient charges will be introduced, based on the recommendations of a working group comprising of representatives of the dental profession, consumer organisations and other stakeholders. It will be a simpler system with three charging bands for overall courses of treatment, as opposed to the current system of over 400 separate charges for individual items of treatment. The maximum charge for dental treatments will fall from £384 to £189.

The cost to an individual patient for a given course of treatment will in some cases be more than now, and in other cases less. The overall level of charges raised will however, be the same proportion of dental expenditure as has historically been the case.

The working group, on whose recommendations the system is based, expressed a concern that the current system, based on over 400 charges ranging up to £384, may deter some people from seeking treatment because of confusion as to what that might have to pay. Part of their reason for recommending a simple, three-band system was to prevent this confusion in future.

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many dentists, excluding orthodontists, have been employed by the NHS in (a) Leicester and (b) England since 1997. [49584]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Most general dental practitioners are self employed contractors working in general dental services (GDS) and personal dental services (PDS). The table shows the numbers of GDS and PDS dentists in England and Leicestershire County as at 30 September each year. It is not possible to exclude orthodontists from these figures, as they are not employed under separate GDS and PDS contracts.

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS dentists there were in Shrewsbury and Atcham constituency in (a) 2004 and (b) 2005. [50095]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The table shows the number of national health service dentists in the Shrewsbury and Atcham constituency in 2004 and 2005:

General dental services (GDS) and personal dental services (PDS): number of dentists in Shrewsbury and Atcham parliamentary constituency as at 30 September each year

	Number
2004	71
2005	80

Notes:
1. Data includes all notifications of dentists joining or leaving the GDS or PDS, received by the Dental Practice Board, up to 19 October 2005. Figures for the numbers of dentists at specified dates may vary depending upon the notification period; for example, data with a later notification period will include more recent notifications of dentists joining or leaving the GDS or PDS.
2. Dentists include principals, assistants and trainees. Prison contracts have been excluded from the data.
3. The postcode of the dental practice was used to allocate dentists to specific geographic areas. Constituency areas have been defined using the Office for National Statistics all fields postcode directory.

Mr. Hoban: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the impact of the new dental contract on practices where children are treated under the NHS if their parents pay for their treatment. [50287]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 9 February 2006]: Under The National Health Service (General Dental Services Contracts) Regulations 2005 and The National Health Service (Personal Dental Services Agreements) Regulations 2005, dentists will no longer be able to accept children as NHS patients only on condition that their parent or parents agree to private treatment.

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS dentists there have been in West Suffolk in each year since 1997. [50695]

General dental services (GDS) and personal dental services (PDS): number of dentists within Suffolk West primary care trust as at 30 September each year

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much her Department estimates the changes to NHS dentistry will save (a) Eastern Leicester Primary Care Trust and (b) the NHS over the next five years. [51013]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The national health service dental reforms being implemented from April 2006 are not designed to release financial savings. On the contrary, the Department has given a commitment that, for at least the next three years, primary care trusts (PCTs) will be expected to maintain at least the current level of NHS investment in primary dental care services. The reforms give greater flexibility to PCTs to commission and develop dental services in ways that best meet the needs of their local population.

Dr. Pugh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made in the registration of clinical dental technicians with the General Dental Council. [51398]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The General Dental Council has agreed that appropriately qualified clinical dental technicians should be registered and allowed to see edentulous patients, without prior review by a dentist, for the purpose of supplying and maintaining complete dentures. The register will be opened later this year.

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, how many dentists served (a) Yorkshire Wolds and Coast Primary Care Trust and (b) East Yorkshire Primary Care Trust in each of the last five years. [47520]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Data on the number of dentists working purely in private practice is not held centrally. The numbers of national health service dentists with a general dental services (GDS) contract or personal dental services (PDS) contract for the specified primary care trusts (PCTs) are provided in the following table.

Number of GDS and PDS dentists within the specified PCTs as at 30 September each year

Diabetes

Mr. Havard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she expects the clinical guideline for footcare which forms a part of the type two diabetes guideline to be reviewed. [50521]

Jane Kennedy: The National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) plans to publish its guidance on type two diabetes, including footcare, in July 2008. Further information can be found on NICE's website at www.nice.org.uk

Domiciliary Oxygen

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will publish correspondence between her Department and its agencies since January 2005 about the direct supply of domiciliary oxygen for patients by the British Oxygen Company and its subsidiaries. [51806]

Jane Kennedy [holding answer 15 February 2006]: Since January 2005, the British Oxygen Company (BOC), like all other companies tendering for the direct supply of the domiciliary oxygen service to patients, received correspondence about the evaluation of bids, including an invitation to make a presentation to assessment panels in support of tenders submitted and, where necessary, requests for further information.

In addition, the Department and the NHS Purchasing and Supply Agency corresponded with BOC in relation to the company's award of one regional contract for this service and this included feedback on the evaluation of tenders for all service regions submitted by BOC. This correspondence includes information that is commercially confidential to BOC and there is no agreement with BOC as to its publication.

Dr. Murrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what guidance her Department has issued to (a) patients and (b) health care professionals on changes in the provision of domiciliary oxygen; and on what dates the guidance was issued; [51807]

(2) what guidance her Department has issued to pharmacies since January 2005 on the provision of domiciliary oxygen; and on what dates the guidance was issued. [51808]

Jane Kennedy [holding answer 15 February 2006]: The national health service primary care contracting website www.primarycarecontracting.nhs.uk provides advice and guidance to primary care trusts and others on communicating changes to patients and health care professionals; including pharmacists, on the provision of domiciliary oxygen. Information has been available since July 2005 with updates provided on a weekly basis.

In addition, the Department has been working with the British Lung Foundation and new suppliers to provide information to patients.

Part 10 of the drug tariff, which relates to the provision of home oxygen, provides updated advice to pharmacies and others, with changes made on 1 October 2005 and 1 February 2006.

Eating Disorders

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what types of eating disorders are treated by the NHS; and how many people are estimated to be suffering from such disorders. [50538]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Data relating to patients presenting with eating disorders and who were treated by the national health service in 2004–05 is shown in the table. This data may include duplicate episodes where the same patient presented for treatment for the same condition at different times; disclosure rules apply due to the sensitive nature of the data, thus the figures have been rounded to the nearest 10; and they may not add up due to rounding.

Number of patients with a primary diagnosis of an eating disorder, by gender, in England, 2004–05

Type of eating disorder	Gender
	Male	Female	Total
Anorexia nervosa	80	930	1,010
Bulimia nervosa	10	90	90
Overeating associated with other psychological disturbances	0	0	0
Vomiting associated with other psychological disturbances	10	20	30
Other eating disorders	20	50	60
Eating disorders not otherwise specified	30	150	180
Total	140	1,230	1,360

Hospital Episode Statistics (HES), NHS Health and Social Care Information Centre.

The national health service provides treatment for eating disorders, and other medical conditions, on the basis of clinical need. We regard the issue of eating disorders very seriously, and have asked the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) to publish guidelines on core interventions for eating disorders as part of its second programme of work. NICE published clinical guidelines on eating disorders in January 2004, to inform individual NHS organisations about best practice.

Emergency Preparedness

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the statement of 19 October 2005, Official Report, column 925, on emergency preparedness, when the group chaired by the deputy chief medical officer to examine NHS bed capacity in the event of an influenza pandemic was established; when she expects the group to make recommendations; whether these recommendations will be published; and what resources have been set aside in preparation for implementing the recommendations of the group. [22983]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The group chaired by the Deputy Chief Medical Officer first met in October. The group has discussed issues relating to national health service additional bed capacity during a flu pandemic, and a range of issues are being taken forward.

The group met again in January to discuss progress. Resources to support emergency planning and preparedness for major incidents including a possible flu pandemic have been included within the global allocations made to primary care trusts and acute trusts. This includes resources for critical care services. However, the position regarding resources will be reviewed once the guidance prepared by the group considering critical care services is available.

Essex Strategic Health Authority

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the (a) job title, (b) salary including payment by results elements and (c) total employment costs were for each of the highest paid five employees in the Essex Strategic Health Authority in 2004–05. [51657]

Ms Rosie Winterton: This information requested is not held centrally.

The information on salaries of executives of national health service organisations are published in their annual reports and accounts.

EU Committees

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many meetings of the (a) Committee of senior officials on public health, (b) Committee for the implementation of the Community action plan to combat cancer and (c) Committee on the approximation of the laws, regulations and administrative provisions of the member states concerning the manufacture, presentation and sale of tobacco products have taken place during the UK presidency of the EU; who presided over each meeting; what other UK representatives were present; what provisions were made for representation of the devolved governments; and if she will make a statement. [38042]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Committee of Senior Officials on Public Health did not meet during the United Kingdom presidency of the European Union.

We are not aware of the committee for the implementation of the community action plan to combat cancer.

The committee on the approximation of the laws, regulations and administrative provisions of the member states concerning the manufacture, presentation and sale of tobacco products met once during the UK presidency of the EU. Commission tobacco officials chaired the meeting. Two departmental tobacco officials attended, representing the UK.

The UK Government takes into account the views and interests of the devolved administrations when formulating the UK's policy position on all EU and international issues which touch upon devolved matters. Provision for attendance at EU meetings by Ministers and officials of the devolved administrations is set out in paragraphs 4.12–15 of the Concordat on Co-ordination of European Union Policy Issues (part of the Memorandum of Understanding between devolved Ministers and the UK Government). Ministers from the devolved administrations have attended and do attend councils, by agreement with the lead Whitehall Minister.

A copy is available on the Department for Constitutional Affairs' website at: www.dca.gov.uk/constitution/devolution/pubs/odpm_dev_600629.pdf.

European Health Insurance Card

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the average time taken between an eligible individual applying for and receiving a European Health Insurance Card. [46400]

Ms Rosie Winterton: There are three different ways to apply for a European Health Insurance Card:

online;

telephone and by post

Delivery time is dependent on application method currently, the average time taken from receipt of application is between three and five days, with internet the fastest route and post the slowest.

Foster Review

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will place in the Library before the February Adjournment a copy of the Foster Review of Regulatory Bodies. [52331]

Jane Kennedy: May I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Romsey (Sandra Gidley) on 13 February 2006, Official Report, column 1765W.

General Osteopathic Council

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the work of the General Osteopathic Council. [52332]

Jane Kennedy: The role of all regulatory bodies including the General Osteopathic Council have been considered in the context of the review of non-medical regulation.

Health White Paper

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the Swift campaign referred to in paragraph 2.42, of the White Paper, Our Health, Our Care, Our Say, was introduced; what resources have been committed to support the campaign in each year since its introduction; whether she has assessed the effectiveness of the campaign; and if she will make a statement. [49529]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Shift is a five year initiative, running from 2004 to 2009, as part of the National Institute for Mental Health in England's work tackling the stigma and discrimination surrounding mental health issues. Shift is funded by the Department and it received £900,000 in 2003–04 and £1 million in 2004–05.

Shift's work is steered by a board of advisors comprising people from the voluntary sector, the Department and from the National Institute for Mental Health in England, and its work programme is overseen by the Department and a cross government network focusing on mental health issues.

Further information about Shift is available from its website at www.shift.org.uk.

Hearing Aids

Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health from what date in 2008 patients waiting for audiology aids and testing will be covered by the proposed 18-week maximum waiting time from the date of initial referral to fitting of a device; and if she will make a statement. [50418]

Jane Kennedy: The Department is currently reviewing the principles and definitions for the 18-week patient pathway, in light of the listening exercise conducted at the end of 2005. The final principles and definitions will be published in the spring of 2006.

Mr. Dismore: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will introduce a waiting list target for digital hearing aids; and if she will make a statement. [45229]

Jane Kennedy: The Department is considering the results of a recent listening exercise on the principles and definitions to govern the 18-week pathway. In the light of comments received, we will publish conclusions in the spring. To go further on audiology at this stage would pre-empt those conclusions.

Mary Creagh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will take steps to ensure that the waiting time for an NHS analogue or digital hearing aid is reduced to 18 weeks. [50714]

Jane Kennedy [holding answer 13 February 2006]: The Department is considering the results of a recent listening exercise on the principles and definitions to govern the 18-week pathway. In the light of comments received, we will publish conclusions in the spring. To go further on audiology at this stage would pre-empt those conclusions.

Hemel Hempstead Hospital

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will reassess her decision to close the (a) intensive treatment unit, (b) cardiac unit, (c) stroke unit and (d) acute accident and emergency services at the Hemel Hempstead Hospital in the light of the Buncefield oil depot fire and subsequent explosion in Hemel Hempstead; and if she will make a statement. [47620]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The decision to change what services are provided by the West Hertfordshire Hospital Trust is the responsibility of the trust in partnership with the primary care trusts who commission services from the trust and with the strategic health authority who is responsible for ensuring services meet the needs of the populations that they serve.

Herceptin

Mrs. Hodgson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of eligible women with metastatic breast cancer are treated with Herceptin in the Northern Cancer Network. [47418]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is not held centrally.

Mrs. Hodgson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of eligible women with metastatic breast cancer in England were treated with Herceptin in the latest period for which figures are available. [47421]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is not collected centrally.

High Security Mental Hospitals

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients have escaped from high security mental hospitals in each of the last five years. [48064]

Ms Rosie Winterton: No patients have escaped from within the secure area of the high security hospitals in the last five years. During the same period, five patients absconded while on leave of absence. All five patients were returned to their hospitals within a short period of time without any offences being committed.

Home Oxygen Services

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the new arrangements for delivering home oxygen services. [51801]

Jane Kennedy [holding answer 14 February 2006]: Healthcare professionals, patients' representatives and others helped develop the new arrangements and welcome this opportunity to provide a modernised service offering patients the latest oxygen equipment to improve their quality of life. Plans are to manage the change to the new arrangements over a six-month programme from 1 February 2006 to support continuity in patient services. However, in the first few days, huge volumes of orders—many for delivery of oxygen supplies at a future date—disrupted this programme. Prompt action has put these plans back on course and we continue to monitor these closely to ensure patients are receiving a reliable service.

Hospital Pharmacies

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many out-patient pharmacies there are in hospitals; and in how many cash is the only available means of payment. [50447]

Jane Kennedy: The Department does not collect information on the number of out-patient pharmacies in hospitals.

Neither is information collected about the arrangements which hospitals have in place to collect prescription charges. This is a matter for local decision.

Hospital Trusts (Thefts)

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many NHS hospital trusts have reported losing diagnostic equipment worth at least £10,000 from thefts in the last 12 months; [52633]

(2) what advice the NHS Security Management Service has issued to NHS hospital trusts in the last 12 months on how to protect drugs and equipment from organised criminals. [52634]

Ms Rosie Winterton: 11 national health service trusts have reported thefts of diagnostic equipment worth over £10,000 in the past 12 months to the NHS Security Management Service (NHS SMS).

The NHS SMS issues alerts to all NHS health bodies indicating where risks to the security of drugs and equipment have been identified. For example, an alert regarding the protection of endoscopy equipment was issued on 7 December 2005, containing 10 key pieces of advice for health bodies to assist them in both preventing and detecting such thefts.

The NHS SMS manual, launched on 17 March 2005, contains guidance on the better protection of NHS drugs and equipment. NHS health bodies' nominated security management directors and accredited local security management specialists are directed to have regard to this manual in the discharge of their security management function.

NHS SMS is also actively exploring the options for making use of new technology to track and trace high value pieces of NHS equipment. This electronic tagging may be used in the future as both a preventative measure and to monitor the whereabouts of key pieces of medical equipment.

Joint Scrutiny and Overview Committee

Mr. Burstow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she will reply to the invitation of the Joint Scrutiny and Overview Committee for Sutton, Merton, Kingston and Surrey to attend one of its meetings to discuss her decision in respect of better healthcare closer to home. [50870]

Jane Kennedy [holding answer 13 February 2006]: A reply from the Secretary of State's office was sent on 6 February 2006.

Macmillan Nurses

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures she is taking to increase the numbers of Macmillan nurses working for the NHS in Shropshire. [49054]

Ms Rosie Winterton: It is for trusts to decide how many nurses including palliative care nurse specialists, are employed in each specialty within hospitals. It is for local cancer networks working in partnership with primary care trusts, strategic health authorities and their workforce development directorates to assess, plan and review their workforce, education and training needs for all staff linked to the delivery of local and national priorities for cancer.

Medical Students (Newcastle)

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many students there were at (a) the Newcastle upon Tyne Medical School and (b) the Newcastle upon Tyne Dental School in each of the last five years; and what plans she has to increase the numbers of such students. [50991]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Table one shows the full-time undergraduate student numbers for medicine and dentistry at the joint Newcastle and Durham Medical and Dental school for 2001–02 to 2005–06. Table two shows the actual intake for new students for 2001–02 to 2005–06.

We announced jointly with the Higher Education Funding Council for England the allocation of 108 extra medical school places last month. This builds on the 68.7 per cent. increase in medical school places we have already overseen between 1997–98 to 2004–05. Also, 100 extra dental school places were also announced last month, including the development of a new dental school in the South-West. All these places were allocated following highly competitive bidding exercises. We will continue to look at the scope for further expansion in line with national health service and workforce planning requirements.

Mental Health

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance she has issued to general practitioners on the prioritisation of people with severe mental illnesses for immunisation against (a) influenza and (b) avian influenza. [24444]

Ms Rosie Winterton: It is important to be clear about the differences between seasonal flu, avian flu and pandemic flu. Avian influenza is a disease which mainly affects birds. Seasonal flu refers to the virus that circulates in the human population and causes widespread illness each winter. Pandemic flu will only occur after an avian virus has mutated into a novel strain which can spread easily between humans and to which they do not have immunity.

We do not currently prioritise people with severe mental illnesses for immunisation against influenza and have made no specific plans to prioritise this group of people for immunisation against pandemic influenza.

As a specific vaccine will not start to become available until four to six months after the pandemic virus has emerged, it is unlikely to be available for the first wave. When stocks start to become available, priority may have to be given to certain groups. Health care workers and other essential service key workers may need to be vaccinated first, as it will be important to maintain health and other essential services. Those groups most at risk of serious illness will be a priority to receive the vaccine as supplies increase.

Final decisions regarding prioritisation will be made on the basis of information emerging from the early stages of the pandemic about the virus and those groups most at risk.

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action she has taken in response to the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence recommendations that psychological treatment should be offered prior to drug treatment for patients suffering from psychological conditions; and if she will make a statement. [47183]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Local health communities are expected to review their existing practice in the treatment and management of various mental health problems against the guidelines published by the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence. The reviews should consider the resources required to implement any recommendations relating to the use of psychological interventions and the timeline over which full implementation is envisaged. As announced in the recent White Paper, 'Our health, our care, our say: a new direction for community services', the Government are committed to expand access to psychological therapies. To this end, two demonstration sites are being established for people of working age with mild to moderate mental health problems with the aim of helping them to remain in or return to work. The sites will also aim to establish an evidence base for the effectiveness of such therapies and to support the extension to non-working age people and those with moderate to severe mental illness.

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the consistency and effectiveness of prescribing practices within the NHS for delivering the most effective drug therapies to individuals affected by psychological problems; and if she will make a statement. [47184]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Responsibility for prescribing rests with the clinician caring for the patient. Prescribers have an ethical responsibility to inform patients about the treatment proposed including any possible side effects of prescribed medicines. It is the responsibility of local national health service bodies to ensure that robust clinical governance arrangements are in place to prevent poor prescribing. Local clinical audit and peer review provide an incentive for clinicians to study their patterns of care and improve prescribing standards. Clinical guidelines developed by the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence provide recommendations for good practice in the management and treatment of various mental health problems.

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the requirement is for inspection of in-patient care facilities for people with mental illness in (a) the independent sector and (b) NHS establishments. [48185]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Healthcare Commission has a statutory duty to assess the management, provision and quality of healthcare provided by the national health service. NHS trusts with inpatient mental health facilities are reviewed annually, and are awarded annual performance ratings.

The independent (private and voluntary) mental healthcare sector is also regulated by the Healthcare Commission, through registration, annual inspections and through the monitoring of complaints and information. The Healthcare Commission's duty to regulate and inspect independent healthcare is laid out in the "Health and Social Care (Community Health and Standards) Act" (2003), the "Care Standards Act" (2000), and the Department's "Private and Voluntary Healthcare (England) Regulations" 2001 and "National Minimum Standards" 2002.

Detailed information about the Healthcare Commission's work on inspecting NHS and independent sector mental health inpatient facilities is available from the Healthcare Commission's website at www.healthcarecommission.org.uk.

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much accommodating NHS patients detained under the Mental Health Acts in private sector beds cost in each year since 1997, broken down by strategic health authority area. [49264]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is not available. Data for detained patient costs is not collected, but the total costs for secure unit activity from non-national health service providers for the most recent year which data are available, 2003–04, and which includes detained patient costs, is shown in the table.

Secure unit service costs are not collected on an individual strategic health authority basis. Data for other years from 1998 is available on the Department's website at www.dh.gov.uk/refcosts, within worksheet TMHv, and data for 2004–05 is due for publication in March.

Secure unit activity from Non-NHS providers	Number of occupied bed days	2003–04 national average unit cost (£)	Total activity cost (£)

Ministerial Visit

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to visit Hemel Hempstead constituency in this Session of Parliament. [26251]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 8 November 2005]: The Secretary of State for Health has no current plans to visit Hemel Hempstead in this Session of Parliament.

NHS Finance

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 11 January 2006, Official Report, column 732W, on NHS Finance, whether the NHS staff with a track record of helping challenged NHS trusts included in the turnaround teams will be remunerated by the organisation which has been awarded the contract to operate turnaround teams; whether she intends to award further contracts to turnaround teams in addition to the contract for the initial assessment referred to in her previous answer; and what total budget she has set aside for all such contracts is in (a) 2005–06 and (b) 2006–07. [46563]

Jane Kennedy: The turnaround teams were announced by the Secretary of State in a ministerial statement on 1 December 2005, Official Report, column 37WS. The teams will comprise of experts with a mix of commercial and national health service turnaround skills.

If NHS staff are used to help turnaround, arrangements will be made with the NHS staff's employer.

A contract for a national programme office to co-ordinate and manage the turnaround teams has been awarded to consultants PricewaterhouseCoopers.

Turnaround financial support for the transition leaders across the country will be contracted through the Department.

The value of all these contracts are to be treated as commercial in confidence.

NHS Medicines (Fraud)

Sir John Butterfill: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of whether companies are being fraudulently set up to supply fake medicines under licence to the NHS; what steps she is taking to prevent this; and if she will make a statement. [48547]

Jane Kennedy [holding answer 14 February 2006]: The Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency (MHRA), as the Government body responsible for the safety and licensing of medicines in the United Kingdom, is undertaking retrospective checks on companies that have submitted wholesale dealer's licence applications and has conducted a review of processes for checking the bona fides of applicants for wholesale dealer's licences. New arrangements for checking information provided in such applications are being established. These will include more detailed checks on companies and individuals, as well as on the experience, qualifications and personal credentials of those named on a licence.

NHS Trusts (Chartered Accountants)

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 16 January 2006, Official

Report, column 470W, on NHS trusts (chartered accountants), whether (a) employment history and (b) professional qualifications are included in the information presented to Ministers when they appoint non-executive directors of health trusts; and whether Ministers have an input into the appointment of executive directors. [50860]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Secretary of State has delegated responsibility for the appointments of non-executive chairs and members to national health service boards to the NHS Appointments Commission. The Appointments Commission ask candidates to provide details including career history and qualifications that are pertinent to the role they have applied for.

The Secretary of State has no role in the recruitment of executive directors as these appointments are for individual NHS trusts to undertake.

NICE Guidance

Mr. Havard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how stakeholders may submit new evidence of relevance to a published clinical guideline to the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence; [50522]

(2) what steps she takes to ensure that National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence guidelines are as up-to-date as possible. [50523]

Jane Kennedy: Stakeholders may write, at any time, to the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) to draw NICE'S attention to new evidence of relevance to a published clinical guideline.

The updating of NICE'S clinical guidelines is a matter for NICE. NICE follows an established process for ensuring that its guidelines are updated. The process that NICE follows can be found in the guides, 'The Guideline Development Process—An Overview for Stakeholders, the Public and the NHS', and technical manual, 'Guideline Development Methods—Information for National Collaborating Centres and Guideline Developers'. These guides are available on NICE'S website at www.nice.org.uk

Mr. Havard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) whether one section of a National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence clinical guideline may be reviewed after two years without reviewing the whole guideline; [50524]

(2) what evidence is considered when deciding whether to review a National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence clinical guideline two years after publication. [50525]

Jane Kennedy: The process of reviewing the evidence underpinning a clinical guideline is expected to begin four years after the date of issue of this guideline. Reviewing may begin earlier than four years if significant evidence that affects the guideline recommendations is identified sooner. The National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) considers whether new evidence is significant evidence that may affect the guideline recommendations.

NICE is currently consulting from 25 November 2005 until 17 February 2006 on its process for reviewing clinical guidelines and the consultation document, 'Proposals for making the guideline development process more efficient'. Further information on this consultation can be found on NICE'S website at: www.nice.org.uk/pdf/CG_Tech_Consultation.pdf

Non-geographic Telephone Lines

Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what steps she is taking to ensure that users of the NHS are informed of changes by NHS service providers to non-geographic telephone lines; [45757]

(2) how revenue from calls to NHS service providers using non-geographic telephone lines is used; [45758]

(3) how many NHS service providers in England use non-geographic telephone lines; and if she will make a statement. [45759]

Jane Kennedy: It is the responsibility of local management to ensure users of the national health service are informed of changes by NHS service providers to non-geographical telephone lines.

Information on how revenue sharing from calls to NHS service providers using non-geographical telephone lines is used is not collected centrally.

Information on the number of NHS service providers in England and Wales using non-geographical telephone numbers is not collected centrally.

Optometrists

Mr. Pelling: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make it her policy for NHS patients to have the right to see the optometrist of their choice under the NHS. [48691]

Ms Rosie Winterton: It is already the case that eligible patients may apply to any contractor on a primary care trust ophthalmic list to have a national health service funded sight test.

Orthodontic Practices

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what agreement was reached on 13 January with the British Orthodontic Society regarding the contractual arrangements for new practices; [49846]

(2) if she will make a statement on the dental contract arrangements for new orthodontic practices. [49848]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department will shortly be issuing further guidance on the new arrangements for orthodontic care and treatment, which will take into account discussions with the British Orthodontic Society.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate she has made of the number of new orthodontic practices established in (a) 2004 and (b) 2005; and what steps she is taking to ensure that their contracts are based on current activity levels. [49849]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is not available.

Following discussions with the British Orthodontic Society, the Department will shortly be issuing further guidance to primary care trusts on agreeing appropriate contracts for orthodontists whose current levels of activity are above the levels reflected in the reference period.

Palliative Care

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the total amount of Government spending on (a) palliative care and (b) hospices was in each of the last 30 years. [45569]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department does not collect the data requested. The level of funding given to local hospices is a matter for discussion between the commissioning primary care trust and the hospice.

Parkinson's Disease

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the level of funding has been for patients suffering from Parkinson's disease in Bedfordshire in each of the last five years; and if she will make a statement. [47356]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Primary care trusts, in partnership with local stakeholders, have the responsibility for deciding what services to provide for their populations, including those with Parkinson's disease. They are best placed to understand the health needs of the communities that they serve and have responsibility for commissioning services to meet that need.

Mrs. Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations her Department has received regarding funding for Parkinson's disease nurse specialists in Bedfordshire; and if she will make a statement. [47358]

Ms Rosie Winterton: I am not aware of any representations made to the Department regarding funding for Parkinson's disease nurse specialists in Bedfordshire.

Patient and Public Involvement Resource Centre

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which organisations have responsibility for (a) setting up and (b) running the patient and public involvement resource centre; and on what date she expects the resource centre to begin its work. [50826]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 13 February 2006]: The Department is responsible for setting up the patient and public involvement resource centre. We are currently finalising the contract and until the procurement process is complete we are unable to provide further details as they are commercially sensitive.

We expect the successful provider to commence work soon. A press notice will be issued as soon as the contract has been awarded.

Patients Forums

Mr. Baron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how administrative support will be given to patients' forums after forum support organisation contracts end. [50825]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 13 February 2006]: This is being considered as part of the review of patient and public involvement, which will be completed by April.

Peterborough and Stamford Hospitals Foundation NHS Trust

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what effect the ongoing reappraisal by her Department of the NHS Private Finance Initiative programme has had on her Department's support for the proposals for the Peterborough and Stamford Hospitals Foundation NHS Trust as laid down in its outline business case. [48416]

Ms Rosie Winterton: "The NHS in England: the operating framework for 2006/7" was published on 26 January. The trust, with its local health partners, will now need to revalidate the approval parameters for the Peterborough and Stamford Hospitals Foundation National Health Service Trust private finance initiative scheme and confirm they take account of the current reforms to the national health service. They will be asked to respond to a range of questions from the Department concerning factors such as long-term affordability, assumptions on efficiency gains and income growth, liquidity, activity shift and reference cost. The conclusions will need to be ratified by the Department before the scheme can proceed to financial close.

PFI Project

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what costs incurred by the preferred bidder on the Barts and the London NHS trust private finance initiative project would require to be returned if the project were not to proceed. [50462]

Jane Kennedy: As with all such contractual arrangements, the amount of liability, if any, would be subject to agreement and negotiation at some time in the future, should the project not proceed.

Primary Care Trusts

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much central Government funding was received by (a) Tendring and (b) Colchester primary care trusts in each of the last five years; and what average amount was received by primary care trusts in England for each of those years. [52245]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Funding received is shown in the table.

Government funding received

£000

	Tendring primary care trust	Colchester primary care trust	Average for all primary care trusts in England
2000–01	65,628	n/a	57,166
2001–02	85,683	77,245	102,476
2002–03	102,522	105,906	152,643
2003–04	145,694	156,233	169,217
2004–05	164,749	168,754	189,599

Notes:
1. Funding is the sum of net parliamentary funding and income from the Department. Funding from other Government Departments cannot be separately identified.
2. Primary care trusts were not fully established until 2003–04. In earlier years health authorities continued to receive funding and be responsible for the commissioning of health care services, with devolution to primary care trusts occurring at different rates, hence figures cannot be directly compared.
3. Funding allocations to primary care trusts are based largely on weighted populations so direct comparisons are not necessarily appropriate.

Royal Shrewsbury Hospital

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what funding her Department provides to run the MRI scanner at the Royal Shrewsbury Hospital. [49056]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information is not available in the format requested. We allocate funding to primary care trusts on the basis of the relative needs of their populations.

It is for primary care trusts (PCTs) in partnership with strategic health authorities and other local stakeholders to determine how best to use their funds to meet national and local priorities for improving health, tackling health inequalities and modernising services.

For the current financial year, Shropshire County PCT has been allocated £276 million, a cash increase of £23 million over the previous year, which equates to 9.16 per cent. Telford and Wrekin PCT has been allocated £153 million, a cash increase of £16 million, or £11.69 per cent.

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much VAT the Royal Shrewsbury Hospital paid the Exchequer for drugs purchased by the hospital in (a) 2001, (b) 2003 and (c) 2005. [50087]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is not held centrally.

Value added tax is not separately identified within the National Health Service summarisation schedules or accounts submitted to the Department.

Sex Change Operations

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients have sought to have their sex change operations reversed since 1995. [50853]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information requested is not centrally available.

St. Bartholomew's Hospital

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the redevelopment of St. Bartholomew's Hospital, London. [51018]

Jane Kennedy: The North East London Strategic Health Authority recently commissioned an independent review looking at the redevelopment of St. Bartholomew's in the context of existing cancer and cardiac capacity in London. We have now received the report and ministers must now consider the full findings of the review.

The national health service in East London has already seen record investment since 1997. We are committed to continuing to deliver improvement to NHS services in this part of London. As soon as ministers have considered the full findings of the review, we will work quickly with the local NHS to finalise consideration of the business case for the Barts and the London private finance initiative scheme.

Statins

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the effectiveness of the use of statins in each year since they have been prescribed. [45563]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Statin prescribing effectively began in 1991 with a low base. Since publication of the national service framework for coronary heart disease (CHD) in 2000 it has been rising at approximately 30 per cent. per year. In the last financial year the national health service spent about £0.75 billion on statins, benefiting around £2.7 million patients.

There are numerous studies showing the benefits of statins for secondary prevention of CHD. One of the most influential is the heart protection study published in 2002 which found that reducing low density lipoprotein cholesterol in high risk patients resulted—allowing for non-compliance—in a possible 70 to 100 lives saved per 1,000 treated over five years.

Suffolk Coastal Primary Care Trust

Mr. Gummer: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people made up the financial and management specialist team that visited Suffolk Coastal primary care trust to examine the state of the primary care trust; and how many days the team spent investigating onsite. [47653]

Ms Rosie Winterton [holding answer 2 February 2006]: The turnaround teams were announced in a ministerial statement on 1 December 2005, Official Report, column 37WS. The teams will comprise of experts with a mix of commercial and national health service turnaround skills.

The first stage of this is a baseline assessment, the aim of which is to ensure there is an agreed understanding of the local financial problem and that actions are in hand to address this.

The contract for the baseline assessment was awarded to consultants KPMG. Suffolk Coastal primary care trust's assessment was included in this assessment, which covered 62 organisations. Information is not available on the breakdown of the resources KPMG assigned to each assessment. The value of this contract is commercial in confidence.

Tarceva

Geraldine Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether Tarceva (erlotinib) has been prescribed by NHS trusts. [50505]

Jane Kennedy [holding answer 14 February 2006]: Erlotinib (Tarceva), for non-small cell lung cancer, was granted a licence by the European Medicines Agency in September 2005. There is no record of it having been dispensed in England, though our information is not comprehensive and might not capture the use of the drug in clinical trials where it has not been dispensed at the national health service's expense.

Terminal Illness (Benefit Provision)

Anne Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will take steps to ensure advice on benefits is made available to patients when they are diagnosed as having terminal illness. [44334]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The Department is working with the Department for Work and Pensions to ensure that advice on benefits is available to all patients including those with a terminal illness.

Total Purchasing Pilots

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment her Department has made of the effectiveness of total purchasing pilots in primary care services. [46590]

Jane Kennedy: No recent assessment has been made.

Visual Impairment

Dr. Tony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when a comprehensive low vision service will be available to visually-impaired people in all primary care trust areas. [43172]

Ms Rosie Winterton: Low vision aids are already available free on loan to any person requiring them. The Hospital Eye Service assesses the needs of the individual and provides any necessary low vision aids.

Social services departments have responsibility for assessing the needs of individuals who request help due to problems with their vision. This is usually in the form of modifications to a person's home such as improved lighting and hi-marks for cookers. Any help offered will be following a comprehensive assessment of the individual's needs.

The Government-funded integrating community equipment services (ICES) project was designed to improve equipment services for people by integrating the previously separate national health service and social services equipment services. The ICES team completed their work on integration in March 2005 and it is now the responsibility of the local social care and health service providers to determine how best to provide services to meet the needs of the individuals in their populations, in the light of local priorities.

Low vision was one of the areas identified by the eye care services steering group as an area for further development. A care pathway for low vision services has been published and a number of pilots are currently testing the pathway. The model pathways are designed to improve integration of eye care services across primary and secondary care and social services.

Learning from the pilots and their developing evidence-base will be shared with the NHS to support wider implementation. A conference is planned for June 2006 to showcase the pilots.

Waiting Lists/Times

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 17 January 2006, Official Report, column 1299W, on Health Committee evidence, if she will place in the Library the diagnostic waiting time statistics referred to in answer to Question 188 before the Health Committee on 1 December 2005, HC 736-i, on public health and personal social services. [45420]

Jane Kennedy: The data collected from the pilot sites is unvalidated management information collected to help to refine the list of diagnostic tests and procedures to be included in the national data collection, and to inform the development of policy on 18 weeks. Pilot sites submitted data in the knowledge that it was unvalidated and of variable data quality. It would not, therefore, be appropriate to publish this information in the Library. However, over time, we will commence routine publication of data on diagnostic waiting times and activity and expect the first report to be published during spring 2006.

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the (a) average and (b) longest waiting time was for an out-patient appointment at each of the hospitals run by Peterborough and Stamford Hospitals NHS Foundation Trust in the last year for which figures are available. [50729]

Ms Rosie Winterton: The information is not available in the requested format. However, the table shows waiting times for a first out-patient appointment following general practitioner written referral request for the Peterborough and Stamford Hospitals National Health Service Foundation Trust.

Waiting times for first out-patient appointment following GP written referral request—Peterborough and Stamford Hospitals NHS Foundation Trust—tranche 2

Quarter	Median wait (weeks)

Department of Health form QM08

Greg Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made towards ensuring every patient is treated within 18 weeks of general practitioner referral; and what assessment she has made of the impact of such progress on other NHS services. [40263]

Jane Kennedy: Clear progress has been made in setting the foundations for 18-weeks over the past few years—with in-patient and out-patient waiting times falling to six months and 13 weeks respectively. A new data collection on diagnostic test has been rolled out nationally since January 2006 in order to monitor progress against local plans.

We plan to measure the total patient pathway, from referral to treatment, across England starting in April 2007. In the meantime, all strategic health authorities (SHAs) have developed plans, based upon the three stages of treatment, out-patients, diagnostics and in-patients. The Department has recently asked primary care trusts and SHAs to refresh these plans for cutting long waits in order to reflect their latest thinking on achievement of the 18-week target.

The Department is currently collating the responses of a service-wide listening exercise on the proposed principles and definitions for 18-weeks and will publish the outcome in 2006.

The Department has issued very clear guidance that clinical priority must be the main determinant of when patients should be seen and we are not aware of any evidence to suggest that the successes in delivering shorter maximum waiting times to date has had any adverse impact on other national health service services. NHS guidelines make it clear that it remains the responsibility of local health services to ensure that there are fair and acceptable local standards governing access to services for areas not covered by national targets.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Alcohol Misuse

Mr. Moss: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps the Government are taking to combat (a) binge drinking and (b) other forms of alcohol misuse. [50471]

Hazel Blears: The Government have recently introduced a number of measures to combat alcohol misuse, the Licensing Act 2003 is a central component of these measures. (a) Rights and responsibilities are central to the Government's plans to combat alcohol misuse.

Flexible licensing hours as brought in by the Licensing Act 2003 counters binge drinking by not encouraging people to drink as much as possible before last orders, this is backed up by tough enforcement powers that target individuals through increased use of fixed penalty notices, premises through conditional licenses and expedited licensing reviews, and areas through designated public place orders (and drink banning orders which are proposed in the Violent Crime Reduction Bill). The Government are working with the drinks industry to develop a voluntary approach to tackling alcohol misuse. (b)

The Departments of Health, Education and Skills and Home Office are taking forward measures to combat alcohol misuse. Alcohol education is a key component of the national curriculum as part of the healthy schools initiative The alcohol misuse enforcement campaigns target alcohol misuse through increased enforcement of legislation, test-purchasing operations. The Government are planning to launch sensible drinking messages later this year in partnership with the drinks industry.

Antisocial Behaviour

Mr. Wills: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he plans to take to help the public to gain access to services that will help them tackle antisocial behaviour. [50612]

Hazel Blears [holding answer 9 February 2006]: We have already provided guidance and support to local agencies helping them to target resources and powers to protect the public and ensure that antisocial behaviour is tackled, not tolerated. The Respect programme will now take this further so that local services are organised so that they respond swiftly and effectively to the problems that communities face today.

People need to see and feel that a difference can be made. For example, along with the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister we are developing a single non-emergency number to provide the public direct access, via a new three digit number to community safety advice, information and action to tackle antisocial behaviour. We are also committed to ensuring that every area will be benefiting from neighbourhood policing by 2008. Local people will know who their police officers are and how to contact them and neighbourhood policing teams will tackle antisocial behaviour as a priority when local communities identify this as one of their key concerns.

We also aim to improve accountability between service providers and the public by giving more power to local communities. The Police and Justice Bill, contains provisions for the Community Call for Action. This is a way for local communities to demand a response from agencies to persistent local community safety or antisocial behaviour problems, via an approach to their ward councillor.

Anne Snelgrove: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many individuals were charged with causing criminal damage to property by means of graffiti in (a) Swindon, (b) the South West and (c) England and Wales in each year since 1995. [50915]

Hazel Blears: Data on the number of persons charged with offences are not collected centrally. Also, it is not possible to distinguish offences of graffiti from other types of criminal damage in the Office for Criminal Justice Reform figures for court proceedings as the circumstances of individual offences are not collected centrally

Anne Snelgrove: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of local authorities have an antisocial behaviour policy. [50920]

Hazel Blears: All of the 351 Crime and Disorder Reduction Partnerships (CDRP) in England and 22 Community Safety Partnerships (CSP) in Wales currently audit the levels of crime and disorder and misuse of drugs (substance misuse in Wales) in their area so as to identify the extent of these problems within their community, and develop strategies that deal effectively with the problems agreed as priorities for action following consultation within their communities.

They must ensure the need to tackle antisocial behaviour is reflected in the way local services are delivered where it is identified as a priority for action. Local authorities as a "responsible authority" within the CDRP play a major part, working in partnership with the police, police and fire and rescue authorities and primary care trusts, in addressing and tackling antisocial behaviour.

By 2007 all top tier local authorities in England will have a Local Area Agreement (LAA). LAAs are three year agreements struck between central and local government containing outcomes which address national and local priorities. The requirement for LAAs to contain an outcome on building respect and reducing antisocial behaviour is mandatory.

This underlines the importance of respect and antisocial behaviour as key national priorities. Preventing and tackling antisocial behaviour has also been identified as a key theme in Round eight of the Beacon Council Scheme and this will act as a further incentive for councils to ensure antisocial behaviour is top of their agenda.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prosecutions there have been in North Yorkshire for breaches of antisocial behaviour orders. [50988]

Hazel Blears: Antisocial behaviour order (ASBO) breach data held centrally only cover breach proceedings where there has been a conviction. These data are currently available from 1 June 2000 to 31 December 2003 for ASBOs issued since 1 June 2000. During this period, within the North Yorkshire criminal justice system area, notification has been received of eight persons breaching their ASBO on one or more occasions.

Asylum/Immigration

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the average length of time was that an asylum seeker was detained under the fast-track procedures in the last period for which figures are available. [50637]

Mr. McNulty: Of those detained on 10 February 2006, the average length of time asylum seekers had been detained under the fast track asylum procedure was 56 days for male claimants at Harmondsworth and 47 for female claimants at Yarl's Wood.

The combined average time for the two is 55 days. These figures include claims that are still pending. This information is based on internal management information and as such is not published within the official statistics.

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many fast-track asylum applications were (a) made and (b) refused as at 31 December 2005. [50638]

Mr. McNulty: The latest date for which figures are available is 10 February 2006, at which date 3,494 male asylum claimants had been detained under the fast-track procedure at Harmondsworth since it began in April 2003. Of those male claimants who remained in the procedure, 2,901 were refused asylum at the initial decision stage.

At the same date, 278 female asylum claimants had been detained under the fast-track procedure at Yarl's Wood since it began in May 2005. Of those female claimants who remained in the procedure, 205 were refused asylum at the initial decision stage. This information is based on internal management information and as such is not published within the official statistics.

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers are detained under the asylum fast-track procedures; and how many of them are children. [50639]

Mr. McNulty: As at 10 February 2006, there were 230 asylum claimants detained under the fast-track asylum procedures. None of those detained were children. Neither asylum seeking children nor asylum seekers with child dependants are detained under the fast-track procedures. This information is based on internal management information and as such is not published within the official statistics.

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum applicants have broken their bail conditions in each of the last three years. [50644]

Mr. McNulty: The information requested, on the number of asylum applicants who have broken their bail conditions in each of their three years, is not available.

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum detainees have had their removal delayed due to difficulties in obtaining travel documents in each of the last five years. [50658]

Mr. McNulty: Figures on delays in obtaining travel documentation are not kept and could be obtained only at disproportional cost.

Asylum/Immigration

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what projects his Department is funding to promote affordable immigration advice to visa applicants overseas. [50636]

Dr. Howells: I have been asked to reply.

UKvisas does not fund any projects to promote affordable immigration advice to visa applicants overseas. However, free information leaflets about the different categories of entry clearance and advice on how to apply is available from Visa Sections, our missions' websites and from UKvisas.

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) asylum and (b) immigration removals were delayed for two weeks or more in 2005. [50649]

Mr. McNulty: The information is as follows.

(a) Records indicate that in 2005, 15,019 failed asylum seekers were removed from the UK. Out of this figure, 452 (3 per cent.) were removed within two weeks of their appeal rights being exhausted.

(b) In additions records indicate that in 2005, there were 12,540 non failed asylum seeker removals. Our records do not indicate how many immigration (non failed asylum seeker) removals were delayed for two weeks or more after removal directions were set in 2005.

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many student applicants were refused entry to the UK by an (a) immigration officer and (b) entry clearance officer in each of the last five years. [50651]

Mr. McNulty: The number of student applicants refused by an Immigration Officer, for each of the last five years, is as follows:

	Number
2001	2,395
2002[1]	2,815
2003	2,940
2004	2,400
2005	[1]1,480

[1] The data for 2002 is incomplete due to a change in computer systems.

Note:
The data for the first half of 2003 is incomplete (see above). The statistics supplied are locally collated management information and are therefore subject to change. The data has been rounded to the nearest 5.

The number of student applicants refused by an Entry Clearance Officer, for each of the last five years, is as follows:

	Number
2000	20,105
2001–02	38,873
2002–03	52,520
2003–04	72,052
2004–05	92,720

Prior to 2001–02, Entry Clearance statistics were produced by calendar year. The statistics supplied are Entry Clearance statistics published by UKvisas.

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many successful appeals of refusal decisions of student applicants there were in (a) 2003, (b) 2004 and (c) 2005. [50653]

Dr. Howells: I have been asked to reply.

Neither UKvisas nor the Department for Constitutional Affairs holds these statistics.

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many entry clearance officers can speak fluently the language of the country they are situated in; and if he will make a statement; [50654]

(2) what language qualification requirements there are on entry clearance officers before they can take up their position. [50665]

I have been asked to reply.

UKvisas does not keep a record of how many Entry Clearance Officers (ECOs) can speak the language of the country they are situated in. Most Visa Sections have interpreters and therefore an ECO is not required to have formal language qualifications in order to do their job. However, where an ECO is required to have language skills, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office will provide training up to the necessary level.

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people (a) were successful in applying for a visa to enter the UK and (b) failed in their visa application in (i) 2003, (ii) 2004 and (iii) 2005. [50659]

Dr. Howells: I have been asked to reply.

Details of successful and unsuccessful visa applications in the requested years are as follows:

Visas	2002–03	2003–04	2004–05
Issued	1,648,474	1,828,367	2,008,132
Refused	249,830	339,616	483,457

Since 2001, UKvisas has published statistics on a financial year basis. The figures provided here are all publicly available along with other entry clearance statistics on the UKvisas website at www.ukvisas.gov.uk—"Entry Clearance: Facts and Figures".

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many local interpreters are employed by the Entry Clearance Office in Islamabad. [50664]

Dr. Howells: I have been asked to reply.

The Visa Section at our High Commission in Islamabad currently has 26 dedicated locally-engaged Entry Clearance Assistants whose primary purpose is to provide interpreting services. In addition, there are 10 further locally-engaged staff engaged in other work within the Visa Section who can assist with interpreting duties. There are also three Entry Clearance Officers (UK staff based overseas) who speak Urdu.

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the average length of time taken by an immigration officer in the UK to make a decision on an entry application was in the last period for which figures are available. [50837]

Mr. McNulty: The statistics requested are not available and may be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

British Citizenship (Erroneous Refusals)

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the number of British nationals from Hong Kong who have been erroneously refused British citizenship as a result of Home Office error; over what period of time the errors occurred; what steps he has taken to rectify the errors; and if he will make a statement. [51399]

Mr. McNulty: There has been no Home Office error. The decisions made were taken on the basis of information provided by the Indian Government in 1997–98 about their citizenship law which they have just corrected. Under the British Nationality (Hong Kong) Act 1997 possession of another citizenship immediately before four February 1997 rendered individuals ineligible for British citizenship.

We relied on other governments for advice about people who possessed their citizenship. We estimate that approximately 600 applications were determined on the basis of the Indian Government's original advice, mostly dating from the period July 1997 to June 1999. Any applications which were refused on the basis of the original advice, and where the applicant has confirmed that he or she still wishes to receive British citizenship, will be reconsidered.

No additional fee will be payable by the applicant in such cases. Both the Home Office and the Consulate-General Hong Kong have taken steps to publicise these developments. Details can be found on the following websites:

http://www.ind.homeoffice.gov.uk/ind/en/home/applying/british_nationality/new_information_on.html

http://www.fco.gov.uk/servlet/Front?pagename=OpenMarket/Xcelerate/ShowPage&c=Page&cid=1138870241398.

The Consulate-General in Hong Kong has also sent a letter to the Council of Hong Kong Indian Associations asking them to bring this matter to the attention of their members. The South China Morning Post carried the story on the front page of its 10 February 2006 edition.

Cautions

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy that cautions should not be used to deal with offences where reoffending is likely; and if he will make a statement. [51733]

Hazel Blears: Guidance on the cautioning of adult offenders is contained in the Cautioning of Adult Offenders Circular 30/2005 issued by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform. Cautions are a non-statutory disposal. One of their main aims, as stated in the circular, is to reduce the likelihood of re-offending.

The circular makes clear that a caution can be used for cases involving first-time, low level offences when to do so would meet the public interest. It is not possible to set out definitive rules on the circumstances in which cautions are appropriate, because their use involves the exercise of discretion by the police who have to take into account a number of considerations in each case. These considerations include whether a caution is appropriate to the offence and the offender and whether it is likely to be effective in the circumstances.

The circular advises that both national and any locally held records must be checked before a caution is given, to ensure that the suspect's criminal record is known and up-to-date and to avoid inappropriate use. If the suspect has previously received a caution, then a further caution should not normally be considered. However, if there has been a sufficient lapse of time to suggest that a previous caution has had a significant deterrent effect (two years or more), then a caution can be used. A caution can also still be administered if the subsequent offence is trivial or unrelated. If the suspect has previously, when aged 17 or under, received a reprimand or final warning, a period of two years should also be allowed to elapse before administering a caution.

Class A Drug Offences

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people under the age of 25 years were arrested for class A drug offences in each of the last five years. [47699]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The requested data are not collected centrally.

Community Sentences

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to introduce a requirement for all offenders sentenced in the community to perform unpaid work; and what resource implications are being taken into account. [50058]

Fiona Mactaggart: We believe that unpaid work should be at the heart of tough and effective community sentences. Highly visible community payback shows the public that offenders are making amends to the community for the harm they have caused. At the moment unpaid work is a part of about half of all community sentences. We expect the number of hours of unpaid work that offenders carry out in the community to rise from five million hours in 2003 to approaching 10 million hours by 2011.

Community Support Officers

Edward Miliband: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many police community support officers have been introduced in (a) Doncaster North, (b) the borough of Doncaster and (c) South Yorkshire since the scheme began; and what assessment he has made of the impact of community support officers on crime and antisocial behaviour; [50597]

(2) how many police officers there were in (a) Doncaster North, (b) the borough of Doncaster and (c) South Yorkshire in each year since 1997. [50598]

Hazel Blears: Figures relating to the number of police officers are collected by police force area and have been collected at basic command unit (BCU) level since March 2003. These figures are given in the table. Figures for Doncaster North are not collected centrally.

In South Yorkshire there were 14 PCSOs as at 31 March 2003. This figure increased by 45, to give a total of 59 at 31 March 2004. As at 31 March 2005 this figure had increased again by 66, giving a total of 125 PCSOs. This figure remained the same for September 2005. Information on the number of PCSOs in basic command units has been collected since June 2005. The Doncaster basic command unit had 36 PCSOs on 30 June 2005. Deployment of PCSOs with in Doncaster is an operational matter for the Divisional Commander. "A National Evaluation of Community Support Officers" (Home Office Research Study 297) was published on 25 January.

A copy of the report has been placed in the Library and shows that PCSOs have been well received by the public. They are helping to restore respect in local communities by providing reassurance and tackling antisocial behaviour and low level crime.

[2] Police officer strength has only been collected at basic command unit level since 2003. The 2002 figure was provided by HMIC. Figures are based on full-time equivalent figures (including staff on career breaks or maternity/paternity leave) and have been rounded to the nearest whole number.

Complaints Audit Committee

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps his Department has taken following the recommendations made in the latest Complaints Audit Committee report. [50691]

Mr. McNulty: Since the publication of the Complaints Audit Committee's 2004–05 Annual Report in July 2005, IND has undertaken a significant amount of work to implement their recommendations across the Department.

The 2004–05 Annual Report recommendations will form part of a wider "rolling register" of action points that the Committee has raised for IND to consider. Also included in the register will be recommendations arising from their quarterly audits of complaints across IND.

IND's response to these recommendations will be published in our official reply to the CAC's annual report which is due for publication in October 2006.

Crime

Anne Snelgrove: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many incidents of violent crime there were in (a) Swindon and (b) England in each year from 1997 to 2005. [50918]

Hazel Blears: Available information relating to recorded offences is given in the following table. Crime statistics for Swindon are recorded at Crime and Disorder Reduction Partnership (CDRP) level and are available from 1999–2000 to 2004–05. It is estimated that the effect of the National Crime Recording Standard (NCRS) in April 2002 was a 20 per cent. increase nationally in recorded violent crime in its first year. Violent crime is comprised of the violence against the person, sexual offences and robbery offence groups.

Table 1: Recorded offences of violent crime—1997

Number of offences recorded

Period	Swindon CDRP	England
1997	—	326,993

Note:
The data in this table are prior to the introduction of the revised counting rules for recorded crime, which came into effect on 1 April 1998. Therefore, this figure is not directly comparable with those for later years.

Table 2: Recorded offences of violent crime—1998–99 to 2001–02

Number of offences recorded

Period	Swindon CDRP	England
1998–99	—	571,027
1999–2000	1,906	662,525
2000–01	2,094	692,552
2001–02	2,315	773,897

Note:
The data in this table are prior to the introduction of the National Crime Recording Standard. These figures are not directly comparable with those for later years.

Table 3: Recorded offences of violent crime—2002–03 to 2004–05

Number of offences recorded

Period	Swindon CDRP	England
2002–03	3,191	935,019
2003–04	2,947	1,052,601
2004–05	2,794	1,127,681

Note:
The data in this table take account of the introduction of the National Crime Recording Standard in April 2002. These figures are not directly comparable with those for earlier years.

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many violent crimes took place in Peterborough city council area in each of the last five years. [50730]

Hazel Blears: The information requested is given in the following table. It is estimated that the effect of the introduction of the National Crime Recording Standard (NCRS) in April 2002 was a 20 per cent. increase nationally in recorded violent crime in its first year.

Peterborough UA—violent crime

Financial year	CDRP offences
2000–01	2,761
2001–02	3,202
2002–03	5,203
2003–04	5,855
2004–05	5,827

Note:
The National Crime Recording Standard was introduced on 1 April 2002. Figures are therefore not directly comparable with those for earlier years.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) males and (b) females were (i) prosecuted for and (ii) convicted of (A) murder and (B) manslaughter in Southend in 2004. [50857]

Fiona Mactaggart: Data from the Court Proceedings Database held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform on the number of defendants proceeded against at magistrates courts and found guilty at South East Essex petty sessional area for murder and manslaughter in 2004, are provided in the following table.

Number of defendants proceeded against at magistrates' courts and found guilty at all courts for murder and manslaughter, South East Essex Petty Sessional Area 2004[1]

Offence	Proceeded against	Found guilty
Murder
Male	1	1
Female	—	—
Manslaughter[2]
Male	2	1
Female	—	—

[1] These data are provided on the principal offence basis.
[2] Includes: manslaughter, child destruction, infanticide, causing death by dangerous driving, diminished responsibility and causing death by careless driving when under the influence of drink or drugs.

Data for 2005 will be available in the autumn of 2006.

Mr. Wills: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he plans to take to publicise action taken to tackle antisocial behaviour to members of the public in Swindon. [50607]

Hazel Blears: The Respect Action plan sets out our intention to empower local communities to challenge and tackle antisocial behaviour through greater awareness of the powers available to them. We will ensure effective dialogue between local people and services by introducing regular and systematic "face the people" briefing sessions, involving senior representation from the police and local authorities.

In addition, the respect "Taking A Stand" awards and action days held nationwide will stimulate public debate about acceptable behaviour and inform antisocial behaviour practitioners and other specialists about local activities. The action plan also proposes a publicity campaign to counter disrespect such as physical violence, threats, intimidation, verbal abuse by the public towards public sector workers. Swindon is one of the Government's action areas, committed to tackling antisocial behaviour.

The Swindon Evening Advertiser has promoted local initiatives run by the antisocial behaviour team, such as Operation Crackdown, Operation Graffiti and It's Your Call and has publicised details of antisocial behaviour orders. Swindon borough council and Wiltshire police use local neighbourhood safety teams to communicate activity taken to tackle antisocial behaviour and in parallel, invite local residents to highlight community safety concerns in their area.

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy not to charge victims of crime for the recovery of their property from (a) police and (b) those holding the property on behalf of the police. [46185]

Hazel Blears: The police have powers to order the removal of any vehicle that is dangerously, obstructively or illegally parked, broken down or abandoned, including vehicles abandoned after being stolen .

The Government regards such removals as important for road safety and crime reduction. Before owners can regain any vehicle so removed, they are required by law to pay fees prescribed by the Secretary of State to meet the costs of removal and storage.

The Government considers it would not be appropriate for such costs to fall on the public purse We recognise, however, the concerns that have been expressed by and on behalf of the owners of stolen vehicles who have had to pay for return of their own property. We agreed with the Association of Chief Police Officers on recommended best practice in such cases.

This includes an immediate notification on report of a vehicle theft as to the need to pay the statutory fees when the vehicle is recovered, a follow-up letter with more detailed information and further information and advice on police force websites. A decision to charge for return of property other than vehicles is an operational matter for the chief officer of the individual force concerned.

Criminal Justice Act

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the (a) sections and (b) provisions within the Criminal Justice Act 2003 which (i) have not yet come into force and (ii) have been repealed (A) prior to and (B) after coming into force. [50136]

Fiona Mactaggart: The information requested is shown in the table.

A copy will be placed in the Library.

Daniel Morgan

Mr. Roger Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the report by the Metropolitan Police Authority relating to the murder of Daniel Morgan will be made available to his family. [49577]

Hazel Blears [holding answer 6 February 2006]: The Metropolitan Police Authority is responsible for the report into the investigation into Daniel Morgan's murder. I will ensure that the chairman receives a copy of the question and replies to you directly. Copies of the letter containing the MPA's response will be placed in the House Libraries.

Departmental Finance

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the annual expenditure on vehicles by (a) his Department and (b) each (i) non-departmental public body, (ii) executive agency and (iii) other public body for which he is responsible in (A) Scotland, (B) Wales, (C) each of the English regions and (D) Northern Ireland was in each of the last three financial years; and what the planned expenditure is for 2005–06. [39976]

Mr. Charles Clarke: For details of expenditure on Ministerial vehicles provided to the Department by the Government Car and Despatch Agency I refer the hon. Member to the letter of 20 December 2005 from the Chief Executive of the Government Car and Despatch Agency to the hon. Member for Lewes (Norman Baker). Copies of the letter are available in the Library.

Annual expenditure on vehicles is not recorded by geographical area and could be assembled only at disproportionate cost. The information as to the costs of vehicles which (a) the Department (b) each (i) NDPB (ii) executive agency and (iii) other public body for which the Department is responsible Office have purchased or leased is as follows.

Drug Offenders

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the reconviction rates differ of those convicted of drug-related offences who (a) enter drug residential rehabilitation places, (b) receive drug treatment and testing orders and (c) receive other disposals. [50071]

Fiona Mactaggart [holding answer 9 February 2006]: Information on reconviction rates for offenders entering drug residential rehabilitation places are not routinely available. Information on re-offending is published annually to help monitor the Home Office's progress against its PSA target to reduce re-offending by 5 per cent. by 2006. The most recent data were published in December in 'Adult re-offending: results from the 2002 cohort'. Home Office Statistical Bulletin 25/05'. This is available on the Home Office's website: http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/rds/hosbpubs1.html. For offenders convicted of drug offences in the first quarter of 2002, the two year re-offending rate was 35.9 per cent. for those offenders convicted of drug import and supply offences and 53.8 per cent. for those convicted of drugs possession and small scale supply offences. Further analysis of this data shows that the two year re-offending rate for those convicted of drug offences and given DTTOs was 78.1 per cent. and for all other disposals it was 48.1 per cent. Re-offending rates should be used with caution as a number of different factors can influence them. Re-offending rates can be adjusted to take account of the changing characteristics of offenders and these adjusted rates are published annually on the Home Office's website. The latest predicted rates show a reduction in re-offending of 0.2 per cent. to 58.5 per cent. for all adults against the 2000 baseline.

Drugs Dependence Treatment

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners underwent treatment for drugs dependence in (a) Tamworth constituency, (b) Staffordshire and (c) England and Wales in each of the past five years. [51225]

Fiona Mactaggart: Figures for prisoners undergoing drug treatment are given in the following table. There are no recorded figures prior to 2001–02. Figures for programme completion were not collected prior to 2004–05.

Drunkenness

Anne Snelgrove: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many offenders were found guilty of (a) drunken and disorderly behaviour and (b) drunken and aggravated disorderly behaviour in each year between 1997 and 2005 in (i) England and (ii) each local authority in England. [51289]

Fiona Mactaggart: Data from the court proceedings database held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform on the number of offenders found guilty for drunkenness and drunkenness with aggravation in Wales 1997–2005 are given in the table.

It is not possible to identify those convicted in each local authority, as the data are not collected at this level of detail. Court statistics for 2005 will be available in autumn 2006. The penalty notice for disorder scheme was brought into effect in all police forces in England and Wales during 2004. Under the scheme the police are able to issue persons committing specified minor offences with a fixed penalty notice.

No admission of guilt is required and payment of the penalty discharges all liability for the offence. In 2004 26,609 penalty notices were issued in England for the offence of being drunk and disorderly. Provisional data for 2005 to the end of September shows that 24,150 penalty notices were issued in England for this offence. The aggravated offence is not included in the scheme.

Fireworks

Anne Snelgrove: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many penalty notices have been issued in relation to the illegal use of fireworks in each police force area since the legislation was introduced. [51290]

Hazel Blears: Offences under the Fireworks Regulations 2004 (made under section 11 of the Fireworks Act 2003) for breach of the national fireworks curfew, the illegal possession of category four fireworks and the possession by a person under 18 of an adult firework attract penalty notices for disorder, as well as the offence of throwing fireworks.

The offence of throwing fireworks has been included in the penalty notice for disorder scheme since it was introduced nationally during 2004. The offences under the Fireworks Regulations 2004 were brought into the scheme with effect from 11 October 2004. The numbers of penalty notices issued by police force area for 2004 and provisional data from January to September 2005 are provided in the table.

Ian Missing

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish the report of 3 January commissioned by Essex police and Essex Probation Services concerning the case of Mr. Ian Missing; and if he will make a statement. [46267]

Fiona Mactaggart [holding answer 30 January 2006]: The published recommendations of the review are being examined, especially those that have national implications for probation and police. We are constantly seeking to improve current systems in order to improve public protection and the report will be used to test or revise current arrangements.

The plans for any eventual publication of the report are a matter for the joint commissioners, Essex Police and Essex Probation Board, in the first instance.

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with the Essex probation service regarding Mr. Ian Missing. [46959]

Fiona Mactaggart: Officials of the National Probation Service's Directorate are in regular contact with their colleagues in Essex probation and have met the chief officer to discuss issues raised by the case of Ian Missing in order to establish how processes and information sharing protocols between police, probation and other agencies may be tested or revised.

Individual Support Orders

Anne Snelgrove: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps the Government has taken to encourage the use of individual support orders for young people subject to antisocial behaviour orders. [51288]

Hazel Blears: In recognition of the importance of individual support orders (ISOs) in helping young people avoid breaching their antisocial behaviour orders, we have given an extra £500,000 to the Youth Justice Board to allocate to youth offending teams. We are working with the key agencies involved on a range of initiatives and tools to increase uptake.

Licensing Act

Mr. Moss: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prosecutions have been brought under the Licensing Act 2003 since November 2005 for (a) sales of alcohol to under-age children and (b) crime and disorder associated with pubs and clubs. [51184]

Fiona Mactaggart: Data from the court proceedings database held by the Office for Criminal Justice Reform for 2005 will be available in autumn 2006. Penalty notices for disorder may be issued for nine Licensing Act 2003 offences. Provisional data on the numbers issued since November 2005 will be available in March 2006.

Life Sentence Prisoners

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many life sentenced prisoners are held in local prisons awaiting the beginning of the first stage of their planned life sentence regime (a) six months and (b) one year after sentence was passed. [47566]

Mr. Charles Clarke: The information requested cannot be provided without incurring disproportionate cost.

National Offender Management Service

Dr. Evan Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he will take to ensure the end-to-end management of offenders under the National Offender Management Service arrangements for persons jailed for five years or more. [50060]

Fiona Mactaggart: Offender Management requires that a single person, the Offender Manager, should be responsible for an offender through their sentence now matter how long or short the sentence is. The offender manager will be based in the community.

Offender Management is being introduced in stages: for community sentences Offender Management will be in place from April this year; for sentences involving an element of custody, Offender Management will be introduced over the two years starting in September this year. Offender Management will be fully implemented for all types of sentence by 2008.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what methodology underlay the Regulatory Impact Assessment which was published in response to Restructuring Probation to Reduce Re-offending. [50231]

Fiona Mactaggart: The indicative cost savings contained in the partial Regulatory Impact Statement assumed cost savings within the range of 3 per cent. to 8.5 per cent. through contesting certain activities of the National Probation Service. This range was based on the experience of the savings delivered through the market and performance testing programme within the Prison Service. The savings profile assumed a 10 year programme of contestability with no more that 12 per cent. by value of probation business being contested in any one year. The projected cash savings were discounted using a standard 25 year Discounted Cash Flow analysis.

Online Auction Sites

Steve McCabe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what steps UK police are taking to combat the trade in counterfeit goods on online auction sites; [51020]

(2) what estimate his Department has made of the extent of the trade in counterfeit goods involving UK citizens on online auction sites. [51021]

Hazel Blears: No estimates exist of the trade in counterfeit goods involving UK citizens and online auction sites. We are currently discussing with industry the extent of the trade in counterfeit goods and the most likely routes for this type of crime. Initial industry findings suggest that the on-line route does not play a major role.

Decisions about the investigation of alleged criminal offences rest solely with the Chief Officer of police of the force concerned who will take into account available resources, national and local policing priorities, the likely eventual outcome of any investigation and the competing priorities of other criminal cases already under investigation.

Policing initiatives in this area complement the greater level of work undertaken by Trading Standards officers who play a key role in investigating Intellectual Property (IP) Crime. The DTI's Innovation Review, published in December 2003 tasked the Patent Office with a number of actions in respect of intellectual property rights including a commitment to develop a national strategy for dealing with IP crime. In response the Patent Office set up the IP Crime Group in February 2004.

The group draws together representatives from law enforcement agencies (including ACPO and Trading Standards), Government Departments and commercial interests.

Police

David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers have retired in each year since 2001, broken down by (a) rank and (b) police force area. [49044]

Mr. Charles Clarke: A full breakdown of reasons for leaving by police officers has only been collected centrally since 31 March 2003. Prior to that date the breakdown was limited to retirements, resignations and other wastage. The information requested is given in the tables for the last three years.

Jeremy Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many employees of the police service on long-term sick leave are claiming incapacity benefit. [49989]

Hazel Blears: The requested information is not collected centrally.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) deputy and (b) assistant chief constables have spent their entire police career serving in one police force. [51188]

Hazel Blears: This information is not collected centrally.

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many full-time equivalent special constables there have been in Cambridgeshire police in each year since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [50338]

Hazel Blears: Special constables are volunteers who generally perform policing duties for a few hours per week and the information requested is therefore available on a headcount only basis. The table provides figures on headcount.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether all local authorities in Wales will be represented on a new police authority for a single Welsh police force. [51027]

Hazel Blears: Yes.

In order to discharge their functions effectively I believe strategic authorities should in most cases have a maximum of 23 members (in line with that of the Metropolitan Police Authority).

The Government accept, however, that in some parts of the country, including in Wales, police authorities will need to be larger in order to ensure that all upper tier local authorities are represented. This is important given that police authorities will continue to set a policing precept.

Pornography

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the answer of 25 January 2006 to the hon. Member for Crosby, Official Report, column 2135W, on pornography, how many successful prosecutions have been brought in each of the last three years under (a) the Obscene Publications Act 1959, (b) the Indecent Displays Act 1981, (c) the Communications Act 2003, (d) the Video Recordings Act 1984 and (e) the Protection of Children Act 1999 for the illegal transference of pornography to minors. [49306]

Fiona Mactaggart: Data from the court proceedings database held by the Office for Criminal Justice reform, showing the number of defendants proceeded against at magistrates courts and found guilty at all courts for selected offences related to pornography, is provided in the attached table, for England and Wales, 2002–04. It is not possible to identify how many of these prosecutions relate to the illegal transference to minors because the individual circumstances of these prosecution are not collected centrally. Prisoners

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people in Peterborough who were tagged on early release from prison have breached the rules governing their early release in each of the last five years. [49292]

Fiona Mactaggart: 15 people were recalled to prison in 2005 for failing to comply with the curfew conditions after being released early on home detention curfew from Peterborough prison. 204 people in total were released from Peterborough prison on home detention curfew during 2005. The prison opened on 28 March 2005. Information on the total number of people serving their curfew period while living in Peterborough is not centrally available.

Prisons

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners in (a) Chelmsford, (b) Coldingley, (c) Elmley and (d) Rochester prison have tested positive for drugs in each year since 1997. [50370]

Fiona Mactaggart [holding answer 8 February 2006]: There are three main types of drug testing in prisons: clinical; mandatory; and voluntary. Data on clinical and voluntary testing are not held centrally. The random mandatory drug testing programme is used to measure levels of drug misuse in prison. The random MDT figures are given in the following table:

	Chelmsford Positive (Number)	Chelmsford Percentage	Coldingley Positive (Number)	Coldingley Percentage	Elmley Positive (Number)	Elmley Percentage	Rochester Positive (Number)	Rochester Percentage

[1] Year to date (April to December 2005).

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many inmates at each prison were subject to (a) closed visits and (b) visit bans in each of the last 12 months for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [48420]

Fiona Mactaggart: Information relating to individual prisons is not collated centrally in the format required. I shall write to the hon. Member with available information and place a copy in the Library.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the cost of the performance testing exercise at HMP Wandsworth was; what assessment he has made of its impact; how he intends to monitor performance against the defined outputs of the exercise; what assessment he has made of the value for money of the exercise; and if he will make a statement. [48509]

Fiona Mactaggart: Performance testing was introduced as a mechanis, to improve performance in poorly performing establishments. The additional cost of the performance test process at Wandsworth prison was £200,000. This excludes any contribution made from within the establishment's existing resource.

Wandsworth was awarded a service level agreement as a result of their successful bid. The area manager and the regional offender manager monitor performance closely to ensure that performance levels are sustained. Performance testing has proved to be an extremely cost-effective mechanism for improving poorly performing establishments. A full report on progress made at Wandsworth since the performance test will be submitted to the interim chief executive of NOMS. This will highlight significant improvement against a range of indicators, including better basic conditions for prisoners, a more constructive regime and improved security and standards audit scores.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) prison governors, (b) prison officers and (c) other prison staff have been found with (i) controlled drugs and (ii) other contraband at each prison establishment in each of the last five years; how many cases in each category were referred to the police for investigation; and if he will make a statement. [48512]

Fiona Mactaggart: The investigations database does not record whether cases are referred to the police for investigation. Investigations are not categorised by grade making it impossible to distinguish between governors, prison officers and administrative grades who have been investigated for drug-related offences. The total in the table relates to the number of staff and not investigations. Whether every individual was found with items in their possession could be established only at proportionate cost.

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners were reclassified by category in each of the last five years. [48793]

Fiona Mactaggart: The information requested is not held centrally and can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners in open conditions were returned to closed conditions during each of the last five years. [48794]

Fiona Mactaggart: The information requested is not routinely recorded and can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the capacity is of prisons in England and Wales; and how many prisoners were detained at the most recent date for which figures are available. [50155]

Fiona Mactaggart: As on 3 February 2006, the useable operational capacity of prisons in England and Wales was 78,712. The prison population was 76,070.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what the (a) Certified normal accommodation (CNA), (b) in use CNA and (c) prisoner unlock figure was for each prison establishment as of 28th October 2005. [51557]

Fiona Mactaggart [holding answer 16 February 2006]: The figures requested for 28 October 2005 are set out in the table. Certified normal accommodation (CNA) level is the uncrowded capacity of the establishment. All establishments operate within their operational capacity, which is the total number of prisoners that an establishment is certified to hold taking into account control, security and the proper operation of the planned regime.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what criteria are used for assessing the transfer of operation of prisons from the public to private sector. [51558]

Fiona Mactaggart [holding answer 16 February 2006]: The transfer of operational management of a prison from the public sector to the private sector, or vice versa, would normally occur under the terms of a market test. Under a market test of an existing establishment, an invitation to tender (ITT) is issued to potential bidders from all sectors, including the incumbent management.

The ITT contains the criteria against which tenders will be evaluated. The criteria for the evaluation of compliant bids for past market tests of prison management have been financial and operational deliverability and the consequent demonstration of comparative value for money.

Public Order

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions his Department held with the Metropolitan Police prior to the demonstrations on 3 February and 4 February to discuss response tactics; and if he will make a statement. [50461]

Hazel Blears: Operational tactics to deal with demonstrations are a matter for the police. There was no contact between the Home Office and the Metropolitan police before the protest outside the Danish Embassy on 3 February.

Mr. Hepburn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many antisocial behaviour orders have been issued in (a) Jarrow constituency, (b) South Tyneside, (c) Tyne and Wear, (d) the north east and (e) England and Wales in each year since their inception; and how many people have since broken the conditions of their order in each case. [51949]

Hazel Blears: Information on antisocial behaviour orders (ASBOs) issued at constituency level is not collected centrally. A table giving a breakdown by the local government authority area in which prohibitions are imposed within ASBOs is available on the crime reduction website at www.crimereduction.gov.uk. This table gives data by year since ASBOs were introduced up to 30 June 2005 (latest available). ASBO breach data held centrally only cover breach proceedings where there has been a conviction. These data, at criminal justice system area level only, are currently available from 1 June 2000 to 31 December 2003 for ASBOs issued since 1 June 2000. The available information is given in the table.

The number of antisocial behaviour orders breached, as reported to the Home Office, by period and area, from 1 June 2000 to 31 December 2003[1]

	Period June 2000 to December 2000	2001	2002	2003	June 2000 to December 2003

The north east region[2]	1	12	30	44	58
England and Wales	14 118	118	240	609	793

[1] Breaches are counted in this table on a persons basis, i.e. where the order has been breached on more than one occasion within the same period, a person is counted once only within that period.
[2] Comprising Northumbria, Durham and Cleveland criminal justice system areas.

Student Visas

Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the members of the taskforce on student visa changes; and whether the taskforce will consider the residence reporting requirements which apply to a number of countries. [51359]

Mr. McNulty [holding answer 14 February 2006]: In a statement on 1 November 2005 the Home Office, other Government Departments and stakeholders represented on the Joint Education Taskforce made a joint commitment to ensuring that the UK retains its position as a world leader in international education and maintains effective systems for regulating immigration.

This statement, available on the IND website, also listed the existing members of the taskforce. The requirement for students of certain nationalities to register with the police arises is not for immigration purposes and therefore the Home Office has no plans to discuss this at the taskforce.

Terrorism

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to teach (a) police and (b) civilians how to recognise improvised explosive devices. [50849]

Hazel Blears: Police training is primarily a matter for the relevant chief constable. However, there are national arrangements in place for the accreditation of police search advisers. This includes specialist training on the recognition of improvised explosive devices.

There are no plans specifically to teach civilians how to recognise improvised explosive devices. The focus is instead on raising public awareness about suspicious behaviour and suspect packages and alerting the relevant authorities as necessary.

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what (a) purposes and (b) projects the (i) Metropolitan Police Service specific grant, (ii) regional specific counter-terrorism grant and (iii) specific counter-terrorism capital grant will be used. [50850]

Hazel Blears: The new specific CT grant will provide the police service with a dedicated and specific funding stream to ensure that it is effectively resourced to counter the international terrorist threat and domestic extremism. It will include a range of capabilities including intelligence and investigation and protective security. As you will appreciate we cannot comment on the specific projects and programmes undertaken by the police service on counter terrorism activity for security reasons.

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the effects police force amalgamations and restructuring will have on counter-terrorism funding and its distribution to each police force. [50851]

Hazel Blears: The Government remain committed to ensuring that the police service has the necessary resources to meet its CT commitments. The creation of strategic forces will help free up resources to reinvest in counter-terrorism and other protective services.

Moreover, the additional police counter-terrorism funding, which amounts to £173 million over the next two years, announced on 25 January 2006, Official Report, column 57WS, will further strengthen the police service's intelligence and investigative capability both in the capital and across the rest of the service.

Counter terrorism and tackling domestic extremism will continue to be a priority under the new force structure and funding arrangements will be in place to reflect these priorities.

Traffic Wardens

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police forces in England and Wales employ traffic wardens. [51228]

Hazel Blears: 30 police forces in England and Wales employed a total of 1,291 traffic wardens on 30 September 2005. We do not maintain data on the number of parking attendants employed by local authorities.

Urination in Public

Mr. Wills: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will increase the penalty for urinating in public. [48359]

Fiona Mactaggart: There is no specific national offence of urinating in the street. Infringement of local authority byelaws can result in police caution or prosecution in the courts. Courts may impose a fine. Nationally, this behaviour may in appropriate circumstances be dealt with as an incident of being drunk and disorderly under section 91 of the Criminal Justice Act 1991, or behaviour likely to cause harassment, alarm or distress under section five of the Public Order Act 1986.

Both these offences are included in the penalty notice for disorder scheme which enables the police to issue fixed penalty notices for incidents of low level, nuisance crime. Under the scheme a person committing either of these offences may be issued with a fixed penalty of £80. The Respect Action Plan, launched by the Prime Minister on 10 January, stated that this higher tier penalty will be raised to £100 later this year.

Visas

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people from (a) the Democratic Republic of Congo, (b) Nigeria and (c) the US have been refused leave to enter the UK for the purpose of family reunion in each of the last five years. [50660]

Dr. Howells: I have been asked to reply.

The figures requested are given in the table as follows:

	As at February:
Nationality/ Year	2001–02	2002–03	2003–04	2004–05	2005–06
Democratic Republic of Congo	1	56	88	55	52
Nigeria	3	0	0	1	0
US	0	0	0	1	1

The statistics given represent the numbers of nationals of the Democratic Republic of Congo, Nigeria and the US who have been refused a visa to enter the UK for the purpose of family reunion in each of the last five years. UK visas, the department with responsibility for entry clearance matters arising overseas, does not hold statistics on the numbers of people who may have been refused entry by an Immigration Officer at a UK port of entry.

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many successful appeals there were on visa refusal decisions by (a) Nigerian, (b) Pakistani, (c) Ghanaian, (d) Australian and (e) United States nationals in each of the last five years. [50662]

Dr. Howells: I have been asked to reply.

The Department for Constitutional Affairs, which has responsibility for the Asylum and Immigration Tribunal (AIT), has provided the figures in the table for the number of successful entry clearance appeals by Nigerian, Pakistani and Ghanaian nationals for the period 4 April—30 September 2005.

Nationality	Successful appeals
Nigerian	30
Pakistani	90
Ghanaian	44

Figures are only available for this period because prior to the AIT being created on 4 April 2005, the Immigration Appellate Authority (IAA) did not categorise figures for entry clearance appeals separately.

Figures for Australian and United States nationals are not available because the AIT's reports on promulgation by nationality of the appellant, only concentrates on the top 20 countries.

Damian Green: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what average time an entry clearance officer took to make a decision on a visa application in the last period for which figures are available. [50670]

Dr. Howells: I have been asked to reply.

UKvisas does not calculate the average time it takes an Entry Clearance Officer (ECO) to make a decision on an entry clearance application. However, three of UKvisas' public service agreement (PSA) Targets indicating the length of time a Visa Section should aim to resolve an application, were met in financial year 2004–05. They are as follows:

90 per cent. of straightforward non-settlement visa applications to be processed and available for return to the applicant within 24 hours from the date of receipt by the Visa Section of the application and all supporting documents including the fee.

90 per cent. of non-settlement applications requiring further inquiries or interview to be decided within 15 working days from the date of receipt by a Visa Section of the application and all supporting documents including the fee.

90 per cent. of applicants for settlement visas to be interviewed within target times as follows:

12 weeks, except in four busy settlement posts (New Delhi, Bombay, Dhaka and Islamabad), where the following maximum waiting times for a settlement interview should apply:

Queue 1: (Right of Abode claims: dependent relatives over 65; special compassionate cases): 3 months maximum;

Queue 2: (Spouses, children under 18): 3 months maximum;

Queue 3: (Fiancé(e)s, other settlement categories): 6 months maximum;

Queue 4: (settlement re-applicants): 9 months maximum.

Young Offenders

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many young people of school age (a) found guilty of a crime and (b) placed in custody had a previous history of being in care in (i) Uxbridge constituency, (ii) the London borough of Hillingdon, (iii) Greater London and (iv) England in each year since 1997. [48523]

Fiona Mactaggart: The available information is shown in the table.

It is not possible from the statistics collected centrally to identify the Uxbridge constituency. The figures in the table relate to the petty sessional area of Hillingdon which sits at Uxbridge.

In relation to children in custody who have a previous history of being in care, the Social Exclusion Report "Reducing re-offending by ex prisoners", annex D, says (page 157 D10), quoting an HMIP survey, that "over half of those under 18 in custody, have a history of being in care or social services involvement".

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Afghanistan

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps have been taken to encourage Afghan farmers to move from growing poppies to other crops; and if he will make a statement. [51559]

Hilary Benn: Agriculture dominates the Afghan economy. Previously Afghanistan was a major exporter of horticulture and livestock products. However, 25 years of war and civil conflict and the recent drought have seriously affected Afghanistan's agriculture sector. Developing this sector is critical for economic growth, poverty reduction and for tackling opium poppy cultivation.

DFID leads the British Government's efforts to develop alternative livelihoods to opium production in Afghanistan. In financial year 2005–06, we are spending over £45 million for this purpose. This is an almost tenfold increase on the amount spent in 2003–04. In financial year 2006–07 spending is expected to continue at similar levels. A proportion of this funding will continue to be specifically targeted on improving agricultural opportunities for Afghan farmers. This includes research to help identify, test and implement new crops and technologies. Examples include improvements in health and husbandry for livestock, apricot drying, honey bee keeping, and the introduction of fruit tree nurseries and greenhouses for vegetable production. DFID has also jointly funded with United States Agency for International Development a $25 million nationwide programme to increase access to seeds and fertiliser for over 500,000 farmers for alternative crops.

At the same time as developing agricultural opportunities, DFID is also promoting the development of non-farm alternative livelihoods by supporting national programmes of the Government of Afghanistan which are helping to increase access to credit and improve infrastructure for farmers to transport their produce to markets.

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the counter-narcotics trust fund in Afghanistan. [51574]

Hilary Benn: DFID has not yet carried out an assessment of the effectiveness of the Counter-Narcotics Trust Fund (CNTF). It is too early to do so, as the CNTF was launched at the end of October 2005. The Government are putting together CNTF spending proposals for its 2006–07 budget, which is expected to be passed in March 2006. There will be regular monitoring and reporting on the performance of the CNTF by UNDP and a Steering Committee of Government and donor representatives. DFID will undertake an annual review in early 2007 for its £20 million three-year commitment. An independent evaluation commissioned by UNDP covering the effectiveness of the CNTF is envisaged before October 2007.

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much his Department has provided in Direct Budgetary Support to Afghanistan in each year since 2001; how much will be given in each year until 2008; and if he will make a statement. [51607]

Hilary Benn: DFID has not yet provided any un-earmarked Direct Budgetary Support to Afghanistan. However, DFID is one of the largest contributors to the Government of Afghanistan's budget. We have contributed £135 million of un-earmarked support through the Afghanistan Reconstruction Trust Fund (ARTF) since 2002. The ARTF is a multi-donor trust fund administered by the World Bank. It channels money through Government systems. However, there are independent monitoring agents that verify actual expenditures on the Government's recurrent budget. The ARTF operates on a reimbursement basis. Only eligible expenditures are reimbursed by the ARTF. It is therefore not Direct Budgetary Support.

The breakdown of this £135 million by Afghan fiscal years is:

	£ million
2002–03	15
2003–04	30
2004–05	45
2005–06	45

DFID plans to provide a further £50 million in 2006–07 and £55 million in 2007–08 in un-earmarked support to the Government, subject to effective use of the funds.

DFID has also financed several specific national programmes through the Government's budget. This includes £30 million since 2003–04 to the ARTF for alternative livelihoods activities to tackle the opium problem in Afghanistan. We intend to contribute at least a further £25 million for alternative livelihoods until 2008. DFID contributed £20 million in 2004 directly to the Government's Afghanistan Stabilisation Programme to help strengthen ties between provincial government and the central Administration. We have also agreed this year to a three-year commitment of £20 million for the Counter-Narcotics Trust Fund (CNTF). The CNTF will also channel money through the Government's budget to finance counter-narcotics activities.

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much (a) bilateral and (b) multilateral funding his Department has given to non-governmental organisations working in Afghanistan in each year since 2001. [51608]

Hilary Benn: The following table provides approximate figures for bilateral funding provided directly by DFID to non-governmental organisations for work in Afghanistan in each year since 2001:

	£ million
2001–02	22.5
2002–03	5.8
2003–04	2.5
2004–05	1.8
2005–06	4.7

A further significant portion of DFID's programme goes to NGOs indirectly through the Government of Afghanistan, which subcontracts implementation of many of its national programmes (to which DFID contributes funding) to national and international NGOs, as well as other implementing partners. Exact figures for NGOs are not easily available. Other direct recipients of DFID funding, such as UN agencies, also use NGOs as implementing partners.

DFID also provides global funds to NGOs through Partnership Programme Agreements (PPA). PPAs are long-term agreements of three to five years with civil society organisations which have a strong track record of work in international development and an ability to make a contribution to achieving the Millennium Development Goals. The way PPA support is set out means that we cannot attribute DFID funding to any specific activity or country. OXFAM, ActionAid, Christian Aid, and Save the Children UK all have Partnership Programme Agreements with DFID, and work in Afghanistan.

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much (a) bilateral and (b) multilateral aid has been provided to Afghanistan by the UK in each year since 2001; and if he will make a statement. [51609]

Hilary Benn: The following table shows total bilateral aid provided to Afghanistan by the UK Government (including Departments other than DFID) in each financial year since 2001:

Total UK Government bilateral aid to Afghanistan

	£ million
2000–01	7.5
2001–02	50
2002–03	76
2003–04	99.6
2004–05	99

Total bilateral aid in 2005–06 is expected to be around £150 million. The Prime Minister announced on 31 January that the UK expects to spend some £500 million in Afghanistan in the three year period from 2006–09.

The second table shows figures available for the UK's estimated share of multilateral aid to Afghanistan in each financial year since 2001. Figures for 2004 and 2005 are yet to be published.

UK share of multilateral aid to Afghanistan

	£ million
2001	6.7
2002	16.5
2003	20.1

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much the UK has provided to Afghanistan for developing education facilities and increasing access to education in each year since 2001; and if he will make a statement. [51610]

Hilary Benn: DFID has not provided direct assistance to the education sector in Afghanistan, with the exception of very limited support (£47,000) for primary education of refugees in 2001–02. However, through our funding to the Afghanistan Reconstruction Trust Fund (ARTF), DFID supports the Government of Afghanistan's budget, which finances significant expenditure in the education sector. Since 2002–03 the operating budget for education as a whole has risen by 250 per cent. Overall civil service numbers have remained stable, but there has been a major increase in the number of teachers, who constitute one of the largest portions of the civil service. DFID's contribution to the ARTF, to which we are the biggest donor, has thus played a big part in increasing the number of children in school since 2002.

Support to development projects in the education sector was budgeted to rise by 60 per cent. in 2005–06. Other donors have taken the lead in providing direct support to the education sector, including the World Bank, the United States Agency for International Development, Denmark, and United Nations Agencies. The UK is therefore also supporting the education sector in Afghanistan through its contributions to multilateral agencies such as the World Bank and the UN, but we do not have specific breakdowns. Through donor support to the education sector, over a thousand schools have been built or rehabilitated, which has enabled the enrolment of 5.6 million children, 37 per cent. of them girls.

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much the UK has provided to Afghanistan for (a) the development of health capacity and (b) increasing access to treatments in each year since 2001; and if he will make a statement. [51611]

Hilary Benn: DFID support to the health sector is mostly through our funding to the Afghanistan Reconstruction Trust Fund (ARTF). The ARTF supports the Government's budget, including the health sector. This plays a big part in meeting recurrent costs such as wages and salaries of Government health workers and medical supplies. The Government's health programme was expanded to all 34 provinces, covering 70 per cent. of the population, and there has been a 60 per cent. increase in functioning health centres.

Other donors have been very active in the health sector, including the World Bank and United Nations Agencies such as the World Health Organisation. The UK is therefore also supporting the health sector in Afghanistan through its contributions to multilateral agencies, but we do not have specific breakdowns.

From 2002–05, DFID provided technical cooperation (£295,000 in total) to the Government of Afghanistan and the World Health Organisation to strengthen capacity for delivery of health services.

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much the UK has provided to Afghanistan (a) for strengthening women's rights and (b) for improving access to clean water and sanitation in each year since 2001; and if he will make a statement. [51612]

Hilary Benn: The following table shows DFID's bilateral expenditure on projects that have targeted the strengthening of women's rights in Afghanistan. These figures reflect all projects that were recorded as having a significant focus on this policy objective, but it should be noted that these projects will also have targeted other policy objectives.

	Expenditure (£)
2000–01	1,289,682
2001–02	1,492,179
2002–03	4,505,407

	Expenditure (£)
2003–04	5,847,680
2003–05	5,970,913

Recording expenditure on water and sanitation presents a challenge due to the cross-cutting nature of many water and sanitation initiatives and the range of instruments used to channel development assistance, including budget support to Governments and via multilateral organisations.

Since much of our expenditure on water and sanitation is cross-cutting, for example as part of our health and education programmes, a detailed analysis is required to obtain more specific figures. DFID has commissioned a series of reports on financial support to the water sector; this analysis estimates that DFID bilateral expenditure on water and sanitation projects in Afghanistan between 2001 and 2004 is as follows:

	Expenditure (£)
2001–02	3,817,000
2002–03	1,597,000
2003–04	301,000

Analysis is currently being updated for 2004–05 and figures will be placed on DFID's website at www.dfid.gov.uk when available.

DFID also channels significant funds through multilateral organisations including the UN, EU and WB. A proportion of this spend also contributes to outcomes in water and sanitation and women's rights.

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many staff from his Department have worked in Afghanistan in each year since 2001; what estimate he has made of the number who will work there in each year until 2008; and if he will make a statement. [51613]

Hilary Benn: The following table shows the number of DFID staff posts filled in Afghanistan from 2001 until now:

	UK staff posts	Afghan staff posts	Total
2001	4	0	4
2002	7	4	11
2003	9	7	16
2004	13	8	21
2005	16	10	26
2006	15	9	24

Estimates of staffing to 2008 are not available; plans are under review.

Figures include DFID staff working outside the DFID office on secondment to other organisations, or with Provincial Reconstruction Teams. They do not include DFID staff working on Afghanistan in Pakistan (in 2001–02) or the UK, staff from the Post-Conflict Reconstruction Unit on short-term assignment, Afghan drivers or guards, contracted consultants, or unfilled posts under recruitment. Some posts may have been filled by more than one person in any one year where staff changed mid-year. Others were vacant for part of the year.

Coercive Abortion

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development pursuant to the answer of 20 January 2006, Official Report, column 1639W, on coercive abortion, (1) if he will list the occasions when UK officials have raised the issue of coercive abortion bilaterally in appropriate circumstances; and if he will make a statement; [52534]

(2) how officials in his Department interpret appropriate circumstances in relation to raising the issue of coercive abortion bilaterally; and if he will make a statement. [52535]

Mr. Thomas: DFID interprets appropriate circumstances as those occasions judged to offer the best opportunity to seriously engage with senior officials. Under the UK presidency of the EU, we specifically raised the case of Chen Guangcheng, a lawyer who revealed information about forced abortions and sterilisations in Linyi City, Shandong Province, with the Chinese Government in October and November in 2005. We also raised our concerns more generally about the issue of coercive abortion with an unofficial delegation of senior Chinese policy-makers who visited the UK in August 2005.

Departmental Entertainment

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much was spent on entertainment by his Department in 2004–05; and how much of that sum is accounted for by (a) food, (b) alcohol, (c) staff and (d) accommodation. [50882]

Mr. Thomas: The total cost for entertainment in 2004–05 was £303,000.

This figure for entertainment includes working breakfasts and lunches, refreshments at meetings and official entertainment. It is not possible to disaggregate specific entertainment costs relating to food, alcohol, staff and accommodation without incurring disproportionate cost.

All entertainment is made in accordance with published departmental guidance on financial procedures and propriety, based on principles set out in Government Accounting.

Departmental Recruitment

Mrs. Villiers: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many job advertisements were placed by his Department (a) in total, (b) in print newspapers and magazines and (c) on a recruitment website in each year since 1997; and at what (i) total and (ii) average cost in each case. [50742]

Mr. Thomas: All of DFID's external job advertisements are placed in the national press or specialised magazines in addition to appearing on DFID's own website. Since 2003 all of our vacancies have also been placed on the civil service recruitment gateway website. There is no advertising cost associated with this facility.

Details of the number and cost of job advertisements placed by DFID for the five calendar years 2001–05 are as follows. Figures prior to 2001 are not available.

	2001	2002	2003	2004	2005
Total number of advertisements	191	135	140	128	80
Total cost (£)	772,780	766,167	703,012	594,769	307,359
Average cost (£) >	4,046	5,675	5,022	4,647	3,842
Number placed in print newspapers and magazines	189	135	139	122	79
Cost (£)	772,233	766,167	702,871	593,336	307,171
Average cost (£)	4,086	5,675	5,057	4,863	3,888
Number placed on an external recruitment website	2	0	1	6	1

Average cost (£)	273	0	141	239	188

Gabon

Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much international aid was given to Gabon in (a) 1980 and (b) 2005. [52085]

Hilary Benn: The amount of international aid given to Gabon from all donors was (a) £24.01 million in 1980 and (b) £20.62 million in 2004, which is the latest year for which figures are available.

HIV/AIDS

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent assessment he has made of the incidence of HIV/AIDS in (a) India, (b) Bangladesh and (c) Pakistan; and if he will make a statement. [51877]

Mr. Thomas: India remains a low prevalence country with overall HIV prevalence of 0.91 per cent. i.e. less than 1 per cent. of the population. However, the overall figures mask various sub epidemics in various groups in the country. These sub-national epidemics are evidenced by high prevalence of HIV among both STD clinic attendees and antenatal clinic attendees.

The higher prevalence States in India are Tamil Nadu, Maharastra, Karnataka, Andhra Pradesh and Manipur and Nagaland in the North.

As of 2004, India has an estimated 5,134,000 people living with HIV or AIDS. This represents an increase of 28,000 from 5,106,000 people in 2003. The balance between urban and rural prevalence is 41 per cent. urban, 59 per cent. rural. 61 per cent. of the infections are in men, 39 per cent. in women.

The consensus is that India has a window of opportunity to act decisively. We and partners are increasingly working with the Government of India to do so.

DFID is providing £123 million over seven years to the Government of India's National AIDS Control programme. This includes funding directly through the National AIDS Control Organisation and a package of technical assistance which funds, among other things, a resource centre, mass media campaigns, UN agency work and a challenge fund.

HIV/AIDS prevalence in Bangladesh is estimated at less than 0.2 per cent. The Ministry of Health and Family Welfare estimated that 7,500 people in Bangladesh were living with HIV and AIDS at the end of 2004.

Nevertheless a number of factors mean that Bangladesh is vulnerable to a rapid spread of the HIV epidemic, including very high levels of behavioural risk in vulnerable groups and high levels of migration both within Bangladesh and from neighbouring countries with higher prevalence rates.

The most recent data on Bangladesh indicates that even among population groups with high risk behaviours, HIV prevalence remains less than 1 per cent. The exception to this is injecting drug users (IDUs) in central Bangladesh where HIV prevalence is 4.9 per cent., with pockets in Dhaka where levels are as high as 8.9 percent.

DFID has been providing support for HIV prevention work in Bangladesh since 1995. We are currently contributing £4 million to a programme of support for the Government of Bangladesh's response to the epidemic. This includes targeted HIV prevention services for groups with high risk behaviours and efforts to improve systems to ensure safe blood transfusion.

Data for Pakistan is scarce but HIV/AIDS prevalence is estimated at 0.2 per cent. of the population. There are however concerns that the country could be on the verge of a serious HIV problem. The combination of high levels of risk behaviour and limited knowledge about AIDS among drug injectors and sex workers are contributing to the rapid spread of HIV in high risk groups.

Knowledge of HIV among injectors (and sex workers) is extremely low. In Karachi, more than one quarter had never heard of AIDS and as transmitted infections rates are high. The extent of overlapping high risk practices and the mobility of sex workers and drug users poses the threat of a serious HIV epidemic in Pakistan.

DFID is working with both public sector programmes and public-private partnerships. DFID's current and recent direct support has amounted to £4 million. We are also contributing through budget support and technical assistance to seven national health programmes, which include the National Aids Control programme. This includes further support for the national AIDS strategy and promoting within this better integration of HIV and AIDS and reproductive health services.

Kenya

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps are being taken by his Department to address the food crisis in Kenya following the recent drought. [52192]

Hilary Benn: During my recent visit to Kenya I committed a further £3 million in response to the food crisis in Kenya. This brings the total UK contribution to £12.7 million since July 2004. A total of 3 million people mostly in the north eastern and eastern parts of Kenya are affected by the drought. The levels of malnutrition are unacceptably high and urgent action is needed by all parties—Government, donors, NGOs, and communities to help save the lives of those at risk.

DFID support is channelled through the UN system—specifically the World Food Programme (WFP) for support to food aid and UNICEF for emergency health and nutrition. We have also made substantial contributions through NGOs (OXFAM, Merlin and Action Against Hunger). The support is focused on the worst affected areas based on the needs assessment report conducted jointly by Government of Kenya, the UN and the NGOs. The support given includes food aid, emergency health support, feeding programmes for malnourished children and emergency water provision.

DFID is also working with the Government of Kenya, other donors and others to look at ways to break the cycle of dependency on relief and to find more effective ways to address the problems of those who suffer from predictable chronic hunger.

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what discussions he has had with his counterparts at (a) the EU and (b) the UN regarding the speed of the response to the drought crisis in Kenya. [52193]

Hilary Benn: DFID has been in regular discussions with the EU, the UN system and with bilateral donors since the start of the current drought crisis in Kenya in 2004, and has been active in promoting stronger co-ordination of the response.

DFID has been responding to the current emergency since 2004, as has the EU (through its humanitarian response agency, ECHO), and the UN system through the World Food Programme (WFP) and UNICEF in particular. Early warning systems supported by the Government of Kenya with inputs from the WFP and Food and Agriculture Organisation (FAO), have been indicating the growing vulnerability of people in various districts.

However, the situation has escalated rapidly following the poor short rains at the end of 2005. The Government of Kenya has provided a strong contribution to the overall relief efforts, and is now the biggest contributor of food aid, with a recent commitment of 60,000mt of food. DFID is urging the UN to play a stronger role in co-ordinating the emergency response, in particular in overseeing the analysis of priorities and gaps in the response effort.

Water Action Plan

Emily Thornberry: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development pursuant to the answer of 26 January 2006, Official Report, column 2398W, on the water action plan, what percentage of budget support from his Department was spent by each African country in receipt of such support on access to safe water and sanitation in 2004–05. [51672]

Hilary Benn: We do not yet have figures for the percentage of public expenditure (including budgetary support) spent on improving access to safe water and basic sanitation for 2004–05. The process of collecting and reconciling national figures is lengthy, and the methodology for analysis is still experimental. We expect to be able to publish figures for 2004–05 by the third quarter of 2006. In the meantime, we believe that the figures in the DFID report entitled "Financial Support to the Water Sector 2002–04" (copies of which are in the Library of the House and also on the DFID website: www.dfid.gov.uk) may provide a useful indicator for 2004–05, since budget allocations typically do not change sharply from year to year.

Yemen

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will make a statement on Yemen's progress toward the Millennium Development Goals. [51428]

Mr. Thomas: There is very little reliable data on progress towards achieving the millennium development goals (MDGs) in Yemen. Much of the data which comes from surveys is now very old and new more reliable data is not expected until late 2006 at the earliest. The data which does exist shows that Yemen is unlikely to meet most of the MDGs. Poverty has probably doubled during the 1990s and the population has increased by about 3 per cent. a year over the same period. Child malnutrition figures are particularly worrying. Progress in reducing infant and child mortality has been much slower than required to meet the target. Access to health services is very limited in many parts of the country. Two surveys on maternal deaths conducted in 1997 and 2003 show no improvement over this period (the risk of pregnancy-related death is one in 19 women). HIV/AIDS appears to be spreading. TB remains highly prevalent although incidence is falling. In the 1990s malaria became more widespread, with epidemics in 1996 and 1998. Yemen is confronting a severe environmental crisis with rapidly depleting water reserves that will leave the capital city, Sana'a without water within a generation. Some progress has been made in increasing the proportion of the population with access to improved sanitation, but not at a rate rapid enough to meet the MDG target.

There has been a rapid increase in enrolment in primary school, particularly enrolment of children in the designated age groups, but this has been from a very low base. If the current rate of progress is maintained, the goal of universal primary education by 2015 could be attained. The rapid expansion of primary, and to some degree secondary enrolment has particularly favoured girls, and if the rate of change continues, this goal could possibly be met by 2015. Other indicators of gender equality however, do not indicate progress.

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much (a) bilateral aid and (b) multilateral aid the UK has given to Yemen in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [51429]

Mr. Thomas: The UK has provided the following amount of bilateral aid to Yemen in the last five financial years:

	Bilateral aid provided to Yemen (£ million)
2000–01	2.731
2001–02	2.582
2002–03	5.442
2003–04	3.875
2004–05	5.312

The most recent year for which DFID has multilateral aid figures is 2003. This is because information is drawn from a report compiled by the OECD Development Assistance Committee (DAC) which all multilateral donors provide information to, and there is a time lag before this is published. The UK contributes to several multilateral agencies which work in Yemen including the UN, EC and World Bank. The UK's multilateral aid contribution to Yemen between 1999 and 2003 was as follows:

	Multilateral aid contribution (£ million)
1999	4.3
2000	6.2
2001	12.4
2002	2.3
2003	11.2

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much bilateral aid from the UK has been used for improving health care facilities and tackling diseases in Yemen in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [51430]

Mr. Thomas: DFID has supported improvements to the health sector in Yemen since 2003, working with the Government of Yemen, UN agencies, and other bilateral donors. Funding has been provided to support polio eradication, and family planning and prevention of HIV/AIDS. Total spending on support to the health sector was £462,310 in 2003–04 and £210,740 in 2004–05.

DFID is now providing £3.1 million over four years to help the Government of Yemen improve maternal and neonatal health, working with the UN and the Dutch Government. The work involves improving services for maternal and neonatal health in five governorates, and helping the Ministry of Population and Health Policy to improve its planning and policy making capacity, including in undertaking a full health sector review during 2006.

DFID also provides funding to the Yemeni Social Fund for Development (SFD) which supports community level development, including improved health care services. DFID has provided approximately £10 million to the SFD since 2004–05. Approximately 7.5 per cent. of the fund's budget is allocated to health projects.

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much aid the UK has given to Yemen in each of the last five years for projects to protect and promote the rights of women; and if he will make a statement. [51431]

Mr. Thomas: Poverty affects women more severely than men in Yemen as they have less access to health and education, employment opportunities, and resources such as land. Yemen is ranked 126th out of 144 countries in the UNDP gender-related development index, the worst performer among the Arab states.

All of DFID's support to Yemen prioritises the rights of girls and women, and the following projects particularly address this objective:

£15 million between 2005 and 2010 to help increase access to basic education, particularly for girls.

£13.9 million between 2004 and 2007 to support the Yemeni Social Fund for Development (SFD), which provides community based development, with a particular focus on improving women's lives. Programmes by the Social Fund for Development have directly served nearly five million women since 1997, slightly more than men (4.7 million). Some programmes, such as health and small and medium enterprises, involve far more women than men. As well as basic services, the SFD operates a range of programmes to fulfil the legal, social and political rights of women and girls.

Almost £500,000 between 2003 and 2006 to support work to bring women's development needs into Yemen's Five Year Development and Poverty Reduction plan so that women and men benefit equally for the Government of Yemen's development polices.

£3.1 million between 2005 and 2009 to help the Government of Yemen improve maternal and neonatal health and health policy making and planning.

£900,000 to support more transparent and inclusive democratic processes including greater participation by women.

Prior to 2003–04, DFID's bilateral programme in Yemen was focused only on strengthening economic and financial management, so there was no expenditure on promoting gender equality and empowering women. From 2003–04, the programme expanded into other areas. In 2003–04, nearly £2 million was spent on projects which had a primary or significant focus on promoting gender equality and empowering women; and in 2004–05, nearly £4 million.

The Foreign and Commonwealth Office has been funding a number of projects in this area including work to enhance women's role in local communities and a young women's leadership programme. The spend on these totalled £26,783 in 2003–04 and £73,221 in 2004–05. The FCO is committed to spend £181,882 in 2005–06, £179,657 in 2006–07 and £80,336 in 2007–08 on this programme of interventions.

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much bilateral aid from the UK has been spent on education and education facilities in Yemen in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [51432]

Mr. Thomas: DFID has provided support to the Government of Yemen to improve basic education since 2003–04, and this is now one of DFID's main priorities in Yemen and accounts for approximately 25 per cent. of our annual spend. DFID is providing £15 million between 2005 and 2010 to help implement the Government of Yemen's Basic Education Strategy through a World Bank project co-financed with other donors. The strategy aims to increase the percentage of school age children enrolled in basic education from 64 per cent. in 2005 to 84 per cent. by 2010, with the proportion of girls increasing from 38 per cent. to 47 per cent., and to improve the quality of basic education. DFID spent approximately £90,000 bilaterally on education in 2003–04 and approximately £500,000 in 2004–05, mainly on the development of the strategy and the design of the World Bank project.

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps his Department is taking to improve the operation of the judiciary in Yemen; what funds have been committed to projects to achieve this; and if he will make a statement. [51433]

Mr. Thomas: DFID together with other UK Government Departments is currently assessing how the UK could support judicial reform in Yemen, especially in the interests of women and the poor, who have little access to justice. The Government of Yemen is keen for international donors to support judicial reform. DFID has committed an initial £500,000 and is looking into options for longer-term programming.

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what contribution his Department has made to the Social Fund for Development in Yemen in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [51434]

Mr. Thomas: DFID contributed £1.6 million to the Social Fund for Development (SFD) in 2003–04. DFID then committed an additional £12.3 million to a subsequent phase of the project between 2004 and 2008. £1.88 million was spent in 2004–05 and £6.5 million has been spent already in this financial year. The funds to the Social Fund for Development are used for community based development throughout Yemen.

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what aid and resources the UK has contributed to tackling the recent poliomyelitis outbreak in Yemen; and if he will make a statement. [51435]

Mr. Thomas: The first case of polio in Yemen since 1996 occurred on 25 February 2005. As of 1 February 2006, 478 cases had been confirmed (source World Health Organisation (WHO)). The Government of Yemen completed a mass information campaign in April and eight nationwide immunisation campaigns have taken place since the outbreak last year. This strategy appears to be having results: the last new case was reported on 17 November 2005. Independent monitors now show that immunisation coverage overall is at 97.2 per cent. and the outbreak is coming under control.

DFID provided £250,000 to a UNICEF polio vaccination campaign in 2003–04. We did not provide bilateral funding in response to the polio outbreak in February 2005 because of the need to focus our programme on relatively few areas in order to have impact, and because other donors were better positioned to assist. However, DFID provides funding multilaterally for polio eradication via the WHO-led Global Polio Eradication Initiative (PEI). DFID contributed £34 million for the PEI in 2005–06, which helped close its funding gap for 2005 and ensured that all immunisation activities could go ahead in 2005. In addition DFID announced a further £40 million for 2006 to 2008 to eradicate polio in 2006 and ensure the world stays polio free thereafter. The funds we provide for the PEI are not earmarked, allowing the PEI to allocate resources according to their assessment of priority needs. The PEI provided at £7.6 million for polio eradication activities in Yemen in 2005.

Mark Simmonds: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps his Department is taking to tackle corruption in Yemen; what funds have been committed to projects to achieve this; and if he will make a statement. [51436]

Mr. Thomas: Corruption is a serious problem in Yemen. It holds back development and particularly harms the poor. The key to tackling corruption in Yemen is securing transparent and accountable public finances. DFID is helping the Government of Yemen develop its action plan for public financial management reform. This will include ways to improve control and accountability of public finances and develop a more transparent system for procuring goods and services with public funds. DFID has committed £200,000 for the development of the plan and is considering funding its implementation together with other donors.

DFID also provided £2.57 million between 1999 and 2005 to support the modernisation of customs services which will also help tackle corruption by providing more effective and transparent mechanisms for collecting revenue.

LEADER OF THE HOUSE

Parliamentary Questions

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Leader of the House (1) how many ordinary written parliamentary questions tabled for answer by him in the last 12 months were answered (a) within 14 days, (b) after 14 to 28 days, (c) after 28 days to two months and (d) in excess of two months after the date of tabling; and if he will make a statement; [52136]

(2) how many parliamentary questions tabled in the last 12 months for answer by him on a named day (a) were transferred and (b) received a substantive answer (i) on the day named and (ii) after the day named. [52137]

Mr. Hoon: The information is as follows:

Procedure

Departments should ensure that Members receive a substantive response to their named day question on the date specified, and should endeavour to answer ordinary written questions within a working week of being tabled.

Transferring Questions

I expect Departments to act promptly in transferring questions. It is a discourtesy to the House and to hon. Members if they are not notified of the transfer within two sitting days of it appearing in the Notice Paper. However, an oral question should be transferred within 24 hours of it appearing in the Notice Paper and not on the day for answer.

Performance

From 1 January 2005 to 31 January 2006, the Office of the Leader of the House of Commons has answered 88 ordinary written parliamentary questions (100 per cent.) within 14 days of being tabled.

Over the past 12 months, no named day parliamentary questions have been transferred, and 37 (100 per cent.) received a substantive answer on the day named[1].

[1] This figure includes oral questions not reached on the day, or unstarred.

MINISTER FOR WOMEN

Equal Pay

22. John Robertson: To ask the Minister for Women and Equality what recent discussions she has had with employers and trade unions on promoting equal pay for work of equal value. [52018]

Meg Munn: Recently I met Baroness Prosser, Chair, Women and Work Commission and have met Commissioners including employers and trades unionists. Their report, due shortly, will provide a blueprint to close the gender pay gap. I look forward to discussing this with all the key stakeholders.

Women Entrepreneurs

23. Ian Lucas: To ask the Minister for Women and Equality what steps the Government are taking to assist women entrepreneurs. [52019]

Meg Munn: The Government have been working with providers of business support to ensure that women can access the women-friendly advice they need. Our key partners are the regional development agencies who are fully committed to incorporating women-friendly business support into mainstream provision. The Task Force on Women's Enterprise will be operational by spring 2006 and will work to increase the number of women entrepreneurs.

26. Ben Chapman: To ask the Minister for Women and Equality what recent assessment she has made of support services for women in enterprise in Merseyside. [52022]

Meg Munn: The Government have been working with partners within the business support arena to improve understanding of the support requirements of women entrepreneurs. In Merseyside our key partner the North West Development Agency has developed a clear plan to address the needs of women entrepreneurs.

Employment Equality (Age) Regulations

24. Dr. Kumar: To ask the Minister for Women and Equality what steps the Government have taken to publicise the Employment Equality (Age) Regulations 2006. [52020]

Meg Munn: The Government's Age Partnership Group's 'Be Ready' campaign, publicises the Employment Equality (Age) Regulations. It targets employers, providing information on the draft regulations and age diversity.

Government also fund a capacity building programme whose aims include raising individuals' and employees' awareness of the forthcoming regulations.

Domestic Violence

25. Lynda Waltho: To ask the Minister for Women and Equality what steps the Government are taking to give young people the relationship skills needed to prevent domestic violence. [52021]

Meg Munn: Qualifications and Curriculum Authority has recently developed guidance for teachers which includes units of work covering relationships and healthy friendships. This provides the scope for schools to explore domestic violence and is supported by the Department's publication "Does Sex Make A Difference" which includes domestic violence lesson plans.

NORTHERN IRELAND

A6 (Derry to Dungiven)

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to upgrade the A6 Derry to Dungiven road. [52146]

Mr. Woodward: The chief executive of Roads Service (Dr. Malcolm McKibbin) has been asked to write to the hon. Gentleman in response to this question.

Letter from Dr. Malcolm McKibbin, dated 16 February 2006:

You recently asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland a Parliamentary Question about what plans there are to upgrade the A6 Derry to Dungiven Road. As this issue falls within my responsibility as Chief Executive of Roads Service I have been asked to reply.

The Secretary of State announced on 13 December 2005 that a £250 million scheme to dual the A6 between Londonderry and Dungiven was being added to Roads Service's Major Road Works Forward Planning Schedule. The 30km of dualling, including a dual carriageway bypass of Dungiven, will be the biggest single road scheme ever built in Northern Ireland.

It is hoped that the scheme will commence on site in the latter half of the Regional Strategic Transport Network Transport Plan 2015 period, subject to the availability of finance, and the completion of the relevant statutory procedures and economic appraisals.

Roads Service commissioned consultants in April 2005 to identify a corridor for the future dualling of the A6 between Castledawson and Londonderry. It is envisaged that this study will be completed in spring 2006 and will be taken forward through the development of the A6 Derry to Dungiven section.

I hope this information is helpful.

Civil Service Pay

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimate he has made of the average percentage increase in salary for Northern Ireland civil servants in 2006. [52516]

Angela E. Smith: No estimate has been made of the average percentage increase in salary for Northern Ireland civil servants in 2006. The 2006 settlement date is 1 August and consideration of the 2006 pay award is at a very early stage.

Decommissioning

Mr. Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what recent discussions have taken place with (a) Loyalist paramilitaries and (b) Unionist political parties on the decommissioning of weapons; and if he will make a statement. [50498]

Mr. Woodward: Ministers and officials meet representatives of the Progressive Unionist Party and the Ulster Political Research Group on a regular basis. Among the matters discussed is how they can help the organisations they are associated with to make the transition from conflict to peace. This includes the need for full and verifiable decommissioning.

The IICD reports that the UDA and the LVF are in contact with it. The UVF has, however, yet to re-engage.

Departmental Assets

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the items of departmental property worth over £100 that have been reported as (a) lost and (b) broken in the last 12 months. [47678]

Mr. Hain: There have been no items of departmental property worth over £100 reported as (a) lost or (b) broken in the Northern Ireland Office during the last 12 months.

Departmental Staff

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many staff in his Department are paid on a performance-related basis. [50489]

Mr. Woodward: All staff in the Northern Ireland Office are paid on a performance-related basis.

Pay and performance management for the senior civil service is based on a framework set by the Cabinet Office. This includes a mixture of consolidated base pay awards and non-consolidated bonuses both of which are linked to individual performance and delivery.

The NIO has delegation for pay and performance management for staff below the senior civil service. All staff with satisfactory performance receive a consolidated increase and exceptional performance is rewarded through the use of non-consolidated bonuses.

Disabled Parking Bays (Foyle)

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many people in Foyle constituency applied to the Roads Service for disabled parking bay outside their homes in each of the last five years; and how many such applications were (a) granted and (b) denied; [51692]

(2) how many applications from people resident in Foyle constituency to the Roads Service for a disabled parking bay outside their homes are awaiting assessment; and what the average time taken for processing such applications is. [51693]

Mr. Woodward: The chief executive of Roads Service (Dr. Malcolm McKibbin) has been asked to write to the hon. Gentleman in response to this question.

Letter from Dr. Malcolm McKibbin, dated 15 February 2006:

You recently asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland two Parliamentary Questions regarding:

(i) How many people in Foyle constituency applied to the Roads Service for disabled parking bay outside their homes in each of the last five years; and how many of such applications were (a) granted and (b) denied; and

(ii) How many applications from people resident in Foyle constituency to the Roads Service for a disabled parking bay outside their homes are awaiting assessment; and what the average time taken for processing such applications is.

As this issue falls within my responsibility as Chief Executive of Roads Service, I have been asked to reply.

The information on the number of applications dealt with in the Foyle Constituency in each of the last 5 years is as follows:

	Inquiries	Number of applications[1]	Granted	Denied
2001	41	24	1	23
2002	54	32	4	28
2003	64	37	9	28
2004	48	34	6	28
2005	55	34	4	30

[1] When an inquiry is received an application form is forwarded to the applicant. Not all application forms are returned.

Roads Service currently has six applications awaiting assessment.

Following receipt of a completed application form, it usually takes about 3 weeks for an assessment to be completed. If the application satisfies the assessment guidelines, approval is then required from the PSNI before the legislation process can begin. Roads Service cannot mark out the bay in the ground before the legislation process is completed. Subject to there being no objections, this usually takes about 6 months.

I hope this information is helpful.

Equality Commission

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people defined as (a) Protestant, (b) Roman Catholic and (c) non-determined have been offered support and assistance by the Equality Commission at fair employment tribunals in cases of alleged discrimination on the grounds of religion in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years. [51330]

Angela E. Smith: The Equality Commission has assisted the following numbers of people at Fair Employment Tribunals in their cases of alleged discrimination on the grounds of religion and/or political opinion in each of the last five years.

	Protestant	Roman Catholic	Non-determined
2000–01	—	1	—
2001–02	2	6	—
2002–03	3	2	—
2003–04	1	1	—
2004–05	4	5	—

Identity Cards

Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland pursuant to the answer of 5 December 2005, Official Report, column 1074W, on identity cards, whether his Department has any plans to make use of the identity card scheme for the services which are its responsibilities. [50316]

Mr. Hain: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given on 5 December 2005, Official Report, column 1074W. No decisions have yet been taken.

Official Residences

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the official residences for which his Department is responsible; who occupies each one; what the annual cost is of running each property; what contribution the occupants of each make towards running costs; what the total capital and refurbishment expenditure was on those properties in 2004–05; how much was spent in each property on (a) flowers and plants, (b) wine and entertaining, (c) food, (d) telephone bills and (e) electricity and gas in 2004–05; how many (i) domestic and (ii) maintenance staff are employed at each property, broken down by post; and what the total cost of staff employment was in 2004–05. [50878]

Mr. Hain: When in Northern Ireland I reside at Hillsborough castle. The facilities at the castle are also used to provide official hospitality and overnight accommodation for members of the Royal Family, visiting dignitaries and diplomats. Other activities at the castle include departmental meetings, the Annual Garden Party and citizenship ceremonies. In addition to its use by the Northern Ireland Office and other Government Departments, charities and local community groups can request to use the facilities, generally for fund raising purposes, and the castle and grounds are open at certain times of the year for guided tours.

The total cost of running Hillsborough castle in the 2004–05 financial year was £1,426,105.94. This includes the maintenance of the listed building and grounds; the security of the castle and its grounds, and that of Ministers, officials and visitors while present at the castle. It also includes the cost of hosting the events listed above, as well as catering, hospitality and administration.

I am on duty while at Hillsborough castle and therefore my costs count as official expense. Records of expenditure on refurbishment are an integral part of the records that cover many other items of building maintenance and repair. It would be possible to identify only those items that relate specifically to refurbishment only at disproportionate cost.

During the 2004–05 year £18,180.12 was spent on flowers and plants. This included plants and flowers for the 100 acre listed estate surrounding the castle and flowers for functions.

A total £90,542.28 was spent on all catering and hospitality related items (the costs of food wine and entertaining not being separately available).

£19,798.82 was spent on telephone systems including calls, installations and maintenance.

£62,565.39 was spent on power, including electricity, gas, oil and other forms of fuel.

There were 25 staff employed at Hillsborough castle during the 2004–05 year providing administrative support, household and catering services, gardening services and 24 hour security. The total cost of employing these staff was £627,841.81.

There are currently the equivalent of 4 full-time domestic staff employed at Hillsborough castle but no maintenance staff.

Paediatric Gastroenterology Services

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what dedicated paediatric gastroenterology services are available in Northern Ireland; and where these are located. [51697]

Mr. Woodward: Children with gastroenterology problems in Northern Ireland are currently cared for by a range of staff including paediatricians, paediatric surgeons and dieticians. In recent years the service has been predominately provided by the Royal Belfast hospital for Sick Children with specialised input from visiting consultants from Great Britain. The establishment of a local dedicated service, specifically for the provision of paediatric gastroenterology, has been recognised as a priority by the Department and Commissioners; funding has been allocated for a paediatric gastroenterologist and appropriate support staff and recruitment is currently underway.

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many children are on the waiting list for upper gastro-intestinal endoscopy and colonoscopy procedures; how many additional referrals are added to that waiting list on average per month; how many procedures are carried out on average each month; and on what date the longest-waiting patient joined the list. [51702]

Mr. Woodward: There were 108 children on the in-patient/day case waiting list for upper gastro-intestinal endoscopy and colonoscopy procedures at 31 December 2005.

Over the period January 2005 to December 2005, there were approximately 13 additions to the in-patient/day case waiting list on average per month

Please note that the age group generally considered to be children by Trusts is the 0 to 16 years age group. Exceptions to this are Craigavon Area Hospital Health and Social Services Trust (0 to 14 years) and Causeway Health and Social Services Trust (0 to 17 years).

Over the period January 2003 to March 2005, the average number of endoscopies carried out on children aged under 16 years in Northern Ireland each month was 38. Over the same period, the average number of colonoscopies carried out on children aged under 16 years in Northern Ireland each month was 10. The procedures were carried out as either primary or secondary procedures.

The date that the currently longest-waiting patient joined the in-patient/day case waiting list was December 2004.

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he expects paediatric gastroenterology services in Northern Ireland will attain the service standards as set out in the Royal College of Paediatrics and Child Health Document, Commissioning Tertiary and Specialised Service for Children and Young People. [51705]

Mr. Woodward: It is not possible to be precise about the time scale within which these standards will all be obtained. However the recruitment of a dedicated paediatric gastroenterologist at the Royal Belfast Hospital for Sick Children will be a significant step forward in improving the quality of care provided locally and in helping to achieve national standards.

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many whole-time equivalent paediatric gastroenterologists are employed in the NHS in Northern Ireland; what support there is in terms of (a) nursing staff, (b) allied health professionals and (c) fully funded endoscopy theatre sessions; and what the plans are for each category for 2006–07. [51706]

Mr. Woodward: The information requested is not held centrally and will take some time to collate. I will write to the hon. Gentleman with the information as soon as it is available and place a copy in the Library.

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many children under the age of 16 years have had (a) gastro-intestinal endoscopy and (b) colonoscopy procedures carried out by non-paediatric consultants since 1 January 2003. [51707]

Mr. Woodward: Information on the number of procedures carried out on children under the age of 16 years in Northern Ireland, from 1 January 2003 until 31 March 2005, is available from the Hospital Inpatient System and is provided in the table. Details of individual consultants undertaking the procedures are not collected.

Procedure	Total
Endoscopy	1,023
Colonoscopy	274

Source:
Hospital Inpatient System

Any individual could have more than one operation or procedure undertaken during their stay in hospital and could also be admitted more than once over the course of a year or years. It should be noted that more than one consultant could be responsible for undertaking gastro-intestinal endoscopy and colonoscopy procedures at any one of these hospitals.

Mark Durkan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether all children under the age of 16 years who have been referred for (a) upper gastro-intestinal endoscopy and (b) colonoscopy procedures will have their procedures performed by paediatric consultants. [51708]

Mr. Woodward: The majority of children under the age of 16 who have been referred for upper gastro-intestinal endoscopy or colonoscopy procedures will have them carried out by either a consultant paediatrician or a consultant paediatric surgeon. For children at the upper end of the age limit it is entirely appropriate for their treatment to be carried out by consultant gastroenterologists or consultant surgeons.

Parliamentary Questions

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many parliamentary questions tabled in the last 12 months for answer by him on a named day (a) were transferred and (b) received a substantive answer (i) on the day named and (ii) after the day named. [49877]

Mr. Hain: From 1 January 2005 to 21 December 2005 the Northern Ireland Office received 526 parliamentary questions tabled for answer on a named day. The information requested is contained in the following table.

	Number
Answered on day named	270
Answered after day named	242
Transfers	14

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many ordinary written parliamentary questions tabled for answer by him in the last 12 months have been answered (a) within 14 days, (b) between 14 and 28 days, (c) between 28 days and two months and (d) in excess of two months after the date of tabling; and if he will make a statement. [49891]

Mr. Hain: From 1 January 2005 to 21 December 2005 the Northern Ireland Office received 3,684 parliamentary questions from Members of the House of Commons. Written answers were provided within the following time scales.

Parliamentary questions

	Number
Within 14 days	2,835
After between 14 and 28 days	355
After between 28 days and two months	66
After in excess of 2 months	324
Transfers	89
Withdrawals	15

Of the 324 questions that were answered 'After in excess of 2 months' 130 were tabled in July prior to the summer recess. It was therefore not possible to provide the hon. Member with an answer until the House returned in October.

Departments aim to ensure that Members receive a substantive response to their named day question on the named day and to endeavour to answer ordinary written questions within a working week of being tabled. Unfortunately, this is not always possible but my Department makes every effort to achieve these time scales.

Poverty

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many children living in the province are estimated to be living in poverty, broken down by (a) Northern Ireland local government district and (b) parliamentary constituency. [49390]

Angela E. Smith: The following tables show the numbers and percentages of children in Northern Ireland living in relative income poverty before housing costs and after housing costs across (a) local government districts (table 1) and (b) parliamentary constituencies (table 2). Due to small sample sizes in individual years, it was necessary to combine data for the years 2002–03 and 2003–04 to enable analysis. The figures presented in the tables are the most up to date currently held by Northern Ireland Government.

Table 1: Number and percentage of children in relative poverty by local government district for 2002–03 and 2003–04 combined Households Below Average Income 2002–03 and 2003–04 Department for Social Development.

Notes to tables:

1. Numbers are rounded to the nearest hundred and percentages to the nearest whole number.

2. As with any sample survey the numbers and percentages quoted in the table above are subject to sampling error.

3. Data was sourced from Households Below Average Income Northern Ireland (HBAI NI). The HBAI NI is based on information collected from the Family Resources Survey (FRS). The FRS was first run in NI in 2002–03.

4. The HBAI is the main source of income poverty measures throughout the UK and is used to monitor the United Kingdom's child poverty targets.

5. Relative income poverty is defined as households who have an income less than 60 per cent. of the contemporary median income.

6. Income before housing costs (BHC) includes the following main components: usual net earnings from employment; profit or loss from self-employment (losses are treated as a negative income); all Social security benefits (including housing benefit, social fund, maternity, funeral and community care grants but excluding social fund loans) and tax credits; income from occupational and private pensions; investment income; maintenance payments, if a person receives them directly; income from educational grants and scholarships (including, for students, top up loans and parental contributions); the cash value of certain forms of income in kind (free school meals, free welfare milk, free school milk and free TV licence for those aged 75 and over).

7. Income is net of the following items: income tax payments; national insurance contributions; domestic rates (this includes water and sewerage charges for Northern Ireland); contributions to occupational pension schemes (including all additional voluntary contributions (AVCs) to occupational pension schemes, and any contributions to personal pensions); all maintenance and child support payments, which are deducted from the income of the person making the payment and parental contributions to students living away from home.

8. Income After Housing Costs (AHC) is derived by deducting a measure of housing costs from BHC income measure. Housing costs include the following: rent (gross of housing benefit); domestic rates; mortgage interest payments (net of tax relief); structural insurance premiums (for owner occupiers); ground rent and service charges.

Renewable Energy

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much public funding was spent during 2005 in Northern Ireland on research into renewable energy provided by wave power. [52514]

Angela E. Smith: In 2005 £149,697 of public funding was spent in Northern Ireland on research into wave power.

Sperrin Lakeland Trust

Mrs. Iris Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the costs were to the Sperrin Lakeland Trust associated with the appointment of (a) an interim chief executive and (b) an interim director of nursing in 2004–05. [51182]

Mr. Woodward: Sperrin Lakeland Trust appointed an interim Chief Executive and an interim Director of Nursing for the period June to September 2005.

The gross costs associated with the appointment of the Chief Executive post were £47,000 and with the Director of Nursing post were £20,000.

PRIME MINISTER

Departmental Information

Mr. Gale: To ask the Prime Minister how much was spent on his Office's public relations and information services in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [48953]

The Prime Minister: For these purposes my office forms part of the Cabinet Office. I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary for the Cabinet Office (Mr. Murphy) today.

Mittal Steel

Adam Price: To ask the Prime Minister what representations he has made on behalf of Mittal Steel or its predecessor companies since 2001. [52510]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the right hon. Member for Chingford and Woodford Green (Mr. Duncan Smith) on 13 February 2002, Official Report, columns 198–99.

SCOTLAND

Departmental Staff

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether any (a) employee of his Department, (b) person engaged by his Department as a consultant and (c) paid advisor to his Department is a member of the House of Lords; and if he will make a statement. [52901]

David Cairns: None are members of the House of Lords.

Departmental Websites

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what websites come under his Department's responsibility; and what the (a) cost and (b) number of visitors to those sites was in the last year for which figures were available. [40794]

David Cairns: For the period 1 January-31 December 2005, there were two websites for which the Scotland Office was responsible.

Website	Overall costs (£)	Number of unique visitors
www.scotlandoffice.gov.uk	4,640	40,359
www.arbuthnottcommission.gov.uk	176	3,567

The overall costs are based on the fees for hosting the site, and if appropriate include any additional fees eg updates, design revisions.

Early Retirement

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many departmental employees have taken early retirement due to ill-health in each of the past five years for which figures are available. [46775]

David Cairns: None.

Identity Cards

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he has had with the Scottish Executive regarding identity cards. [48568]

David Cairns: My right hon. Friend and I meet regularly with Scottish Executive Ministers to discuss a range of issues.

Jewish Festivals

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what his office did to (a) celebrate Hanukkah and (b) mark Yom Kippur in 2005. [46764]

David Cairns: The Scotland Office did not host or organise any specific events to mark Hanukkah or Yom Kippur. However, management in the office gives sympathetic consideration to requests for time off to mark religious festivals.

Pension Liabilities

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will estimate the net present value of accrued pension liabilities in respect of (a) present and (b) former employees of his Department and its predecessor. [52110]

David Cairns: The principal civil service pension scheme is an unfunded multi-employer defined benefit scheme and individual departments' pension liabilities are not available. The Cabinet Office: civil superannuation resource accounts for 2004–05 showed that the total pension liability at 31 March 2005 was £84.1 billion. The value of pension liabilities was assessed as follows:

Liabilities for current members still contributing to the scheme—£37 billion deferred pensions and contingent pensions for dependants in respect of members no longer contributing—£12.7 billion current pensions for members and contingent pensions for dependants—£34.4 billion

As a result of a change in the discount rate used for calculating pension liabilities with effect from 1 April 2005, the total pension liability at 1 April 2005 increased by £10.6 billion to £94.7 billion.

Statutory Instruments

John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the statutory instruments introduced by his Department since 6 May 2005. [46200]

David Cairns: The Scotland Office has introduced 12 statutory instruments since 6 May 2005. They are:

1. SI 2005/1467—The Scottish Administration (Offices) Order 2005

2. SI 2005/866—The Scotland Act 1998 (Modifications of Schedule 5)(No.2) Order 2005

3. SI 2005/1790—The Adults with Incapacity (Scotland) Act 2000 (Consequential Modifications) (England, Wales and Northern Ireland) Order 2005

4. SI 2005/1791—The Education (Additional Support for Learning) (Scotland) Act 2004 (Consequential Modifications) Order 2005

5. SI 2005/2060—The Fire (Scotland) Act 2005 (Consequential Provisions and Modifications) Order 2005

6. SI 2005/2077—The Further and Higher Education (Scotland) Act 2005 (Consequential Modifications) Order 2005

7. SI 2005/2078—The Mental Health (Care and Treatment) (Scotland) Act 2003 (Consequential Provisions) Order 2005

8. SI 2005/3172—The Water Services etc. (Scotland) Act 2005 (Consequential Provisions and Modifications) Order 2005

9. SI 2006/241—The Gaelic Language (Scotland) Act 2005 (Consequential Modifications) Order 2006

10. SI 2006/242—The Charities and Trustee Investment (Scotland) Act 2005 (Consequential Provisions and Modifications) Order 2006

11. SI 2006/304—The Scotland Act 1998 (Transfer of Functions to the Scottish Ministers etc.) Order 2006

12. The draft Representation of the People (Scotland) (Amendment) Regulations 2006

The last instrument was laid on 6 February and is awaiting approval by each House.

Vandalism

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the acts of vandalism which have been perpetrated (a) inside and (b) on the outside of his Department's buildings in the last 12 months. [49499]

David Cairns: There has been no reported acts of vandalism, either inside or outside, to any Scotland Office building in the last 12 months.

SOLICITOR-GENERAL

Complaints

Mr. Amess: To ask the Solicitor-General pursuant to his reply of 2 February 2006, Official Report, column 699W, on complaints, how many copies of the complaints leaflet were sent to members of the public in each of the last five years for which figures are available; and how many copies of the complaints leaflet were requested (a) by telephone, (b) by post and (c) using his Department's website in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [52493]

The Solicitor-General: The figures requested are not available as they are not recorded centrally and can only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

If a member of the public wants a complaints leaflet, it can be obtained by telephoning or emailing the CPS communications branch or by contacting any of the CPS areas. The leaflet can also be downloaded from the CPS internet and is available in both Welsh and in large print format.

CPS (Staff Bonuses)

Mr. Amess: To ask the Solicitor-General what criteria are used to determine whether staff employed by the Crown Prosecution Service receive a bonus; and if he will make a statement. [52492]

The Solicitor-General: The criteria used for staff in the senior civil service (SCS) to receive a bonus are set by the Cabinet Office.

Staff below the SCS level do not receive a bonus unless it is paid via the special bonus scheme.

The special bonus scheme aims to reward exceptional individual or team performance. This may be particularly appropriate where an individual's efforts have made a valuable contribution that falls outside his/her normal areas or scope areas of work.

Departmental Information

Mr. Gale: To ask the Solicitor-General how much was spent on the Department's public relations and information services in each of the last five years for which figures are available. [48966]

The Solicitor-General: The Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) expenditure on information services is shown in the following table. It covers expenditure on the provision of information booklets for the public, CPS area annual reports, the code for Crown Prosecutors and translations of information into Welsh and other languages. CPS has not engaged external public relations services, having in-house communications staff.

Financial year	Crown Prosecution Service (£)
2000–01	120,532
2001–02	86,706
2002–03	99,144
2003–04	126,672
2004–05	121,288

The Serious Fraud Office, Treasury Solicitor's Department, HMCPS Inspectorate and the Legal Secretariat to the Law Officers have not incurred expenditure and, where appropriate, their communications staff are also in-house. Expenditure details are not separately available for communications staff and it would be difficult to identify them. For example most of the time the Attorney General's media relations are handled by his Private Secretary.

Law Officers' Departments include the Revenue and Customs Prosecutions Office but this office was not set up until 18 April 2005.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Poland

10. Daniel Kawczynski: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps his Department takes to encourage UK trade with Poland; and if he will make a statement. [52006]

Ian Pearson: UK companies looking to trade with Poland are able to take advantage of the whole range of trade services offered by UK Trade and Investment. It supported 219 UK companies at 29 trade events in Poland in 2005. The UKTI regional network is also assisting 300 new exporters who have expressed an interest in exporting to Poland.

Pressure Selling

11. Ben Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on Government measures to increase consumer protection against pressure selling. [52007]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Unfair Commercial Practices Directive prohibits aggressive commercial practices including high-pressure selling techniques that involve lengthy or persistent visits. Legislation implementing this directive will come into force in December 2007. I am currently consulting on implementation options, and am confident that this will help considerably in tackling high-pressure selling practices.

Energy Review

12. Stephen Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on energy policy. [52008]

Malcolm Wicks: The Government launched the Energy Review last November. As part of the Energy Review, in January the Government published a consultation document "Our Energy Challenge: securing clean, affordable energy for the long term". The consultation has a broad scope and considers all aspects of the energy system including energy supply and demand. The Review is looking at what further measures might be needed to tackle climate change, and to ensure secure and affordable energy supplies in the UK beyond 2010.

13. Mr. Vaizey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the Energy Review. [52009]

Malcolm Wicks: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Wimbledon (Stephen Hammond) today.

UK Trade

14. Michael Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on his Department's policy of increasing UK trade outside the single market. [52010]

Ian Pearson: UK Trade and Investment (UKTI) is actively involved in helping UK companies maximise the opportunities for business worldwide in markets such as China and India. For example, through the Asia Task Force UKTI is working to identify barriers to trade, and proposing Government initiatives to overcome them. And of course the USA remains the UK's most important market. UKTI has completely overhauled its delivery structure there so as to further enhance service delivery to UK business.

Post Offices

15. Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many post office branches have closed since 1997; and if he will make a statement. [52011]

Barry Gardiner: To date, this Government have committed some £2.35 billion of investment in the post office network. This includes £480 million for the Horizon IT project to automate the network, £450 million to support the rural network for the three years 2003–06 and, subject to state aid clearance, £300 million to support the rural network for the 2 years 2006–08, £726 million to repay historic debt and £210 million to fund the urban reinvention programme. Under Post Office Ltd.'s urban reinvention programme, 2,475 sub post offices closed on a wholly voluntary basis thereby strengthening the viability of the remaining urban network while ensuring that at the end of the programme over 99 per cent. of the urban population nationally still lives within one mile of their nearest post office. Outside of the urban reinvention programme, 2,248 post offices closed between April 1997 and December 2005.

Mark Pritchard: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the rural post office network in the West Midlands. [52012]

Barry Gardiner: Government remain committed to ensuring that those living in rural communities have reasonable access to the services they need. Rural communities in the West Midlands are benefiting from our unprecedented nationwide programme of investment in the post office network, which includes £450 million over the period 2003–06 as a transitional measure to help maintain the rural network. A two-year extension of the annual support of £150 million, subject to state aid clearance, was announced in September 2004.

Work and Families Bill

17. Martin Linton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the impact on business of the extension of family friendly policies contained in the Work and Families Bill. [52013]

Meg Munn: A full assessment of the impact on business of the extension of family friendly policies contained in the Work and Families Bill was made in the final regulatory impact assessment produced by the DTI in October 2005. The RIA is available from the DTI website and the Libraries of the House.

Sunset Regulation

18. John Bercow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the use of sunset regulation in legislation sponsored by his Department. [52014]

Alan Johnson: DTI policy makers are advised to consider, at an early stage of policy development, whether it is appropriate to include sunset clauses in legislation. Where a sunset clause is not considered to be appropriate, policy makers are expected to consider an alternative mechanism such as a post implementation review of the legislation.

Belvedere Waste Incinerator

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects to make a decision on the proposed Belvedere waste to energy incinerator. [51658]

Malcolm Wicks [holding answer 14 February 2006]: A decision will be made as soon as possible.

Companies (Public Interest)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will seek to introduce legislation under which every company would be required to serve the public interest. [51508]

Alun Michael: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave him on 13 February 2006, Official Report, column 1635W.

Data Sharing

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he is taking to facilitate data sharing between lenders and credit card operators relating to older accounts to improve lending decisions. [52886]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Government have been in discussion with industry about the case for the legislative change that would be necessary to enable the industry to share data between lenders and credit card operators relating to older accounts, without first seeking the consumers consent. However the benefits gained from sharing this data, in terms of improved lending decisions, has to be balanced against an individual's right to privacy. We intend to consult on this issue in the spring.

Defence Contracts

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the value of defence contracts to British manufacturing in each year between 1997 and 2005. [51305]

Alun Michael: DTI does not collate data on the value of defence contracts to British manufacturing. Through the Defence Analytical Services Agency, The Ministry of Defence publishes estimates on the direct value to UK industry of defence expenditure by year and by industrial sector. The latest date of estimates published is 2002–03 and is available from MOD's website at www.dasa.mod.uk/natstats/ukds/2004/ukds.html.

Departmental Consultants

Norman Lamb: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much was spent on external consultants and advisers by (a) his Department, (b) each (i) non-departmental public body and (ii) Executive Agency for which his Department is responsible and (c) each independent statutory body, organisation and body financially sponsored by his Department in each of the last five years. [51196]

Alan Johnson: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Angus on 13 February 2006, Official Report, column 1638W.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the expenditure on (a) buildings and (b) insurance of buildings and staff was of (i) his Department and (ii) each (A) non-departmental public body, (B) executive agency and (C) other public body for which his Department is responsible in (1) Scotland, (2) Wales, (3) each of the English regions and (4) Northern Ireland in each of the last three financial years; and what the planned expenditure is for 2005–06 in each case. [40109]

Alan Johnson: Expenditure on rent, rates and building insurance during the last three years on the DTI HQ estate where the DTI has lead responsibility in Government for the building is shown in the following tables (£ million ex VAT). The DTI HQ estate does not contain any buildings in Wales and Northern Ireland where it has lead responsibility for the payment of rent, rates and building insurance.

Similar information on non departmental public bodies and other public bodies is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Letter from Dr. Jeff Llewellyn, dated 15 February 2006:

The Secretary of State for Trade and Industry has asked me to reply on behalf of the National Weights and Measures Laboratory (NWML) to your question on what the expenditure on (a) buildings and (b) Insurance of buildings and staff was of (i) his Department and (II) each (A) non-departmental public body, (B) Executive Agency and (C) other public body for which his Department is responsible in each of the last three financial years; and what the planned expenditure is for 2005–06 in each case.

NWML occupies a Department of Trade & Industry building at Teddington, Middlesex. The total expenditure on buildings for the period 2002–2008 is as follows:

£000

	Facilities management	Rent	Rates
2002–03	72	341	60
2003–04	94	247	61
2004–05	110	223	63
2005–06[1]	95	200	74

[1] Forecast.

There has been no expenditure on insurance of buildings and staff in the period 2002–2006.

Letter from Jeanne Spinks, dated 15 February 2006:

You asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, what the expenditure on (a) buildings and (b) insurance of buildings and staff was of (i) his Department and (ii) each (A) non-departmental public body, (B) executive agency and (C) other public body for which his Department is responsible in (1) Scotland, (2) Wales, (3) each of the English regions and (4) Northern Ireland in each of the last three financial years; and what the planned expenditure is for 2005–06 in each case.

The table below shows the breakdown of expenditure on buildings and insurance of buildings and staff of the Employment Tribunals Service (ETS). Please note that ETS is only able to provide the total for 2002/03. We are unable to breakdown the expenditure per English region as we do not record information on a regional basis; however we are able to provide the total expenditure for England.

Letter from Claire Clancy, dated 15 February 2006:

I am responding to your recently tabled Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on behalf of Companies House, which is an Executive Agency of the DTI.

Expenditure on our buildings in Wales in the last three financial years and the amount planned for 2005/6 is as follows:

£ million

2002–03	1.5
2003–04	1.9
2004–05	2.8
2005–06	1.9

There has been no expenditure on buildings in Scotland, England or Northern Ireland.

There has been no expenditure on insurance of buildings and staff due to Crown indemnity.

Letter from Ron Marchant, dated 15 February 2006:

I am responding to this parliamentary question, tabled on 20 December 2005. The Patent Office expenditure on buildings and insurance in each of the last three financial years and planned expenditure in 2005–06 is as follows:

	2002–03	2003–04	2004–05	2005–06

Letter from Desmond Flynn, dated 15 February 2006:

The Secretary of State for Trade and Industry has asked me to reply to you directly on behalf of the Insolvency Service in respect of you question (2005/2568) requesting information on money spent on buildings over the last three years and also the planned expenditure for 2005–06. Insurance costs are included in some buildings' service charges but they are not separately identifiable, there is no provision for the insurance of staff.

The Insolvency Service Executive Agency of the Department of Trade and Industry spent the following amounts on accommodation:

Departmental Staff

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many staff in his Department are paid on a performance-related basis. [50485]

Alan Johnson: All DTI staff are paid on a performance related basis. Those employed as consultants or as agency staff may or may not be paid on a performance related basis, dependent on their individual contractual arrangements. As at 1 February 2006 there were 3,177.5 full time equivalent members of staff in DTI, excluding contractors and agency staff.

Directors (Voting Rights)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will seek to introduce legislation under which directors of large companies as defined in the Companies Act 1985 would not be able to cast any vote on any annual general meeting resolution relating to their remuneration. [51512]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Government have no plans to do so. Directors' remuneration is a matter for companies and their shareholders.

The Directors' Remuneration Report Regulations 2002 have improved transparency, accountability and the quality of shareholder engagement.

The Government look to boards and shareholders to exercise their responsibilities in this area fully and constructively both at the annual general meeting and at other times.

Education and Enterprise Campus (Burnley)

Kitty Ussher: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on his plans for an education and enterprise campus in Burnley; what work has been done by the North West Regional Development Agency in relation to the project; and if he will make a statement. [51933]

Alun Michael: The Department of Trade and Industry has no plans for an education and enterprise campus in Burnley. However, over the past few months, the North West Regional Development Agency has met partners in Burnley to discuss the concept in the context of the revised Regional Economic Strategy. Proposals are at the earliest stage of development and are based on a relocation of Burnley College from its existing site to a new town centre site that will provide a new FE/HE campus and Enterprise Park.

Energy Costs

Mrs. Villiers: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much was spent by his Department on (a) gas and (b) electricity in 2004–05. [51771]

Alan Johnson: The Departmental expenditure in the year 2004 to 2005 on the Headquarters estate was:

Period: 2004–05

Gas: £120,000

Electricity: £1,050,000

Iron and Steel Employees Re-adaptation Benefits Scheme

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the implementation of the Iron and Steel Employees Re-adaptation Benefits Scheme. [53264]

Alun Michael: The Iron and Steel Employees Re-adaptation Benefit Scheme (ISERBS) announced in May 2001 was part of a package of measures implemented to alleviate the impact of large-scale redundancies in the steel industry. The scheme was derived from the European Coal and Steel Community Treaty which made specific provision for social aid to workers affected by restructuring in the steel industry. ISERBS provided a single lump sum payment of £2,480 to workers who lost their jobs in the period 1 January 2000 to 23 July 2002 (when the ECSC Treaty terminated) or as a result of a restructuring announcement made in that period. 13,156 individuals have benefited from the scheme.

New Technology (Investment)

Mrs. Maria Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what measures are in place to support small business investment in new technology; and if he will make a statement. [51361]

Alun Michael: The Grant for Research and Development was introduced in England on 1 June 2003, replacing the earlier Smart scheme. It provides grants to help individuals and small and medium-sized businesses research and develop new, technologically innovative products and processes and is delivered, by the Regional Development Agencies on behalf of the DTI. In 2004–05 grants worth just over £30 million were offered to 357 new projects.

The Government have also introduced R&D tax credits to help companies of all sizes carry out research and development (R&D) projects. R&D tax credits are part of the range of government support made available for innovative UK companies embarking on R&D. The tax credits are expected to provide support for companies worth around £600 million a year.

In addition, Enhanced capital allowances were first introduced in 2001 and now allow businesses of any size to claim 100 per cent. first year allowances on capital expenditure on a range of energy saving technologies, allowing them to write off the whole of the capital cost of these investments. The first year allowances allow small and medium sized firms to claim 40 per cent. on all types of expenditure on plant and machinery in the period the expenditure is incurred, to accelerate the normal rate of relief. PBR 2005 announced introduction of increase to 50 per cent. for one year for small companies.

Newspapers/Magazines (Distribution)

Mr. Prisk: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects the final opinion from the Office of Fair Trading on newspaper and magazine distribution. [52307]

Mr. Sutcliffe: I understand that OFT intend to outline the next steps in this case in the near future.

Non-executive Directors

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will introduce legislation under which company employees would be able to vote on the election of all non-executive directors. [51505]

Mr. Sutcliffe: The Government have no plans to do so. The election of company directors is a matter for shareholders.

It is a main principle of the Financial Reporting Council's Combined Code on Corporate Governance that there should be a formal, rigorous and transparent procedure for the appointment of new directors to the board.

It is also a provision of the Combined Code that non-executive directors should be appointed for specified terms subject to re-election and to Companies Acts provisions relating to the removal of a director.

Non-fossil fuel obligation

Mr. Todd: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what (a) the proceeds of the non-fossil fuel obligation and (b) the expenditure on supporting renewables were in each year since 1999. [52523]

Malcolm Wicks: When the Renewables Obligation (RO) was introduced in 2002 projects under the Non-Fossil Fuel Obligation (NFFO), the previous support mechanism, were included to ensure that from the outset there was liquidity in the ROC market. An indirect consequence of including in the RO those sites that received funding through the NFFO is that the income received from suppliers for the electricity exceeds payments made to generators. The surplus is paid to the levy fund on a monthly basis.

The size of the fund administered by Ofgem, resulting from surplus revenue collected by the Non Fossil Fuel Purchasing Agency (NFPA), in each year since 2001 is as follows:

Year ending March	£ million
2001	63.8
2002	28.6
2003	87.1
2004	146.5
2005	169.1

With regard to expenditure on supporting renewables in each year since 1999 I refer my hon. Friend to my reply to the hon. Member for Leominster (Bill Wiggin) on 12 September 2005, Official Report, column 2262W.

Nuclear Decommissioning Authority

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what information he has received from the Nuclear Decommissioning Authority (NDA) on (a) the matters discussed and (b) decisions taken in the NDA MOX Commission. [48829]

Malcolm Wicks: None. The MOX Commission was a group chaired by BNFL which they stood down upon the formation of the NDA in April 2005.

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what information he has received from the Nuclear Decommissioning Authority (NDA) on its plans for publishing the full Life-Cycle Baselines for NDA-owned sites. [48831]

Malcolm Wicks: The Nuclear Decommissioning Authority expects to publish the Life Cycle Baseline 2005–06 in respect of its sites by end March subject to the completion of internal review and the approval of its Board.

Nuclear Power Plants

Jenny Willott: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what the cost to public funds was of building the (a) Trawsfynydd and (b) Wylfa nuclear power plants; and if he will make a statement. [49741]

Malcolm Wicks: The Trawsfynydd and Wylfa Magnox nuclear power stations were originally built and owned by the Central Electricity Generating Board (CEGB). Magnox Electric Limited now operates the plant under contract to the Nuclear Decommissioning Authority. The cost of building the power stations was at the time funded by the electricity market and there should, therefore, have been no cost to public funds in respect of the building of Trawsfynydd and Wylfa.

Operating and Financial Review

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has to meet businesses that supported the proposals in the operating and financial review. [51703]

Alun Michael: We are currently consulting on possible amendments to narrative reporting requirements in the Company Law Reform Bill. The deadline for responses is 24 March 2006. The department would be happy to receive views from any interested parties and to consider any request for a meeting.

Power Generation Technologies

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what funding his Department has allocated to clean coal technologies in each year since 1997. [51864]

Malcolm Wicks: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Leominster on 12 September 2005, Official Report, column 2262W.

Research and Development Grants

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what training is provided for assessment of applications for research and development grants; and what methods are used to assess their knowledge of business, commerce and technical innovation. [51493]

Barry Gardiner: The Technology Programme, managed by DTI, offers grant support for Collaborative Research and Development projects undertaken by Industry and the Science Base in prescribed high technology areas. Prior to undertaking any assessment, the status, technical qualifications, and business experience of Assessors is obtained and used to associate them to the applications that they may subsequently be asked to assess. In addition, prior to any Assessor being offered an assessment, unless they have had previous recognised experience in assessing applications to similar programme, all Assessors are required to attend a one-day briefing session that addresses all aspects of the process programme and an explanation of the criteria used for assessment. All the Assessors are recognised domain specialists and drawn from business, academia and/or from government research establishments and they are required to abide to strict confidentiality and non-conflict of interest agreements.

Grant for Research and Development, which helps individuals and small and medium sized businesses with the costs of researching and developing new, technologically innovative products and processes, has been delivered by the Regional Development Agencies (RDAs) since 1 April 2005. On transferring the scheme, DTI undertook a programme of training and provided RDAs with extensive guidance on the framework within which applications should be appraised.

In appraising the technical and commercial aspects of applications RDAs take advice, in confidence, from qualified accountants, the Patent Office and internationally-renowned external organisations that are well qualified to judge the merits of a proposals. As an additional safeguard, RDAs will normally seek advice from two different external organisations when appraising an application.

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what proportion of funds allocated for research and development grants for each regional development agency for 2005–06 had been offered to project applicants by 31 January 2006; and what proportion of the funds allocated were offered in 2004–05. [51495]

Alun Michael: I have asked each regional development agency to provide me with the relevant information about the region's activities. I will write to the hon. Member when I have the necessary information and place a copy of the letter in the Libraries of the House.

Sellafield

Mr. Chaytor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what quantities of plutonium scrap have been produced from the present manufacturing regime for MOX nuclear fuel pellets at the MOX plant at Sellafield. [48830]

Malcolm Wicks: Material rejected from the Sellafield MOX Plant comes from two sources: pellets that are either out of specification or rejected from inspection, and residues that arise principally from grinder dust.

Material that is out of specification or rejected can be recycled and reintroduced into the production process. Due to chemical contamination, residues cannot be reintroduced into the production process. The main residue is grinder dust and typically accounts for up to 2.5 per cent. of throughput.

Student bankruptcies

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many students have been declared bankrupt in each of the last five years. [52602]

Mr. Sutcliffe: It is not possible from the information currently held centrally by the Insolvency Service to quantify how many students have been declared bankrupt.

US Government/Department of Defense Contracts

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many manufacturing companies in the UK have had contracts with (a) the US government and (b) the US Department of Defense in the last five years; and what the total value has been of such contracts in each case. [51306]

Alun Michael: DTI does not collate information in a way that shows how many manufacturing companies in the UK have had contracts with the US Government or the US Department of Defense but it is a significant figure.

WarnTone System

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry pursuant to the answer of 13 October 2005, Official Report, column 561W, on WarnTone system, when he expects Ofcom to respond to the request for a test licence for the WarnTone system. [49301]

Alun Michael: The Chief Executive responded to my hon. Friend on 13 February. A copy of the letter has been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Wind Farms

Mr. David Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he will announce his decision on the application by NPower renewables for consent under section 36 of the Electricity Act 1989 for the development of the Gwynt y Mor wind farm. [51642]

Malcolm Wicks: I cannot give a firm indication of when I will be in a position to reach a decision on the Gwynt Y Mor consent application. The application requires careful consideration and is currently being processed.

TRANSPORT

Aviation Policy

John Hemming: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps have been taken towards producing an evaluation strategy to assess the effectiveness of the Government's aviation policy; what the proposed timetable is for the production of this strategy; and what processes will be used to formulate it. [51649]

Ms Buck: I refer to my reply to the hon. Member for Hornsey and Wood Green on 19 January 2006, Official Report, column 1471W. The Government are committed to the monitoring and evaluation of the effectiveness and impact of the policies of the Air Transport White Paper. We will report by the end of 2006 on progress.

John Hemming: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when the 2006 Aviation White Paper Progress Review will be published; whether it will include revised passenger forecasts to take account of the increased cost of oil; whether his Department will seek the views of (a) other Government departments and (b) external stakeholders on progress made; and whether it will include an assessment of the role reductions in aviation emissions will play in the target to cut overall emissions by 60 per cent. by 2050. [51650]

Ms Buck: The Department for Transport (DfT) expects to publish a Progress Report on the policies and proposals set out in the Air Transport White Paper (ATWP), by the end of 2006. Paragraph 12.29 of the Air Transport White Paper says that we will continue to regularly publish data on air travel and to update traffic forecasts in the light of trends. Movement in oil price is one of several explanatory factors in air transport forecasts.

The DfT is currently seeking the views of other Government departments. It also engages with external stakeholders on progress made, in a range of fora including the ATWP External Advisory Group.

The support paper to the Air Transport White paper, Aviation and Global Warming, includes forecasts of aviation emissions relative to other emissions. These forecasts are kept under review. However, the Energy White Paper 60 per cent. reduction target focuses on domestic emissions, and does not include international aviation. This is because emissions from international flights do not currently count in the national inventories of greenhouse gas emissions, there being no international agreement yet on ways of allocating such emissions.

Body Scanners (Paddington Station)

Tim Loughton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the use of body scanners at Paddington Station in relation to provisions of the Protection of Children Act 1978. [51759]

Derek Twigg [holding answer 14 February 2006]: No assessment has been made, as children were not asked to participate in the trial of screening equipment at Paddington Station.

Bus Travel

Paul Rowen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many people were using buses outside London in the last period for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [52438]

Ms Buck: I refer the hon. Member to Table C of the Public Transport Statistics Bulletin GB: 2005 Edition, a copy of which is in the House of Commons Library.

Buses

Mr. Harper: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether concessionary bus fare schemes operate between local authority areas on the borders of England and Wales. [51630]

Ms Buck: The English local authorities have the discretion to offer concessionary public transport into Wales subject to their judgment of local needs and their overall financial priorities. The Welsh scheme, funded by the Welsh Assembly, currently offers some travel into England along selected bus routes.

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many bus services have been (a) withdrawn and (b) added to service in each financial year since 1 April 1998 (i) in total and (ii) in each traffic area region. [51654]

Ms Buck: The following tables show the number of bus services added and withdrawn in each traffic area since 1 April 1998. Over the period, 34,519 were added and 29,058 withdrawn.

	1998–99		1999–2000		2000–01		2001–02

Catering/Entertainment Contracts

Mr. MacNeil: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the total value is of (a) catering and (b) entertainment contracts let by his Department; and what value of such contracts has been let in each nation and region of the UK, including London. [37457]

Ms Buck: Catering services in the Department's official staff restaurants are provided by the Department's facilities management contractors. The cost of meals and refreshments etc. provided to staff are recovered through sales and are not a charge to public funds.

The total cost of catering and entertainment charged to public funds in 2004–05 (including working breakfasts or lunches, refreshments at meetings and official entertainment) was £698,000.

Expenditure figures for each nation and UK region are not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Civil Servants (Overseas Visits)

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what costs were incurred by his Department as a result of sending civil servants on overseas visits in each of the last 10 years. [46279]

Ms Buck: The Department for Transport came into existence in May 2002 as a result of machinery of Government changes, and its accounts were only fully separated from those of the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister at the beginning of financial year 2003–04. Information for previous years could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Three of the Departments agencies, DVLA, HA, and VOSA, do not record details of overseas travel separately from other travel and subsistence costs, and the information could be obtained only at disproportionate costs. Figures for the Department and its remaining agencies are contained in the following table:

	2003–04 (£)	2004–05 (£)
DfT (c)	1,682,041	2,102,746
DSA	33,000	29,000
DVLA	—	—
HA	—	—
MCA	931,875	1,278,135
VCA	277,000	245,000
VOSA	—	—
GCDA	157.00	186.00

All travel in the Department and its agencies complied with the requirements of the 'Civil Service Management Code'.

Coach Crashes (School Children)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many coach crashes involving school children took place in (a) 2000–01, (b) 2001–02, (c) 2002–03, (d) 2003–04 and (e) 2004–05; how many have taken place in 2006; how many of those accidents occurred when children were travelling on school holiday trips; and if he will seek to implement a ban on overnight travel by school coach parties as a matter of urgency. [52303]

Dr. Ladyman: The number of personal injury road accidents in Great Britain where one or more child bus or coach passengers were killed or injured (all severities), by the light conditions in which the accident occurred, are shown in the table. The numbers are shown for the years 2000 to 2004, the latest year for which figures are available.

Personal injury road accidents involving one or more child (aged 0–15) bus or coach[1] casualties: by light condition, 2000 to 2004

	Year of accident
Light conditions	2000	2001	2002	2003	2004
Daylight	893	923	732	778	727
Darkness	78	87	99	77	69
Total accidents	971	1,010	831	855	796

[1] Buses and coaches with 17 or more passenger seats.

The 2004 accidents included 57 child fatalities or serious injuries (KSI), 11 of those in hours of darkness. These amount to 0.3 per cent. of all child KSI road casualties.

No information is available on the number of non-injury coach crashes, or on whether the vehicles involved were being used for the purpose of a school holiday trip.

We have no plans to implement a ban on overnight travel by school coach parties.

Crescent Link Scheme

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will instruct his Department's Rail Group to consult (a) RailWorld, (b) Peterborough city council, (c) the East of England Development Agency and (d) other local stakeholders on developing the Crescent Link scheme connecting the Nene Valley Railway with Peterborough main railway station. [50731]

Derek Twigg: It is for scheme promoters to work with Network Rail to establish the feasibility and a business case for projects of this sort. Peterborough city council and Network Rail are jointly developing a scheme for a major redevelopment of the station area but it is too soon to say whether it will include proposals for the Crescent Link.

Crossrail

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the impact of the increase in estimated costs of the Crossrail project on funding available for infrastructure upgrading, maintenance and development in other parts of the country; and if he will make a statement. [51219]

Derek Twigg [holding answer 14 February 2006]: The estimated cost of the Crossrail project remains as set out in the Parliamentary Estimate of Expense accompanying the Crossrail hybrid Bill. The Government will continue to invest significant resources in the rail network.

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the impact of extending the Crossrail project between Reading and Ebbsfleet rather than between Shenfield and Abbey Wood; and if he will make a statement. [51220]

Derek Twigg [holding answer 14 February 2006]: The Department for Transport has considered the Crossrail scheme in conjunction with Cross London Rail Links Ltd. (CLRL), the company taking forward the development of Crossrail. CLRL has examined the scope for serving Ebbsfleet and Reading. Their work shows that, in order to serve Ebbsfleet, Crossrail services would need to share tracks with other rail services on the North Kent Line between Abbey Wood and Ebbsfleet. This would involve complex scheduling with an unacceptable risk of disruption to Crossrail's planned high-frequency service pattern. In the case of Reading, significant additional costs and risks would be involved, including line electrification and associated bridge raising. As a result, neither extension was included in the route put forward in the Crossrail hybrid Bill.

My right hon. Friend recognises, however, that such extensions may fall to be reconsidered at some future date and has therefore agreed to safeguard the extension to Ebbsfleet and to consider revisions to the safeguarding Direction in due course; and he is also considering safeguarding the extension to Reading.

Cycling

Mr. Andy Reed: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proportion of his Department's expenditure for 2012 has been committed to projects designed to encourage cycling. [51130]

Derek Twigg: Approx £6 million is included in the Olympic transport budget for cycling measures supporting the 2012 Olympic games. This includes about 50kms of new cycle lanes to connect the London cycling network up to the Olympic venues. This is funded from the £2.375 billion public sector funding package for the Olympics rather than any specific departmental budget.

In addition, TfL have their own plans to expand the London cycle network to 900km of 'fast, safe, comfortable' cycle routes by 2009.

Departmental Entertainment

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much was spent on entertainment by his Department in 2004–05; and how of this sum is accounted for by (a) food, (b) alcohol, (c) staff and (d) accommodation. [50881]

Ms Buck: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I have given today to the hon. Member for Na h-Eileanan an Ir (Mr. MacNeil). The costs of (a) food, (b) alcohol, (c) staff and (d) accommodation are not recorded separately and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Staff

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many staff in his Department are paid on a performance-related basis. [50484]

Ms Buck: The pay of staff within the senior civil service includes a mixture of consolidated base pay awards and non-consolidated bonuses both of which are linked to individual performance and delivery.

For staff outside the senior civil service it is a requirement of pay delegation that reward systems must reflect a close and effective link between pay and performance. This is applicable to all staff and applied within the Department for Transport.

Early Retirement

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many departmental employees have taken early retirement due to ill-health in each of the past five years for which figures are available. [46773]

Ms Buck: The Department was created on 29 May 2002 and the numbers of employees who have taken early retirement due to ill-health in each year since then are shown in the table:

	Total
2002	46
2003	31
2004	30
2005	27
Total	134

Free Travel (Greater Manchester)

Andrew Gwynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate his Department has made of the likely change in bus and Metrolink passenger numbers in the county of Greater Manchester resulting from the introduction of free off-peak travel for pensioners. [51741]

Ms Buck: The Government's initial estimate is that between 1 April 2006 and 31 March 2007, bus patronage in England will grow by 5.6 per cent. This has not been disaggregated to individual local authority or Passenger Transport Executives. The estimate does not include tram patronage, as this is not part of the statutory minimum entitlement. Any extension to tram services is at the discretion of the local authority based on their judgment of local needs and their overall financial priorities.

Fuel Efficiency

Norman Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what percentage change there has been in the fuel efficiency of cars sold in the UK in each year since 1997. [52583]

Dr. Ladyman: Figures relating to two methods of measuring fuel efficiency and the annual change in those figures, are set out in the following table. From 1997 until 2000, the percentage changes in new car fuel efficiency are based on data collected by the Society of Motor Manufacturers and Traders (SMMT). From 2001, the calculations are based new car emissions data collected by the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency (DVLA).

	Average miles per gallon (MPG)	MPG percentage improvement	Average carbon dioxide (CO_2) emissions (g/km)	CO_2 percentage improvement	Diesel car penetration
1997	35.45	—	189.8	—	17
1998	35.66	0.6	188.4	0.7	16
1999	36.22	1.6	185.0	1.8	14
2000	37.01	2.2	181.0	2.2	14
2001	37.78	2.1	178.0	1.7	18
2002	38.72	2.5	174.8	1.8	24
2003	39.40	1.8	172.7	1.2	27
2004	39.96	1.4	171.3	0.8	32
2005	40.37	1.0	169.7	0.9	36

Diesel fuel contains more carbon per litre than petrol. Thus the increase in diesel car sales over the later periods leads to a greater rate of improvement in MPG (fuel efficiency) than in the more commonly reported measure of grammes per kilometre CO_2.

Network Rail

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what incentives are in place to encourage Network Rail (a) to improve its efficiency and (b) to complete renewals expeditiously. [49809]

Derek Twigg: The Office of Rail Regulation (ORR) has determined, the outputs that Network Rail must deliver in the five-year control period to March 2009, and the associated revenue allowance. This revenue allowance is based on estimates of the expenditure required by a competent and well-managed company to deliver the stated outputs, including an allowance for efficiency savings. As part of this, Network Rail must deliver an efficiency saving of 31 per cent.

This approach provides strong incentives on Network Rail to improve cost efficiency, as they benefit from reducing expenditure below that assumed in setting its allowed revenues, provided that it delivers its required outputs and does not compromise long-term asset condition and serviceability of the network.

These incentives for cost efficiency are also reflected in the remuneration arrangements for Network Rail's senior management.

The main incentive on Network Rail to complete its renewals expeditiously are the conditions of the track access contracts that it enters into with train operating companies. These contracts include a mechanism whereby Network Rail makes compensation payments to train operating companies for changes to train timetables that result from the need for engineering works.

Official Cars

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many former Ministers, apart from Prime Ministers, have official cars provided for their use; from which administrations; and if he will make a statement. [50795]

Ms Buck [holding answer 13 February 2006]: In addition to both former Prime Ministers the GCS provides cars and drivers to three former Ministers, two from Labour administrations and one from a Conservative administration.

Park and Ride Schemes

Andrew Gwynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment his Department has made of the viability of a park and ride scheme in (a) Tameside metropolitan borough and (b) Stockport metropolitan borough. [51745]

Ms Buck: It is for individual local authorities to determine the public transport needs in their region and to match available funding against these requirements.

At this time there are no planned park and ride sites in either Tameside or Stockport.

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what (a) financial and (b) other support his Department is giving to develop park and ride schemes in the Greater Peterborough area. [50725]

Ms Buck: The funding support for integrated transport provision provided to Peterborough city council through the local transport capital settlement for each year is shown in the following table. It has been for Peterborough city council to decide how that allocation was spent in line with its local transport plans and its priorities, including provision of park and ride.

Peterborough city council unitary authority (integrated transport block)

	£ million
2006–07	1.867
2005–06	1.900
2004–05	2.187
2003–04	2.196
2002–03	2.000
2001–02	2.000

Peterborough Local Transport Plan

Mr. Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what funding the Government will provide to support the delivery of the Peterborough local transport plan for 2006–07 to 2010–11; and if he will make a statement. [52506]

Ms Buck: The Government have made firm allocations for some of the funding support for the Peterborough local transport plan for 2006–07 and set guidelines for 2007–08 to 2010–11. It has allocated a total of £4.076 million for local transport capital works in 2006–07 and set out planning guidelines totalling £10.614 million for 2007–08 to 2010–11. No final allocations of funding support for any major transport schemes in Peterborough for 2006–07 to 2010–11 have yet been made.

The figures do not include any allowance for the continuation of an exceptionally large capital maintenance scheme, the case for which is currently being considered.

Public Transport (Late Night Provision)

Anne Snelgrove: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will take steps to ensure local authorities provide late night public transport for young people. [51287]

Ms Buck: Local public transport services are mainly provided by buses. Individual local authorities are responsible for their own decisions on spending on support for local bus services in their area, including those providing late night services. The majority of this expenditure is provided by local authorities from their Revenue Support Grant allocations. Over £300 million was spent by local authorities in support of bus services in 2004–05.

We recognise the importance to children and young people of a transport system that meets their needs. We commissioned a project to improve our understanding of this issue and to help local authorities when making their spending decisions. A summary of this research will be published shortly on the Department's website.

Railways

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the impact on (a) rail fare prices and (b) rail usage of the abolition of saver fares; and if he will make a statement. [49025]

Derek Twigg [holding answer 8 February 2006]: The Strategic Rail Authority's fares review, published in June 2003, concluded that the regulation of saver returns (a leisure fare introduced by British Rail in the 1980s) had caused overcrowding on many long-distance trains and had constrained the introduction of more innovative, customer-focused fares structures. It proposed further work on saver regulation with a view to replacing it in due course with a more appropriate regime. Work is ongoing, but no decision on the future of saver regulation has yet been made.

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what priority he plans to give to seating capacity on trains when awarding rail franchises. [51790]

Derek Twigg: The invitation to tender for each franchise includes a specification setting out the rail services the Government propose to buy through the franchise. This includes service frequency, stopping patterns, journey times and seating capacity. This is particularly important for franchises which have a high proportion of commuter traffic flows. Bidders' proposals have to show how they will meet this specification and delivery of seating capacity is monitored throughout the life of the franchise.

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proportion of railway fare income has been derived from (a) regulated and (b) unregulated fares for each year since 1994. [49565]

Derek Twigg [holding answer 8 February 2006]: The proportion of fares income from regulated and unregulated fares from 2002 is shown in the following table. Data covering 1994–2001 is not available and can only be provided at a disproportionate cost.

Fare type (percentage)

	Regulated	Unregulated
2002	44	56
2003	44	56
2004	44	56
2005	44	56

The proportion of rail fare income from different ticket types has been included in "National Rail Trends" (published by Office of Rail Regulation) since January 2002, as part of the rail fares index.

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what plans he has to introduce double-deck rolling stock on the rail network; and if he will make a statement; [50510]

(2) what assessment he has made of the suitability of the present railway infrastructure to accommodate double-deck rolling stock; which routes would require the least adaption work to accommodate such rolling stock; and if he will make a statement. [50511]

Derek Twigg [holding answer 14 February 2006]: The Department for Transport is considering the options for increasing the capacity of the railway network to meet future needs. Double deck trains are being considered as one of the possible long term solutions.

Work undertaken by the Department for Transport to assess the suitability of UK main lines for double deck trains confirms that a significant number of major structural changes would be needed to accommodate them.

Dr. Cable: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether domestic use of Waterloo International terminal is included in the invitation to tender for the South West Trains franchise. [51853]

Derek Twigg [holding answer 14 February 2006]: The specification for the new South Western franchise has not yet been finalised, but my right hon. Friend confirmed on 11 October 2005 that the Waterloo International platforms would be used for domestic services when Eurostar services have moved to St. Pancras.

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many incidents of crime and disorder were reported at each railway station in England between 1997 and 2005; and how much was spent on anti-crime measures for each station over the same period. [47999]

Derek Twigg [holding answer 2 February 2006]: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Thameslink 2000

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the timetable is for the Thameslink 2000 programme; whether there are plans to divide the project into phases; what the timetable is for the provision of a new station at Kings Cross/St Pancras under the programme; what decisions have been made about funding; and if he will make a statement. [46907]

Derek Twigg: The public inquiry into the Thameslink 2000 project was re-opened between 6 September and 7 December 2005, following the submission of fresh applications by Network Rail to address deficiencies in the scheme identified by the original inquiry.

The Inspector is currently preparing his report on the re-opened inquiry for submission to the Secretary of State for Transport and the Deputy Prime Minister, who are jointly and severally responsible for determining the various consent applications required to implement the project. We expect to receive the Inspector's report in March. We also expect to receive in the spring a report from London TravelWatch on the railway closures required to implement the project. I cannot at this stage comment on the merits of the scheme, in order not to prejudice the eventual decisions.

The construction of the Midland Road station at Kings Cross/St Pancras was approved under the CTRL Act. The Secretary of State announced in a written statement on 8 February 2006, Official Report, column 50WS the decision to fit out this station, which should be ready to take its first passengers at the end of 2007.

Transport 2010

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will update Table A3 of the Transport 2010 document (a) in the same format and (b) at current prices. [51655]

Ms Buck: The Department for Transport no longer records or plans spending in the same way as presented in Table A3 of 'Transport 2010'.

Transport Research

Mr. Drew: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what research he has commissioned into the likely effects on the environment of encouraging people to use trains instead of short-haul flights. [51605]

Ms Buck: The Future of Air Transport white paper studied the scope for rail-air substitution when assessing the need for additional airport capacity. At present rail competes well with air on city centre journeys of two to three hours.

The Government have also produced estimates of the per passenger kilometre emissions factors for rail and short haul flights, for use by companies to report their greenhouse gas emissions. These are 0.04 $kgCO_2$ per pass km for rail and 0.15 $kgCO_2$ per pass km for short haul air. However, these are very sensitive to the assumptions made for passenger occupancy, further details of which are available at:

http://www.defra.gov.uk/environment/business/envrp/gas/index.htm

TREASURY

Child Trust Fund Accounts

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many children in the care of Lancashire county council have had Child Trust Fund accounts opened for them. [52600]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: Figures for accounts opened by HMRC for looked after children by county council could only be produced at disproportionate cost. Details of the total number of Child Trust Fund accounts opened by HMRC for all looked after children will be published along with other annual Child Trust Fund statistics later this year.

EDS

Mr. Bacon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what information the Office of Government Commerce holds on the total value of contracts awarded to EDS since 14 December 2005. [51699]

Dawn Primarolo: The Office of Government Commerce is not aware of any Central Civil Government or public sector contracts being awarded to EDS since 14 December 2005 and therefore does not hold any information on this subject.

Mr. Bacon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many payments HM Revenue and Customs has received from EDS since 14 December 2005 which are pursuant to its compensation agreement with EDS relating to the IT systems developed to support the launch of tax credits; and what the value is of each of these payments. [51700]

Dawn Primarolo: The terms of the agreement between HMRC and EDS to settle HMRC's claim for compensation are commercially sensitive and it would be inappropriate to disclose them. Details were provided to the Public Accounts Committee in a recent closed session and further information will be provided by HMRC to the Chairman of the Committee at regular intervals.

HM Revenue and Customs Estate

Mr. Francois: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the oral answer of 26 January 2006, Official Report, column 1505, on HM Revenue and Customs Estate, if he will list the properties which were sold to Mapeley in 2001 by his Department. [46916]

Dawn Primarolo: The following freehold properties were sold to Mapeley under the terms of the STEPS contract in April 2001. The price for the sale was determined by independent valuation advice.

Insurance Premium Tax

Gregory Barker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) whether he plans to bring forward reforms of insurance premium tax to reduce fraud; [52454]

(2) how much money has been spent on investigating cases of alleged fraud in connection with insurance premium tax; and how much he expects will be spent in each of the next three years. [52456]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: There is no evidence of continuing or growing levels of fraud relating to insurance premium tax. The Government keeps all taxes under review with any changes being announced as part of the normal Budget process.

Investigations into alleged insurance premium tax (IPT) fraud are carried out as part of HM Revenue and Customs' risk-based compliance strategy. The cost of investigating alleged IPT fraud is not separately identified.

Iraq

Dr. Cable: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answers of 7 February 2006, Official Report, column 119W, and 26 January 2006, Official Report, column 2260W, on Iraq and the Ministry of Defence press release of 28 September 2005, entitled 2005 UK Defence Statistics, if he will update the figures provided on 26 January 2006 to include the cost of combat operations; and if he will make a statement. [51714]

Mr. Des Browne: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave him on 26 January 2006, Official Report, columns 2260–61W, which includes the net additional costs of all operations in Iraq.

Tax Credits

Mr. Carmichael: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many families have received child and working tax credits awards of (a) less than £1,000, (b) £1,000 to £2,499, (c) £2,500 to £4,999, (d) £5,000 to £9,999 and (e) over £10,000, broken down by parliamentary constituency. [51031]

Dawn Primarolo: The number of in-work families with average level of entitlement above the family element and at the family element or below in 2003–04 are published in "Child and Working Tax Credits Statistics. Finalised Annual Awards 2003–04". Estimates of awards by entitlement by constituency, which are particularly subject to sampling uncertainty, have been placed in the House of Commons Library.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many staff in his Department have been working on fraud in the tax credit system in each month since April 2003. [44994]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 24 January 2006]: I refer the hon. Gentleman to my reply to the hon. Member for Northavon, Official Report, 24 February 2005, column 766W. It would be inappropriate to disclose detailed information relating to staff engaged in working on fraud on the tax credit system as to do so could provide assistance to those engaged in criminal activity.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer in how many of the total number of cases of tax credit overpayments where recovery has been disputed since October 2005, recovery was suspended pending the result of the dispute; and in what proportion suspension took place (a) one week, (b) two weeks, (c) three weeks, (d) four weeks, (e) five weeks and (f) six weeks and over after notice of the dispute was first received by HM Revenue and Customs. [45859]

Dawn Primarolo [holding answer 26 January]: HM Revenue and Customs (HMRC) does not keep management information at the level requested by my right hon. Friend.

Following the introduction of the new procedures, referred to in my written answer of 2 December 2005, Official Report, column 805W, HMRC suspended around 32,000 disputed overpayment cases by the end of November 2005. The number of cases suspended in December is not yet available.

Where HMRC cannot resolve a dispute straight away, it will suspend recovery in all cases in around five-10 working days.

The tax credit office is making progress towards its target of making decisions on disputed cases within four weeks.

Andrew Gwynne: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many families in Denton and Reddish constituency receive the (a) child tax credit and (b) working tax credit. [51139]

Dawn Primarolo: Estimates for 2003–04 of the numbers of in-work families with tax credits awards by constituency, including information on overpayments and underpayments, based on final family circumstances and incomes for 2003–04 are published in "Child and Working Tax Credits. Finalised Awards 2003–04 Geographical Analysis." This publication and provisional estimates for the number of in-work families by constituency with tax credit awards as at selected dates in 2004–05 are available on the HMRC website at:

http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/personal-tax-credits/cwtc-geog-stats.htm.

Temporary Migrant Workers

Hywel Williams: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what account is taken in the calculation of mid-year population estimates for Government statistical purposes of the arrival of temporary migrant workers (a) in the UK and (b) in each (i) nation and (ii) region of the UK. [52472]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the National Statistician, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from Karen Dunnell, dated 16 February 2006:

As National Statistician, I have been asked to reply to your question concerning what account is taken in the calculation of mid-year population estimates, of the arrival of temporary migrant workers in the UK (52472).

The mid-year population estimates (mid-2001 onward) for the UK are based on the 2001 Census, and relate to the usually resident population. Thus they are estimates of people where they usually live, which does not always coincide with the number of persons to be found in an area at a particular point in time.

The mid-year population estimates include an international migration component, estimated using data mainly from the International Passenger Survey (IPS), together with other data sources. A person is defined as an in-migrant, and therefore usually resident, if they intend to stay in the UK for 12 months or more. This conforms to the UN definition of a long-term migrant, the requirement for which is a stay of at least 12 months. Therefore, temporary migrant workers, who intend to stay in the UK for under one year, are not included in the mid-year resident population estimates.

Population estimates are calculated using an internationally respected methodology. Further information can be found in the detailed methodology guide 'Making a population estimate in England and Wales'. This is published here: http://www.statistics.gov.uk/StatBase/Product.asp?vlnk = 575

Similar definitions to that used in England and Wales are used for Scotland and Northern Ireland. Details on their methods can be obtained by contacting the General Register Office for Scotland or the Northern Ireland Statistical and Research Agency.

Terrorist Activities (Financing)

Dr. Starkey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he will announce the terms of reference of his review of measures to stop exemptions available to charities being abused by those financing terrorist activities; who will carry out the review; who will be consulted on the measures proposed; what safeguards will be included to protect bona fide charities from vexatious allegations; and whether the conclusions of the review will be presented to Parliament. [52033]

Mr. Ivan Lewis: The structure, focus and membership of a review to safeguard the charitable sector from terrorist finance will be established in consultation with other Government Departments in order to deliver proposals in advance of the Financial Action Task Force's evaluation of UK anti-money laundering and terrorist finance measures scheduled for 2007.

The review and any subsequent recommendations will be developed in line with Government's Code of Practice on Consultation available through Cabinet Office.

WALES

Citizens Juries

Mr. Wills: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on how many occasions his Department consulted citizens' juries on departmental policies in the last five years; in how many of those consultations the recommendations of the citizens' jury differed from existing departmental policy; and on how many occasions departmental policy was changed to reflect the recommendations of the citizens' jury. [46239]

Mr. Hain: The Wales Office has not used citizens' juries.

Dentistry

Mr. Hollobone: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with the Health Minister in the National Assembly for Wales Government on the impact of the new dental contract on NHS dentistry in Wales. [51792]

Mr. Hain: The new Personal Dental Service scheme already has had a significantly positive impact on NHS Dental provision; securing NHS provision for 507,613 existing patients and providing additional access for 153,764 new NHS patients.

The number of PDS schemes being rolled out across Wales has been increasing every day and these figures will continue to grow as more dental practices take up the PDS schemes.

Departmental Energy Costs

Mrs. Villiers: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much was spent by his Department on (a) gas and (b) electricity in 2004–05. [51768]

Mr. Hain: In 2004–05 the Wales Office expenditure incurred was:

Gas: £43,199

Electricity: £30,498

Departmental Entertainment

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much was spent on entertainment by his Department in 2004–05; and how much of that sum is accounted for by (a) food, (b) alcohol, (c) staff and (d) accommodation. [50891]

Mr. Hain: Total expenditure on ministerial receptions for the Wales Office in 2004–05 was £7,241.00.

Records for 2004–05 do not allow the costs to be split into categories and this information can be obtained only at a disproportionate cost.

Departmental Staff

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many staff in his Department are paid on a performance-related basis. [50482]

Mr. Hain: Wales Office staff are employed on either National Assembly for Wales or Department for Constitutional Affairs (DCA) conditions.

Staff on loan from the National Assembly for Wales are not subject to performance related pay.

Staff who are employed on DCA terms and conditions are all subject to performance related pay. New pay, grading and benefit arrangements are due to be introduced for all DCA staff later this year, and performance related pay is likely to be a feature of the new system.

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether any (a) employee of his Department, (b) person engaged by his Department as a consultant and (c) paid advisor to his Department is a member of the House of Lords; and if he will make a statement. [52902]

Mr. Hain: None.

Devolution

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will include in any referendums under Government of Wales legislation a question asking whether the devolution process should be stopped. [52306]

Mr. Hain: The Government of Wales Bill aims to develop the current devolution settlement and to make it work better in the interests of the people of Wales. It also provides for the Assembly to acquire primary law-making powers, subject to a referendum. The Government have no plans for putting questions other than this in a referendum.

Fair Trade

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) how much and what proportion of his Department's catering budget was spent on fair trade produce in the last period for which figures are available; [49965]

(2) what his Department's policy is on the procurement of fair trade produce for consumption on its premises. [49980]

Mr. Hain: My office does not have a refreshment facility in which it could stock and sell fair trade products.

The Wales Office procurement policy is linked to the Department of Constitutional Affairs. I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. and learned Friend the Minister of State for Constitutional Affairs (Ms Harman) on 13 February 2006, Official Report, column 1595W.

Freedom of Information Act

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what total sum has been received by his Department for the provision of information under the Freedom of Information Act 2000 in its first year of operation. [48486]

Mr. Hain: The Wales Office has not received any monies for providing information under the Freedom of Information Act 2000.

Statistics about requests received under the Freedom of Information Act are published by the Department of Constitutional Affairs on a quarterly basis.

Hill Farming

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what recent discussions he has had with the First Secretary of the National Assembly for Wales Government on hill farming in Wales. [50987]

Mr. Hain: I have regular meetings with the First Minister to discuss a variety of issues, including farming in Wales.

In Wales, 80 per cent. of agricultural land is designated as Less Favoured Area (LFA) and the net farm income in real terms for LFA farms for 2004–05 is forecast to be £16,400 compared to £1,600 in 2001–02.

The Assembly Government is currently consulting on future options for the Tir Mynydd scheme, which is the dedicated financial support scheme that applies to hill farmers. Between 2001 and 2006, it is estimated that payments under Tir Mynydd will have totalled some £230 million.

Pension Liabilities

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will estimate the net present value of accrued pension liabilities in respect of (a) present and (b) former employees of his Department and its predecessor. [52107]

Mr. Hain: The Principal Civil Service Pension Scheme is an unfunded multi-employer defined benefit scheme and individual departments' pension liabilities are not available. The Cabinet Office: Civil Superannuation Resource Accounts for 2004–05 showed that the total pension liability at 31 March 2005 was £84.1 billion. The value of pension liabilities was assessed as follows:

Liabilities for current members still contributing to the scheme—£37 billion deferred pensions and contingent pensions for dependants in respect of members no longer contributing—£12.7 billion current pensions for members and contingent pensions for dependants—£34.4 billion

As a result of a change in the discount rate used for calculating pension liabilities with effect from 1 April 2005, the total pension liability at 1 April 2005 increased by £10.6 billion to £94.7 billion.

Police Reorganisation

Peter Law: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what public opinion surveys have been conducted in Wales on the proposals to merge police authorities. [52603]

Mr. Hain: None. The current proposals for force restructuring in Wales follow recommendations from Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary that the current 43 force structure in England and Wales is no longer fit for purpose, and their conclusion that there is no acceptable alternative to a single Welsh force if the provision of protective services is to be brought up to the required standard.

My right hon. Friend the Home Secretary and I have held wide ranging discussions with hon. Members, key stakeholders and members of the public across Wales about the implications of restructuring. However, my right hon. Friend has made clear that our efforts to close the gap in protective services should not be put at risk by an unnecessarily protracted period of deliberation.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Audible Fire Alarms

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what proportion of the premises occupied by his Department is fitted with audible fire alarms. [42867]

Mrs. McGuire: DWP currently occupy 1,648 buildings. With the exception of two sites every building is fitted with an audible fire alarm. The Fire Risk Assessment (FRA) for these sites identified the anomalies, remedial work is in hand and expected to be completed by end of February 2006.

Benefit

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to the answer of 19 January 2006, Official Report, column 1550W, on benefit, what information his Department does not hold which would be required to estimate the annual cost of raising all housing benefit and council tax benefit earned income disregards to levels commensurate with the real terms value of the disregards in 1988. [51488]

Mr. Plaskitt: We do not have available the information on the characteristics of individual claims or claimants that would allow us to calculate this figure on that historical basis.

If the earnings disregards were raised in 2006 to a level that is commensurate with the real term value of the disregards in 1988, we estimate that the annual cost for 2006 would be £60 million.

Benefit Advice

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will assess the merits of seconding his Department's staff to benefit advice voluntary organisations. [36875]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department for Work and Pensions undertakes outward secondments to the private, voluntary and public sectors. The decision to consider this type of secondment falls directly to each of the Department's business areas and consideration of such secondment opportunities will be for the HR and Work Force Planning Directors of the Department and its agencies.

Benefit Claims

Gwyn Prosser: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the unit cost to the Department is per benefit claim processed. [48237]

Mr. Plaskitt: This information is currently not available, however, we anticipate the work to provide unit costs per benefit claim processed to be concluded by March 2006.

Benefit Fraud

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the cost of benefit fraud in (a) Leicester and (b) the UK in each year between 1997 and 2005. [50440]

Mr. Plaskitt: The Department produces estimates for the amount overpaid through fraud across the benefits system. Previously published results are in the table.

	Estimate of benefit fraud	Comment
Pre-1998	No overall estimate available.	A few isolated reviews of fraud and error in individual benefits were carried out, but there was no systematic attempt to estimate the level of fraud across the whole benefit system.
1998	£2 billion to £7 billion	Published in the Green Paper, "Beating Fraud is Everyone's Business". Around £2 billion was considered confirmed fraud, with the remaining £5 billion coming from cases where there was a suspicion of fraud.
1998–99 to 2002–03	£2 billion per annum	A change in methodology in the ongoing measurement system meant that cases were investigated in more detail, and it was no longer appropriate to include cases where fraud was suspected in the headline estimates. Figure rounded to nearest £1.0 billion.
2003–04 initial estimate	£1.5 billion	Figure rounded to nearest £0.5 billion.
2003–04 revised estimate	£1.0 billion	Figure rounded to nearest £0.1 billion. Development work to improve the quality of the estimate suggested that the original figure was an overstatement.
2004–05	£0.9 billion	Figure rounded to nearest £0.1 billion.

It is not possible to provide a breakdown for Leicester due to the sampling methodologies used to produce fraud and error estimates. The sample sizes for individual areas are too small to produce meaningful results.

In recent years, benefit fraud has been reducing and now stands at £0.9 billion per year—less than one per cent of total benefit expenditure.

On 13 October 2005, the Department published our achievements in reducing levels of fraud in the benefit system and plans to reduce it further in 'Reducing fraud in the benefit system: Achievements and ambitions'. Copies are available in the Library.

Civil Rights (Disabled People)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps the Government have taken in the last five years to improve civil rights for people with disabilities. [47105]

Mrs. McGuire: Over the last five years, the Government have significantly extended and improved the Disability Discrimination Act (DDA) 1995 which provides the basic legislative framework for civil rights for disabled people.

In 2000 we established the Disability Rights Commission, an independent body charged with promoting equality of opportunity for disabled people.

From September 2002, we introduced new duties under the Special Educational Needs and Disability Act (SENDA) 2001, which amended Part 4 of the DDA to cover all aspects of education.

In October 2004, we significantly extended the employment provisions of the Act. These changes mean that the employment provisions now apply to small employers and all previously excluded forms of employment, except service in the armed forces.
They brought an additional 1 million employers and 7 million more jobs within the coverage of the Act. They also extended protection in a number of additional areas, such as outlawing discriminatory job advertisements and disability-related harassment.

From the same date, we introduced additional protection against disability discrimination in the provisions of goods, services and facilities. Service providers are now under a duty to take reasonable steps to remove, alter, or provide a reasonable means of avoiding, any physical features that make access to their services impossible or unreasonably difficult.

The passage of the Disability Discrimination Act 2005 fulfilled our commitment to provide comprehensive and enforceable civil rights for disabled people. The 2005 Act extended the protection of the 1995 Act to more people with HIV infection, cancer and multiple sclerosis and conferred important new rights in areas such as the use of transport, education, public authority functions, rented and leased premises and community participation. The 2005 Act also introduced a new duty on public authorities to promote equality of opportunity for disabled people. This Disability Equality Duty will apply to the public sector from December this year, and requires authorities ranging from local councils, police forces and health trusts to Government Departments to take the needs of disabled people into account when making decisions. Larger, more significant authorities must publish a Disability Equality Scheme by 4 December 2006 that sets out the steps the authority will take to implement the Disability Equality Duty.

Civil Servants (Overseas Visits)

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what costs were incurred by his Department as a result of sending civil servants on overseas visits in each of the last 10 years. [46277]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department for Work and Pensions was formed in June 2001 from the Department of Social Security and parts of the former Department for Education and Employment including the Employment Service. The available information is in the table. All travel complied with the requirements of the Civil Service Management Code.

	Cost of foreign travel (£)
2002–03	702,767
2003–04	851,841
2004–05	968,779

Council Tax Benefit

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many applicants have had the level of their council tax benefit payments affected by having savings over £3,000 in each year since 1999. [51565]

Mr. Plaskitt: For council tax benefit, tariff income applies to all capital held above a prescribed limit. The prescribed limit was increased from £3,000 to £6,000 in April 2001. With the introduction of pension credit in October 2003, local authorities no longer record capital or tariff income amounts for council tax benefit claimants in receipt of pension credit, but rely on assessed income figures provided by the Pension Service.

The available information is in the table.

Council tax benefit recipients with a tariff income: Great Britain

	Number of recipients
May 1999	430,000
May 2000	440,000
May2001[1]	209,000
May 2002	237,000
May 2003	257,000
May 2004[2]	164,000

[1] In April 2001 the lower capital limit for council tax benefit recipients increased from £3,000 to £6,000.
[2] Information on the amount of capital for council tax benefit claimants also in receipt of pension credit is not available from this data source, so it is not possible to calculate how many of these claimants will be affected by tariff income; this figure is an undercount of the actual number subject to tariff income.
Notes:
1. The data refers to benefit units, which may be a single person or a couple.
2. Figures have been rounded to the nearest thousand.
3. Council tax benefit totals exclude any second adult rebate cases.
Source:
Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit Management Information System, Annual 1 per cent. sample, taken in May 1999 to May 2004.

Sarah Teather: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many applicants have been refused council tax benefit because they had savings over £16,000 in each year since 1999. [51566]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information is not available.

Andrew Gwynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many children in (a) Denton and Reddish constituency, (b) Tameside metropolitan borough and (c) Stockport metropolitan borough are (i) entitled to and (ii) receiving council tax benefit. [51747]

Mr. Plaskitt: None; nobody under the age of 18 can be a liable person in relation to council tax and council tax benefit can only be paid to a liable person.

Customer Management System

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the average time taken for claimants to receive the first payment of benefits has been since the introduction of the Customer Management System computer system. [38385]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 20 December 2005]: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Lesley Strathie:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question concerning the average time taken for claimants to receive the first payment of benefits since the introduction of the Customer Management System (CMS). This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

Jobcentre Plus measures how long it takes to clear a benefit claim to the date a decision is taken, and not to when the first payment is received. This is expressed as the Actual Average Clearance Time (AACT). The target clearance times for each of the main benefits are:

Benefit	Target AACT (days)
Jobseekers Allowance (JSA)	12
Income Support (IS)	12
Incapacity Benefit (IB)	19

In 2003/2004, the AACT for JSA was 11 days, and for IS it was10.5 days. In 2004/2005, the respective figures were 12.1 days and 10.8 days.

For the current year, the latest information on average clearance times of benefits is in the table below:

	AACT
	October 2005	November 2005	December 2005
Jobseekers Allowance	15.4	15.6	14.7
Income Support	11.6	11.7	11.6
Incapacity Benefit	15.7	16.1	15.5

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Anthony Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many planned job reductions in his Department depend on the successful implementation of the Customer Management computer system. [46828]

Margaret Hodge: The administration of Jobcentre Plus is a matter for the Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus, Lesley Strathie. She will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Lesley Strathie:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question asking how many planned job reductions in his Department depend on the successful implementation of the Customer Management computer system. This is something that falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of Jobcentre Plus.

The Customer Management System business case, recently given to the Department for Work and Pensions Parliamentary Select Committee, shows a total headcount saving of 1,076 full-time equivalent staff by 2008.

I hope this is helpful.

Departmental Estate

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what (a) land and (b) property his Department (i) owns and (ii) rents in each constituency; and if he will make a statement. [33250]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department for Work and Pensions does not own or rent any land.

The Department for Work and Pensions does not own any property, with the exception of one building in Hull where contracts have been exchanged and are due to be completed in February 2006.

The remainder of the Department's estate has been sold or transferred under a PFI partnership deal to Land Securities Trillium (LST) and in return for the payment of a unitary charge, LST is responsible for providing a full facilities management service across the estate. Therefore, the Department does not rent any properties.

A list of the estate sold or transferred to LST is not maintained by constituency but by Government office region and it has been placed in the Library.

This response excludes the Health and Safety Executive, an Executive non- departmental public body and the Rent Service, an Executive agency, as their records are not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much was paid by his Department in 2004–05 in rent for properties in (a) total, (b) each (i) region and (ii) nation of the UK and (c) London. [35947]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department's estate has been sold or transferred under a PFI partnership deal to Land Securities Trillium (LST) and in return for the payment of a unitary charge LST is responsible for providing a full facilities management service across the estate. Therefore, the Department did not pay any rent for properties in 2004–05.

This response excludes The Health and Safety Executive, an Executive non-departmental public body and The Rent Service, an Executive Agency, as their records are not held centrally and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will list the former (a) buildings and (b) land of (i) his Department and (ii) (A) non-departmental public bodies, (B) agencies and (C) independent statutory bodies for which his Department is responsible which have been sold since 7 May 1997; what the sale price of each (1) was at the time of sale and (2) is at current prices; and whether the money accrued was (x) retained by his Department and (y) claimed by the Treasury. [40143]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department's estate was sold or transferred under a PFI partnership deal to Land Securities Trillium (1ST) in 1998 and extended in 2003. The buildings and their base value are listed in a table that has been placed in the Library. HM Treasury, on behalf of the Department, received a total cash consideration of £350 million for the assets sold or transferred. The additional value of £105 million is being recovered through discounted facilities prices for the serviced accommodation.

The Department does not hold current market values for the properties and these could be obtained only at a disproportionate cost.

The Department has sold two buildings outside of the PFI:

Ranmoor Hall, Sheffield sold for £4.5 million retained by the Department in November 2005

For completion in February 2006, Storey Street, Hull for £575,000 to be retained by the Department.

The Department sold one piece of land, at Alvaston Raynesway, which was transferred to LST under the PFI partnership deal for £947,671 in 1998. The Department does not hold a current market value for the land.

The vast majority of NDPB, agencies and independent statutory bodies are accommodated in the Department's own buildings and separate information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. The exception is Remploy Ltd. (a NDPB) and The Rent Service and Health and Safety Executive (HSE) (which are agencies).

Remploy Ltd. has sold buildings and land but they are not able to provide a breakdown in the format requested without incurring disproportionate cost. The information in the table shows all year end disposals of all property and have been inflated using Retail Price Index (RPI) from March in the respective year of disposal. All proceeds have been retained by Remploy.

Property disposals(Total proceeds to)	Date	Retail Price Index @ disposal	Proceeds received	Retail Price Index indexed proceeds	Current price
Y.E. 31 March 1998	March 1998	160.8	432,000	88,000	520,000
Y.E. 31 March 1999	March 1999	164.1	2,034,000	366,000	2,400,000
Y.E. 31 March 2000	March 2000	168.4	1,556,000	233,000	1,789,000
Y.E. 31 March 2001	March 2001	172.2	503,000	63,000	566,000
Y.E. 31 March 2002	March 2002	174.5	2,975,000	326,000	3,301,000
Y.E. 31 March 2003	March 2003	179.9	2,583,000	197,000	2,780,000
Y.E. 31 March 2004	March 2004	184.6	1,130,000	55,000	1,185,000
Y.E. 31 March 2005	March 2005	190.5	2,571,000	42,000	2,613,000
30 November 2005	—	193.6	—	—	—

The Rent Service has provided a nil return.

In January 2005, HSE sold the land and buildings of the Health & Safety Laboratory (HSL) site at Broad Lane Sheffield as part of the PFI arrangements for a new site for the laboratory at Harpur Hill, Buxton. Receipts, of approximately £6 million, were recycled back into the scheme. HSE does not track property prices and is therefore unable to assess the current value.

In July 2005, HSE sold a Crown freehold building known as Royal Exchange Building, Sheffield for £530,000, the same as the net book value of the property. There was therefore no gain or loss on disposal. The cash sale provided additional capital spending for HSE. HSE does not track property prices and is therefore unable to assess the current value. HSE has not sold any land.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what (a) land and (b) property his Department owns in Southend West constituency. [41759]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department's estate has been sold or transferred under a PFI partnership deal to Land Securities Trillium (LST) and in return for the payment of a unitary charge LST is responsible for providing a full facilities management service across the estate. Therefore the Department does not own any (a) land or (b) property in the Southend West constituency.

This response excludes The Health and Safety Executive, an Executive non-departmental public body, and the Rent Service, an Executive agency, as their records are not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what (a) land and (b) property is owned by his Department in Castle Point. [42901]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department's estate has been sold or transferred under a PFI partnership deal to Land Securities Trillium (LST) and in return for the payment of a unitary charge LST is responsible for providing a full facilities management service across the estate. Therefore the Department does not own any (a) land or (b) property in the Castle Point constituency.

This response excludes The Health and Safety Executive, an executive non- departmental public body, and the Rent Service, an Executive agency, as their records are not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what budget his Department has allocated to (a) press and (b) communications in 2005–06; and how much has been spent in each case. [29986]

Mrs. McGuire: The main communications budget allocation for 2005–06 is £47,692,000 of which £3,561,000 is for press. These figures include both staff and non-staff costs, including all major marketing campaigns. The year to date spend figures to January 2006 are £26,506,000, and £2,497,000 respectively.

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much his Department spent on end-of-year bonus pay awards for staff in each year since 1997. [39180]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department for Work and Pensions was formed in June 2001 from the Department of Social Security and parts of the former Department for Education and Employment including the Employment Service. Information is therefore only available for the Department from 2002 onwards.

Performance bonus payments are awarded to employees on the basis of their individual performance. They are paid after the completion of the performance year. The expenditure incurred is as follows:

£ million

	Expenditure incurred on individual bonus payments
2002	20.9
2003	24.7
2004	37.9
2005	41.9

In addition to individual performance bonus payments, DWP also paid team bonuses to selected units within the Department. The expenditure incurred is as follows:

£ million

	Expenditure incurred on team bonus payments
2002	7.8
2003	29.4
2004	3.3

No team bonus schemes are currently running.

Departmental Skills Development Plan

Mr. Gibb: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will place in the Library a copy of his Department's Skills Development Plan. [23857]

Mrs. McGuire: A copy of the Department for Work and Pensions Skills Development Plan will be placed in the Library.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many staff have been employed by his central Department in each year since 1996–97 (a) in total, (b) on press and publicity work and (c) on policy work; and if he will make a statement. [41329]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department for Work and Pensions was formed in June 2001 from the Department of Social Security and parts of the former Department for Education and Employment including the Employment Service. Comparable historical staffing information prior to this date is not available.

Information on the number of staff in the central Department, excluding the Department's agencies is in the following table. The figures include staff engaged on policy development and those employed in corporate and shared services, such as human resources, finance and debt management. The table also includes information on the number of staff employed in the central department on press and publicity work.

The number of staff currently employed on policy work is 1,233. The number of staff employed on policy work is not available historically.

	Total central staff	Press and publicity staff (included in total staff numbers)
30 April 2002	14,118	75
31 March 2003	13,898	78
31 March 2004	12,068	90
31 March 2005	11,874	92

Notes:

1. Figures are point in time at the stated dates, are full-time equivalent and include temporary staff.
2. Figures for 2002 are given as at 30 April, because this is the first point at which data is available for the Department in a form comparable to its current structure.

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many people worked for his Department in (a) January 1997 and (b) January 2006; [41896]

(2) how many people were employed by (a) the Child Support Agency, (b) Jobcentre Plus and (c) other agencies of his Department in (i) January 1997 and (ii) January 2006. [41897]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department for Work and Pensions was formed in June 2001 from the Department of Social Security and parts of the former Department for Education and Employment including the Employment Service. Information on the average number of staff in the Department in each year from 2000–01 to 2005–06 can be found in table 6 of the Department for Work and Pensions departmental report 2005.

Information on the average number of staff in the former Department of Social Security in each year from 1997–98 until its incorporation into the Department for Work and Pensions can be found in table 10 of the social security departmental report 2001.

Information on the average number of staff in the former Employment Service in each year from 1997–98 until its incorporation into the Department for Work and Pensions can be found in annex J of the Department for Education and Skills departmental report 2001.

Each of the reports is available in the Library.

Information on staffing in the Department's agencies as at 30 November 2005 is in the following table.

Agency	Staff
Jobcentre Plus	73,363
The Pension Service	14,686
Child Support Agency	10,672
Disability and Carers Service	6,490
Appeals Service	763
The Rent Service	682

Note:
These figures include staff on maternity and other paid leave and are full-time equivalent.

Bob Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many disciplinary actions against civil servants employed in his Department (a) were commenced and (b) resulted in a sanction being applied in each of the last five years. [43483]

Mrs. McGuire: On the number of disciplinary actions commenced against Department for Work and Pensions (DWP) employees.

Information on the number of disciplinary actions for serious or gross misconduct against DWP employees that resulted in a sanction for the period July 2003 to September 2005 is as follows:

From July to December 2003 there were 426 cases.

For the 2004 calendar year there were 920 cases.

From January to September 2005 there were 603 cases.

Disabled Children

Mr. Hunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what action his Department has taken to place disabled children and their families on equal terms with non-disabled children and their families in the 10-year Strategy for Childcare, as recommended by the report by the Prime Minister's Strategy Unit, Improving the Life Chances of Disabled People. [49790]

Maria Eagle: I have been asked to reply.

The Government are committed to ensuring that disabled children benefit from early years support which maximises their outcomes in later life. The Childcare Bill, currently going through Parliament, will help implement key aspects of the 10 year Childcare Strategy. It introduces a new duty for local authorities to provide sufficient child care to meet the needs of working parents, or those making the transition to work. Child care will not be judged as sufficient unless it meets the needs of two groups in particular: disabled children and lower income families. Local authorities will be required to consult parents, providers and the local community to ensure that the needs of all families are taken into account when developing and planning child care services locally.

The Bill places a duty to improve the outcomes of all young children, and to reduce inequalities between them. When local authorities are considering how to narrow gaps in achievement, they will need to identify the disadvantaged groups relevant to their area. Disabled children are very likely to be among the groups on whom local authorities will need to target resources.

These new duties will ensure that services for families with disabled children are prioritised and that they are given equal access to high quality and appropriate care.

Guidance on the inclusion of disabled children in the Sure Start Children's Centres programme was issued in November 2005. It focuses on: the need to consult the parents and carers of disabled children when developing services; mainstreaming the successful Early Support Pilot programme across England, including the use of 'key workers'; the need to provide appropriate family support services including the development of Portage and other home visiting services.

European Court of Human Rights

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many of the 340 widowers who have cases lodged in the European Court of Human Rights have cashed the cheques which the Department sent to them for back payment of benefit. [50675]

Mr. Plaskitt: Of the 340 widowers' cases, 95 payments have been issued.

49 of these payments have been cashed, six have been returned, and 40 remain with the widower or widower's representative awaiting a decision on acceptance.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment the Department has made of the merits of mediation as a way of settling the dispute with the 340 widowers who have cases lodged with the European Court of Human Rights. [50676]

Mr. Plaskitt: The House of Lords has already dealt with the cases and has provided a judgment. The Department does not consider mediation appropriate to the 340 widowers where such a clear decision has been established. Furthermore, the offer of friendly settlements is based on a previous European Court of Human Rights judgment in the case of Willis, providing an established policy for both parties.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many of the 340 widowers with cases against his Department lodged within the European Court of Human Rights have settled their dispute prior to court proceedings. [50698]

Mr. Plaskitt: 58 of the 340 widowers have settled their dispute prior to any court proceedings. This includes nine cases settled before the European Court of Human Rights judgment in the case of Willis v. UK

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether his Department advised those widowers to whom they sent cheques for back payments that they should consult a (a) solicitor, (b) Citizen's Advice Bureau and (c) trade union official prior to settling with his Department. [50699]

Mr. Plaskitt: The vast majority of widowers who have an admissible case for discrimination do have a solicitor, legal representative or other representative already in place and acting on their behalf. In these cases, the Department corresponds with the nominated representative and issues the payment in settlement directly to that representative.

In the cases where a widower is acting on his own behalf, including making a claim to the European Court of Human Rights without any representative, the Department corresponds directly with the widower and issues the payment directly to them. There is no specific note that a widower should consult with a solicitor, Citizens Advice Bureau or trade union official prior to settling with the Department in either case.

Fair Trade

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much and what proportion of his Department's catering budget was spent on fair trade produce in the last period for which figures are available. [49973]

Mrs. McGuire: The information is not available. The Department's estate is managed through a facilities management contract including, where premises allow, catering, and therefore DWP has no direct responsibility for the procurement of catering except on a local level for receptions and meetings. Information systems do not allow us to analyse expenditure on fair trade commodities separately and data could be obtained only by a special exercise to examine both the Department's and our supplier's purchasing transactions. This would incur disproportionate costs.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his Department's policy is on the procurement of fair trade produce for consumption on its premises. [49974]

Mrs. McGuire: In line with Government policy the Department is committed to fair trade and ethical supply routes. Where practicable, the Department aims to purchase sustainable produce for sale on departmental premises and for receptions and meetings wherever such produce meets our business requirements and gives at least as good value for money. The Department is working with its facilities management contractor, who provides in house catering services, to consider the feasibility of introducing a target to increase the supply of fair trade goods.

Freedom of Information

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions on how many occasions since May 2005 officials in his Department have consulted their Freedom of Information Officer on answers to parliamentary Questions from (a) the hon. Member for Yeovil and (b) all hon. Members. [41853]

Mrs. McGuire: Answers to parliamentary questions are drafted in accordance with Guidance to Officials on Drafting Answers to Parliamentary Questions.

Information is not held centrally on the number of occasions that officials may have sought advice from the Department's Freedom of Information practitioners.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he will publish proposals for housing benefit reform in the social rented sector. [51962]

Mr. Plaskitt: There are significant differences between the private rental market and social housing, and between the social housing sectors of the UK devolved administrations. Many complex factors will need to be taken into account before a decision is made on exactly how we take forward reform of housing benefit in this sector.

This why we are consulting on the direction that any reforms would take in our green paper "A New Deal for Welfare: Empowering People to Work" published on 24 January. The consultation period will run until 21 April and a Government response will follow in due course.

Identity Fraud

Mike Penning: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what training the Department has provided for (a) front desk and (b) administrative staff in relation to identity fraud. [41276]

Mr. Plaskitt: We provide training for staff in relation to identity fraud according to the needs of the role they undertake within the Department. New entrant induction training covers identity issues and security specific training instruction.

Specialist training is provided for fraud officers and for staff involved in national insurance number allocation work according to their role in the process. In particular, front line staff receive training to provide them with the necessary skills to carry out interviews effectively and to check documents, and specialist identity fraud training is specifically targeted at the needs of fraud officers.

In addition to training courses, generalist fraud awareness sessions targeted at all staff are provided by the National Identity Fraud Unit.

Incapacity Benefit

Peter Law: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what representations he has received on the proposals to integrate individuals' visits to doctors' surgeries in connection with incapacity to work and evaluation of individuals' ability to work by officials from employment offices based in doctors' surgeries. [50230]

Margaret Hodge: Arrangements to pilot employment advisers in GPs' surgeries announced in a new deal for welfare are currently being put in place. This service is being introduced with the full agreement of participating GPs and all referrals are on a voluntary basis. We have made it clear that this service is not about deciding a person's work capability but to provide GPs' with an additional non-medical intervention for their patients. Those representations we have received recognise that employment advice services not only improve an individual's ability to achieve a return to work, but can also have a positive impact on their health and well being.

Mr. Philip Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what percentage of lone parents claiming incapacity benefit moved to incapacity benefit from Jobseeker's Allowance in each year since 1997. [51963]

Mr. Plaskitt: The information is not available.

Maternity Pay

David T.C. Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will introduce proposals to amend legislation to enable women who return to work immediately after giving birth on a part-time basis to claim a full-time salary or full-time maternity pay. [44765]

Mrs. McGuire: There are no plans to introduce a proposal to allow women who return to work on a part-time basis immediately after giving birth, to claim a full-time salary or to claim a full-time maternity pay.

New Deal/Workstep

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many people in Beverley and Holderness registered on the new deal for disabled people programme found work in the last five years; [44313]

(2) what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the new deal for disabled people programme. [44315]

Margaret Hodge: The new deal for disabled people (NDDP) programme is designed to support disabled people and people with health conditions in finding and sustaining paid employment. The programme has been extended to 2007, and, so far, it has been successful in helping more than 83,000 people into work, of whom 65 per cent. have enjoyed sustained employment. Information on the numbers of people helped into work through the programme is not available at constituency level.

The majority of disabled people who move into work through NDDP do so in the first few months of registering on the programme, almost half in the first month, and 70 per cent. in the first three months. People participating on the programme, and those moving into work, have a wide range of health conditions and disabilities, which demonstrates the flexibility and responsiveness of this programme. The majority of participants have positive views about the services they receive through the programme and of working with NDDP Job Brokers.

We know that the benefits to the economy and society as a whole from more disabled people being helped into work outweigh the costs of running the programme. We are currently evaluating the effectiveness of NDDP and will publish results in the autumn. We have placed in the Library those reports on the programme listed which have already been published.

Mrs. Ellman: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people have been assisted by the new deal for musicians; and if he will make a statement. [51922]

Margaret Hodge: New deal for musicians is intended to help unemployed aspiring musicians into a sustainable career in the music industry, either as artists under contract or self-employed artists within the music industry. It is available to jobseekers who are eligible for either new deal for young people or new deal 25 plus. Up to the end of November, new deal for musicians had helped 3,880 people into unsubsidised employment.

Mr. Jenkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what plans he has to extend (a) the new deal for disabled people and (b) Workstep to help people back into work in Tamworth; and if he will make a statement. [48650]

Margaret Hodge: Contracts for the new deal for disabled people and Workstep are now being extended, where necessary, to 31 March 2007. We are currently considering the future of this provision alongside the range of disability employment programmes to ensure they continue to meet the needs of disabled people, including those in Tamworth.

As outlined in Chapter 5 of our Welfare Reform Green Paper 'A new deal for welfare: Empowering people to work', we are reviewing our employment services for disabled people and intend to consult with key stakeholders on our proposals later in the year.

Our proposals in the Green Paper are based on our successful Pathways to Work pilots which we will be extending across the country by 2008, and in Tamworth in October of this year. The Pathways pilots have achieved over 21,000 job entries in total with very positive feedback from claimants, advisers and partners. We are already seeing an eight percentage points increase in off-flows from incapacity benefit at six months compared with non-Pathways areas.

Occupational Pension Schemes (Beverley and Holderness)

Mr. Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many occupational pension schemes in Beverley and Holderness have fully wound up since 1997; and how many are in the process of winding up. [51520]

Mr. Timms: The information is not available.

Overpayments

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his latest estimate is of the amount of overpayments made owing to official error in each social security benefit paid by his Department in each of the last six years; and if he will make a statement. [42549]

Mr. Plaskitt: The Department publishes National Statistics reports including estimates of overpayments through official error. Estimates for income support (IS), jobseeker's allowance (JSA), pension credit and housing benefit (HB) are published every year so these are the benefits where we have most information on changes over time.

Notes:

The figures for April 2003 to March 2004 and April 2004 to March 2005 in the table have been adjusted for data quality problems found. Previous figures have not been adjusted in this way as there is not enough information available to do so. The tables therefore are not all suitable for making reliable comparisons over time but give a reference of our best estimate of these overpayment figures in each year. Confidence intervals are not provided in these tables although are typically around +—20 to 30 per cent. of the central estimates.

Housing benefit (HB) official error overpayments from National Statistics reports

	Percentage/£ million
April 2002 to March 2003	1.1
Percentage of benefit overpaid
Overpaid (£ million)	140
April 2003 to March 2004
Percentage of benefit overpaid	1.2
Overpaid (£ million)	150
April 2004 to March 2005
Percentage of benefit overpaid	1.1
Overpaid (£ million)	150

Notes:

1. The continuous measurement system for fraud and error in housing benefit began in 2001, so earlier comparable results are not available.

2. Note that these figures are made up of reviews of around 85 per cent. of HB expenditure (used for measuring performance against the relevant PSA target to reduce fraud and error in HB) combined with more approximate estimates of error in the remaining 15 per cent. of expenditure. For further details on this, please see the relevant National Statistics reports.

The Second National Housing Benefit Accuracy Review, in 1997–98 gave an estimate of £60 million for Official Error, but was based on a different methodology, so the results are not considered comparable with more recent estimates.

The Department also publishes one to off snapshot reviews. The most recent report covered disability living allowance (DLA) and the official error figures from these are as follows:

2004–05 DLA official error overpayments from National Statistics report

	Amount of money overpaid (£ million)	Percentage benefit overpaid
Official Error	60 (20–110)	0.8 (0.3–1.4)

In addition, annual estimates of official error only are made for Short to Term Benefit overpayments (Incapacity Benefit and Severe Disablement Allowance) and Long to Term Benefit overpayments (Retirement Pension, Widow's Benefit and Bereavement Benefit). Previous results were carried out using a different methodology and are not comparable. The most recent results are shown in the following tables.

Short to term benefits Official Error overpayments

As at April to March each year:	Monetary value (£ million)
2001–02	43
2002–03	43
2003–04	53
2004–05	[1]104

[1] These estimates are subject to wide margins of error. Our best estimate of STB overpayments for 2004–05 includes a further amount of around £20 million due to incorrectness types not captured under methodology in earlier years.

Long-term benefits Official Error overpayments

As at April to March each year:	Monetary value (£ million)
2001–02	43
2002–03	14
2003–04	26
2004–05	27

Notes:
1. The sample for long-term benefits is a small one and excludes some types of cases. It provides reassurance that official error on these benefits is a very low proportion of expenditure, but the estimate is only a broad indicator.
2. As a result of the wide margins of error, the changes over time are not statistically significant.

Pathways to Work

Danny Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether the nationwide roll-out of Pathways to Work proposed in the recent Green Paper will apply only to new claimants; and what the estimated cost is of rolling out the scheme nationwide to all existing claimants over the same period. [50185]

Margaret Hodge [holding answer 13 February 2006]: We have secured £360 million to complete the national roll-out of Pathways to Work. This is in addition to the £147 million already allocated to complete roll-out to the 21 pilots.

The support provided through Pathways to Work will, as now in pilot areas, be available to new claimants and existing claimants, but will not be mandatory for existing claimants. In Pathways to Work pilot areas, nearly 10 per cent. of all new participants are voluntary existing claimants.

All the evidence suggests that the best time to offer advice and support is before an individual loses their job and as quickly as possible after an individual has made a claim to incapacity benefits. But no-one will be left behind and we intend to invite all existing claimants to an interview with an adviser over the next two to three years to ensure they are made fully aware of the support available to them.

Pension Protection Fund

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the estimated liability is for the benefits that will be paid by the Pension Protection Fund if all the pension schemes now in an assessment period are admitted to the Fund. [42530]

Mr. Timms: Calculating the value of the various assets and liabilities of the schemes currently in an assessment period is a major part of the ongoing work for the PPF. It is difficult to provide exact figures at this time, since the full valuation information contained within the section 143 valuation is not yet available for those schemes

However, the PPF have provided the following information:

As at December 31 there were 40 schemes in assessment. These schemes had approximately 21,575 members. Assets in the schemes totalled £1,027 million, with estimated Pension Protection Fund liabilities of £1,417 million providing an estimated deficit of £389 million. Clearer figures will emerge as those schemes complete the assessment period.

Adam Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what representations he has received from the European Commission on the compatibility of the provisions of the Pensions Protection Fund with Article 8 of the European Insolvency Rights Directive. [51449]

Mr. Timms: None.

The Commission is, however, in the process of reviewing how the complete regulatory framework of all member states complies with the Directive. The Commission has asked member states for information on how they comply with the Directive, before it can establish an opinion about the overall compliance with the Directive. It plans to issue a report on the implementation of Article 8 of the Directive in all member states, in the first half of 2006. This report will also include an evaluation of the UK regulatory system in force at present.

Pensions

Mr. Gregory Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the average percentage increase in the standard single pension for senior citizens is in 2006. [52471]

Mr. Timms: The draft Social Security Benefit Up-rating Order 2006 laid before Parliament on 25 January 2006 provides for State Pensions to be increased by 2.7 per cent. from 10 April 2006 in line with the growth in the Retail Prices Index in the year to September 2005. We expect similar provisions to be made for Northern Ireland.

Pensions Regulator

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what evaluation he has made of the work of the new pensions regulator. [47103]

Mr. Timms: I would refer the hon. Friend to the answer I gave on 6 February 2006, Official Report, column 857W.

Post Office Card Account

Mr. Dodds: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make a statement on the future of the Post Office card account. [51996]

Mr. Plaskitt: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Yeovil (Mr. Laws) on 31 January 2006, Official Report, columns 443–44W.

Print/Broadcast Media

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will place in the Library copies of (a) print and (b) broadcast media reports undertaken for his Department since 2002. [37030]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department is committed to the publication of evaluation data and will ensure that all existing media analysis data is placed in the DWP catalogue by April 2006.

Mr. Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether his Department has (a) undertaken and (b) commissioned research into the presence and reporting in the (i) broadcast and (ii) print media of the hon. Member for Yeovil since 5 May. [37032]

Mrs. McGuire: We do not currently evaluate broadcast media coverage.

Departmental analysis of print media activity monitors coverage of departmental policies and services. Only comments made by the hon. Member in his capacity as Front-Bench spokesman will be included in that analysis.

Rates

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much was paid by his Department in rates to each local authority in the UK in 2004–05; and how much was paid in (a) each (i) nation and (ii) region of the UK and (b) London. [35990]

Mrs. McGuire: The Department's estate has been sold or transferred under a PFI partnership deal to Land Securities Trillium (LST) and in return for the payment of a unitary charge LST is responsible for providing a full facilities management service across the estate. Therefore, the Department is not liable for any business rates.

However, in a few sites, the Department has an agreement to pay rates in lieu of reduced accommodation charges, where the Department has a tenancy on estate managed by another Government Department. The Department has paid the following amounts to rateable authorities on the general ledger for 2004–05:

England	1,701,009
of which:
Paid within London	91,200
Wales	24,920
Scotland	34,024

Please note that this response excludes the Health and Safety Executive, an Executive non-departmental public body and the Rent Service, an Executive agency, as their records are not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Returning to Work

Mr. Lansley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what discussions he has had with representatives of general practitioners regarding developing their role in supporting patients' return to work; whether these discussions have included proposals for general practitioners to monitor patients' suitability for incapacity benefit; and when he expects to publish the range of initiatives to provide the support to general practitioners necessary to assist patients in returning to work as described in paragraph 2.19 of the White Paper, "Our Health, Our Care, Our Say". [49534]

Margaret Hodge: The Department is working closely with representatives of General Practitioners in the development of initiatives designed to help GPs support patients with health conditions or disabilities so that they can remain in or return to work.

Discussions have been held with the General Practitioner Committee of the British Medical Association (BMA) and with the Royal College of General Practitioners (RCGP). Discussions have included the role of the GP in providing basic fitness for work advice for patients and in helping more patients manage health conditions so that they can remain in work.

The White Paper referred to was published by the Secretary of State for Health and in this context the reference on page 29 to initiatives to support GPs was intentionally brief. Our proposed initiatives are set out in greater detail in our recently published Green Paper: A New Deal for Welfare: empowering people to work; at page 34 paragraph 43.

Voice Stress Analysis

Mr. Ruffley: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what (a) discussions and (b) contract negotiations his Department has held in the last two years with Capita on the use of voice stress software in processing telephone benefit claims; [49975]

(2) what research his Department has carried out into voice stress analysis in processing benefit claims over the telephone following publication of the report in October 2005 entitled Reducing Fraud in the Benefit System; [49990]

(3) what payments have been made to (a) Capita and (b) other firms for undertaking trials of voice stress software in his Department for processing telephone benefit claims; [49991]

(4) what plans he has to trial voice stress software for the processing of telephone benefit claims; and what the likely date is of the (a) commencement and (b) termination of such trials; [49993]

(5) what trials (a) have been and (b) are being undertaken on the use of voice stress software in processing telephone benefit claims. [49994]

Mr. Plaskitt: The Department has not entered into negotiations with, or made payments to, any organisation in relation to voice stress software. The Department is currently considering how the technology might be piloted in order to establish its effectiveness in relation to DWP business. To date no trials have been undertaken and any pilot undertaken will be run in line with DWP procurement guidelines and procedures.

Welfare Reform Green Paper

Mr. Hunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how the £360 million announced in his statement on the Welfare Reform Green Paper is to be spent; from which budgets this sum has been drawn; and over what period of time it is to be allocated. [49799]

Margaret Hodge: The funding for welfare reform has been drawn from the budgets provided to the Department through the 2004 Spending Review settlement which covered the financial years 2005–06 to 2007–08. Details are available in The departmental report 2005 (Cm 6539) published in June 2005. The £360 million funding is largely to be spent extending the pathways to work programme beyond the pilot areas, and covers 2006–07 and 2007–08.

Winter Fuel Payments

Lynne Featherstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many individuals received winter fuel payments in each London borough in the last year for which figures are available. [52302]

Mr. Timms: The information is in the table.
